The Yale Shakespeare

THE COMPLETE WORKS

Edited and annotated under the direction of the Department of English, Yale University

Editors

WILBUR L. CROSS ❧ TUCKER BROOKE

The Yale Shakespeare

THE COMPLETE WORKS

The Yale Shakespeare is the only one-volume edition of Shakespeare's complete works designed for the general reader that provides annotations on each page of text. The original project, undertaken by Yale University Press in the early part of this century, produced a forty-volume edition: the thirty-seven individual plays, the poems, the sonnets, and a brief biography. It was the culmination of the editorial labors of more than two dozen renowned scholars. A second edition, thoroughly revised, was issued in the decade following the Second World War. That edition corrected several textual and factual errors in the first edition, as well as incorporating contemporary research in Shakespearean studies.

Could The Yale Shakespeare possibly be improved? The answer, handsomely demonstrated in this new edition, is yes. The original pocket-sized volumes were too small to allow any of the longest of Shakespeare's verse lines to appear as its own full line on the page. This new edition restores each line of Shakespeare's verse to its own line of text. By virtue of its size, this spacious one-volume edition presents the reader with an accurate rendering of Shakespeare's poetic rhythms. The text, printed on acid-free paper for greater longevity, has been completely redesigned and reset in an elegant and readable typeface. The larger page also allows for a more comfortable spacing between the lines, and insures ample room to accommodate the notes at the bottom.

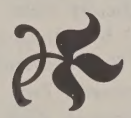
The plays are grouped according to the three classic genres identified in Shakespeare's oeuvre: Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies. Within each genre the plays are ordered chronologically. Since each of Shakespeare's plays exists in several versions, an editor's most crucial task is to examine these variants and select the text which most clearly and

Continued on back flap

The Yale Shakespeare

The Yale Shakespeare

The Yale Shakespeare



Edited by WILBUR L. CROSS
and
TUCKER BROOKE

Published under the direction of the Department of English, Yale University

BARNES
&NOBLE BOOKS
NEW YORK

Note: This Barnes & Noble Books edition of the complete Yale Shakespeare has been newly typeset from the text of the multi-volume set originally published by Yale University Press.

Introduction © 1993 by Barnes & Noble, Inc.
The Comedy of Errors copyright 1926 by Yale University Press
The Two Gentlemen of Verona copyright 1926 by Yale University Press
The Taming of the Shrew copyright 1921, 1954 by Yale University Press
Love's Labour's Lost copyright 1925 by Yale University Press
A Midsummer Night's Dream copyright 1918 by Yale University Press
The Merchant of Venice copyright 1923, 1959 by Yale University Press
As You Like It copyright 1919, 1954 by Yale University Press
Much Ado About Nothing copyright 1917 by Yale University Press
The Merry Wives of Windsor copyright 1922 by Yale University Press
Twelfth Night copyright 1922, 1954 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of Troilus and Cressida copyright 1927, 1956 by Yale University Press
All's Well That Ends Well copyright 1926 by Yale University Press
Measure for Measure copyright 1926, 1954 by Yale University Press
The First Part of King Henry the Sixth copyright 1918 by Yale University Press
The Second Part of King Henry the Sixth copyright 1923 by Yale University Press
The Third Part of King Henry the Sixth copyright 1923 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of Richard the Third copyright 1927 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of King Richard the Second copyright 1921, 1957 by Yale University Press
The Life and Death of King John copyright 1927 by Yale University Press
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth copyright 1917, 1947 by Yale University Press
The Second Part of King Henry the Fourth copyright 1921 by Yale University Press
The Life of Henry the Fifth copyright 1918, 1955 by Yale University Press
The Life of King Henry the Eighth copyright 1925 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of Titus Andronicus copyright 1926 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of Romeo and Juliet copyright 1917, 1954 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of Julius Caesar copyright 1919, 1959 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of Hamlet copyright 1917, 1947 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of Othello copyright 1918, 1947 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of King Lear copyright 1917, 1947 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of Macbeth copyright 1918, 1954 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of Antony and Cleopatra copyright 1921, 1955 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of Coriolanus copyright 1924 by Yale University Press
The Life of Timon of Athens copyright 1919 by Yale University Press
Pericles, Prince of Tyre copyright 1925 by Yale University Press
The Tragedy of Cymbeline copyright 1924 by Yale University Press
The Winter's Tale copyright 1918 by Yale University Press
The Tempest copyright 1918, 1955 by Yale University Press
Venus and Adonis, Lucrece, and the Minor Poems copyright 1927 by Yale University Press
The Sonnets copyright 1923 by Yale University Press
All rights reserved.

This edition published by Barnes & Noble, Inc.,
by arrangement with Yale University Press.

1993 Barnes & Noble Books

Book design by Charles Ziga, Ziga Design

Project editor: Laura Victoria Levin

ISBN 1-56619-104-1

Printed and bound in the United States of America

M 9 8 7 6 5 4 3

Contents

Introduction vii

The Comedies

The Comedy of Errors 1
The Two Gentlemen of Verona 27
The Taming of the Shrew 55
Love's Labour's Lost 89
A Midsummer Night's Dream 125
The Merchant of Venice 153
As You Like It 185
Much Ado About Nothing 219
The Merry Wives of Windsor 251
Twelfth Night 283
The Tragedy of Troilus and Cressida 321
All's Well That Ends Well 365
Measure for Measure 401

The Histories

The First Part of King Henry the Sixth 435
The Second Part of King Henry the Sixth 477
The Third Part of King Henry the Sixth 519
The Tragedy of Richard the Third 559
The Tragedy of King Richard the Second 609
The Life and Death of King John 649
The First Part of King Henry the Fourth 685
The Second Part of King Henry the Fourth 725
The Life of Henry the Fifth 765
The Life of King Henry the Eighth 809

The Tragedies and the Poems

The Tragedy of Titus Andronicus 853
The Tragedy of Romeo and Juliet 895
The Tragedy of Julius Caesar 941
The Tragedy of Hamlet 975
The Tragedy of Othello 1025
The Tragedy of King Lear 1071
The Tragedy of Macbeth 1117
The Tragedy of Antony and Cleopatra 1155
The Tragedy of Coriolanus 1201
The Life of Timon of Athens 1249
Pericles, Prince of Tyre 1285
The Tragedy of Cymbeline 1321
The Winter's Tale 1365
The Tempest 1403
The Poems and The Sonnets 1433

Introduction ❧ Shakespeare of Stratford

William Shakespeare's date of birth is not precisely known, but it probably preceded his baptism on April 26, 1564, in Stratford-on-Avon, by only a few days. It is by tradition, then, that Shakespeare's birthday is given as St. George's Day, April 23, which is also the day on which he died in 1616. Although our records of one man's life four centuries ago are limited, we do know something of William Shakespeare's parentage and early family life. William Shakespeare was the third child and first son of John and Mary Shakespeare. Of his four sisters and three brothers, most died in infancy or early childhood, and only one has descendants surviving to this day. He was technically a commoner, yet it is interesting to note his family's ancestral proximity to aristocracy, particularly on his mother's side, and his purchase, later in life, of a heraldic coat of arms for his father.

William Shakespeare's paternal grandfather was probably Richard Shakespeare (d. 1561), a farmer of Snitterfield, four miles northeast of Stratford. Richard Shakespeare's son John was a glover who, early records show, by 1552 had settled in a house on Henley Street in Stratford. It was in the Henley Street house that William Shakespeare was born and spent his early life. At various times, John Shakespeare was active in the town government: In 1561 he was elected one of two chamberlains of the borough; in 1565 he became an alderman; and in 1568 he became high bailiff—in essence, mayor of the town. Sometime in the early 1580s, perhaps around the time of William Shakespeare's marriage in 1582, John Shakespeare was plunged into a period of financial disrepair and social disgrace, recovering both wealth and status in part, it is assumed, through the assistance of his son William. John Shakespeare died in Stratford on September 8, 1601.

Sometime around 1557, John Shakespeare married Mary Arden, the youngest daughter of Robert Arden (d. 1556), a wealthy landowner of Wilmecote, a couple of miles north of Stratford. Robert Arden's father, William Shakespeare's maternal great-grandfather, was Thomas Arden who was living at Wilmecote in 1501 and who probably belonged to the aristocratic family of the Ardens of Park Hall. After seven years and a day of widowhood, Mary Shakespeare died in Stratford September 9, 1608.

In November of 1582, the banns for the marriage of William Shakespeare to Anne Hathaway were issued in the Episcopal Diocese of Worcester. Anne Hathaway was probably the eldest daughter, and one of seven children, of Richard Hathaway. There is no record of her birth, but from evidence offered by her burial tomb, we assume that she was seven or eight years older than her husband, who would have then been eighteen years old. She was most certainly pregnant at time of their marriage, and she is perhaps best remembered for the sole, puzzling reference to her in Shakespeare's will: "Item, I give unto my wife my second best bed with the furniture." Anne Hathaway outlived her husband by some seven years and was buried beside him at Stratford on August 8, 1623. Her epitaph reads: "Here lieth interred the body of Anne, wife of Mr. William Shakespeare, who departed this life the 6th day of August, 1623, being of the age of 67 years."

Beyond these simple details, little is known about Anne Hathaway or, for that matter, of her marriage to William Shakespeare. The birth of their first child, Susanna, was registered on May 26, 1583, less than six months after the couple was married. Twins Hamnet (sometimes spelled Hamlet) and Judith soon followed; on February 2, 1584. Tragically, Hamnet, William Shakespeare's only son, died having lived little more than eleven years and was buried August 11, 1596. Both of Shakespeare's daughters lived to old age: Susanna until July 11, 1649, and Judith until February 9, 1662. Susanna's daughter, Shakespeare's granddaughter was the only one of Shakespeare's grandchildren to survive to adulthood and marry; however she died without issue on February 17, 1670, the last of William Shakespeare's direct descendants.

As William Shakespeare's theatrical career in London progressed, he purchased land and houses in Stratford and vicinity, most notably, "New Place," for which Shakespeare paid 60 pounds sterling in 1597 and to which Shakespeare retired in 1610. New Place was the second largest house in Stratford and over a century old at the time of purchase. The house was kept in the Shakespeare family until the passing of his granddaughter in 1670, when it was sold to another family and, in 1702, demolished to make way for a new house. In addition to other cottages in Stratford, late in his life (1613) Shakespeare also purchased a house in Blackfriars, London. Records also show that Shakespeare traded in corn and malt, sold a load of stone to the Stratford Corporation for use in repairing a bridge across the Avon, and lent money on at least one occasion to an acquaintance in London. This portrait of Shakespeare as a successful trader in land and goods might seem at odds with the prevailing image of a playwright-poet; however, it must be noted that his wealth was derived not from the sale of his writing per se, but rather from the largess of his various patrons and from his position as a primary actor-shareholder in the company which performed his plays.

Perhaps the most tantalizing piece of information about Shakespeare's life appears in the 1596 draft (as well as in a 1599 draft) of a Grant of Arms to Shakespeare's father, which reads, in part:

> Being therefore solicited and [by] credible report informed that John Shakespeare of Stratford-upon-Avon in the county of Warwick, whose parents and late antecessors were for their valiant and faithful service advanced and rewarded by the most prudent prince King Henry the Seventh of famous memory, sithence which time they have continued in those parts in good reputation and credit. . . . I have therefore assigned, granted, and by these presents confirmed this shield or coat of arms; viz., Gold on a bend sable a spear of the first, the point steeled, proper; and for his crest or cognizance a falcon, his wings displayed, argent, standing on a wreath of his colors, supporting a spear—gold—steeled as aforesaid, set upon a helmet with mantels and tassels as hath been accustomed and more plainly appeareth depicted on this margent. Signifying hereby that it shall be lawful for the said John Shakespeare, Gent., and for his children, issue, and posterity at all times convenient to make show of and to bear blazoned the same achievement on their shield or coat of arms, escutcheons, crest, cognizance or seals, rings, signets, pennons, guidons, edifices, utensils, liveries, tombs, or monuments, or otherwise . . .

Reasonable conjecture indicates that the coat of arms awarded to

John Shakespeare was, in fact, a reflection of his son's ambition and prosperity, in all likelihood paid for by William Shakespeare himself. Indeed, two other wealthy actors—Augustine Phillips and Thomas Pope, members of Shakespeare's company—also purchased arms to which, it was later charged, they had no hereditary right, as did some twenty-one other contemporaries. By acquiring a coat of arms for his father, William Shakespeare could then claim its insignia and the status conferred therein as part of his own heritage. The arms granted to John Shakespeare are displayed on the monument above William Shakespeare's grave as well as on the tombstone of his daughter Susanna.

William Shakespeare died on April 23, 1616, at New Place in Stratford-on-Avon. The traditional story is that Shakespeare spent his final evening with the playwright Ben Jonson and others celebrating his birthday, perhaps with a bit too much to drink. Inscribed with the date of Shakespeare's death on his tomb in the chancel of the Holy Trinity Church is the following:

> Judicio Pylium, genio Socratem, arte Maronem Terra tegit, populus moeret, Olympus habet.

Stay, passenger, why goest thou by so fast?
Read, if thou canst, whom envious death hath placed Within this monument: Shakespeare, with whom
Quick nature died; whose name doth deck his tomb
Far more than cost; sith all that he hath writ
Leaves living art but page to serve his wit.

His accumulation of wealth is well-evidenced in the bequests of his will. His accrual of honors is equally apparent from the many eulogies published after his death, of which perhaps the most eloquent was proffered by Ben Jonson, who was Shakespeare's friend and perhaps also his fiercest competitor and frequent critic. It reads in part:

To draw no envy, Shakespeare, on thy name,
Am I thus ample to thy book and fame,
While I confess thy writings to be such
As neither man nor muse can praise too much. . . .

I therefore will begin:—Soul of the age!
The applause, delight, the wonder of our stage!
My Shakespeare, rise! I will not lodge thee by Chaucer or Spenser, or bid Beaumont lie
A little further, to make thee a room.
Thou art a monument without a tomb,
And art alive still, while thy book doth live
And we have wits to read and praise to give. . . .

But stay, I see thee in the hemisphere
Advanc'd and made a constellation there.
Shine forth, thou star of poets, and with rage,
Or influence, chide or cheer the drooping stage,
Which since thy flight fro hence hath mourn'd like night,
And despairs day but for thy volume's light.

Shakespeare in London

It is probable that William Shakespeare began working as an actor in London sometime during the 1580s. However, the first record of Shakespeare as an actor-shareholder in the Lord Chamberlain's company of players does not appear until March 1595, in the accounts of the Treasurer of the Royal Chamber. In this register, William Shakespeare is listed along with William Kempe and Richard Burbage as having performed for Queen Elizabeth I on the previous December 26 and 28 at Greenwich Palace, where one of the plays performed was, quite possibly, The Comedy Of Errors. The register reveals that the three were paid the rather handsome sum of ten pounds each per performance.

Will Kempe was famous for his stage appearances in the role of the clown in the plays of Shakespeare and others—he was the original Dogberry in Much Ado About Nothing—in addition to being renowned for his morris dancing. Richard Burbage is considered the first great English tragedian, who originated the roles of Hamlet, Lear, Othello, and Richard III, among others. Shakespeare himself is known to have appeared as a principal actor in two plays by Ben Jonson, Every Man In His Humor (1598) and Sejanus (1603). Indeed, tradition has it that the Lord Chamberlain's Men were determined to reject Every Man In His Humor, but Shakespeare ultimately persuaded his partners to put it on.

The Lord Chamberlain's Men presented their first public performances in the Theatre, an outdoor theatre also used on off-days for bull and bear baiting, built just outside the city limits by James Burbage, father of Richard Burbage. When their land-lease expired, the story goes, they dismantled the Theatre and used its timbers to build the Globe on the other side of London. Records dated 1599 show that Richard Burbage and his brother Cuthbert shared one half interest in the Globe; the other half interest was split by William Shakespeare with Will Kempe and three others; that is to say, Shakespeare owned a very profitable one-tenth share in the theatre.

After the death of Queen Elizabeth I in 1603, the players were taken up by King James I, becoming the King's Men. The 1603 commission to the King's Men charges them "freely to use and exercise the art and faculty of playing comedies, tragedies, histories, interludes, morals, pastorals, stage-plays, and such other, like as they have already studied or hereafter shall use or study, as well as for the recreation of our loving subjects as for our solace and pleasure when we shall think good to see them, during our pleasure," and effectively places the players under his protection. Shakespeare's company frequently performed at the courts of Elizabeth I and James I, as well as on its own outdoors, public stages; in 1608 they also took over the Blackfriars Theatre, one of the earliest indoor theatres, for winter performances. The Globe was leveled in a fire in 1613, after a performance of King Henry VIII, Shakespeare's last play. The Globe was soon rebuilt, but by then Shakespeare had retired and his death in 1616 along with that of Richard Burbage in 1619 coupled with pressure from Puritan forces, began a lengthy period of instability for the King's Men, finally coming to an end with the closing of the theatres by Parliament in 1642.

By 1592, when the first extant reference to Shakespeare as a dramatist appears, William Shakespeare's presence in London as an actor and dramatist of some visibility seems well-established. Dramatist Robert Greene, in an epilogue to Groatsworth Of Wit Bought With A Million Of Repentance, published just after Greene's death in September of that year, refers somewhat obliquely to Shakespeare as "an upstart crow, beautified with our feathers, that with his Tiger's heart wrapt in a player's hide supposes he is as well able to bombast out a blank verse as the best of you; and being an absolute Johannes fac totum, is in his own conceit the only Shake-scene in a country." In December of that same year, an apology of sorts was issued by Henry Chettle, the editor of Greene's diatribe. In his Preface to Kind-Heart's Dream, Chettle calls Greene's Groatsworth of Wit doubly offensive because the targets cannot avenge themselves on a dead man, and he adds in what appears to be a reference to Shakespeare: "I am as sorry as if the original fault had been my fault, because myself have seen his demeanor no less civil than [t]he excellent in the quality he professes. Besides, divers of worship have reported his uprightness of dealing, which argues his honesty, and his facetious grace in writing that approves his art."

It is very probable that Chettle felt an apology necessary to preserve his own career in the face of Shakespeare's growing popularity. An anonymous poet, who in a verse dated 1594 praises the way in which "Shakespeare paints poor Lucrece' rape," offers a testament to the popularity of Shakespeare's dramatic poem. In the Palladis Tamia of Francis Meres (1598), William Shakespeare's name appears near the end of a list of great classical poets that begins with Homer and continues with:

> As the soul of Euphorbus was thought to live in Pythagoras: so the sweet witty soul of Ovid lives in mellifluous and honey-tongued Shakespeare, witness his Venus and Adonis, his Lucrece, his sugared Sonnets among his private friends. . . . As Plautus and Seneca are accounted the best for comedy and tragedy among the Latins: so Shakespeare among the English is the most excellent in both kinds for the stage. . . . As Epius Stolo said that the muses would speak with Plautus' tongue, if they would speak Latin: so I say that the Muses would speak with Shakespeare's fine filed phrase, if they would speak English.

That same year, another poet by the name of Richard Barnfield added his praise of Shakespeare's "honey-flowing vein" in his Remembrance Of Some English Poets, declaring: "Well may the body die, but fame dies never." Notes by Gabriel Harvey in 1598 observe: "The younger sort takes much delight in Shakespeare's Venus and Adonis; but his Lucrece and his tragedy of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, have it in them to please the wiser sort." A 1599 sonnet entitled "Ad Gulielmum Shakespeare," authored by John Weever, begins:

> Honey-tongued Shakespeare, when I saw thine issue,
> I swore Apollo got them and none other;
> Their rosy-tainted features, clothed in tissue,
> Some heavenborn goddess said to be their mother . . .

Moreover, by this time Shakespeare's name had such currency that it was being used to promote publications by other authors, in addition to being mocked, notably by Cambridge undergraduates in their 1600 spoof of college life: "We shall have nothing but pure Shakespeare and shreds of poetry that he hath gathered at the theatres."

As a poet, William Shakespeare's name first appears appended to his 1593 dedication of Venus And Adonis to the Earl of Southampton, one of Shakespeare's more generous patrons, and in the subsequent year in the dedication to Lucrece, also to the Earl of Southampton, in which Shakespeare declares: "The love I dedicate to your Lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet without beginning is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honorable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours, what I have to do is yours, being part in all I have, devoted yours."

As a dramatist, Shakespeare's name first appears on the title page of the second and third editions of Richard III (1598) and on the title page of the earliest extant edition of Love's Labour's Lost (also dated 1598). In a similar vein, the 1608 edition of King Lear is headed by this proclamation: "M. William Shakespeare: His true Chronicle History of the Life and Death of King Lear and his three Daughters. With the unfortunate life of Edgar, son and heir to the Earl of Gloster, and his sullen and assumed humor of Tom of Bedlam: As it was played before the King's Majesty at Whitehall upon St. Stephen's Night in Christmas Holidays, by his Majesty's Servants playing usually at the Globe on the Bankside."

In 1623, seven years after the death of Shakespeare, two shareholders of the King's Men, John Heminge—who probably originated the role of Falstaff—and Henry Condell—who, it is speculated, was the first to play the role of Horatio in Hamlet—collected Shakespeare's works into a single volume (called the First Folio), offering it to the public at the price of twenty shillings. Their dedication praises their patrons, the Earl of Pembroke and the Earl of Montgomery, and adds:

> There is a great difference whether any book choose his patrons or find them. This hath done both. For so much were your Lordship's likings of the several parts, when they were acted, as before they were published the volume asked to be yours. We have but collected them, and done an office to the dead, to procure his orphans guardians: without ambition either of self-profit or fame, only to keep the memory of so worthy a friend and fellow alive as was our SHAKESPEARE . . .

In their Epistle to the readers of the first edition of Shakespeare's collected works, Heminge and Condell close with this exhortation:

> Read him, therefore, and again and again; and if then you do not like him, surely you are in some manifest danger not to understand him, and so we leave you to other of his friends whom if you need can be your guides. If you need them not, you can lead yourselves and others, and such readers we wish him.

—Sharon Mazer, Ph. D.
Adapted for this edition from Shakespeare of Stratford, by Tucker Brooke (The Yale Shakespeare, 1926).

The Comedy of Errors

Edited by
ROBERT DUDLEY FRENCH

Dramatis Personae

SOLINUS, Duke of Ephesus
AEGEON, a Merchant of Syracuse

ANTIPHOLUS OF EPHESUS, ANTIPHOLUS OF SYRACUSE — Twin Brothers, and Sons to Aegeon and Aemilia, but unknown to each other

DROMIO OF EPHESUS, DROMIO OF SYRACUSE — Twin Brothers, and Slaves to the two Antipholuses

BALTHAZAR, a Merchant
ANGELO, a Goldsmith
A MERCHANT, Friend to Antipholus of Syracuse
A SECOND MERCHANT, to whom Angelo is a debtor

DR. PINCH, a Schoolmaster, and a Conjurer

AEMILIA, Wife to Aegeon, an Abbess at Ephesus
ADRIANA, Wife to Antipholus of Ephesus
LUCIANA, Sister to Adriana
LUCE, Servant to Adriana
A COURTESAN

GAOLER, OFFICERS, AND OTHER ATTENDANTS

SCENE—Ephesus.

The Comedy of Errors

Introduction

Sources of the Play

The plot of The Comedy of Errors was derived, directly or indirectly, from the Menæchmi of Plautus. Some scholars, mindful of Shakespeare's 'small Latin,' are inclined to believe that his education in the classics had not gone far enough to enable him to read Plautus in the original; and it has been suggested that he may have used an English prose translation, prepared by a certain 'W. W.' This translation, to be sure, was not published until 1595, some years later than the date usually assigned to Shakespeare's play; but the printer, in his note to the reader, hints that the work had existed in manuscript for some time. There is a possibility that Shakespeare had seen it before he wrote his Errors. Some verbal resemblances between his play and 'W. W.'s' translation have been pointed out, but they are too slight and too infrequent to be taken as proof that this work was a direct source of The Comedy of Errors. It is just as probable that Shakespeare went directly to the Latin text for his material.

The general resemblance between The Comedy of Errors and the Menæchmi may be indicated by reproducing the argument of the Latin play, which appears in the 1595 translation as follows:

Two Twinborne sonnes, a Sicill marchant had,
Menechmus one, and Sosicles the other:
The first his Father lost a little Lad,
The Grandsire namde the latter like his brother.
This (growne a man) long travell tooke to seeke
His Brother, and to Epidamnum came,
Where th' other dwelt inricht, and him so like,
That Citizens there take him for the same:
Father, wife, neighbours, each mistaking either,
Much pleasant Error, ere they meete togither.

Examination of the two plays shows that the similarity extends to the details of the action. Menæchmus the Citizen, in the Latin play, promises to dine with Erotium, a courtesan; but the dinner goes to Menæchmus the Traveller, who has just landed, accompanied by his slave, Messenio, and is mistaken for his brother by the courtesan and her servants. Erotium gives her guest a cloak to take to the dyers and a chain to be repaired by a goldsmith; and Menæchmus the Citizen is later called to account for these articles, which he has not seen since he stole them from his wife and bestowed them on Erotium. Menæchmus the Traveler, encountering his brother's wife, who mistakes him for her husband, is completely at a loss to understand her reproaches. As a result of their behavior in these bewildering circumstances, both brothers are separately suspected of madness, and Medicus, a physician, essays his powers as a conjurer to reduce the malady. Certainly there are scenes in The Comedy of Errors which bear a resemblance to these incidents and situations, and they seem to point toward a familiarity, on Shakespeare's part, with the details of Plautus' play, as well as with its general outline.

Shakespeare's treatment of this source material shows characteristic independence. Of the nine persons of the Plautine comedy, he has retained but six: the Menæchmi (Antipholi), Messenio (Dromio of Syracuse), Mulier (Adriana), Erotium (the Courtesan), and Medicus (Dr. Pinch). Such stock characters as the Cook and the Parasite have been discarded, while Luciana has been substituted for Senex, the doddering father-in-law of Menæchmus the Citizen. Dromio of Ephesus, Solinus, Ægeon, Æmilia, Luce, and the Merchants have been added. Similar incidents and situations are given very different treatment by the two poets. The relations between Adriana and her husband are treated less cynically by Shakespeare than in the Latin play, and the dinner with the courtesan is made to appear the natural result of the injured feelings of a man who finds himself unaccountably locked out of his own house: we certainly hear nothing, in The Comedy of Errors, of jewelry or a cloak stolen from Adriana and bestowed upon the courtesan. Antipholus of Syracuse, moreover, is less ready to profit by valuable tokens, forced upon him by people obviously laboring under some strange misapprehension, than his prototype, Menæchmus the Traveller, who not only proposes to make off with the courtesan's cloak and chain, but endeavors to wheedle more booty out of her maid.

Of more importance than these differences in treatment are certain significant additions to the rather simple plot, which appear in The Comedy of Errors, broadening the humor and making the comedy a richer play than the Menæchmi. In Plautus, only one of the twin heroes is attended by his slave, and there is no suggestion of the delightful absurdity of a second pair of identical twins, attendant upon the first. The presence of the two Dromios has enabled Shakespeare to begin the merry game of confusion earlier in the play and to continue it to the end with unfailing variety in the complications. The substitution of Luciana for Senex not only replaces a stock character with a very real and appealing person, but also provides an opportunity for an added sentimental interest and for some love-making in rhymed verse, which anticipates the poetry of Romeo and Juliet. Another important addition is the introduction of Ægeon and Æmilia, which places the boisterous farce in a graceful setting of romantic comedy. This embellishment of the plot has every appearance of being Shakespeare's invention, though possible sources have been pointed out in Ariosto's Suppositi and in the old and famous story of Apollonius of Tyre. The scene in which Antipholus of Ephesus knocks vainly at his own door, while his brother is entertained within, does not appear in the Menæchmi but resembles a scene in the Amphitruo, another comedy by Plautus.

All these important differences between The Comedy of Errors and its remote Latin original may, of course, be the fruits of Shakespeare's own labors over his source material; but a plausible case has been made out for the existence of an intermediary step in the evolution of the plot. It has been conjectured that the comedy is the rewriting of an old play, which had become the property of Shakespeare's company. Support has been found for this theory in the use of the doggerel fourteen-syllable line in some of the dialogue, since this form of verse is employed in the surviving examples of mid-sixteenth century academic comedy. Another bit of evidence, pointing in the same direction, has been found in the corrupt Latin epithets bestowed upon the twin heroes in some of the stage directions of the Folio. It has been suggested that these epithets, which are reproduced in the notes,[1] may have found their way into Shakespeare's play from a garbled transcript of the old comedy which he was rewriting. From the fact that doggerel is used for so much of the dialogue in the first scene of the third act, and from the presence, in that scene alone, of the 'ghost' Balthazar and of Luce, who appears to be the 'kitchen-vestal,' elsewhere named Nell, Mr. J. Dover Wilson argues that we have in a certain part of that scene a portion of the old play, taken over by Shakespeare practically without revision.

This 'lost source' of Shakespeare's play has been identified, by those who argue for its existence, with a performance styled The Historie of Error, which was 'shown at Hampton Court on New Yere's daie at night [1576-7], enacted by the children of Powles.' Since the productions given by the boys of St. Paul's were usually derived from classic sources, it seems a plausible conjecture that this lost play was founded upon the Menæchmi. The play was given again at Windsor in 1583, if we may believe that the History of Ferrar (sic), referred to in the Accounts of the Revels at Court, was the same work.

In the absence of tangible evidence, however, it cannot be definitely stated, either that this lost play was founded upon Plautus, or that it found its way eventually into Shakespeare's hands and formed the basis of his Comedy of Errors. Although the theory has gained acceptance, it should be remembered that it rests largely on conjecture and that it begins by assuming the existence of lost evidence which it needs for its support. When all has been said, the fact remains that no principal source for Shakespeare's play, other than the Latin text of the Menæchmi, has yet been brought to light.

The History of the Play

In 1594, 'betwixt All-hollontide and Christmas,' the gentlemen of Gray's Inn devised revels to grace the coming holiday season, electing one of their number to preside over their festivities as 'Prince of Purpoole.' An account of their revels, obviously written by some choice spirit who had shared in the proceedings and relished their flavor to the full, found its way into print, nearly a century later, in a tract printed for 'W. Canning, at his Shop in the Temple Cloysters MDCLXXXVIII' under the title Gesta Grayorum: or the History of the High and Mighty Prince, Henry Prince of Purpoole . . . Who Reigned and Died A.D. 1594.

This out-of-the-way little volume is valuable for more reasons than one, but its interest for Shakespearians lies in the account which it gives of what happened at Gray's Inn on the night of Holy Innocents (December 28). On that evening, the spirit of revelry seems to have reached its height. An 'ambassador' from the Inner Temple, 'attended by a great number of brave Gentlemen,' put in an appearance about nine of the clock, and it appears that special entertainment of some sort had been devised for their pleasure; but unfortunately 'there arose such a disordered Tumult and Crowd upon the Stage, that there was no opportunity to effect that which was intended.' Indeed, the disorders ran to such length that at last the Lord Ambassador and his train, thinking they were not being 'so kindly entertained as was before expected,' withdrew in some displeasure. 'After their Departure,' the account goes on to record, 'the Throngs and Tumults did somewhat cease, although so much of them continued, as was able to disorder and confound any good Invention whatsoever. In regard whereof, as also for that the Sports intended were especially for the gracing the Templarians it was thought good not to offer any thing of Account, saving Dancing and Revelling with Gentlewomen; and after such Sports, a Comedy of Errors (like to Plautus his Menechmus) was played by the Players. So that Night was begun, and continued to the End, in nothing but Confusion and Errors; whereupon it was ever afterwards called, The Night of Errors.'

The players referred to in the account of this night of confusion and errors undoubtedly were the Lord Chamberlain's Men (Shakespeare's company), and the play thrust so inauspiciously upon this tumultuous stage, where the confusion was so great as to 'disorder and confound any good Invention whatsoever,' must have been Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors. This is the earliest recorded production of the play, but there is no reason to believe that it was a first performance. Indeed, there is evidence indicating that the comedy had been played before the Queen that very afternoon. Payment to the Lord Chamberlain's Men was made for a performance at the Court, then at Greenwich, on December 28, and it is a reasonable assumption that the company put on the same bill which they were later to present before the lawyers at Gray's Inn. It should be added that the evening performance was probably not a makeshift, as one might infer from the account in the Gesta Grayorum. Undoubtedly, the Prince of Purpoole and his councillors had devised some amateur theatricals of their own for the amusement of their guests from the Inner Temple and found themselves obliged to cancel that part of the entertainment when the spirit of revelry passed beyond their control, in the giddy hours of the early evening; but it seems unlikely that they then called in the players to step into the breach. It is more reasonable to assume, with Sir A. Quiller-Couch, that the performance by the professional company had been prearranged, and that 'the players had been preëmpted from Greenwich to present just such an extravaganza upon Plautus as would tickle the scholarly taste and amuse the "studious lawyers" amid their bowers.'

It is generally agreed that the Comedy of Errors was not a new play when it was performed at Gray's Inn in 1594. Every test of versification and language places the comedy among Shakespeare's earliest works; and in the list of his plays given by Francis Meres in the Palladis Tamia (1598), 'his Errors' stands second, between The Two Gentlemen of Verona and Love's Labour's Lost. A bit of evidence pointing to a date about 1591 has been found in the text of the play. Dromio of Syracuse, finding out countries in the ample person of Nell, the kitchen-wench, discovers France 'in her forehead, armed and reverted, making war against her heir.' This is usually supposed to be a reference to the armed resistance of the Catholic League against Henry of Navarre, named heir to the throne by Henry III in 1589. Such an allusion would have fallen rather flat after the coronation of Navarre in 1593, but would certainly have taken effect in 1591, when English troops were in France, supporting the cause of the Protestant king against his revolted subjects. This historical allusion, together with a reference, a few lines farther on, to 'whole armadoes of carracks' in connection with Spain, has been taken as evidence to support the date 1591-2, now generally assigned to the play.

[1] See notes on I.ii.S.d. and II.i.S.d.

The stage history of the comedy, begun amid the tumult of the stormy night at Gray's Inn, has not been conspicuously prosperous. From the Revels Accounts, we learn that 'The Plaie of Errors, by Shaxberd,' was acted before King James at Whitehall on December 28, 1604. No subsequent performance of the play has been recorded until 1741, when it was revived at Drury Lane. Opening on November 11, the comedy was acted on four successive nights and was put on again on December 10. No bill of the actors in this revival has been preserved, but it is said that Charles Macklin played the part of Dromio of Syracuse.

At Covent Garden, the comedy was revived several times during the eighteenth century. As early as 1734, a comedy in two acts 'taken from Plautus and Shakespeare,' called See if You Like It, or 'Tis all a Mistake, was performed there, but we do not know just what relation this play bore to The Comedy of Errors. Shakespeare's play was not presented at Covent Garden until April 14, 1762, when it was acted but once. On January 22, 1779, a revised version was performed at the same theatre, probably with the alterations of Thomas Hull, actor, writer, and general utility man of the company. During the next year a farce by W. Woods, called The Twins, or Which is Which?, 'altered from Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors,' was produced at the Theatre Royal in Edinburgh; and in April, 1790, a three-act version of Shakespeare's play was performed at Covent Garden. Hull's version came back into its own when it was used as the basis of a production by John Philip Kemble at Covent Garden, on January 9, 1808.

Several actors, well known to the playgoers of the eighteenth century, seem to have increased their reputation by their connection with the play; notably, Quick, as Dromio of Ephesus, and Munden, as Dromio of Syracuse. At a performance given for his benefit, Rees played Dromio of Ephesus opposite Munden, imitating the latter's voice and manner closely. In Kemble's production, Munden held his usual rôle, with Blanchard, who was considerably shorter and could not possibly be mistaken for him, playing Dromio of Ephesus.

The most singular chapter in the history of The Comedy of Errors opened on December 11, 1819, when the play was given at Covent Garden as an opera, 'in five acts with Alterations, Additions, and with Songs, Duets, Glees, and Chorusses, Selected entirely from the Plays, Poems and Sonnets of Shakespeare.' This singular production drew together an assortment of Shakespeare's lyrics which included several songs from As You Like It, two of the Sonnets, the 'Willow Song' from Othello, and 'St. Withold footed thrice the Wold' from Lear. In order to introduce all these songs of diverse nature into The Comedy of Errors, the reviser found that 'a few additional scenes and passages were absolutely necessary'; and he set himself to his task with as little regard for the expense of scenery as for the text of Shakespeare. The last scene of the third act opened with a magnificent set including mountains 'whose tops are covered with snow,' a river, and a rustic bridge. Horns were heard without, and the purpose of the set was shortly disclosed by the entrance of a hunting party, who sang 'a quartetto and chorus from Love's Labour's Lost.'

'This literary murder,' says Genest, 'was committed by Reynolds'; and he goes on to assure the author that 'the only sentiments which the real friends of Shakespeare can feel towards him are indignation at his attempt, and contempt for the bungling manner in which he has executed it.' Other friends of Shakespeare than Genest may well feel a little chagrin at the thought that this unpalatable gallimaufry was presented twenty-seven times in its first season and was frequently revived, and that Frederick Reynolds was so encouraged by his success with The Comedy of Errors that he continued his assaults upon the plays, presenting operatic versions of Twelfth Night, The Tempest, Two Gentlemen of Verona, and The Merry Wives of Windsor. It may be said, in extenuation of the sins of the theatre-going public, that Reynolds could avail himself of the services of those 'lovely singing actresses,' Mrs. Stephens and Maria Tree, who acted Adriana and Luciana in his production of the Errors.

A revival of the play, not in its strange operatic garb, was given by Samuel Phelps, who played it at Sadler's Wells in November, 1855, and again in January, 1856. This production was followed, in the spring of 1864, on the occasion of the Shakespeare Tercentenary, by an interesting performance given at the Princess' Theatre and through the provinces. The play was acted continuously without the fall of the curtain, and with a strikingly beautiful stage mounting. The two brothers, Charles and Harry Webb, played the two Dromios, giving an extraordinary interpretation, which kept the audience in bewilderment by their similarity in appearance and actions. At a performance by the Webbs in Liverpool in this year, S. B. Bancroft acted Antipholus of Syracuse and John Hare appeared as Dr. Pinch.

In January, 1883, J. S. Clarke, the brother-in-law of Edwin Booth, put on a 'pictorial revival,' for which Lewis Wingfield designed the setting and costumes. On this occasion, Clarke and Harry Paulton, who acted the two Dromios, seem to have secured their comic effect by emphasizing the differences between the twin slaves as much as the similarity. In more recent years, the play has been included in the repertory of the Benson company, for their London season in 1905, with F. R. Benson as Antipholus of Syracuse and the two Dromios by George Weir and Arthur Whitby. The most recent revival, on the London stage, was a performance given as a curtain-raiser to a production of The Bells at the Savoy Theatre during the summer of 1924. The comedy was played very rapidly and was well received.

Outside of England, The Comedy of Errors has had no very noteworthy history. When performed at the Künstlertheater in Munich, in September, 1910, under the direction of Max Reinhardt of Berlin, the play was referred to as 'a novelty'; though it is to be said that the same authority describes the production as 'the culminating success of an artistic and clever management' (Athenæum, October 1, 1910). In America, the play was not acted until 1804, when a production was given at the Park Theatre, New York, on May 25. The most notable revival in this country was that of William H. Crane and Stuart Robson in 1878. Robson and Crane, who acted the two Dromios, were not in the least alike in appearance, but, with the aid of dress and make-up, they achieved a remarkable resemblance. 'Intellectual vacuity was expressed in a blank stare, a rocking gait, fingers sucked or tapped and pressed together, and irresolute swaying, while voices raised in whimpering protest or bleating in appeal called answering laughter from the audience.'

Act First ❧ Scene First

[A Hall in the Duke's Palace]
Enter the Duke of Ephesus, with the Merchant [Ægeon] of Syracusa, Gaoler, and other attendants.

Merch. Proceed, Solinus, to procure my fall,
And by the doom of death end woes and all.
Duke. Merchant of Syracusa, plead no more.
I am not partial to infringe our laws:
The enmity and discord which of late
Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your duke
To merchants, our well-dealing countrymen,
Who, wanting guilders to redeem their lives,
Have seal'd his rigorous statutes with their bloods,
Excludes all pity from our threat'ning looks.
For, since the mortal and intestine jars
'Twixt thy seditious countrymen and us,
It hath in solemn synods been decreed,
Both by the Syracusians and ourselves,
To admit no traffic to our adverse towns:
Nay, more, if any, born at Ephesus,
Be seen at Syracusian marts and fairs;
Again, if any Syracusian born
Come to the bay of Ephesus: he dies,
His goods confiscate to the duke's dispose;
Unless a thousand marks be levied,
To quit the penalty and to ransom him.
Thy substance, valu'd at the highest rate,
Cannot amount unto a hundred marks;
Therefore, by law thou art condemn'd to die.
Merch. Yet this my comfort: when your words are done,
My woes end likewise with the evening sun.
Duke. Well, Syracusian, say, in brief the cause
Why thou departedst from thy native home,
And for what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus.
Merch. A heavier task could not have been impos'd
Than I to speak my griefs unspeakable:
Yet, that the world may witness that my end
Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence,
I'll utter what my sorrow gives me leave.
In Syracusa was I born, and wed
Unto a woman, happy but for me,
And by me too, had not our hap been bad.
With her I liv'd in joy: our wealth increas'd
By prosperous voyages I often made
To Epidamnum; till my factor's death,
And the great care of goods at random left,
Drew me from kind embracements of my spouse;
From whom my absence was not six months old,
Before herself,—almost at fainting under
The pleasing punishment that women bear,—
Had made provision for her following me,
And soon and safe arrived where I was.
There had she not been long but she became
A joyful mother of two goodly sons;
And, which was strange, the one so like the other,
As could not be distinguish'd but by names.
That very hour, and in the self-same inn,
A meaner woman was delivered
Of such a burthen, male twins, both alike.
Those,—for their parents were exceeding poor,—
I bought, and brought up to attend my sons.
My wife, not meanly proud of two such boys,
Made daily motions for our home return:
Unwilling I agreed. Alas! too soon
We came aboard.
A league from Epidamnum had we sail'd,
Before the always-wind-obeying deep
Gave any tragic instance of our harm:
But longer did we not retain much hope;
For what obscured light the heavens did grant
Did but convey unto our fearful minds
A doubtful warrant of immediate death;
Which, though myself would gladly have embrac'd,
Yet the incessant weepings of my wife,
Weeping before for what she saw must come,
And piteous plainings of the pretty babes,
That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
Forc'd me to seek delays for them and me.
And this it was, for other means was none:
The sailors sought for safety by our boat,
And left the ship, then sinking-ripe, to us:
My wife, more careful for the latter-born,
Had fasten'd him unto a small spare mast,
Such as seafaring men provide for storms;
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whilst I had been like heedful of the other.
The children thus dispos'd, my wife and I,
Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fix'd,
Fasten'd ourselves at either end the mast;
And floating straight, obedient to the stream,
Was carried towards Corinth, as we thought.
At length the sun, gazing upon the earth,
Dispers'd those vapours that offended us,
And, by the benefit of his wished light
The seas wax'd calm, and we discovered
Two ships from far making amain to us,
Of Corinth that, of Epidaurus this:
But ere they came,—O let me say no more!
Gather the sequel by that went before.
Duke. Nay, forward, old man; do not break off so;
For we may pity, though not pardon thee.
Merch. O, had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthily term'd them merciless to us!
For, ere the ships could meet by twice five leagues,
We were encounter'd by a mighty rock,
Which being violently borne upon,
Our helpful ship was splitted in the midst;
So that, in this unjust divorce of us
Fortune had left to both of us alike
What to delight in, what to sorrow for.
Her part, poor soul! seeming as burdened

4 partial: enough inclined in your behalf 8 guilders: money: cf. n. 11 intestine; cf. n. 14 Syracusians: i.e. Syracusans 20 confiscate: confiscated dispose: disposal 21 marks: a mark was worth 13s. 4d., about $3.35 34 nature: natural affection; cf. n. 41 Epidamnum; cf. n. factor's: agent's

52 As: that they 54 meaner: of lower rank 58 meanly: moderately 59 motions: proposals 64 instance: indication 67 fearful: frightened 68 doubtful: dreadful 72 plainings: wailings 73 for fashion: from imitation of others 77 sinking-ripe: on the point of sinking 78 latter-born; cf. n. 92 amain: swiftly 93 Epidaurus; cf. n. 95 that: what

With lesser weight, but not with lesser woe,
Was carried with more speed before the wind,
And in our sight they three were taken up
By fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length, another ship had seiz'd on us;
And, knowing whom it was their hap to save,
Gave healthful welcome to their ship-wrack'd guests;
And would have reft the fishers of their prey,
Had not their bark been very slow of sail;
And therefore homeward did they bend their course.
Thus have you heard me sever'd from my bliss,
That by misfortunes was my life prolong'd,
To tell sad stories of my own mishaps.

Duke. And, for the sake of them thou sorrowest for,
Do me the favour to dilate at full
What hath befall'n of them and thee till now.

Merch. My youngest boy, and yet my eldest care,
At eighteen years became inquisitive
After his brother; and importun'd me
That his attendant—so his case was like,
Reft of his brother, but retain'd his name—
Might bear him company in the quest of him;
Whom whilst I labour'd of a love to see,
I hazarded the loss of whom I lov'd.
Five summers have I spent in farthest Greece,
Roaming clean through the bounds of Asia,
And, coasting homeward, came to Ephesus;
Hopeless to find, yet loath to leave unsought
Or that or any place that harbours men.
But here must end the story of my life;
And happy were I in my timely death,
Could all my travels warrant me they live.

Duke. Hapless Ægeon, whom the fates have mark'd
To bear the extremity of dire mishap!
Now, trust me, were it not against our laws,
Against my crown, my oath, my dignity,
Which princes, would they, may not disannul,
My soul should sue as advocate for thee.
But though thou art adjudged to the death,
And passed sentence may not be recall'd
But to our honour's great disparagement,
Yet will I favour thee in what I can:
Therefore, merchant, I'll limit thee this day
To seek thy life by beneficial help.
Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus;
Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the sum,
And live; if no, then thou art doom'd to die.
Gaoler, take him to thy custody.

Gaol. I will my lord.

Merch. Hopeless and helpless doth Ægeon wend,
But to procrastinate his lifeless end. Exeunt.

114 healthful: salutary 122 dilate: narrate 133 clean: entirely 136 Or . . . or: either . . or 138 timely: speedy 139 warrant me: give me assurance that 144 disannul: annul 151 life: cf. n.

Scene Second

[The Mart]

Enter Antipholus Erotes [of Syracuse], a Merchant, and Dromio [of Syracuse].

Mer. Therefore, give out you are of Epidamnum,
Lest that your goods too soon be confiscate.
This very day, a Syracusian merchant
Is apprehended for arrival here;
And, not being able to buy out his life,
According to the statute of the town
Dies ere the weary sun set in the west.
There is your money that I had to keep.

Ant. S. Go bear it to the Centaur, where we host,
And stay there, Dromio, till I come to thee.
Within this hour it will be dinner-time:
Till that, I'll view the manners of the town,
Peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings,
And then return and sleep within mine inn,
For with long travel I am stiff and weary.
Get thee away.

Dro. S. Many a man would take you at your word,
And go indeed, having so good a mean. Exit Dromio.

Ant. S. A trusty villain, sir, that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholy,
Lightens my humour with his merry jests.
What, will you walk with me about the town,
And then go to my inn and dine with me?

Mer. I am invited, sir, to certain merchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefit;
I crave your pardon. Soon at five o'clock,
Please you, I'll meet with you upon the mart,
And afterward consort you till bed-time:
My present business calls me from you now.

Ant. S. Farewell till then: I will go lose myself,
And wander up and down to view the city.

Mer. Sir, I commend you to your own content. [Exit.]

Ant. S. He that commends me to mine own content,
Commends me to the thing I cannot get.
I to the world am like a drop of water
That in the ocean seeks another drop;
Who, falling there to find his fellow forth,
Unseen, inquisitive, confounds himself:
So I, to find a mother and a brother,
In quest of them, unhappy, lose myself.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.

Here comes the almanac of my true date.
What now? How chance thou art return'd so soon?

Dro. E. Return'd so soon! rather approach'd too late:
The capon burns, the pig falls from the spit,
The clock hath strucken twelve upon the bell;
My mistress made it one upon my cheek:
She is so hot because the meat is cold;
The meat is cold because you come not home;
You come not home because you have no stomach;

Scene Two, S. d. Antipholus Erotes; cf. n. 9 host: lodge 13 Peruse: observe 18 mean: means (the money entrusted to him) 19 villain: fellow 26 Soon at: about 28 consort you: keep you company 37 forth: out 38 confounds himself: i.e. is lost 41 almanac of my true date; cf. n. 45 twelve: somewhat past the Elizabethan dinner hour 49 stomach: appetite

You have no stomach, having broke your fast;
But we, that know what 'tis to fast and pray,
Are penitent for your default to-day.
Ant. S. Stop in your wind, sir: tell me this, I pray:
Where have you left the money that I gave you?
Dro. E. O, sixpence, that I had o' Wednesday last
To pay the saddler for my mistress' crupper?
The saddler had it, sir; I kept it not.
Ant. S. I am not in a sportive humour now.
Tell me, and dally not, where is the money?
We being strangers here, how dar'st thou trust
So great a charge from thine own custody?
Dro. E. I pray you, jest, sir, as you sit at dinner.
I from my mistress come to you in post;
If I return, I shall be post indeed,
For she will score your fault upon my pate.
Methinks your maw, like mine, should be your clock
And strike you home without a messenger.
Ant. S. Come, Dromio, come, these jests are out of season;
Reserve them till a merrier hour than this.
Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee?
Dro. E. To me, sir? why, you gave no gold to me.
Ant. S. Come on, sir knave, have done your foolishness,
And tell me how thou hast dispos'd thy charge.
Dro. E. My charge was but to fetch you from the mart
Home to your house, the Phœnix, sir, to dinner:
My mistress and her sister stays for you.
Ant. S. Now, as I am a Christian, answer me,
In what safe place you have bestow'd my money;
Or I shall break that merry sconce of yours
That stands on tricks when I am undispos'd.
Where is the thousand marks thou hadst of me?
Dro. E. I have some marks of yours upon my pate,
Some of my mistress' marks upon my shoulders,
But not a thousand marks between you both.
If I should pay your worship those again,
Perchance you will not bear them patiently.
Ant. S. Thy mistress' marks! what mistress, slave, hast thou?
Dro. E. Your worship's wife, my mistress at the Phœnix;
She that doth fast till you come home to dinner,
And prays that you will hie you home to dinner.
Ant. S. What! wilt thou flout me thus unto my face,
Being forbid? There, take you that, sir knave. [Strikes him.]
Dro. E. What mean you, sir? for God's sake, hold your hands!
Nay, an you will not, sir, I'll take my heels.
Exit Dromio Ep.
Ant. S. Upon my life, by some device or other
The villain is o'er-raught of all my money.
They say this town is full of cozenage;
As, nimble jugglers that deceive the eye,
Dark-working sorcerers that change the mind,
Soul-killing witches that deform the body,
Disguised cheaters, prating mountebanks,
And many such-like liberties of sin:
If it prove so, I will be gone the sooner.
I'll to the Centaur, to go seek this slave:
I greatly fear my money is not safe. Exit.

52 penitent: i.e. doing penance 63 post: haste; cf. n. 73 dispos'd: disposed of 75 Phœnix: cf. n. 78 bestow'd: deposited 79 sconce: head 80 stands on: insists on 94 S. d. Ep.: i.e. of Ephesus 96 o'er-raught: cheated 97 cozenage: cheating 102 liberties of sin: sinful liberties, license

Act Second ❧ Scene First

[The House of Antipholus of Ephesus]
Enter Adriana, wife to Antipholus Sereptus, with Luciana her Sister.

Adr. Neither my husband nor the slave return'd,
That in such haste I sent to seek his master!
Sure, Luciana, it is two o'clock.
Luc. Perhaps some merchant hath invited him,
And from the mart he's somewhere gone to dinner.
Good sister, let us dine and never fret.
A man is master of his liberty:
Time is their master, and, when they see time,
They'll go or come: if so, be patient, sister.
Adr. Why should their liberty than ours be more?
Luc. Because their business still lies out o' door.
Adr. Look, when I serve him so, he takes it ill.
Luc. O, know he is the bridle of your will.
Adr. There's none but asses will be bridled so.
Luc. Why, headstrong liberty is lash'd with woe.
There's nothing situate under heaven's eye
But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky:
The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowls,
Are their males' subjects and at their controls.
Men, more divine, the masters of all these,
Lords of the wide world, and wild wat'ry seas,
Indu'd with intellectual sense and souls,
Or more pre-eminence than fish and fowls,
Are masters to their females and their lords:
Then, let your will attend on their accords.
Adr. This servitude makes you to keep unwed.
Luc. Not this, but troubles of the marriage-bed.
Adr. But, were you wedded, you would bear some sway.
Luc. Ere I learn love, I'll practise to obey.
Adr. How if your husband start some other where?
Luc. Till he come home again, I would forbear.
Adr. Patience unmov'd! no marvel though she pause;
They can be meek that have no other cause.
A wretched soul, bruis'd with adversity,
We bid be quiet when we hear it cry;
But were we burden'd with like weight of pain,
As much, or more we should ourselves complain:
So thou, that hast no unkind mate to grieve thee,
With urging helpless patience wouldst relieve me;
But, if thou live to see like right bereft,
This fool-begg'd patience in thee will be left.
Luc. Well, I will marry one day, but to try.
Here comes your man; now is your husband nigh.
Adr. Say, is your tardy master now at hand? Enter Dromio E.
Dro. E. Nay, he's at two hands with me, and that my two ears can witness.
Adr. Say, didst thou speak with him? Know'st thou his mind?
Dro. E. Ay, ay, he told his mind upon mine ear.
Beshrew his hand, I scarce could understand it.
Luc. Spake he so doubtfully, thou couldst not feel his meaning?
Dro. E. Nay, he struck so plainly, I could too well feel his

II.i.S.d. Antipholus Sereptus; cf. n. 15 lash'd: scourged; cf. n. 17 his: its 30 some other where: i.e. after some other woman 33 other cause: cause to be otherwise 39 helpless: unavailing 41 fool-begg'd: foolishly demanded 50 Beshrew: ill luck to blows; and withal so doubtfully, that I could scarce understand them.

Adr. But say, I prithee, is he coming home?
It seems he hath great care to please his wife.
Dro. E. Why, mistress, sure my master is horn-mad.
Adr. Horn-mad, thou villain!
Dro. E. I mean not cuckold-mad; but, sure, his is stark mad.
When I desir'd him to come home to dinner,
He ask'd me for a thousand marks in gold:
' 'Tis dinner time,' quoth I; 'My gold!' quoth he:
'Your meat doth burn,' quoth I; 'My gold!' quoth he:
'Will you come home?' quoth I; 'My gold!' quoth he,
'Where is the thousand marks I gave thee, villain?'
'The pig,' quoth I, 'is burn'd;' 'My gold!' quoth he:
'My mistress, sir,'—quoth I; 'Hang up thy mistress!
I know not thy mistress; out on thy mistress!'
Luc. Quoth who?
Dro. E. Quoth my master:
'I know,' quoth he, 'no house, no wife, no mistress.'
So that my errand, due unto my tongue,
I thank him, I bear home upon my shoulders;
For, in conclusion, he did beat me there.
Adr. Go back again, thou slave, and fetch him home.
Dro. E. Go back again, and be new beaten home?
For God's sake, send some other messenger.
Adr. Back, slave, or I will break thy pate across.
Dro. E. And he will bless that cross with other beating:
Between you, I shall have a holy head.
Adr. Hence, prating peasant! fetch thy master home.
Dro. E. Am I so round with you as you with me,
That like a football you do spurn me thus?
You spurn me hence, and he will spurn me hither:
If I last in this service, you must case me in leather. [Exit.]
Luc. Fie, how impatience loureth in your face!
Adr. His company must do his minions grace,
Whilst I at home starve for a merry look.
Hath homely age the alluring beauty took
From my poor cheek? then, he hath wasted it:
Are my discourses dull? barren my wit?
If voluble and sharp discourse be marr'd,
Unkindness blunts it more than marble hard:
Do their gay vestments his affections bait?
That's not my fault; he's master of my state:
What ruins are in me that can be found
By him not ruin'd? then is he the ground
Of my defeatures. My decayed fair
A sunny look of his would soon repair;
But, too unruly deer, he breaks the pale
And feeds from home: poor I am but his stale.
Luc. Self-harming jealousy! fie, beat it hence!
Adr. Unfeeling fools can with such wrongs dispense.
I know his eye doth homage otherwhere,
Or else what lets it but he would be here?
Sister, you know he promis'd me a chain:
Would that alone, alone he would detain,
So he would keep fair quarter with his bed!
I see, the jewel best enamelled
Will lose his beauty; yet the gold bides still
That others touch, and often touching will
Wear gold; and no man that hath a name,
By falsehood and corruption doth it shame.
Since that my beauty cannot please his eye,
I'll weep what's left away, and weeping die.
Luc. How many fond fools serve mad jealousy!
Exit [with Adriana].

58 horn-mad; cf. n. 84 round; cf. n. 87 case: encase 89 minions: darlings 99 ground: cause 100 defeatures: disfigurements fair: beauty 103 stale: dupe, laughing-stock 105 dispense: put up 107 lets: hinders 110 keep fair quarter with: be true to 111-115 I see ... shame; cf. n. 118 fond: doting 24 earnest; cf. n. 29 Cf. n. 32 aspect: countenance; cf. n. 37 sconce: helmet; cf. n. 38 insconce: fortify

Scene Second

[A public Place]
Enter Antipholus Erotes [of Syracuse].

Ant. S. The gold I gave to Dromio is laid up
Safe at the Centaur; and the heedful slave
Is wander'd forth, in care to seek me out.
By computation, and mine host's report,
I could not speak with Dromio since at first
I sent him from the mart. See, here he comes.

Enter Dromio Siracusia.

How now, sir! is your merry humour alter'd?
As you love strokes, so jest with me again.
You know no Centaur? You receiv'd no gold?
Your mistress sent to have me home to dinner?
My house was at the Phœnix? Wast thou mad,
That thus so madly thou didst answer me?
Dro. S. What answer, sir? when spake I such a word?
Ant. S. Even now, even here, not half an hour since.
Dro. S. I did not see you since you sent me hence,
Home to the Centaur, with the gold you gave me.
Ant. S. Villain, thou didst deny the gold's receipt,
And told'st me of a mistress and a dinner;
For which, I hope, thou felt'st I was displeas'd.
Dro. S. I am glad to see you in this merry vein:
What means this jest? I pray you, master, tell me.
Ant. S. Yea, dost thou jeer, and flout me in the teeth?
Think'st thou I jest? Hold, take thou that, and that.
Beats Dro.
Dro. S. Hold, sir, for God's sake! now your jest is earnest:
Upon what bargain do you give it me?
Ant. S. Because that I familiarly sometimes
Do use you for my fool, and chat with you,
Your sauciness will jest upon my love,
And make a common of my serious hours.
When the sun shines let foolish gnats make sport,
But creep in crannies when he hides his beams.
If you will jest with me, know my aspect,
And fashion your demeanour to my looks,
Or I will beat this method in your sconce.
Dro. S. Sconce, call you it? so you would leave battering,
I had rather have it a head: an you use these blows long, I must get a sconce for my head and insconce it too; or else I shall seek my wit in my shoulders. But, I pray, sir, why am I beaten?
Ant. S. Dost thou not know?

Dro. S. Nothing, sir, but that I am beaten.
Ant. S. Shall I tell you why?
Dro. S. Ay, sir, and wherefore; for they say every why hath a wherefore.
Ant. S. Why, first,—for flouting me; and then, wherefore,—
For urging it the second time to me.
Dro. S. Was there ever any man thus beaten out of season,
When in the why and the wherefore is neither rime nor reason?
Well, sir, I thank you.
Ant. S. Thank me, sir? for what?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, for this something that you gave me for nothing.
Ant. S. I'll make you amends next, to give you nothing for something. But say, sir, is it dinner-time?
Dro. S. No, sir: I think the meat wants that I have.
Ant. S. In good time, sir; what's that?
Dro. S. Basting.
Ant. S. Well, sir, then 'twill be dry.
Dro. S. If it be, sir, I pray you eat none of it.
Ant. S. Your reason?
Dro. S. Lest it make you choleric, and purchase me another dry basting.
Ant. S. Well, sir, learn to jest in good time: there's a time for all things.
Dro. S. I durst have denied that, before you were so choleric.
Ant. S. By what rule, sir?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, by a rule as plain as the plain bald pate of Father Time himself.
Ant. S. Let's hear it.
Dro. S. There's no time for a man to recover his hair that grows bald by nature.
Ant. S. May he not do it by fine and recovery?
Dro. S. Yes, to pay a fine for a periwig and recover the lost hair of another man.
Ant. S. Why is Time such a niggard of hair, being, as it is, so plentiful an excrement?
Dro. S. Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts: and what he hath scanted men in hair, he hath given them in wit.
Ant. S. Why, but there's many a man hath more hair than wit.
Dro. S. Not a man of those but he hath the wit to lose his hair.
Ant. S. Why, thou didst conclude hairy men plain dealers without wit.
Dro. S. The plainer dealer, the sooner lost: yet he loseth it in a kind of jollity.
Ant. S. For what reason?
Dro. S. For two; and sound ones too.
Ant. S. Nay, not sound, I pray you.
Dro. S. Sure ones then.
Ant. S. Nay, not sure, in a thing falsing.
Dro. S. Certain ones, then.
Ant. S. Name them.

58 In good time: forsooth 63 choleric: irascible; cf. n. 64 dry basting: severe beating 70 Marry: originally an oath by the Virgin Mary 75 fine and recovery: a legal term; cf. n. 79 excrement: outgrowth 81 he hath . . . hair; cf. n. 90 jollity; cf. n. 95 falsing: deceptive

Dro. S. The one, to save the money that he spends in tiring; the other, that at dinner they should not drop in his porridge.
Ant. S. You would all this time have proved there is no time for all things.
Dro. S. Marry, and did, sir; namely, no time to recover hair lost by nature.
Ant. S. But your reason was not substantial, why there is no time to recover.
Dro. S. Thus I mend it: Time himself is bald, and therefore to the world's end will have bald followers.
Ant. S. I knew 'twould be a bald conclusion. But soft! who wafts us yonder?

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Ay, ay, Antipholus, look strange, and frown:
Some other mistress hath thy sweet aspects;
I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.
The time was once when thou unurg'd wouldst vow
That never words were music to thine ear,
That never object pleasing in thine eye,
That never touch well welcome to thy hand,
That never meat sweet-savour'd in thy taste,
Unless I spake, or look'd, or touch'd, or carv'd to thee.
How comes it now, my husband, O, how comes it,
That thou art then estranged from thyself?
Thyself I call it, being strange to me,
That, undividable, incorporate,
Am better than thy dear self's better part.
Ah, do not tear away thyself from me!
For know, my love, as easy mayst thou fall
A drop of water in the breaking gulf,
And take unmingled thence that drop again,
Without addition or diminishing,
As take from me thyself and not me too.
How dearly would it touch thee to the quick,
Shouldst thou but hear I were licentious,
And that this body, consecrate to thee,
By ruffian lust should be contaminate!
Wouldst thou not spit at me and spurn at me,
And hurl the name of husband in my face,
And tear the stain'd skin off my harlot-brow,
And from my false hand cut the wedding-ring
And break it with a deep-divorcing vow?
I know thou canst; and therefore, see thou do it.
I am possess'd with an adulterate blot;
My blood is mingled with the crime of lust:
For if we two be one and thou play false,
I do digest the poison of thy flesh,
Being strumpeted by thy contagion.
Keep then fair league and truce with thy true bed;
I live distain'd, thou undishonoured.
Ant. S. Plead you to me, fair dame? I know you not:
In Ephesus I am but two hours old,
As strange unto your town as to your talk;
Who, every word by all my wit being scann'd,
Wants wit in all one word to understand.
Luc. Fie, brother! how the world is chang'd with you!

99 tiring: dressing the hair; cf. n. 109 bald: senseless 110 wafts: beckons 124 better part: soul, spirit 126 fall: let fall 131 dearly: grievously 145 strumpeted: made a strumpet 147 distain'd: stained; cf. n.

When were you wont to use my sister thus?
She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.
Ant. S. By Dromio?
Dro. S. By me?
Adr. By thee; and this thou didst return from him,
That he did buffet thee, and in his blows,
Denied my house for his, me for his wife.
Ant. S. Did you converse, sir, with this gentlewoman?
What is the course and drift of your compact?
Dro. S. I, sir? I never saw her till this time.
Ant. S. Villain, thou liest; for even her very words
Didst thou deliver to me on the mart.
Dro. S. I never spake with her in all my life.
Ant. S. How can she thus, then, call us by our names,
Unless it be by inspiration?
Adr. How ill agrees it with your gravity
To counterfeit thus grossly with your slave,
Abetting him to thwart me in my mood!
Be it my wrong you are from me exempt,
But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.
Come, I will fasten on this sleeve of thine:
Thou art an elm, my husband, I a vine,
Whose weakness, married to thy stronger state,
Makes me with thy strength to communicate:
If aught possess thee from me, it is dross,
Usurping ivy, brier, or idle moss;
Who, all for want of pruning, with intrusion
Infect thy sap and live on thy confusion.
Ant. S. To me she speaks; she moves me for her theme!
What, was I married to her in my dream?
Or sleep I now and think I hear all this?
What error drives our eyes and ears amiss?
Until I know this sure uncertainty,
I'll entertain the offer'd fallacy.
Luc. Dromio, go bid the servants spread for dinner.
Dro. S. O, for my beads! I cross me for a sinner.
This is the fairy land: O spite of spites!
We talk with goblins, owls, and sprites:
If we obey them not, this will ensue,
They'll suck our breath, or pinch us black and blue.
Luc. Why prat'st thou to thyself and answer'st not?
Dromio, thou drone, thou snail, thou slug, thou sot!
Dro. S. I am transformed, master, am not I?
Ant. S. I think thou art, in mind, and so am I.
Dro. S. Nay, master, both in mind and in my shape.
Ant. S. Thou hast thine own form.
Dro. S. No, I am an ape.
Luc. If thou art chang'd to aught, 'tis to an ass.
Dro. S. 'Tis true; she rides me, and I long for grass.
'Tis so, I am an ass; else it could never be
But I should know her as well as she knows me.
Adr. Come, come, no longer will I be a fool,
To put the finger in the eye and weep,
Whilst man and master laughs my woes to scorn.
Come, sir, to dinner. Dromio, keep the gate.
Husband, I'll dine above with you to-day,

171 mood: anger 172 exempt: separated 178 possess ... me: dispossess me of thee 179 idle: barren, unfruitful 181 confusion: ruin 182 moves: appeals to theme: subject 186 Until I unravel this undeniable mystery 187 entertain ... fallacy: accept the unreal situation 189 beads: rosary 195 sot: fool 206 put ... eye: play the child 207 laughs: cf. n.

And shrive you of a thousand idle pranks.
Sirrah, if any ask you for your master,
Say he dines forth, and let no creature enter.
Come, sister. Dromio, play the porter well.
Ant. S. Am I in earth, in heaven, or in hell?
Sleeping or waking? mad or well-advis'd?
Known unto these, and to myself disguis'd!
I'll say as they say, and persever so,
And in this mist at all adventures go.
Dro. S. Master, shall I be porter at the gate?
Adr. Ay; and let none enter, lest I break your pate.
Luc. Come, come, Antipholus, we dine too late.
[Exeunt.]

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Before the House of Antipholus of Ephesus]
Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, his man Dromio, Angelo the Goldsmith, and Balthazar the Merchant.

Ant. E. Good Signior Angelo, you must excuse us all;
My wife is shrewish when I keep not hours;
Say that I linger'd with you at your shop
To see the making of her carkanet,
And that to-morrow you will bring it home.
But here's a villain, that would face me down
He met me on the mart, and that I beat him,
And charg'd him with a thousand marks in gold,
And that I did deny my wife and house.
Thou drunkard, thou, what didst thou mean by this?
Dro. E. Say what you will, sir, but I know what I know;
That you beat me at the mart, I have your hand to show:
If the skin were parchment and the blows you gave were ink,
Your own handwriting would tell you what I think.
Ant. E. I think thou art an ass.
Dro. E. Marry, so it doth appear
By the wrongs I suffer and the blows I bear.
I should kick, being kick'd; and, being at that pass,
You would keep from my heels and beware of an ass.
Ant. E. You are sad, Signior Balthazar: pray God, our cheer
May answer my good will and your good welcome here.
Bal. I hold your dainties cheap, sir, and your welcome dear.
Ant. E. O, Signoir Balthazar, either at flesh or fish,
A table-full of welcome makes scarce one dainty dish.
Bal. Good meat, sir, is common; that every churl affords.
Ant. E. And welcome more common, for that's nothing but words.
Bal. Small cheer and great welcome makes a merry feast.
Ant. E. Ay, to a niggardly host and more sparing guest:
But though my cates be mean, take them in good part;
Better cheer may you have, but not with better heart.
But soft! my door is lock'd. Go bid them let us in.
Dro. E. Maud, Bridget, Marian, Cicely, Gillian, Ginn!

210 shrive you: call you to confession 212 forth: away from home 215 well-advis'd: in my right mind 4 carkanet: gold collar 8 charg'd him with: asked him to account for 32 cates: dainties 35 Gillian: Juliana Ginn: Jenny(?)

Dro. S. [Within.] Mome, malt-horse, capon, coxcomb, idiot, patch!
Either get thee from the door or sit down at the hatch.
Dost thou conjure for wenches, that thou call'st for such store,
When one is one too many? Go, get thee from the door.

Dro. E. What patch is made our porter?—My master stays in the street.

Dro. S. [Within.] Let him walk from whence he came, lest he catch cold on's feet.

Ant. E. Who talks within there? ho, open the door!

Dro. S. [Within.] Right, sir; I'll tell you when, an you'll tell me wherefore.

Ant. E. Wherefore? for my dinner: I have not din'd to-day.

Dro. S. Nor to-day here you must not; come again when you may.

Ant. E. What art thou that keep'st me out from the house I owe?

Dro. S. [Within.] The porter for this time, sir, and my name is Dromio.

Dro. E. O villain, thou hast stolen both mine office and my name!
The one ne'er got me credit, the other mickle blame.
If thou hadst been Dromio to-day in my place,
Thou wouldst have chang'd thy face for a name, or thy name for an ass.

Luce. [Within.] What a coil is there, Dromio! who are those at the gate?

Dro. E. Let my master in, Luce.

Luce. [Within.] Faith, no; he comes too late;
And so tell your master.

Dro. E. O Lord! I must laugh.
Have at you with a proverb: Shall I set in my staff?

Luce: [Within.] Have at you with another: that's—when? can you tell?

Dro. S. [Within.] If thy name be call'd Luce,—Luce, thou hast answer'd him well.

Ant. E. Do you hear, you minion? you'll let us in, I trow?

Luce. [Within.] I thought to have ask'd you.

Dro. S. [Within.] And you said, no.

Dro. E. So come, help: well struck! there was blow for blow.

Ant. E. Thou baggage, let me in.

Luce. [Within.] Can you tell for whose sake?

Dro. E. Master, knock the door hard.

Luce. [Within.] Let him knock till it ache.

Ant. E. You'll cry for this, minion, if I beat the door down.

Luce. [Within.] What needs all that, and a pair of stocks in the town?

Adr. [Within.] Who is that at the door that keeps all this noise?

Dro. S. [Within.] By my troth your town is troubled with unruly boys.

Ant. E. Are you there, wife? you might have come before.

Adr. [Within.] Your wife, sir knave! go, get you from the door.

Dro. E. If you went in pain, master, this 'knave' would go sore.

Ang. Here is neither cheer, sir, nor welcome: we would fain have either.

Bal. In debating which was best, we shall part with neither.

Dro. E. They stand at the door, master: bid them welcome hither.

Ant. E. There is something in the wind, that we cannot get in.

Dro. E. You would say so, master, if your garments were thin.
Your cake here is warm within; you stand here in the cold:
It would make a man mad as a buck to be so bought and sold.

Ant. E. Go fetch me something: I'll break ope the gate.

Dro. S. [Within.] Break any breaking here, and I'll break your knave's pate.

Dro. E. A man may break a word with you, sir, and words are but wind:
Ay, and break it in your face, so he break it not behind.

Dro. S. [Within.] It seems thou wantest breaking: out upon thee, hind!

Dro. E. Here's too much 'out upon thee!' I pray thee, let me in.

Dro. S. [Within.] Ay, when fowls have no feathers, and fish have no fin.

Ant. E. Well, I'll break in. Go borrow me a crow.

Dro. E. A crow without feather? Master, mean you so?
For a fish without a fin, there's a fowl without a feather:
If a crow help us in, sirrah, we'll pluck a crow together.

Ant. E. Go get thee gone: fetch me an iron crow.

Bal. Have patience, sir; O let it not be so!
Herein you war against your reputation,
And draw within the compass of suspect
The unviolated honour of your wife.
Once this,—your long experience of her wisdom,
Her sober virtue, years, and modesty,
Plead on her part some cause to you unknown;
And doubt not, sir, but she will well excuse
Why at this time the doors are made against you.
Be rul'd by me: depart in patience,
And let us to the Tiger all to dinner;
And about evening come yourself alone,
To know the reason of this strange restraint.
If by strong hand you offer to break in
Now in the stirring passage of the day,
A vulgar comment will be made of it,
And that supposed by the common rout
Against your yet ungalled estimation,
That may with foul intrusion enter in
And dwell upon your grave when you are dead;
For slander lives upon succession,
For ever hous'd where it gets possession.

Ant. E. You have prevail'd: I will depart in quiet,
And, in despite of mirth, mean to be merry.
I know a wench of excellent discourse,
Pretty and witty, wild and yet too gentle:
There will we dine. This woman that I mean,

36 Mome: buffoon malt-horse: brewer's horse, hence a term of contempt 38 hatch: half-door, wicket 44 on's: in his 52 owe: own 57 mickle: much 58-60 Cf. n. 61 S. d. Within; cf. n. coil: fuss 67 set in my staff: 'make myself at home' (?) 68, 69 when? can you tell; cf. n. 72 minion: hussy

94 part: depart 103, 104 bought and sold; imposed upon 112 hind: slave 117 crow: crowbar 124 draw . . . suspect: bring into suspicion 126 Once this: once for all, in short 130 made: fastened 136 stirring passage: hour of busy traffic 137 vulgar: public 138 supposed: conjectured 139 ungalled: unblemished 142 Cf. n. 145 in despite of mirth: i.e. though I do not feel like being merry

My wife—but I protest, without desert—
Hath oftentimes upbraided me withal:
To her will we to dinner. [To Angelo.] Get you home,
And fetch the chain; by this I know 'tis made:
Bring it, I pray you, to the Porpentine;
For there's the house: that chain will I bestow,
Be it for nothing but to spite my wife,
Upon mine hostess there. Good sir, make haste.
Since mine own doors refuse to entertain me,
I'll knock elsewhere, to see if they'll disdain me.
Ang. I'll meet you at that place some hour hence.
Ant. E. Do so. This jest shall cost me some expense.
Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Same]
Enter Luciana with Antipholus of Syracusia.

Luc. And may it be that you have quite forgot
A husband's office? Shall, Antipholus,
Even in the spring of love, thy love-springs rot?
Shall love, in building, grow so ruinous?
If you did wed my sister for her wealth,
Then, for her wealth's sake use her with more kindness:
Or, if you like elsewhere, do it by stealth;
Muffle your false love with some show of blindness:
Let not my sister read it in your eye;
Be not thy tongue thy own shame's orator;
Look sweet, speak fair, become disloyalty;
Apparel vice like virtue's harbinger;
Bear a fair presence, though your heart be tainted;
Teach sin the carriage of a holy saint;
Be secret-false: what need she be acquainted?
What simple thief brags of his own attaint?
'Tis double wrong to truant with your bed,
And let her read it in thy looks at board:
Shame hath a bastard fame, well managed;
Ill deeds are doubled with an evil word.
Alas, poor women! make us but believe,
Being compact of credit, that you love us;
Though others have the arm, show us the sleeve;
We in your motion turn, and you may move us.
Then, gentle brother, get you in again;
Comfort my sister, cheer her, call her wife:
'Tis holy sport to be a little vain,
When the sweet breath of flattery conquers strife.
Ant. S. Sweet mistress,—what your name is else, I know not,
Nor by what wonder you do hit of mine,—
Less in your knowledge and your grace you show not
Than our earth's wonder; more than earth divine.
Teach me, dear creature, how to think and speak:
Lay open to my earthy-gross conceit,
Smother'd in errors, feeble, shallow, weak,
The folded meaning of your words' deceit.

149 desert: i.e. my deserving it 153 Porpentine: porcupine (house-sign) Scene Two S. d. Luciana; cf. n. 3 love-springs: shoots of love 4 in building: even before completely built 11 become disloyalty; cf. n. 15 what: why 16 attaint: disgrace 22 compact of credit: wholly made up of credulity 27 vain: extravagant in language 30 hit of: guess 34 conceit: understanding 36 folded: concealed

Against my soul's pure truth why labour you
To make it wander in an unknown field?
Are you a god? would you create me new?
Transform me, then, and to your power I'll yield.
But if that I am I, then well I know
Your weeping sister is no wife of mine,
Nor to her bed no homage do I owe:
Far more, far more, to you do I decline.
O train me not, sweet mermaid, with thy note,
To drown me in thy sister flood of tears!
Sing, siren, for thyself, and I will dote:
Spread o'er the silver waves thy golden hairs,
And as a bed I'll take them and there lie;
And in that glorious supposition think
He gains by death that hath such means to die:
Let Love, being light, be drowned if she sink!
Luc. What, are you mad, that you do reason so?
Ant. S. Not mad, but mated; how, I do not know.
Luc. It is a fault that springeth from your eye.
Ant. S. For gazing on your beams, fair sun, being by.
Luc. Gaze where you should, and that will clear your sight.
Ant. S. As good to wink, sweet love, as look on night.
Luc. Why call you me love? call my sister so.
Ant. S. Thy sister's sister.
Luc. That's my sister.
Ant. S. No;
It is thyself, mine own self's better part;
Mine eye's clear eye, my dear heart's dearer heart;
My food, my fortune, and my sweet hope's aim,
My sole earth's heaven, and my heaven's claim.
Luc. All this my sister is, or else should be.
Ant. S. Call thyself sister, sweet, for I aim thee.
Thee will I love and with thee lead my life:
Thou hast no husband yet nor I no wife.
Give me thy hand.
Luc. O, soft, sir! hold you still:
I'll fetch my sister, to get her good will Exit.

Enter Dromio Siracusia.

Ant. S. Why, how now, Dromio! where run'st thou so fast?
Dro. S. Do you know me, sir? am I Dromio? am I your man? am I myself?
Ant. S. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thyself.
Dro. S. I am an ass, I am a woman's man and besides myself.
Ant. S. What woman's man? and how besides thyself?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, besides myself, I am due to a woman; one that claims me, one that haunts me, one that will have me.
Ant. S. What claim lays she to thee?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, such claim as you would lay to your horse; and she would have me as a beast: not that, I being a beast, she would have me; but that she, being a very beastly creature, lays claim to me.
Ant. S. What is she?
Dro. S. A very reverent body; aye, such a one as a man may not speak of, without he say, 'Sir-reverence.' I have but lean luck in the match, and yet is she a wondrous fat marriage.

44 decline: incline 45 train: entice 52 Cf. n. 53 reason: argue 54 mated: bewildered; also, furnished with a mate 56 being by: when you are near 58 wink: close the eyes 66 Cf. n. 68 aim: mean 91 'Sir-reverence'; cf. n. lean: poor

Ant. S. How dost thou mean a fat marriage?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, she's the kitchen-wench, and all grease; and I know not what use to put her to, but to make a lamp of her and run from her by her own light. I warrant her rags and the tallow in them will burn a Poland winter; if she lives till doomsday, she'll burn a week longer than the whole world.
Ant. S. What complexion is she of?
Dro. S. Swart, like my shoe, but her face nothing like so clean kept: for why she sweats; a man may go over shoes in the grime of it.
Ant. S. That's a fault that water will mend.
Dro. S. No, sir, 'tis in grain; Noah's flood could not do it.
Ant. S. What's her name?
Dro. S. Nell, sir; but her name and three quarters,—that's an ell and three-quarters,—will not measure her from hip to hip.
Ant. S. Then she bears some breadth?
Dro. S. No longer from head to foot than from hip to hip: she is spherical, like a globe; I could find out countries in her.
Ant. S. In what part of her body stands Ireland?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, in her buttocks: I found it out by the bogs.
Ant. S. Where Scotland?
Dro. S. I found it by the barrenness; hard in the palm of the hand.
Ant. S. Where France?
Dro. S. In her forehead, armed and reverted, making war against her heir.
Ant. S. Where England?
Dro. S. I looked for the chalky cliffs, but I could find no whiteness in them; but I guess it stood in her chin, by the salt rheum that ran between France and it.
Ant. S. Where Spain?
Dro. S. Faith, I saw it not; but I felt it hot in her breath.
Ant. S. Where America, the Indies?
Dro. S. O, sir! upon her nose, all o'er embellished with rubies, carbuncles, sapphires, declining their rich aspect to the hot breath of Spain, who sent whole armadoes of carracks to be ballast at her nose.
Ant. S. Where stood Belgia, the Netherlands?
Dro. S. O, sir! I did not look so low. To conclude, this drudge, or diviner, laid claim to me; call'd me Dromio; swore I was assured to her; told me what privy marks I had about me, as the mark of my shoulder, the mole in my neck, the great wart on my left arm, that I, amazed, ran from her as a witch:
And, I think, if my breast had not been made of faith and my heart of steel,
She had transform'd me to a curtal dog and made me turn i' the wheel.
Ant. S. Go hie thee presently post to the road:
An if the wind blow any way from shore,
I will not harbour in this town to-night:
If any bark put forth, come to the mart,
Where I will walk till thou return to me.
If every one knows us and we know none,
'Tis time, I think, to trudge, pack, and be gone.
Dro. S. As from a bear a man would run for life,
So fly I from her that would be my wife. Exit.
Ant. S. There's none but witches do inhabit here,
And therefore 'tis high time that I were hence.
She that doth call me husband, even my soul
Doth for a wife abhor; but her fair sister,
Possess'd with such a gentle sovereign grace,
Of such enchanting presence and discourse,
Hath almost made me traitor to myself:
But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong,
I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

Enter Angelo with the chain.

Ang. Master Antipholus!
Ant. S. Ay, that's my name.
Ang. I know it well, sir: lo, here is the chain.
I thought to have ta'en you at the Porpentine:
The chain unfinish'd made me stay thus long.
Ant. S. What is your will that I shall do with this?
Ang. What please yourself, sir: I have made it for you.
Ant. S. Made it for me, sir! I bespoke it not.
Ang. Not once, nor twice, but twenty times you have.
Go home with it and please your wife withal;
And soon at supper-time I'll visit you,
And then receive my money for the chain.
Ant. S. I pray you, sir, receive the money now,
For fear you ne'er see chain nor money more.
Ang. You are a merry man, sir: fare you well. Exit.
Ant. S. What I should think of this, I cannot tell:
But this I think, there's no man is so vain
That would refuse so fair an offer'd chain.
I see, a man here needs not live by shifts,
When in the streets he meets such golden gifts.
I'll to the mart, and there for Dromio stay:
If any ship put out, then straight away. Exit.

ACT FOURTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

[A Public Place]
Enter a [second] Merchant, Goldsmith [Angelo], and an Officer.

Mer. You know since Pentecost the sum is due,
And since I have not much importun'd you;
Nor now I had not, but that I am bound
To Persia, and want guilders for my voyage:
Therefore make present satisfaction,
Or I'll attach you by this officer.
Ang. Even just the sum that I do owe to you
Is growing to me by Antipholus;
And in the instant that I met with you
He had of me a chain: at five o'clock
I shall receive the money for the same.
Pleaseth you walk with me down to his house,
I will discharge my bond, and thank you too.

101 Swart: swarthy 102 for why: because 105 in grain: fast dyed 120, 121 armed . . . heir; cf. n. 124 them: i.e. her teeth 131 armadoes: fleets carracks: large merchant ships 132 ballast: ballasted, loaded 135 diviner: sorceress 136 assured: betrothed 138 that: so that 141 curtal: having a docked tail turn i' the wheel; cf. n. 143 presently: immediately road: harbor

159 to: of 177 vain: silly 6 attach: arrest 8 growing: accruing

Enter Antipholus Ephes. [and the Ephesian] Dromio from the Courtesan's.

Off. That labour may you save: see where he comes.
Ant. E. While I go to the goldsmith's house, go thou
And buy a rope's end: that will I bestow
Among my wife and her confederates,
For locking me out of my doors by day.
But soft! I see the goldsmith. Get thee gone;
Buy thou a rope, and bring it home to me.
Dro. E. I buy a thousand pound a year! I buy a rope! Exit Dro.
Ant. E. A man is well holp up that trusts to you:
I promised your presence and the chain;
But neither chain nor goldsmith came to me.
Belike you thought our love would last too long,
If it were chain'd together, and therefore came not.
Ang. Saving your merry humour, here's the note
How much your chain weighs to the utmost carat,
The fineness of the gold, and chargeful fashion,
Which doth amount to three odd ducats more
Than I stand debted to this gentleman:
I pray you see him presently discharg'd,
For his is bound to sea and stays but for it.
Ant. E. I am not furnish'd with the present money;
Besides, I have some business in the town.
Good signior, take the stranger to my house,
And with you take the chain, and bid my wife
Disburse the sum on the receipt thereof:
Perchance I will be there as soon as you.
Ang. Then, you will bring the chain to her yourself?
Ant. E. No; bear it with you, lest I come not time enough.
Ang. Well, sir, I will. Have you the chain about you?
Ant. E. An if I have not, sir, I hope you have,
Or else you may return without your money.
Ang. Nay, come, I pray you, sir, give me the chain:
Both wind and tide stays for this gentleman,
And I, to blame, have held him here too long.
Ant. E. Good Lord! you use this dalliance to excuse
Your breach of promise to the Porpentine.
I should have chid you for not bringing it,
But, like a shrew, you first begin to brawl.
Mer. The hour steals on; I pray you, sir, dispatch.
Ang. You hear how he importunes me: the chain!
Ant. E. Why, give it to my wife and fetch your money.
Ang. Come, come, you know I gave it you even now.
Either send the chain or send me by some token.
Ant. E. Fie! now you run this humour out of breath.
Come, where's the chain? I pray you, let me see it.
Mer. My business cannot brook this dalliance.
Good sir, say whe'r you'll answer me or no:
If not, I'll leave him to the officer.
Ant. E. I answer you! what should I answer you?
Ang. The money that you owe me for the chain.
Ant. E. I owe you none till I receive the chain.
Ang. You know I gave it you half an hour since.
Ant. E. You gave me none: you wrong me much to say so.
Ang. You wrong me more, sir, in denying it:
Consider how it stands upon my credit.

17 bestow: employ 22 I buy . . . year; cf. n. 23 holp: helped 26 Belike: probably 30 chargeful fashion: costly workmanship 32 debted: indebted 34 stays: waits 42 time: in time 57 send . . . token; cf. n. 61 whe'r: whether answer me: discharge the debt to me 69 stands upon: concerns

Mer. Well, officer, arrest him at my suit.
Off. I do;
And charge you in the duke's name to obey me.
Ang. This touches me in reputation.
Either consent to pay this sum for me,
Or I attach you by this officer.
Ant. E. Consent to pay thee that I never had!
Arrest me, foolish fellow, if thou dar'st.
Ang. Here is thy fee: arrest him, officer.
I would not spare my brother in this case,
If he should scorn me so apparently.
Off. I do arrest you, sir: you hear the suit.
Ant. E. I do obey thee till I give thee bail.
But, sirrah, you shall buy this sport as dear
As all the metal in your shop will answer.
Ang. Sir, sir, I shall have law in Ephesus,
To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter Dromio Sira. from the Bay.

Dro. S. Master, there is a bark of Epidamnum
That stays but till her owner comes aboard,
And then she bears away. Our fraughtage, sir,
I have convey'd aboard, and I have bought
The oil, the balsamum, and acqua-vitæ.
The ship is in her trim; the merry wind
Blows fair from land; they stay for nought at all
But for their owner, master, and yourself.
Ant. E. How now! a madman! Why, thou peevish sheep,
What ship of Epidamnum stays for me?
Dro. S. A ship you sent me to, to hire waftage.
Ant. E. Thou drunken slave, I sent thee for a rope,
And told thee to what purpose, and what end.
Dro. S. You sent me for a rope's end as soon:
You sent me to the bay, sir, for a bark.
Ant. E. I will debate this matter at more leisure,
And teach your ears to list me with more heed.
To Adriana, villain, hie thee straight:
Give her this key, and tell her, in the desk
That's cover'd o'er with Turkish tapestry,
There is a purse of ducats: let her send it.
Tell her I am arrested in the street,
And that shall bail me. Hie thee, slave, be gone!
On, officer, to prison till it come.
Exeunt [all except Dromio].
Dro. S. To Adriana! that is where we din'd,
Where Dowsabel did claim me for her husband:
She is too big, I hope, for me to compass.
Thither I must, although against my will,
For servants must their masters' minds fulfil. Exit.

80 apparently: openly 89 fraughtage: freight 91 balsamum balsam acqua-vitæ: brandy 92 in her trim: rigged, ready to sail 95 peevish: foolish sheep; cf. n. 97 waftage: passage 103 list: listen to 112 Dowsabel cf. n. 2 austerely: seriously

Scene Second

[A Room in the House of Antipholus of Ephesus] Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Ah, Luciana, did he tempt thee so?
Mightst thou perceive austerely in his eye

That he did plead in earnest? yea or no?
Look'd he or red or pale? or sad or merrily?
What observation mad'st thou in this case
Of his heart's meteors tilting in his face?
Luc. First he denied you had in him no right.
Adr. He meant he did me none; the more my spite.
Luc. Then swore he that he was a stranger here.
Adr. And true he swore, though yet forsworn he were.
Luc. Then pleaded I for you.
Adr. And what said he?
Luc. That love I begg'd for you he begg'd of me.
Adr. With what persuasion did he tempt thy love?
Luc. With words that in an honest suit might move.
First, he did praise my beauty, then my speech.
Adr. Didst speak him fair?
Luc. Have patience, I beseech.
Adr. I cannot, nor I will not hold me still:
My tongue, though not my heart, shall have his will.
He is deformed, crooked, old and sere,
Ill-fac'd, worse bodied, shapeless everywhere;
Vicious, ungentle, foolish, blunt, unkind,
Stigmatical in making, worse in mind.
Luc. Who would be jealous, then, of such a one?
No evil lost is wail'd when it is gone.
Adr. Ah, but I think him better than I say,
And yet would herein others' eyes were worse.
Far from her nest the lapwing cries away:
My heart prays for him, though my tongue do curse.

Enter S[yracusan] Dromio.

Dro. S. Here, go: the desk! the purse! sweet, now, make haste.
Luc. How hast thou lost thy breath?
Dro. S. By running fast.
Adr. Where is thy master, Dromio? is he well?
Dro. S. No, he's in Tartar limbo, worse than hell.
A devil in an everlasting garment hath him,
One whose hard heart is button'd up with steel;
A fiend, a fairy, pitiless and rough;
A wolf, nay, worse, a fellow all in buff;
A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermands
The passages of alleys, creeks and narrow lands;
A hound that runs counter and yet draws dry-foot well;
One that, before the judgment, carries poor souls to hell.
Adr. Why, man, what is the matter?
Dro. S. I do not know the matter: he is 'rested on the case.
Adr. What, is he arrested? tell me at whose suit.
Dro. S. I know not at whose suit he is arrested well;
But he's in a suit of buff which 'rested him, that can I tell.
Will you send him, mistress, redemption, the money in his desk?
Adr. Go fetch it, sister.—This I wonder at:

Exit Luciana.

That he, unknown to me, should be in debt:
Tell me, was he arrested on a band?

Dro. S. Not on a band, but on a stronger thing:
A chain, a chain. Do you not hear it ring?
Adr. What, the chain?
Dro. S. No, no, the bell: 'tis time that I were gone:
It was two ere I left him, and now the clock strikes one.
Adr. The hours come back! that did I never hear.
Dro. S. O yes; if any hour meet a sergeant, a' turns back for very fear.
Adr. As if Time were in debt! how fondly dost thou reason!
Dro. S. Time is a very bankrupt, and owes more than he's worth to season.
Nay, he's a thief too: have you not heard men say,
That Time comes stealing on by night and day?
If Time be in debt and theft, and a sergeant in the way,
Hath he not reason to turn back an hour in a day?

Enter Luciana.

Adr. Go, Dromio: there's the money, bear it straight,
And bring thy master home immediately.
Come, sister: I am press'd down with conceit,—
Conceit, my comfort and my injury.

Exit [with Luciana and Dromio].

Scene Third

[A Public Place]
Enter Antipholus Siracusia.

Ant. S. There's not a man I meet but doth salute me,
As if I were their well acquainted friend;
And every one doth call me by my name.
Some tender money to me; some invite me;
Some other give me thanks for kindnesses;
Some offer me commodities to buy:
Even now a tailor call'd me in his shop
And show'd me silks that he had bought for me,
And therewithal, took measure of my body.
Sure, these are but imaginary wiles,
And Lapland sorcerers inhabit here.

Enter Dromio [of] Syr[acuse].

Dro. S. Master, here's the gold you sent me for.
What, have you got the picture of old Adam new apparelled?
Ant. S. What gold is this? What Adam dost thou mean?
Dro. S. Not that Adam that kept the Paradise, but that Adam that keeps the prison: he that goes in the calf's skin that was killed for the Prodigal: he that came behind you, sir, like an evil angel, and bid you forsake your liberty.
Ant. S. I understand thee not.
Dro. S. No? why, 'tis a plain case: he that went, like a base-viol, in a case of leather; the man, sir, that, when gentlemen are tired, gives them a sob, and 'rests them; he, sir, that takes pity on decayed men and give them suits of durance; he that sets up his rest to do more exploits with his mace than a morris-pike.
Ant. S. What, thou meanest an officer?

6 Cf. n. 8 spite: vexation 20 his: its 21 sere: withered 22 shapeless: misshapen 24 Stigmatical: branded by deformity 30 Cf. n. 36 Tartar: Tartarean, infernal limbo: cant term for prison 37 everlasting: i.e. made of buff, a very durable material 39 fairy; cf. n. 41 A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper; cf. n. countermands: prohibits 42 creeks: narrow winding passages 43 counter; cf. n. draws dry-foot: traces the scent of the game 44 Cf. n. 46 on the case; cf. n. 54 band: bond

61 a': he (it) 63 fondly: foolishly 64, 65 owes . . . season; cf. n. 73 conceit: imaginings 11 Lapland sorcerers; cf. n. 13 Cf. n. 16, 17 calf's skin . . . Prodigal; cf. n. 22 sob: slight rest given a horse to recover its wind. 23 suits of durance: durable garments, i.e. prison dress 24 sets up his rest: stakes his all mace: club carried by a bailiff or constable 25 morris-pike: Moorish pike

Dro. S. Ay, sir, the sergeant of the band; he that brings any man to answer it that breaks his band; one that thinks a man always going to bed, and says, 'God give you good rest!'

Ant. S. Well, sir, there rest in your foolery.
Is there any ship puts forth to-night? may we be gone?

Dro. S. Why, sir, I brought you word an hour since that the bark Expedition put forth to-night; and then were you hindered by the sergeant to tarry for the hoy Delay. Here are the angels that you sent for to deliver you.

Ant. S. The fellow is distract, and so am I;
And here we wander in illusions:
Some blessed power deliver us from hence!

Enter a Courtesan.

Cour. Well met, well met, Master Antipholus.
I see, sir, you have found the goldsmith now:
Is that the chain you promis'd me to-day?

Ant. S. Satan, avoid! I charge thee tempt me not!

Dro. S. Master, is this Mistress Satan?

Ant. S. It is the devil.

Dro. S. Nay, she is worse, she is the devil's dam, and here she comes in the habit of a light wench: and thereof comes that the wenches say, 'God damn me;' that's as much as to say, 'God make me a light wench.' It is written, they appear to men like angels of light: light is an effect of fire, and fire will burn; ergo, light wenches will burn. Come not near her.

Cour. Your man and you are marvellous merry, sir. Will you go with me? we'll mend our dinner here.

Dro. S. Master, if you do, expect spoon-meat, so bespeak a long spoon.

Ant. S. Why, Dromio?

Dro. S. Marry, he must have a long spoon that must eat with the devil.

Ant. S. Avoid then, fiend! what tell'st thou me of supping?
Thou art, as you are all, a sorceress:
I conjure thee to leave me and be gone.

Cour. Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner,
Or, for my diamond, the chain you promis'd,
And I'll be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Dro. S. Some devils ask but the parings of one's nail,
A rush, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin,
A nut, a cherry-stone;
But she, more covetous, would have a chain.
Master, be wise: an if you give it her,
The devil will shake her chain and fright us with it.

Cour. I pray you, sir, my ring, or else the chain:
I hope you do not mean to cheat me so.

Ant. S. Avaunt, thou witch! Come, Dromio, let us go.

Dro. S. 'Fly pride,' says the peacock: mistress, that you know.

Exit [Dromio of Syracuse with his master].

Cour. Now, out of doubt, Antipholus is mad,
Else would he never so demean himself.
A ring he hath of mine worth forty ducats,
And for the same he promis'd me a chain:
Both one and other he denies me now.
The reason that I gather he is mad,
Besides this present instance of his rage,
Is a mad tale he told to-day at dinner,
Of his own doors being shut against his entrance.
Belike his wife, acquainted with his fits,
On purpose shut the doors against his way.
My way is now to hie home to his house,
And tell his wife, that, being lunatic,
He rush'd into my house, and took perforce
My ring away. This course I fittest choose,
For forty ducats is too much to lose. [Exit.]

34 hoy: a small vessel 35 angels: gold coins worth about ten shillings apiece 36 distract: distracted, mad 42 avoid: avaunt 46 light: wanton 52 mend our dinner: i.e. supplement it by further refreshments 73 'Fly . . . peacock: cf. n. 76 demean: conduct

Scene Fourth

[A Street]
Enter Antipholus Ephes. with a Gaoler.

Ant. E. Fear me not, man; I will not break away:
I'll give thee, ere I leave thee, so much money,
To warrant thee, as I am 'rested for.
My wife is in a wayward mood to-day,
And will not lightly trust the messenger.
That I should be attach'd in Ephesus,
I tell you, 'twill sound harshly in her ears.

Enter Dromio Eph. with a rope's end.

Here comes my man: I think he brings the money.
How now, sir! have you that I sent you for?

Dro. E. Here's that, I warrant you, will pay them all.

Ant. E. But where's the money?

Dro. E. Why, sir, I gave the money for the rope.

Ant. E. Five hundred ducats, villain, for a rope?

Dro. E. I'll serve you, sir, five hundred at the rate.

Ant. E. To what end did I bid thee hie thee home?

Dro. E. To a rope's end, sir; and to that end am I return'd.

Ant. E. And to that end, sir, I will welcome you.
[Beats him.]

Off. Good sir, be patient.

Dro. E. Nay, 'tis for me to be patient; I am in adversity.

Off. Good now, hold thy tongue.

Dro. E. Nay, rather persuade him to hold his hands.

Ant. E. Thou whoreson, senseless villain!

Dro. E. I would I were senseless, sir, that I might not feel your blows.

Ant. E. Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an ass.

Dro. E. I am an ass indeed; you may prove it by my long ears. I have served him from the hour of my nativity to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service but blows. When I am cold, he heats me with beating; when I am warm, he cools me with beating: I am waked with it when I sleep, raised with it when I sit, driven out of doors with it when I go from home, welcomed home with it when I return; nay, I bear it on my shoulders, as a begggar wont her brat; and, I think, when he hath lamed shall beg with it from door to door.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtesan, and a Schoolmaster, called Pinch

Ant. E. Come, go along; my wife is coming yonder.

20 Good now: pray you 25 sensible: sensitive 34 wont: is wont to

Dro. E. Mistress, respice finem, respect your end; or rather, to prophesy like the parrot, 'Beware the rope's end.'
Ant. E. Wilt thou still talk? Beats Dro.
Cour. How say you now? is not your husband mad?
Adr. His incivility confirms no less.
Good Doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer;
Establish him in his true sense again,
And I will please you what you will demand.
Luc. Alas, how fiery and how sharp he looks!
Cour. Mark how he trembles in his ecstasy!
Pinch. Give me your hand and let me feel your pulse.
Ant. E. There is my hand, and let it feel your ear. [Strikes him.]
Pinch. I charge thee, Satan, hous'd within this man,
To yield possession to my holy prayers,
And to thy state of darkness hie thee straight:
I conjure thee by all the saints in heaven.
Ant. E. Peace, doting wizard, peace! I am not mad.
Adr. O that thou wert not, poor distressed soul!
Ant. E. You minion, you, are these your customers?
Did this companion with the saffron face
Revel and feast it at my house to-day,
Whilst upon me the guilty doors were shut
And I denied to enter in my house?
Adr. O husband, God doth know you din'd at home;
Where would you had remain'd until this time,
Free from these slanders and this open shame!
Ant. E. Din'd at home! Thou villain, what say'st thou?
Dro. E. Sir, sooth to say, you did not dine at home.
Ant. E. Were not my doors lock'd up and I shut out?
Dro. E. Perdy, your doors were lock'd and you shut out.
Ant. E. And did not she herself revile me there?
Dro. E. Sans fable, she herself revil'd you there.
Ant. E. Did not her kitchen-maid rail, taunt, and scorn me?
Dro. E. Certes, she did; the kitchen-vestal scorn'd you.
Ant. E. And did not I in rage depart from thence?
Dro. E. In verity you did: my bones bear witness,
That since have felt the vigour of his rage.
Adr. Is 't good to soothe him in these contraries?
Pinch. It is no shame: the fellow finds his vein,
And, yielding to him, humours well his frenzy.
Ant. E. Thou hast suborn'd the goldsmith to arrest me.
Adr. Alas! I sent you money to redeem you,
By Dromio here, who came in haste for it.
Dro. E. Money by me! heart and good will you might;
But surely, master, not a rag of money.
Ant. E. Went'st not thou to her for a purse of ducats?
Adr. He came to me, and I deliver'd it.
Luc. And I am witness with her that she did.
Dro. E. God and the rope-maker bear me witness
That I was sent for nothing but a rope!
Pinch. Mistress, both man and master is possess'd:
I know it by their pale and deadly looks.
They must be bound and laid in some dark room.
Ant. E. Say, wherefore didst thou lock me forth to-day?
And why dost thou deny the bag of gold?
Adr. I did not, gentle husband, lock thee forth.
Dro. E. And, gentle master, I receiv'd no gold;
But I confess, sir, that we were lock'd out.
Adr. Dissembling villain! thou speak'st false in both.
Ant. E. Dissembling harlot! thou art false in all,
And art confederate with a damned pack
To make a loathsome abject scorn of me;
But with these nails I'll pluck out these false eyes
That would behold in me this shameful sport.

Enter three or four, and offer to bind him. He strives.

Adr. O, bind him, bind him! let him not come near me.
Pinch. More company! the fiend is strong within him.
Luc. Ay me, poor man, how pale and wan he looks!
Ant. E. What, will you murther me? Thou gaoler, thou,
I am thy prisoner: wilt thou suffer them
To make a rescue?
Off. Masters, let him go:
He is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.
Pinch. Go bind this man, for he is frantic too. [They bind Dromio of Ephesus.]
Adr. What wilt thou do, thou peevish officer?
Hast thou delight to see a wretched man
Do outrage and displeasure to himself?
Off. His is my prisoner; If I let him go,
The debt he owes will be requir'd of me.
Adr. I will discharge thee ere I go from thee:
Bear me forthwith unto his creditor,
And, knowing how the debt grows, I will pay it.
Good Master Doctor, see him safe convey'd
Home to my house. O most unhappy day!
Ant. E. O most unhappy strumpet!
Dro. E. Master, I am here enter'd in bond for you.
Ant. E. Out on thee, villain! wherefore dost thou mad me?
Dro. E. Will you be bound for nothing? be mad, good master: cry, 'the devil!'
Luc. God help, poor souls, how idly do they talk!
Adr. Go bear him hence. Sister, go you with me.—

Exeunt. Mane[n]t Offic[er,] Adri[ana,] Luci[ana,] Courtesan.

Say now, whose suit is he arrested at?
Off. One Angelo, a goldsmith; do you know him?
Adr. I know the man. What is the sum he owes?
Off. Two hundred ducats.
Adr. Say, how grows it due?
Off. Due for a chain your husband had of him.
Adr. He did bespeak a chain for me, but had it not.
Cour. When as your husband all in rage to-day
Came to my house, and took away my ring—
The ring I saw upon his finger now—
Straight after did I meet him with a chain.
Adr. It may be so, but I did never see it.
Come, gaoler, bring me where the goldsmith is:
I long to know the truth hereof at large.

Enter Antipholus Siracusia with his Rapier drawn, and Dromio Sirac.

Luc. God, for thy mercy! they are loose again.
Adr. And come with naked swords. Let's call more help

40 prophesy ... end; cf. n. 44 conjurer; cf. n. 46 please: pay 48 ecstasy: madness 57 customers: guests (used contemptuously) 68 Perdy: a corruption of 'par Dieu' 70 Sans: without 72 kitchen-vestal; cf. n. 76 soothe; humor 83 rag: bit 90 deadly: deathly 91 bound ... dark room: old-fashioned treatment of madness

112 peevish: foolish 122 unhappy: mischievous 136 When as: when

To have them bound again
Off. Away! they'll kill us. Run all out.
Exeunt omnes, as fast as may be, frighted.
[Manent Antipholus and Dromio.]

Ant. S. I see these witches are afraid of swords.

Dro. S. She that would be your wife now ran from you.

Ant. S. Come to the Centaur; fetch our stuff from thence:
I long that we were safe and sound aboard.

Dro. S. Faith, stay here this night; they will surely do us no harm; you saw they speak us fair, give us gold: methinks they are such a gentle nation, that, but for the mountain of mad flesh that claims marriage of me, I could find in my heart to stay here still, and turn witch.

Ant. S. I will not stay to-night for all the town;
Therefore away, to get our stuff aboard. Exeunt.

ACT FIFTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

[A Street before an Abbey]
Enter the Merchant and [Angelo,] the Goldsmith.

Ang. I am sorry, sir, that I have hinder'd you;
But, I protest, he had the chain of me,
Though most dishonestly he doth deny it.

Mer. How is the man esteem'd here in the city?

Ang. Of very reverend reputation, sir,
Of credit infinite, highly belov'd,
Second to none that lives here in the city:
His word might bear my wealth at any time.

Mer. Speak softly: yonder, as I think, he walks.

Enter Antipholus [of Syracuse] and Dromio [of Syracuse] again.

Ang. 'Tis so; and that self chain about his neck
Which he forswore most monstrously to have.
Good sir, draw near to me, I'll speak to him.
Signior Antipholus, I wonder much
That you would put me to this shame and trouble;
And not without some scandal to yourself,
With circumstance and oaths so to deny
This chain which now you wear so openly:
Beside the charge, the shame, imprisonment,
You have done wrong to this my honest friend,
Who, but for staying on our controversy,
Had hoisted sail and put to sea to-day.
This chain you had of me; can you deny it?

Ant. S. I think I had: I never did deny it.

Mer. Yes, that you did, sir, and forswore it too.

Ant. S. Who heard me to deny it or forswear it?

Mer. These ears of mine, thou know'st, did hear thee.
Fie on thee, wretch! 'tis pity that thou liv'st
To walk where any honest men resort.

Ant. S. Thou art a villain to impeach me thus:
I'll prove mine honour and mine honesty
Against thee presently, if thou dar'st stand.

Mer. I dare, and do defy thee for a villain.

They draw. Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtesan, and others.

Adr. Hold! hurt him not, for God's sake! he is mad.
Some get within him, take his sword away.
Blind Dromio too, and bear them to my house.

Dro. S. Run, master, run; for God's sake, take a house!
This is some priory: in, or we are spoil'd!
Exeunt [Antipholus of Syracuse and Dromio of Syracuse] to the Priory.

Enter Lady Abbess.

Abb. Be quiet, people. Wherefore throng you hither?

Adr. To fetch my poor distracted husband hence.
Let us come in, that we may bind him fast,
And bear him home for his recovery.

Ang. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.

Mer. I am sorry now that I did draw on him.

Abb. How long hath this possession held the man?

Adr. This week he hath been heavy, sour, sad,
And much different from the man he was;
But till this afternoon his passion
Ne'er brake into extremity of rage.

Abb. Hath he not lost much wealth by wrack of sea?
Buried some dear friend? Hath not else his eye
Stray'd his affection in unlawful love—
A sin prevailing much in youthful men,
Who give their eyes the liberty of gazing?
Which of these sorrows is he subject to?

Adr. To none of these, except it be the last;
Namely, some love that drew him oft from home.

Abb. You should for that have reprehended him.

Adr. Why, so I did.

Abb. Ay, but not rough enough.

Adr. As roughly as my modesty would let me.

Abb. Haply, in private.

Adr. And in assemblies too.

Abb. Ay, but not enough.

Adr. It was the copy of our conference:
In bed, he slept not for my urging it;
At board, he fed not for my urging it;
Alone, it was the subject of my theme;
In company I often glanced it:
Still did I tell him it was vile and bad.

Abb. And thereof came it that the man was mad:
The venom clamours of a jealous woman
Poisons more deadly than a mad dog's tooth.
It seems, his sleeps were hinder'd by thy railing,
And thereof comes it that his head is light.
Thou say'st his meat was sauc'd with thy upbraidings:
Unquiet meals make ill digestions;
Thereof the raging fire of fever bred:
And what's a fever but a fit of madness?
Thou say'st his sports were hinder'd by thy brawls:
Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth ensue
But moody and dull melancholy,
Kinsman to grim and comfortless despair,
And at her heels a huge infectious troop
Of pale distemperatures and foes to life?
In food, in sport, and life-preserving rest
To be disturb'd, would mad or man or beast:

150 stuff: baggage 8 Cf. n. 10 self: same 16 circumstance: particulars 34 within him: within his guard 36 take: i.e. take refuge in 49 wrack of sea: shipwreck 51 Stray'd: led astray 64 copy: theme 68 glanced: hinted at 84 distemperatures: disorders

The consequence is then, thy jealous fits
Hath scar'd thy husband from the use of wits.
Luc. She never reprehended him but mildly
When he demean'd himself rough, rude, and wildly.
Why bear you these rebukes and answer not?
Adr. She did betray me to my own reproof.
Good people, enter, and lay hold on him.
Abb. No, not a creature enters in my house.
Adr. Then, let your servants bring my husband forth.
Abb. Neither: he took this place for sanctuary,
And it shall privilege him from your hands
Till I have brought him to his wits again,
Or lose my labour in assaying it.
Adr. I will attend my husband, be his nurse,
Diet his sickness, for it is my office,
And will have no attorney but myself;
And therefore let me have him home with me.
Abb. Be patient; for I will not let him stir
Till I have us'd the approved means I have,
With wholesome syrups, drugs, and holy prayers,
To make of him a formal man again.
It is a branch and parcel of mine oath,
A charitable duty of my order;
Therefore depart and leave him here with me.
Adr. I will not hence and leave my husband here;
And ill it doth beseem your holiness
To separate the husband and the wife.
Abb. Be quiet, and depart: thou shalt not have him.
[Exit.]
Luc. Complain unto the duke of this indignity.
Adr. Come, go: I will fall prostrate at his feet,
And never rise until my tears and prayers
Have won his Grace to come in person hither,
And take perforce my husband from the abbess.
Sec. Mer. By this, I think, the dial points at five:
Anon, I'm sure, the duke himself in person
Comes this way to the melancholy vale,
The place of death and sorry execution,
Behind the ditches of the abbey here.
Ang. Upon what cause?
Sec. Mer. To see a reverend Syracusian merchant,
Who put unluckily into this bay
Against the laws and statutes of this town,
Beheaded publicly for his offence.
Ang. See where they come: we will behold his death.
Luc. Kneel to the duke before he pass the abbey.

Enter the Duke of Ephesus, and [Ægeon] the Merchant of Syracuse, bare head, with the Headsman, and other Officers.

Duke. Yet once again proclaim it publicly,
If any friend will pay the sum for him,
He shall not die; so much we tender him.
Adr. Justice, most sacred duke, against the abbess!
Duke. She is a virtuous and a reverend lady:
It cannot be that she hath done thee wrong.
Adr. May it please your Grace, Antipholus, my husband,
Who I made Lord of me and all I had,
At your important letters, this ill day
A most outrageous fit of madness took him,
That desperately he hurried through the street,—
With him his bondman, all as mad as he,—
Doing displeasure to the citizens
By rushing in their houses, bearing thence
Rings, jewels, anything his rage did like.
Once did I get him bound and sent him home,
Whilst to take order for the wrongs I went
That here and there his fury had committed.
Anon, I wot not by what strong escape,
He broke from those that had the guard of him,
And with his mad attendant and himself,
Each one with ireful passion, with drawn swords
Met us again, and, madly bent on us,
Chas'd us away, till, raising of more aid,
We came again to bind them. Then they fled
Into this abbey, whither we pursu'd them;
And here the abbess shuts the gates on us,
And will not suffer us to fetch him out,
Nor send him forth that we may bear him hence.
Therefore, most gracious duke, with thy command
Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for help.
Duke. Long since thy husband serv'd me in my wars,
And I to thee engag'd a prince's word,
When thou didst make him master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could.
Go, some of you, knock at the abbey gate
And bid the lady abbess come to me.
I will determine this before I stir.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. O mistress, mistress, shift and save yourself!
My master and his man are both broke loose,
Beaten the maids a-row and bound the doctor,
Whose beard they have sing'd off with brands of fire;
And ever as it blaz'd they threw on him
Great pails of puddled mire to quench the hair.
My master preaches patience to him, and the while
His man with scissors nicks him like a fool;
And sure, unless you send some present help,
Between them they will kill the conjurer.
Adr. Peace, fool! thy master and his man are here,
And that is false thou dost report to us.
Mess. Mistress, upon my life, I tell you true;
I have not breath'd almost, since I did see it.
He cries for you and vows, if he can take you,
To scorch your face, and to disfigure you. Cry within.
Hark, hark! I hear him, mistress: fly, be gone!
Duke. Come, stand by me; fear nothing. Guard with halberds!
Adr. Ay me, it is my husband! Witness you,
That he is borne about invisible:
Even now we hous'd him in the abbey here,
And now he's there, past thought of human reason.

Enter Antipholus [of Ephesus] and Dromio of Ephesus.

Ant. E. Justice, most gracious duke! O grant me justice,
Even for the service that long since I did thee,

107 formal: rational 108 parcel: part 123 sorry: sad 135 so much ... him: so much leniency do we offer him 140 Who: whom 141 important: importunate, urgent 149 order for: measured for settling S. d. Messenger: i.e. one of Adriana's servants 173 Beaten: have beaten a-row: one after another 178 nicks ... fool; cf. n. 179 present: immediate 186 scorch; cf. n.

When I bestrid thee in the wars and took
Deep scars to save thy life; even for the blood
That then I lost for thee, now grant me justice.
Æge. Unless the fear of death doth make me dote,
I see my son Antipholus and Dromio!
Ant. E. Justice, sweet prince, against that woman there!
She whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife,
That hath abused and dishonour'd me,
Even in the strength and height of injury!
Beyond imagination is the wrong
That she this day hath shameless thrown on me.
Duke. Discover how, and thou shalt find me just.
Ant. E. This day, great duke, she shut the doors upon me,
While she with harlots feasted in my house.
Duke. A grievous fault! Say, woman, didst thou so?
Adr. No, my good lord: myself, he, and my sister
To-day did dine together. So befall my soul
As this is false he burthens me withal!
Luc. Ne'er may I look on day, nor sleep on night,
But she tells to your highness simple truth!
Ang. O perjur'd woman! They are both forsworn:
In this the madman justly chargeth them.
Ant. E. My liege, I am advised what I say:
Neither disturbed with the effect of wine,
Nor heady-rash, provok'd with raging ire,
Albeit my wrongs might make one wiser mad.
This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner:
That goldsmith there, were he not pack'd with her,
Could witness it, for he was with me then;
Who parted with me to go fetch a chain,
Promising to bring it to the Porpentine,
Where Balthazar and I did dine together.
Our dinner done, and he not coming thither,
I went to seek him: in the street I met him,
And in his company that gentleman.
There did this perjur'd goldsmith swear me down
That I this day of him receiv'd the chain,
Which, God he knows, I saw not; for the which
He did arrest me with an officer.
I did obey, and sent my peasant home
For certain ducats; he with none return'd.
Then fairly I bespoke the officer
To go in person with me to my house.
By the way we met
My wife, her sister, and a rabble more
Of vile confederates: along with them
They brought one Pinch, a hungry lean-fac'd villain,
A mere anatomy, a mountebank,
A threadbare juggler, and a fortune-teller,
A needy, hollow-ey'd, sharp-looking wretch,
A living dead man. This pernicious slave,
Forsooth, took on him as a conjurer,
And, gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulse,
And with no face, as 'twere, out-facing me,
Cries out, I was possess'd. Then all together
They fell upon me, bound me, bore me thence,
And in a dark and dankish vault at home
There left me and my man, both bound together;
Till, gnawing with my teeth my bonds in sunder,
I gain'd my freedom, and immediately
Ran hither to your Grace; whom I beseech
To give me ample satisfaction
For these deep shames and great indignities.
Ang. My lord, in truth, thus far I witness with him,
That he din'd not at home, but was lock'd out.
Duke. But had he such a chain of thee, or no?
Ang. He had, my lord; and when he ran in here,
These people saw the chain about his neck.
Sec. Mer. Besides, I will be sworn these ears of mine
Heard you confess you had the chain of him,
After you first forswore it on the mart;
And thereupon I drew my sword on you;
And then you fled into this abbey here,
From whence, I think, you are come by miracle.
Ant. E. I never came within these abbey walls;
Nor ever didst thou draw thy sword on me;
I never saw the chain, so help me heaven!
And this is false you burthen me withal.
Duke. Why, what an intricate impeach is this!
I think you all have drunk of Circe's cup.
If here you hous'd him, here he would have been;
If he were mad, he would not plead so coldly;
You say he din'd at home; the goldsmith here
Denies that saying. Sirrah, what say you?
Dro. E. Sir, he din'd with her there, at the Porpentine.
Cour. He did, and from my finger snatch'd that ring.
Ant. E. 'Tis true, my liege; this ring I had of her.
Duke. Saw'st thou him enter at the abbey here?
Cour. As sure, my liege, as I do see your Grace.
Duke. Why, this is strange. Go call the abbess hither.
I think you are all mated or stark mad.
Exit one to the Abbess.
Æge. Most mighty duke, vouchsafe me speak a word:
Haply I see a friend will save my life,
And pay the sum that may deliver me.
Duke. Speak freely, Syracusian, what thou wilt.
Æge. Is not your name, sir, called Antipholus?
And is not that your bondman Dromio?
Dro. E. Within this hour I was his bondman, sir;
But he, I thank him, gnaw'd in two my cords:
Now am I Dromio and his man, unbound.
Æge. I am sure you both of you remember me.
Dro. E. Ourselves we do remember, sir, by you;
For lately we were bound, as you are now.
You are not Pinch's patient, are you, sir?
Æge. Why look you strange on me? you know me well.
Ant. E. I never saw you in my life till now.
Æge. O, grief hath chang'd me since you saw me last,
And careful hours, with Time's deformed hand,
Have written strange defeatures in my face:
But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice?
Ant. E. Neither.
Æge. Dromio, nor thou?
Dro. E. No, trust me, sir, not I.
Æge. I am sure thou dost.
Dro. E. Ay, sir; but I am sure I do not; and whatsoever a man denies, you are now bound to believe him.

196 bestrid: stood over (to defend when fallen) 209 harlots: lewd fellows 213 burthens: charges 214 on night: at night 218 I . . . say: I speak with due deliberation 223 pack'd: in league 235 peasant: servant 243 anatomy: skeleton

274 impeach: accusation 275 Circe's cup: cf. n. 277 coldly: coolly 303 careful: full of care deformed: deforming

Æge. Not know my voice! O time's extremity,
Hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poor tongue
In seven short years, that here my only son
Knows not my feeble key of untun'd cares?
Though now this grained face of mine be hid
In sap-consuming winter's drizzled snow,
And all the conduits of my blood froze up,
Yet hath my night of life some memory,
My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left,
My dull deaf ears a little use to hear:
All these old witnesses—I cannot err—
Tell me thou art my son Antipholus.
Ant. E. I never saw my father in my life.
Æge. But seven years since, in Syracusa, boy,
Thou know'st we parted: but perhaps, my son,
Thou sham'st to acknowledge me in misery.
Ant. E. The duke and all that know me in the city
Can witness with me that it is not so:
I ne'er saw Syracusa in my life.
Duke. I tell thee, Syracusian, twenty years
Have I been patron to Antipholus,
During which time he ne'er saw Syracusa.
I see thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Enter the Abbess, with Antipholus Siracusa and Dromio Sir.

Abb. Most mighty duke, behold a man much wrong'd
All gather to see them.
Adr. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me!
Duke. One of these men is Genius to the other;
And so of these, which is the natural man,
And which the spirit? Who deciphers them?
Dro. S. I, sir, am Dromio: command him away.
Dro. E. I, sir, am Dromio: pray let me stay.
Ant. S. Ægeon art thou not? or else his ghost?
Dro. S. O, my old master! who hath bound him here?
Abb. Whoever bound him, I will loose his bonds,
And gain a husband by his liberty.
Speak, old Ægeon, if thou be'st the man
That hadst a wife once call'd Æmilia,
That bore thee at a burthen two fair sons.
O, if thou be'st the same Ægeon, speak,
And speak unto the same Æmilia!
Æge. If I dream not, thou art Æmilia:
If thou art she, tell me where is that son
That floated with thee on the fatal raft?
Abb. By men of Epidamnum, he and I
And the twin Dromio, all were taken up;
But by and by rude fishermen of Corinth
By force took Dromio and my son from them,
And me they left with those of Epidamnum.
What then became of them, I cannot tell;
I to this fortune that you see me in.
Duke. Why, here begins his morning story right:
These two Antipholus', these two so like,
And these two Dromios, one in semblance,—
Besides her urging of her wreck at sea,—
These are the parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together.
Antipholus, thou cam'st from Corinth first?
Ant. S. No, sir, not I; I came from Syracuse.
Duke. Stay, stand apart; I know not which is which.
Ant. E. I came from Corinth, my most gracious lord,—
Dro. E. And I with him.
Ant. E. Brought to this town by that most famous warrior,
Duke Menaphon, your most renowned uncle.
Adr. Which of you two did dine with me to-day?
Ant. S. I, gentle mistress.
Adr. And are not you my husband?
Ant. E. No; I say nay to that.
Ant. S. And so do I; yet did she call me so;
And this fair gentlewoman, her sister here,
Did call me brother. [To Luciana.] What I told you then,
I hope I shall have leisure to make good,
If this be not a dream I see and hear.
Ang. That is the chain, sir, which you had of me.
Ant. S. I think it be, sir; I deny it not.
Ant. E. And you, sir, for this chain arrested me.
Ang. I think I did sir; I deny it not.
Adr. I sent you money, sir, to be your bail,
By Dromio; but I think he brought it not.
Dro. E. No, none by me.
Ant. S. This purse of ducats I receiv'd from you,
And Dromio, my man, did bring them me.
I see we still did meet each other's man,
And I was ta'en for him, and he for me;
And thereupon these errors are arose.
Ant. E. These ducats pawn I for my father here.
Duke. It shall not need: thy father hath his life.
Cour. Sir, I must have that diamond from you.
Ant. E. There, take it; and much thanks for my good cheer.
Abb. Renowned duke, vouchsafe to take the pains
To go with us into the abbey here,
And hear at large discoursed all our fortunes;
And all that are assembled in this place,
That by this sympathized one day's error
Have suffer'd wrong, go keep us company,
And we shall make full satisfaction.
Thirty-three years have I but gone in travail
Of you, my sons; and, till this present hour
My heavy burthen ne'er delivered.
The duke, my husband, and my children both,
And you the calendars of their nativity,
Go to a gossip's feast, and go with me:
After so long grief such festivity!
Duke. With all my heart I'll gossip at this feast.
Exeunt omnes. Mane[n]t the two Dromios and two Brothers.
Dro. S. Master, shall I fetch your stuff from shipboard?
Ant. E. Dromio, what stuff of mine hast thou embark'd?
Dro. S. Your goods that lay at host, sir, in the Centaur.
Ant. S. He speaks to me, I am your master, Dromio:
Come, go with us; we'll look to that anon:
Embrace thy brother there; rejoice with him.
Exit [with his Brother].
Dro. S. There is a fat friend at your master's house,
That kitchen'd me for you to-day at dinner:

315 my . . . cares; cf. n. 316 grained: furrowed 338 Genius: attendant spirit 340 deciphers: distinguishes 362-367 Cf. n.

393 still: continually 405 sympathized: shared by all 408 Thirty-three years; cf. n. 412 calendars . . . nativity; cf. n. 413 gossip's: baptismal sponsor's 415 gossip: make merry 418 lay at host: were put up 423 kitchen'd: entertained (in the kitchen)

She now shall be my sister, not my wife.

Dro. E. Methinks you are my glass, and not my brother:
I see by you I am a sweet-fac'd youth.
Will you walk in to see their gossiping?

Dro. S. Not I, sir; you are my elder.

Dro. E. That's a question: how shall we try it?

Dro. S. We'll draw cuts for the senior: till then lead thou first.

Dro. E. Nay, then, thus:
We came into the world like brother and brother;
And now let's go hand in hand, not one before another.

Exeunt.

FINIS

430 cuts: lots

Notes

I.i.8. guilders. The word is anachronistically used here, and in IV.i.4, in a general sense for 'money,' without particular reference to the Dutch coin.

I.i.11. intestine. This word occurs in 1 Henry IV, I.i.12, where it means 'internal, civil,' and refers to wars within the state. Though it can hardly have that precise meaning here, it seems to carry a similar implication of a violent disturbance of the peace between people who ought to dwell in amity with one another. By his use of the word 'seditious,' in the next line, Solinus implies that the strife between Syracuse and Ephesus has been in the nature of a civil war.

I.i.34. nature. Ægeon wishes it to be remembered, after his death, that it was not the commission of a crime which brought him to his end, but the natural affection which led him to Ephesus, in quest of his son.

I.i.41. Epidamnum. 'Epidamium' in the Folio. The correct name of the town is Epidamnum (afterwards called by the Romans 'Dyrrhachium'). It is the modern Durazzo in Albania, on the Adriatic. The fact that the accusative form 'Epidamnum' is used in the translation of the Menæchmi published in 1595 has been taken as evidence that Shakespeare saw that translation in manuscript before he wrote The Comedy of Errors. Cf. Appendix A.

I.i.78. latter-born. From line 124, we learn that it was the younger of the twins who was rescued with his father; and some editors, forgetting that Ægeon is describing the confusion of a shipwreck, have emended the text to correct the apparent inconsistency.

I.i.93. Epidaurus. 'Epidarus' in the Folio. A town in Argolis, on the Saronic Gulf. Corinth had a port situated on the same gulf.

I.i.151. life. Craig accepts this emendation, proposed by Rowe, for 'helpe' in the Folio; but health, which has been adopted by some other editors, seems equally satisfactory.

I.ii.S. d. Enter Antipholus Erotes. 'Erotes' is probably a corruption of 'Erraticus,' i.e. the Wanderer. Compare the note on II.i.S. d. below.

I.ii.41. almanac of my true date. Because both master and man were born in the same hour, Antipholus can refer to his slave as the almanac by which he can discover the date of his birth.

I.ii.63. post. Dromio plays upon two meanings of the word. In the next line, he refers to the post, in a tavern or shop, upon which accounts were 'scored' with chalk or notches.

I.ii.75. Phœnix. Probably the sign over the shop of Antipholus of Ephesus, who is a merchant; but private houses, as well as inns and shops, were sometimes distinguished by names that had reference to some distinctive carving or other decoration.

II.i.S. d. wife to Antipholus Sereptus. The distinguishing epithet 'Sereptus' is an apparent error for 'Surreptus,' the Lost or Stolen. In the Menæchmi of Plautus, one of the twins was stolen from his parents and the other wandered about in search of him. Compare the note on I.ii.S. d. above. The possible relation of these corrupt Latin epithets to a lost source of the play is discussed in Appendix A.

II.i.15. lash'd. Perhaps there is a play upon another meaning of the word; viz. 'bound, fastened.'

II.i.57. horn-mad. Merely, 'mad as a horned beast,' i.e. a bull or buck; but Adriana is probably right in suspecting a reference to the ancient jest to the effect that the cuckold wore invisible horns.

II.i.82. round. Dromio plays upon two meanings of the word: (1) spherical, (2) plain-spoken.

II.i.111-115. I see, the jewel best enamelled Will lose his beauty; yet the gold bides still That others touch, and often touching will Wear gold; and no man that hath a name, By falsehood and corruption doth it shame. 'The best enamelled jewel tarnishes; but the gold setting keeps its lustre however it may be worn by the touch; similarly, a man of assured reputation, can commit domestic infidelity without blasting it.' (Herford.) This interpretation of the passage seems quite as satisfactory as those offered by editors who have emended the reading of the Folio more extensively. Theobald's suggestion of wear, for the Folio where, appears to be the only necessary emendation. At best, the meaning is obscure, and it may be a correct conjecture that some lines have dropped out of the text, which is obviously corrupt.

II.ii.24. earnest. Used with quibbling reference to 'earnest money,' i.e. money paid to bind a bargain.

II.ii.29. And make a common of my serious hours. 'That is, intrude on them when you please. The allusion is to those tracts of ground destined to common use, which are thence called commons' (Steevens).

II.ii.32. aspect. Probably there is an allusion to the astrological use of the word to denote the favorable or unfavorable influences of the planets.

II.ii.37. sconce. The dialogue contains a play on three meanings of the word. Antipholus uses it in the slang sense of 'head'; and Dromio, when he speaks of 'battering,' refers to the meaning, 'a small fort,' to which he returns when he uses the word 'insconce' in line 38. In this line it obviously means some form of head-armor.

II.ii.63. choleric. Overdone meat was supposed to induce irascibility. Compare The Taming of the Shrew, IV.i.167-169:

> 'I tell thee, Kate, 'twas burnt and dried away;
> And I expressly am forbid to touch it,
> For it engenders choler, planteth anger.'

II.ii.75. fine and recovery. A legal process by which entailed estates might be transferred from one owner to another.

II.ii.81. he hath the wit to lose his hair. In this expression, which seems to have been in the nature of a proverb, Dr. Johnson suspects a reference to the loss of hair through diseases contracted in licentiousness.

II.ii.90. jollity. The word hardly seems to fit the context, and some editors read 'policy,' following a conjecture by Staunton.

II.ii.99. tiring. The Folio reads 'trying'; corrected by Pope. A tire was a headdress or wig.

II.ii.147. distain'd. The word is used elsewhere by Shakespeare with the meaning given in the gloss. The emendation 'unstain'd,' accepted by Craig, appears, at first sight, to fit the context better; but the line as it stands may be taken as a climax to Adriana's outburst against the injustice of the so-called 'double standard,' a matter to which she seems to refer in the obscure passage at II.i.109-113. There seems to be no necessity for following the most recent Cambridge editors in transposing lines 149 and 150.

II.ii.207. laughs. The common (Northern English) verbal plural in—s. Compare 'poisons,' V.i.72.

III.i.58-60. If thou hadst been Dromio to-day in my place, Thou wouldst have chang'd thy face for a name, or thy name for an ass. If you had been in my place to-day, you would have been glad to wear some other man's face (and so, under his name, pass unrecognized by Antipholus); for otherwise, you would have endured such a beating as to convince you that you were an ass rather than Dromio. Compare lines 15, 16 above.

III.i.61. S. d. Luce. [Within.] The stage direction of the Folio, at this point, reads Enter Luce; and below, at line 84, Enter Adriana. Dyce was probably right in his suggestion that 'both maid and mistress made their appearance on the balcony termed the upper stage, though they undoubtedly were supposed not to see the persons at the door.'

III.i.68, 69. when? can you tell? A convenient rejoinder, by which an importunate request or query might be turned aside. Compare 1 Henry IV, II.i.34.

III.i.142. For slander lives upon succession. That is, slander lives on, in possession of a man's reputation, after his death.

III.ii.S. d. Luciana. Erroneously called 'Iuliana' in the Folio, which similarly assigns her first speech to 'Iulia.' The others are correctly marked 'Luc.'

III.ii.11. become disloyalty. Make even your disloyalty appear becoming by assuming an affectionate attitude toward your wife.

III.ii.52. Let Love, being light, be drowned if she sink. Antipholus believes that love is in no danger of being destroyed: it is too buoyant to be drowned. Compare Venus and Adonis, 149, 150:

> 'Love is a spirit all compact of fire,
> Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.'

III.ii.66. My sole earth's heaven, and my heaven's claim. 'All the happiness that I wish on earth, and all that I claim from heaven hereafter' (Malone).

III.ii.91. 'Sir-reverence.' A contraction of 'save your reverence,' a phrase used by way of apology for a remark that might give offence.

III.ii.120, 121. armed and reverted, making war against her heir. There is undoubtedly a quibbling allusion here to the armed resistance of the Holy League to Henry of Navarre, designated heir to the French throne by Henry III in 1589, and finally crowned King of France, as Henry IV, at Chartres, February, 1594. 'Mistress Nell's brazen forehead seemed to push back her rough and rebellious hair, as France resisted the claim of the Protestant heir to the throne' (Clarke). English interest in the civil war in France had been quickened by the fact that, in 1591, Elizabeth sent an expedition under Sir John Norris and the Earl of Essex to aid Henry in the siege of Rouen.

III.ii.141. turn i' the wheel. 'There is comprehended, under the Curres of the coursest kinde, a certaine dog in kitchen-service excellent. For when any meat is to be roasted, they go into a wheel, which they turning round about with the weight of their bodies, so dilligently looke to their businesse, that no drudge nor scullion can do the feate more cunningly. Whom the popular sort hereupon call Turnespets.' (Topsell: Historie of Foure-Footed Beastes, 1607.)

IV.i.22. I buy a thousand pound a year. The point of Dromio's remark is obscure, but he seems to mean that in buying a rope he is purchasing an annuity likely to yield him an income of a thousand beatings (poundings) a year.

IV.i.57. send me by some token. Send me with some sign to attest my right to receive payment for the chain.

IV.i.95. sheep. Shakespeare frequently puns upon this word, which was pronounced short, almost like ship.

IV.i.112. Dowsabel. Her name is Nell (cf. III.ii.107 above); but Dromio ironically applies to her the poetic name, derived from douce et belle, frequently used by the Elizabethans to designate a fair lass. Compare Drayton's semi-humorous Ballad of Dowsabell (1593).

IV.ii.6. his heart's meteors tilting in his face. Warburton finds here an allusion to the aurora borealis, which, as he remarks, sometimes has 'the appearance of lines of armies meeting in the shock.'

IV.ii.30. Far from her nest the lapwing cries away. That is, to divert attention from the nest and the young birds. This instinctive habit of the lapwing is frequently referred to in Elizabethan literature.

IV.ii.39. fairy. Some editors alter the word, to read fury, but emendation is unnecessary. Dromio has in mind the baleful and malevolent disposition sometimes attributed to fairies.

IV.ii.41. A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper. The sergeant usually approached from the rear and arrested his man by laying his hand roughly on the shoulder. Back-friend has also the meaning of false friend.

IV.ii.43. runs counter. A hunting term, meaning to follow the scent in the direction opposite to that which the game has taken. The word counter was also used of the two Compters, or debtors' prisons, in London, and officers who made arrests for debt were known as 'sergeants of the counter.'

IV.ii.44. One that, before the judgment, carries poor souls to hell. Before the passage of the Debtors' Act of 1869, arrests in civil cases could be made, by what was called 'mesne process,' before final judgment was given. The quibbling reference to the Last Judgment is obvious. 'Hell' was a name given to a prison for confinement of debtors, a sponging house, such as those in Wood Street and the Poultry.

IV.ii.46. on the case. 'Dromio S. here appears to quibble on the distinction between "matter" and "case" as a distinction between "contents" and "form." No doubt there is a further reference to the well-known "action on the case," which was a general action for the relief of a civil wrong not especially provided for' (Arden ed.).

IV.ii.64, 65. owes more than he's worth to season. Dromio plays upon the familiar expression 'time and season,' where 'season' means 'favorable opportunity.' Time never furnishes us many opportunities as he ought. The thought is the direct opposite of that expressed in Macbeth, I.iii.163: 'Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.'

IV.iii.11. Lapland sorcerers. Down to the days of Milton, who refers to 'Lapland witches' in Paradise Lost, ii. 665, Lapland was frequently mentioned in English literature as the especial home or rendezvous of witches and sorcerers.

IV.iii.13. What, have you got the picture of old Adam new apparelled? Dromio is naturally amazed to discover that his master appears to have shaken off the sergeant, whom he calls the picture of old Adam because he was 'in buff,' an expression used colloquially of the bare skin. New apparelled cannot be so easily explained, but the idea may be, 'Have you got the sergeant a new suit?'

IV.iii.16, 17. calf's skin that was killed for the Prodigal. St. Luke's Gospel, 15. 23.

IV.iii.73. 'Fly pride,' says the peacock. An accusation of dishonesty coming from this woman, whom Dromio takes to be dishonest, seems to him as out of place as the warning against pride proverbially attributed to the peacock.

IV.iv.40. prophesy like the parrot, 'Beware the rope's end.' Parrots were frequently taught to use such ill-omened phrases as this, in order to raise a laugh against the person for whom the bird appeared to prophesy an evil fate. There is probably a quibble in the expression Beware the rope's end, which is a free translation of respice funem, frequently used punningly with respice finem.

IV.iv.44. conjurer. As a schoolmaster, Dr. Pinch was in a position to deal with evil spirits in Latin, the only language which they were popularly supposed to understand. Compare Hamlet, I.i.51: 'Thou art a scholar; speak to it, Horatio.'

IV.iv.72. kitchen-vestal. 'Her charge being, like that of the vestal virgins, to keep the fire burning' (Johnson).

V.i.8. His word might bear my wealth at any time. I should always have been ready to trust him for all I was worth.

V.i.178. nicks him like a fool. Court jesters frequently wore their hair trimmed unevenly to give them a ludicrous appearance.

V.i.186. scorch. The reading of the Folio. Some editors believe the word is a misprint for scotch, to hack or cut.

V.i.275. Circe's cup. A draught from Circe's cup transformed men into beasts. The Duke means that some such enchantment appears to have fallen on his subjects, rendering them as irrational as animals.

V.i.315. my feeble key of untun'd cares. 'The weak and discordant tone of my voice, that is changed by grief' (Douce).

V.i.362-367. In the Folio, these lines follow line 352. The rearrangement, first suggested by Capell, has been adopted by most modern editors.

V.i.408. Thirty-three years. This figure is hardly consistent with two of Ægeon's statements; viz. that his eldest son was eighteen when they separated (I.i.125); and that seven years have since elapsed (V.i.326); but Shakespeare was frequently careless in such matters.

V.i.412. calendars of their nativity. I.e. the two Dromios. Compare the note on I.ii.41.

The Text of the Present Edition

The earliest known text of The Comedy of Errors is that of the First Folio of 1623.

By permission of the Oxford University Press, the text of the present edition is based upon that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig. Departures from Craig's text are indicated below.

1. So far as possible, the stage directions of the Folio have been restored. Necessary additions have been inserted in square brackets.

2. Punctuation and spelling have been normalized to accord with modern English practice; e. g. courtesan, almanac (instead of courtezan, almanack). In the case of the words murther, burden, burthen, etc., the actual form employed by the Folio has been retained.

3. The following alterations in Craig's text have been introduced, readings of the present edition standing before the colon, while those of Craig follow it. Except in the two instances indicated, these changes restore the reading of the Folio.

I.i.15 To admit: T' admit
87 was: were
119 misfortunes: misfortune
127 so: for
II.i.110 yet the: and though
111 and: yet
ii. 121 then: thus
147 distain'd: unstain'd
152 wants: want
191 sprites: elvish sprites
207 laughs: laugh
III.i.143 hous'd: housed
ii. 107 that's: that is 127 saw it: saw
IV.i.17 end: that will I: end, that I will 57 me. by: by me
iii. 22 sob: fob
58 then: thee
iv. 101 these false: those false
V.i.72 Poisons: Poison
81 moody: moody moping
88 Hath: Have
140 Who: Whom
186 scorch: scotch
193 there: here
219 disturbed: disturb'd
246 living dead: living-dead
250 all together: altogether (F)
410 burthen ne'er: burdens ne'er (burthen are F)
413 go: joy

The Two Gentlemen of Verona

Edited by
KARL YOUNG

Dramatis Personae

DUKE [OF MILAN], Father to Silvia
VALENTINE } the two Gentlemen
PROTEUS }
ANTONIO, Father to Proteus
THURIO, a foolish Rival to Valentine
EGLAMOUR, Agent for Silvia in her escape
HOST, where Julia lodges (in Milan)
OUTLAWS, with Valentine
SPEED, a clownish Servant to Valentine
LAUNCE, the like to Proteus
PANTHINO, Servant to Antonio
JULIA, Beloved of Proteus
SILVIA, Beloved of Valentine
LUCETTA, Waiting-Woman to Julia
SERVANTS, MUSICIANS

SCENE—Verona; Milan; and a forest on the frontier of Mantua.

The Two Gentlemen of Verona

Introduction

Sources of the Play

Although a considerable number of literary origins have been proposed for one part or another of The Two Gentlemen of Verona, the source of the main action is represented best, so far as we now know, by the story of Felix and Felismena in Diana Enamorada, a pastoral romance of adventurous incidents written in Spanish by Jorge de Montemayor, and first printed in 1542. This story, we may assume, was accessible to Shakespeare in other forms than the Spanish. Bartholomew Yonge's English translation of Diana was not published until 1598; but he tells us that it had been in manuscript for sixteen years, and we know that before 1598 two other English translations of parts of Montemayor's work existed in unpublished form. A French translation of relevant parts of Diana was printed in 1578 and 1587. It is possible also that the lost play Felix and Philiomena, acted at Greenwich in 1584, treated the same fiction.

Directly or indirectly, then, the main plot of Shakespeare's play seems to derive from Montemayor's story; and although we cannot be sure as to contributions from intermediate sources, a comparison of the play and the Spanish romance probably discloses fairly enough at least the general nature of Shakespeare's indebtedness to predecessors, and the direction of his originality. Among the chief matters in which the play resembles the narrative are the following: Proteus' employing Julia's maid as intermediary, and Julia's exhibition of coyness in receiving his letter (I.ii); the breach in the intimacy of the lovers caused by the sending of Proteus to court; the pursuit of Proteus by Julia in disguise; Julia's lodging at an inn and overhearing Proteus' serenade to Silvia (IV.ii); the disguised Julia's taking service with Proteus as his page, and being sent by him to advance his suit to Silvia; the conversation between Julia and Silvia concerning Proteus' former love, and Silvia's rejection of his addresses (IV.iv); and Julia's final reunion with Proteus in the forest. One may add that the Felix (Proteus) of Montemayor has a conventional page who provides at least something of the rôle of Launce.

The more obvious departures of the play from the inherited story are the following: the presence of Valentine, about whom are developed the theme of manly friendship and the incidents of Proteus' treachery; the addition of Thurio, Eglamour, and Speed; the development of the rôle of the Duke as the father of Silvia; and the suppression of Celia's (Silvia's) headlong passion for the supposed boy, Felismena (Julia), and hence the elimination of Celia's voluntary death from hopeless love. These external changes, however, are far less important than the more subtle and profound departures of Shakespeare in characterization and in poetry. The superiority of the dramatist in these respects could be adequately demonstrated only through more ample and detailed comparisons than are possible here. The basis for one significant comparison may, however, be provided. Part of the most appealing conversation between Celia (Silvia) and the disguised Felismena (Julia) in the romance is recounted as follows (Yonge's translation, 1598, p. 64. Cf. Hazlitt's Shakespeare's Library, Part I, Vol. I, pp. 298, 299). Felismena is the speaker:

> 'There is not anie thing (saide Celia*) that I would not do for thee, though I were determined not to loue him at all, who for my sake hath forsaken another. For it is no small point of wisedome for me, to learne by other womens harmes to be more wise, and warie in mine owne. Beleeue not good Lady (saide I) that there is any thing in the worlde, that can make* Don Felix forget you. And if he hath cast off another for your sake, woonder not thereat, when your beautie and wisedome is so great, and the others so small, that there is no reason to thinke, that he will (though he hath woorthelie forsaken her for your sake) or euer can forget you for any woman else in the worlde. Doest thou then know Felismena (saide Celia*) the lady whom thy Master did once loue and serue in his owne countrey? I know her (saide I) although not so well as it was needfull for me, to haue preuented so many mishaps, (and this I spake softly to my selfe). For my fathers house was neere to hers, but seeing your great beautie adorned with such perfections and wisedome,* Don Felix can not be blamed, if he hath forgotten his first loue, onely to embrace and honour yours. To this did Celia answer merily, and smiling. Thou hast learned quickly of thy Master to sooth. Not so faire Ladie, saide I, but to serue you woulde I faine learne: for flatterie cannot be, where (in the iudgement of all) there are so manifest signes and proofes of this due commendation. Celia began in good earnest to aske me what manner of woman Felismena was; whom I answered, that touching her beautie, Some thought her to be very faire, but I was neuer of that opinion, bicause she hath many daies since wanted the chiefest thing that is requisite for it. What is that, said Celia*? Content of minde, saide I, bicause perfect beautie can neuer be, where the same is not adioyned to it.'*

The reader who will turn from this passage to the corresponding lines of the play (IV.iv. 105-175) may judge of Shakespeare's achievement in delicacy and richness of characterization, in pathos, and in poetry.

The History of the Play

We possess no text of The Two Gentlemen of Verona earlier than that in the First Folio of 1623, and for determining the precise date of composition we have inadequate evidence. Although the play is mentioned first, so far as we know, by Francis

Meres in his Palladis Tamia, of 1598, certain features of style and dramatic technique indicate that it was written considerably earlier. Competent critics have proposed dates ranging between 1590 and 1595, the majority preferring the period 1591-1592. Since the extant text shows both signs of youth and characteristics which may be due to revision, we are not prohibited from surmising that Shakespeare wrote the play as early as 1590-1591, and that he or some one else made changes as late as 1594-1595. All we know for certain is that, as it stands, the play discloses bits of immature workmanship and irregularities which may arise from textual alteration.

In view of the fact that in later comedies Shakespeare improved upon virtually all features of The Two Gentlemen of Verona, we need not be surprised at the infrequency of stage-performances of this play. The first production of which we have a record is that by David Garrick at Drury Lane on December 22, 1762. The version presented included 'Alterations and Additions' by Benjamin Victor. Victor's literary audacity may be illustrated by his addition to the last act of two scenes designed for bringing Launce and Speed upon the stage again. The play was performed five times with success; but at the sixth performance occurred a riot motivated, apparently, partly by personal hostility to Garrick and partly by a desire for the restoration of admission at half-price. A more faithful presentation of Shakespeare's text occurred at Covent Garden on April 13, 1784; and in January, 1790, John Philip Kemble gave three performances of the original play at Drury Lane. On April 21, 1808, at Covent Garden, Kemble presented Victor's version, with alterations of his own. Somewhat later, the play was degraded into an opera by Frederic Reynolds, and produced at Covent Garden on November 29, 1821, and on numerous subsequent dates. Shakespeare's own play was revived at Bath on March 23, 1822, and at Drury Lane, by Macready, on December 29, 1841. Charles Kean is said[1] to have produced it both in England and in America during the period 1840-1850, and during the following decade Samuel Phelps gave performances at Sadler's Wells.

During recent years notable productions have been achieved by Osmund Tearle at Stratford-upon-Avon in 1890, by Augustin Daly in New York and London in 1895, and by J. H. Leigh at the Court Theatre, London, in April, 1904. In observance of the Shakespeare Tercentenary, members of the University of Wisconsin gave two performances of the play in May, 1916.

1 Cf. Harold Child, in The Two Gentlemen of Verona, edited by Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch and John Dover Wilson (Cambridge, 1921), p. 106. I have found no other statement concerning these performances by Charles Kean.

Act First ❧ Scene First

[Verona. An open place]
[Enter] Valentine [and] Proteus; and [later,] Speed.

Val. Cease to persuade, my loving Proteus;
Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits.
Were 't not affection chains thy tender days
To the sweet glances of thy honour'd love,
I rather would entreat thy company
To see the wonders of the world abroad
Than, living dully sluggardiz'd at home,
Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness.
But since thou lov'st, love still, and thrive therein,
Even as I would when I to love begin.
Pro. Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine, adieu!
Think on thy Proteus, when thou haply seest
Some rare noteworthy object in thy travel.
Wish me partaker in thy happiness
When thou dost meet good hap; and in thy danger,
If ever danger do environ thee,
Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers,
For I will be thy beadsman, Valentine.
Val. And on a love-book pray for my success?
Pro. Upon some book I love I'll pray for thee.
Val. That's on some shallow story of deep love,
How young Leander cross'd the Hellespont.
Pro. That's a deep story of a deeper love;
For he was more than over shoes in love.
Val. 'Tis true; for you are over boots in love,
And yet you never swum the Hellespont.
Pro. Over the boots? nay, give me not the boots.
Val. No, I will not, for it boots thee not.
Pro. What?
Val. To be in love, where scorn is bought with groans;
Coy looks with heart-sore sighs; one fading moment's mirth
With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights:
If haply won, perhaps a hapless gain;
If lost, why then a grievous labour won;
However, but a folly bought with wit,
Or else a wit by folly vanquished.
Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me fool.
Val. So, by your circumstance, I fear you'll prove.
Pro. 'Tis love you cavil at; I am not Love.
Val. Love is your master, for he masters you;
And he that is so yoked by a fool,
Methinks, should not be chronicled for wise.
Pro. Yet writers say, as in the sweetest bud
The eating canker dwells, so eating love
Inhabits in the finest wits of all.
Val. And writers say, as the most forward bud
Is eaten by the canker ere it blow,
Even so by love the young and tender wit
Is turned to folly, blasting in the bud,
Losing his verdure even in the prime,
And all the fair effects of future hopes.
But wherefore waste I time to counsel thee
That art a votary to fond desire?
Once more adieu! my father at the road
Expects my coming, there to see me shipp'd.
Pro. And thither will I bring thee, Valentine.
Val. Sweet Proteus, no; now let us take our leave.
To Milan let me hear from thee by letters
Of thy success in love, and what news else
Betideth here in absence of thy friend;
And I likewise will visit thee with mine.
Pro. All happiness bechance to thee in Milan!
Val. As much to you at home! and so, farewell. Exit.
Pro. He after honour hunts, I after love.
He leaves his friends to dignify them more;
I leave myself, my friends, and all, for love.
Thou, Julia, thou hast metamorphos'd me;
Made me neglect my studies, lose my time,
War with good counsel, set the world at nought;
Made wit with musing weak, heart sick with thought.

[Enter Speed.]

Speed. Sir Proteus, save you! Saw you my master?
Pro. But now he parted hence, to embark for Milan.
Speed. Twenty to one, then, he is shipp'd already,
And I have play'd the sheep, in losing him.
Pro. Indeed, a sheep doth very often stray,
An if the shepherd be a while away.
Speed. You conclude that my master is a shepherd, then, and I a sheep?
Pro. I do.
Speed. Why then my horns are his horns, whether I wake or sleep.
Pro. A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.
Speed. This proves me still a sheep.
Pro. True, and thy master a shepherd.
Speed. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.
Pro. It shall go hard but I'll prove it by another.
Speed. The shepherd seeks the sheep, and not the sheep the shepherd; but I seek my master, and my master seeks not me: therefore I am no sheep.
Pro. The sheep for fodder follow the shepherd, the shepherd for food follows not the sheep; thou for wages followest thy master, thy master for wages follows not thee: therefore thou art a sheep.
Speed. Such another proof will make me cry 'baa.'
Pro. But, dost thou hear? gavest thou my letter to Julia?
Speed. Ay, sir; I, a lost mutton, gave your letter to her, a laced mutton; and she, a laced mutton, gave me, a lost mutton, nothing for my labour.
Pro. Here's too small a pasture for such store of muttons.
Speed. If the ground be overcharged, you were best stick her.
Pro. Nay, in that you are astray; 'twere best pound you.
Speed. Nay, sir, less than a pound shall serve me for carrying your letter.

8 shapeless: aimless 9 still: always 12 haply: by chance 17 Commend . . . to: commit to the attention of 18 beadsman: one employed to pray for others 19 love-book: book treating of love (instead of prayer-book) 22 Leander; cf. n. 27 give . . . boots: do not make game of me 28 boots: profits 35 However: in any case 37 circumstance: circumlocution 38 circumstance: state of affairs 44 canker: cankerworm 45 Inhabits: dwells 47 blow: bloom 50 prime: spring

51 fair . . . hopes: realization of hopes of future bliss 53 fond: foolish 54 road: anchorage 55 shipp'd; cf. n. 56 bring: accompany 59 success: fortune (good or bad) 70 thought: sorrow 73, 74 shipp'd . . . sheep; cf. n. 76 An if: if 80 horns: fancifully attributed to cuckolds 85 circumstance: detailed proof 94 'baa': quibble on 'bah' 97 laced mutton: courtesan; cf. n. 100 overcharged: overburdened 100 stick: stab 102 pound: confine within an enclosure (with quibble)

Pro. You mistake; I mean the pound,—a pinfold.
Speed. From a pound to a pin? Fold it over and over,
'Tis threefold too little for carrying a letter to your lover.
Pro. But what said she?
Speed. [Nodding.] Ay.
Pro. Nod, ay? why, that's noddy.
Speed. You mistook, sir. I say she did nod; and you ask me if she did nod; and I say, 'Ay.'
Pro. And that set together is—noddy.
Speed. Now you have taken the pains to set it together, take it for your pains.
Pro. No, no; you shall have it for bearing the letter.
Speed. Well, I perceive I must be fain to bear with you.
Pro. Why, sir, how do you bear with me?
Speed. Marry, sir, the letter very orderly; having nothing but the word 'noddy' for my pains.
Pro. Beshrew me, but you have a quick wit.
Speed. And yet it cannot overtake your slow purse.
Pro. Come, come; open the matter in brief. What said she?
Speed. Open your purse, that the money and the matter may be both at once delivered.
Pro. Well, sir, here is for your pains [giving him money]. What said she?
Speed. Truly, sir, I think you'll hardly win her.
Pro. Why, couldst thou perceive so much from her?
Speed. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her; no, not so much as a ducat for delivering your letter. And being so hard to me that brought your mind, I fear she'll prove as hard to you in telling your mind. Give her no token but stones, for she's as hard as steel.
Pro. What! said she nothing?
Speed. No, not so much as 'Take this for thy pains.' To testify your bounty, I thank you, you have testerned; in requital whereof, henceforth carry your letters yourself. And so, sir, I'll commend you to my master.
Pro. Go, go, be gone, to save your ship from wrack;
Which cannot perish, having thee aboard,
Being destin'd to a drier death on shore.— [Exit Speed.]
I must go send some better messenger.
I fear my Julia would not deign my lines,
Receiving them from such a worthless post. Exit.

Scene Second

[The Same. The Garden of Julia's House]
Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. But say, Lucetta, now we are alone,
Wouldst thou then counsel me to fall in love?
Luc. Ay, madam, so you stumble not unheedfully.
Jul. Of all the fair resort of gentlemen
That every day with parle encounter me,
In thy opinion which is worthiest love?
Luc. Please you repeat their names, I'll show my mind
According to my shallow simple skill.

Jul. What think'st thou of the fair Sir Eglamour?
Luc. As of a knight well-spoken, neat and fine;
But, were I you, he never should be mine.
Jul. What think'st thou of the rich Mercatio?
Luc. Well of his wealth; but of himself, so so.
Jul. What think'st thou of the gentle Proteus?
Luc. Lord, Lord! to see what folly reigns in us!
Jul. How now! what means this passion at his name?
Luc. Pardon, dear madam; 'tis a passing shame
That I, unworthy body as I am,
Should censure thus on lovely gentlemen.
Jul. Why not on Proteus, as of all the rest?
Luc. Then thus: of many good I think him best.
Jul. Your reason?
Luc. I have no other but a woman's reason:
I think him so because I think him so.
Jul. And wouldst thou have me cast my love on him?
Luc. Ay, if you thought your love not cast away.
Jul. Why, he of all the rest hath never mov'd me.
Luc. Yet he of all the rest, I think, best loves ye.
Jul. His little speaking shows his love but small.
Luc. Fire that's closest kept burns most of all.
Jul. They do not love that do not show their love.
Luc. O! they love least that let men know their love.
Jul. I would I knew his mind.
Luc. Peruse this paper, madam. [Gives a letter.]
Jul. 'To Julia.'—Say from whom?
Luc. That the contents will show.
Jul. Say, say, who gave it thee?
Luc. Sir Valentine's page, and sent, I think, from Proteus.
He would have given it you, but I, being in the way,
Did in your name receive it. Pardon the fault, I pray.
Jul. Now, by my modesty, a goodly broker!
Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines?
To whisper and conspire against my youth?
Now, trust me, 'tis an office of great worth,
And you an officer fit for the place.
There, take the paper; see it be return'd;
Or else return no more into my sight.
Luc. To plead for love deserves more fee than hate.
Jul. Will ye be gone?
Luc. That you may ruminate. Exit.
Jul. And yet I would I had o'erlook'd the letter.
It were a shame to call her back again
And pray her to a fault for which I chid her.
What 'fool is she, that knows I am a maid,
And would not force the letter to my view!
Since maids, in modesty, say 'No' to that
Which they would have the profferer construe 'Ay.'
Fie, fie! how wayward is this foolish love
That, like a testy babe, will scratch the nurse
And presently all humbled kiss the rod!
How churlishly I chid Lucetta hence,
When willingly I would have had her here!
How angerly I taught my brow to frown,
When inward joy enforc'd my heart to smile!

105 pinfold: enclosure for stray animals 110 noddy: simpleton 117 fain: pleased 119 Marry: by the Virgin Mary: cf. n. 121 Beshrew: curse (used playfully) 123 open: disclose 129 perceive: receive 131 ducat: a gold or silver coin 133 in telling: when you tell her 134 stones: jewels (possibly) 137 testerned: 'tipped' with a tester, or sixpence 142 destin'd . . . shore, cf. n. 144 deign: accept graciously 145 post: messenger (with quibble) 4 resort: gathering 5 parle: conversation

9 Sir Eglamour; cf. n. 17 passing: surpassing 19 censure: pass judgment 27 mov'd: made a proposal to 41 broker: go-between 51 o'erlook'd: looked over, read 54 'fool: a fool 59 testy: fretful 60 presently: immediately 63 angerly: angrily

My penance is, to call Lucetta back
And ask remission for my folly past.
What ho! Lucetta!

[Enter Lucetta.]

Luc. What would your ladyship?
Jul. Is it near dinner-time?
Luc. I would it were,
That you might kill your stomach on your meat,
And not upon your maid.
Jul. What is 't that you took up so gingerly?
Luc. Nothing.
Jul. Why didst thou stoop, then?
Luc. To take a paper up
That I let fall.
Jul. And is that paper nothing?
Luc. Nothing concerning me.
Jul. Then let it lie for those that it concerns.
Luc. Madam, it will not lie where it concerns,
Unless it have a false interpreter.
Jul. Some love of yours hath writ to you in rime.
Luc. That I might sing it, madam, to a tune.
Give me a note; your ladyship can set.
Jul. As little by such toys as may be possible;
Best sing it to the tune of 'Light o' Love.'
Luc. It is too heavy for so light a tune.
Jul. Heavy! belike it hath some burden, then?
Luc. Ay; and melodious were it, would you sing it.
Jul. And why not you?
Luc. I cannot reach so high.
Jul. Let's see your song. [Taking the letter.] How now, minion!
Luc. Keep tune there still, so you will sing it out.
And yet, methinks, I do not like this tune.
Jul. You do not?
Luc. No, madam; it is too sharp.
Jul. You, minion, are too saucy.
Luc. Nay, now you are too flat,
And mar the concord with too harsh a descant.
There wanteth but a mean to fill your song.
Jul. The mean is drown'd with your unruly bass.
Luc. Indeed, I bid the base for Proteus.
Jul. This babble shall not henceforth trouble me.
Here is a coil with protestation!— [Tears the letter.]
Go, get you gone, and let the papers lie:
You would be fingering them, to anger me.
Luc. She makes it strange; but she would be best pleas'd
To be so anger'd with another letter. [Exit.]
Jul. Nay, would I were so anger'd with the same!
O hateful hands, to tear such loving words!
Injurious wasps, to feed on such sweet honey,
And kill the bees that yield it with your stings!
I'll kiss each several paper for amends.
Look, here is writ 'kind Julia.' Unkind Julia!
As in revenge of thy ingratitude,
I throw thy name against the bruising stones,
Trampling contemptuously on thy disdain.
And here is writ 'love-wounded Proteus.'
Poor wounded name! my bosom as a bed
Shall lodge thee till thy wound be throughly heal'd;
And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss.
But twice or thrice was 'Proteus' written down.
Be calm, good wind, blow not a word away
Till I have found each letter in the letter,
Except mine own name; that some whirlwind bear
Unto a ragged, fearful hanging rock,
And throw it thence into the raging sea!
Lo! here in one line is his name twice writ,
'Poor forlorn Proteus, passionate Proteus,
To the sweet Julia.' That I'll tear away;
And yet I will not, sith so prettily
He couples it to his complaining names.
Thus will I fold them one upon another.
Now kiss, embrace, contend, do what you will.

[Enter Lucetta.]

Luc. Madam,
Dinner is ready, and your father stays.
Jul. Well, let us go.
Luc. What! shall these papers lie like telltales here?
Jul. If you respect them, best to take them up.
Luc. Nay, I was taken up for laying them down;
Yet here they shall not lie, for catching cold.
Jul. I see you have a month's mind to them.
Luc. Ay, madam, you may say what sights you see;
I see things too, although you judge I wink.
Jul. Come, come; will 't please you go? Exeunt.

Scene Third

[The Same. A Room in Antonio's House]
Enter Antonio and Panthino; [and later,] Proteus.

Ant. Tell me, Panthino, what sad talk was that
Wherewith my brother held you in the cloister?
Pant. 'Twas of his nephew Proteus, your son.
Ant. Why, what of him?
Pant. He wonder'd that your lordship
Would suffer him to spend his youth at home,
While other men, of slender reputation,
Put forth their sons to seek preferment out:
Some to the wars, to try their fortune there;
Some to discover islands far away;
Some to the studious universities.
For any or for all these exercises
He said that Proteus your son was meet,
And did request me to importune you
To let him spend his time no more at home,
Which would be great impeachment to his age,
In having known no travel in his youth.
Ant. Nor need'st thou much importune me to that

71 kill: i.e. subdue, satisfy stomach; cf. n. 71, 72 meat . . . maid; cf. n. 80 concerns: is of importance 85 set; cf. n. 87 'Light o' Love': name of a tune then familiar 88 heavy: serious 89 burden; cf. n. 100 flat; cf. n. 101, 102 descant . . . mean; cf. n. 104 bid the base; cf. n. 106 coil with protestation: turmoil over solemn declaration 109 makes it strange: pretends aloofness 111 would . . . same; cf. n. 113 wasps: i.e. her fingers 117 As: thus

122 throughly: thoroughly 123 search: probe, cleanse 138 stays: waits 141 respect: prize 142 taken up: rebuked 143 for: for fear of 144 month's mind: strong inclination 146 wink: close the eyes 1 sad: serious 14 importune: urge 16 impeachment: reproach

Whereon this month I have been hammering.
I have consider'd well his loss of time,
And how he cannot be a perfect man,
Not being tried and tutor'd in the world.
Experience is by industry achiev'd,
And perfected by the swift course of time.
Then tell me, whither were I best to send him?
Pant. I think your lordship is not ignorant
How his companion, youthful Valentine,
Attends the emperor in his royal court.
Ant. I know it well.
Pant. 'Twere good, I think, your lordship sent him thither.
There shall he practise tilts and tournaments,
Hear sweet discourse, converse with noblemen,
And be in eye of every exercise
Worthy his youth and nobleness of birth.
Ant. I like thy counsel; well hast thou advis'd;
And that thou mayst perceive how well I like it,
The execution of it shall make known.
Even with the speediest expedition
I will dispatch him to the emperor's court.
Pant. To-morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonso
With other gentlemen of good esteem
Are journeying to salute the emperor,
And to commend their service to his will.
Ant. Good company; with them shall Proteus go,
And—in good time! Now will we break with him.

[Enter Proteus.]

Pro. Sweet love! sweet lines! sweet life!
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart;
Here is her oath for love, her honour's pawn.
O that our fathers would applaud our loves,
To seal our happiness with their consents!
O heavenly Julia!
Ant. How now! what letter are you reading there?
Pro. May 't please your lordship, 'tis a word or two
Of commendations sent from Valentine,
Deliver'd by a friend that came from him.
Ant. Lend me the letter; let me see what news.
Pro. There is no news, my lord; but that he writes
How happily he lives, how well belov'd
And daily graced by the emperor;
Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.
Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish?
Pro. As one relying on your lordship's will
And not depending on his friendly wish.
Ant. My will is something sorted with his wish.
Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed;
For what I will, I will, and there an end.
I am resolv'd that thou shalt spend some time
With Valentinus in the emperor's court.
What maintenance he from his friends receives,
Like exhibition thou shalt have from me.
To-morrow be in readiness to go.
Excuse it not, for I am peremptory.

19 hammering: planning 28 emperor; cf. n. 33 be in eye of: have opportunity of seeing 43 commend: commit 45 in good time; cf. n. break with: disclose our purpose to 48 pawn: pledge 54 commendations: greetings 59 graced: honored 64 something sorted: rather in agreement 65 Muse: grumble 70 exhibition: allowance of money 72 Excuse: beg off from peremptory: determined

Pro. My lord, I cannot be so soon provided.
Please you, deliberate a day or two.
Ant. Look, what thou want'st shall be sent after thee.
No more of stay; to-morrow thou must go.
Come on, Panthino; you shall be employ'd
To hasten on his expedition. [Exeunt Antonio and Panthino.]
Pro. Thus have I shunn'd the fire for fear of burning,
And drench'd me in the sea, where I am drown'd.
I fear'd to show my father Julia's letter,
Lest he should take exceptions to my love;
And with the vantage of mine own excuse
Hath he expected most against my love.
O! how this spring of love resembleth
The uncertain glory of an April day,
Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away!

[Enter Panthino.]

Pant. Sir Proteus, your father calls for you.
He is in haste; therefore, I pray you, go.
Pro. Why, this it is: my heart accords thereto,
And yet a thousand times it answers, 'no.' Exeunt.

Act Second ❧ Scene First

[Milan. A Room in the Duke's Palace]
Enter Valentine [and] Speed; [and later,] Silvia.

Speed. Sir, your glove. [Offering a glove.]
Val. Not mine; my gloves are on.
Speed. Why, then this may be yours, for this is but one.
Val. Ha! let me see: ay, give it me, it's mine;
Sweet ornament that decks a thing divine!
Ah Silvia! Silvia!
Speed. [Calling.] Madam Silvia! Madam Silvia!
Val. How now, sirrah?
Speed. She is not within hearing, sir.
Val. Why, sir, who bade you call her?
Speed. Your worship, sir; or else I mistook.
Val. Well, you'll still be too forward.
Speed. And yet I was last chidden for being too slow.
Val. Go to, sir. Tell me, do you know Madam Silvia?
Speed. She that your worship loves?
Val. Why, how know you that I am in love?
Speed. Marry, by these special marks: first, you have learned, like Sir Proteus, to wreathe your arms, like a malcontent; to relish a love-song, like a robin-redbreast; to walk alone, like one that had the pestilence; to sigh, like a schoolboy that had lost his A B C; to weep, like a young wench that had buried her grandam; to fast, like one that takes diet; to watch, like one that fears robbing; to speak puling, like a beggar at Hallowmas. You were wont, when you laughed, to crow like cock; when you walked, to walk like one of the lions; when you fasted, it was presently after dinner; when you looked 73 provided: equipped 82 take exceptions: make objections 84 excepted . . . against: objected to 2, 3 on . . . one; cf. n. 8 sirrah: form of address to inferiors 14 Go to: an expression of disapprobation 18 wreathe: fold 19 relish: sing 21 A B C: primer 22 watch: lie awake, or sit up at night 23 puling: whiningly 24 Hallowmas; cf. n. 25 one . . . lions; cf. n.

sadly, it was for want of money; and now you are metamorphosed with a mistress, that, when I look on you, I can hardly think you my master.

Val. Are all these things perceived in me?

Speed. They are all perceived without ye.

Val. Without me? they cannot.

Speed. Without you? nay, that's certain; for, without you were so simple, none else would; but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you and shine through you like the water in an urinal, that not an eye that sees you but is a physician to comment on your malady.

Val. But tell me, dost thou know my lady Silvia?

Speed. She that you gaze on so as she sits at supper?

Val. Hast thou observed that? even she, I mean.

Speed. Why, sir, I know her not.

Val. Does thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet knowest her not?

Speed. Is she not hard-favoured, sir?

Val. Not so fair, boy, as well-favoured.

Speed. Sir, I know that well enough.

Val. What dost thou know?

Speed. That she is not so fair, as, of you, well-favoured.

Val. I mean that her beauty is exquisite, but her favour infinite.

Speed. That's because the one is painted and the other out of all count.

Val. How painted? and how out of count?

Speed. Marry, sir, so painted to make her fair, that no man counts of her beauty.

Val. How esteemest thou me? I account of her beauty.

Speed. You never saw her since she was deformed.

Val. How long hath she been deformed?

Speed. Ever since you loved her.

Val. I have loved her ever since I saw her, and still I see her beautiful.

Speed. If you love her, you cannot see her.

Val. Why?

Speed. Because Love is blind. O! that you had mine eyes; or your own eyes had the lights they were wont to have when you chid at Sir Proteus for going ungartered!

Val. What should I see then?

Speed. Your own present folly and her passing deformity; for he, being in love, could not see to garter his hose; and you, being in love, cannot see to put on your hose.

Val. Belike, boy, then, you are in love; for last morning you could not see to wipe my shoes.

Speed. True, sir; I was in love with my bed. I thank you, you swinged me for my love, which makes me the bolder to chide you for yours.

Val. In conclusion, I stand affected to her.

Speed. I would you were set, so your affection would cease.

Val. Last night she enjoined me to write some lines to one she loves.

Speed. And have you?

Val. I have.

Speed. Are they not lamely writ?

Val. No, boy, but as well as I can do them.
Peace! here she comes.

[Enter Silvia.]

Speed. [Aside.] O excellent motion! O exceeding puppet! Now will he interpret to her.

Val. Madam and mistress, a thousand good morrows.

Speed. [Aside.] O! 'give ye good even: here's a million of manners.

Sil. Sir Valentine and servant, to you two thousand.

Speed. [Aside.] He should give her interest, and she gives it him.

Val. As you enjoin'd me, I have writ your letter
Unto the secret nameless friend of yours;
Which I was much unwilling to proceed in
But for my duty to your ladyship. [Gives a letter.]

Sil. I thank you, gentle servant. 'Tis very clerkly done.

Val. Now trust me, madam, it came hardly off;
For, being ignorant to whom it goes
I writ at random, very doubtfully.

Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much pains?

Val. No, madam; so it stead you, I will write,
Please you command, a thousand times as much.
And yet—

Sil. A pretty period! Well, I guess the sequel;
And yet I will not name it; and yet I care not;
And yet take this again; and yet I thank you,
Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.

Speed. [Aside.] And yet you will; and yet another 'yet.'

Val. What means your ladyship? do you not like it?

Sil. Yes, yes: the lines are very quaintly writ;
But since unwillingly, take them again.
Nay, take them. [Gives back the letter.]

Val. Madam, they are for you.

Sil. Ay, ay; you writ them, sir, at my request,
But I will none of them; they are for you.
I would have had them writ more movingly.

Val. Please you, I'll write your ladyship another.

Sil. And when it's writ, for my sake read it over;
And if it please you, so; if not, why, so.

Val. If it please me, madam, what then?

Sil. Why, if it please you, take it for your labour;
And so, good morrow, servant. Exit Silvia.

Speed. O jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible,
As a nose on a man's face, or a weathercock on a steeple!
My master sues to her, and she hath taught her suitor,
He being her pupil, to become her tutor.
O excellent device! was there ever heard a better,
That my master, being scribe, to himself should write the letter?

Val. How now, sir! what are you reasoning with yourself?

Speed. Nay, I was riming; 'tis you that have the reason.

Val. To do what?

Speed. To be a spokesman from Madam Silvia.

Val. To whom?

Speed. To yourself. Why, she wooes you by a figure.

Val. What figure?

Speed. By a letter, I should say.

Val. Why, she hath not writ to me?

28 that: so that 34 would: i.e. would perceive them 36 urinal: transparent receptacle for testing urine 44 hard-favoured: ugly 45 well-favoured: charming 49 favour: charm 55 counts of: takes account of 66 going ungartered: a convention of lovesickness 74 swinged: beat 77 set: seated

85, 86 motion ... puppet ... interpret; cf. n. 88 'give: God give 90 servant; cf. n. 96 clerkly: in a scholarly manner 101 stead: benefit 104 period: full pause 106 again: back 110 quaintly: skillfully 129 reasoning: talking of 134 by a figure: indirectly

Speed. What need she, when she hath made you write to yourself? Why, do you not perceive the jest?

Val. No, believe me.

Speed. No believing you, indeed, sir. But did you perceive her earnest?

Val. She gave me none, except an angry word.

Speed. Why, she hath given you a letter.

Val. That's the letter I writ to her friend.

Speed. And that letter hath she delivered, and there an end.

Val. I would it were no worse.

Speed. I'll warrant you, 'tis as well:
'For often have you writ to her, and she, in modesty,
Or else for want of idle time, could not again reply;
Or fearing else some messenger that might her mind discover,
Herself hath taught her love himself to write unto her lover.'
All this I speak in print, for in print I found it.
Why muse you, sir? 'Tis dinner-time.

Val. I have dined.

Speed. Ay, but hearken, sir. Though the chameleon Love can feed on the air, I am one that am nourished by my victuals, and would fain have meat. O! be not like your mistress; be moved, be moved. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Verona. A Room in Julia's House]
Enter Proteus [and] Julia; [and later,] Panthino.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia.

Jul. I must, where is no remedy.

Pro. When possibly I can, I will return.

Jul. If you turn not, you will return the sooner.
Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's sake.
[Gives him a ring.]

Pro. Why, then, we'll make exchange. Here, take you this.
[Gives her another.]

Jul. And seal the bargain with a holy kiss.

Pro. Here is my hand for my true constancy;
And when that hour o'erslips me in the day
Wherein I sigh not, Julia, for thy sake,
The next ensuing hour some foul mischance
Torment me for my love's forgetfulness!
My father stays my coming; answer not.
The tide is now,—nay, not thy tide of tears;
That tide will stay me longer than I should.
Julia, farewell. [Exit Julia.]
What! gone without a word?
Ay, so true love should do; it cannot speak;
For truth hath better deeds than words to grace it.

[Enter Panthino.]

Pant. Sir Proteus, you are stay'd for.

Pro. Go; I come, I come.
Alas! this parting strikes poor lovers dumb.
Exeunt.

Scene Third

[The Same. A Street]
Enter Launce, [leading a dog; and later enter] Panthino.

Launce. Nay, 'twill be this hour ere I have done weeping; all the kind of the Launces have this very fault. I have received my proportion, like the prodigious son, and am going with Sir Proteus to the imperial's court. I think Crab my dog be the sourest-natured dog that lives. My mother weeping, my father wailing, my sister crying, our maid howling, our cat wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexity, yet did not this cruel-hearted cur shed one tear. He is a stone, a very pebble stone, and has no more pity in him than a dog. A Jew would have wept to have seen our parting; why, my grandam, having no eyes, look you, wept herself blind at my parting. Nay, I'll show you the manner of it. This shoe is my father; no, this left shoe is my father; no, no, this left shoe is my mother; nay, that cannot be so neither; yes, it is so; it is so; it hath the worser sole. This shoe, with the hole in it, is my mother, and this my father. A vengeance on 't! there 'tis. Now, sir, this staff is my sister; for, look you, she is as white as a lily and as small as a wand. This hat is Nan, our maid. I am the dog; no, the dog is himself, and I am the dog,—O! the dog is me, and I am myself; ay, so, so. Now come I to my father: 'Father, your blessing.' Now should not the shoe speak a word for weeping. Now should I kiss my father; well, he weeps on. Now come I to my mother. O, that she could speak now like a wood woman! Well, I kiss her; why, there 'tis; here's my mother's breath up and down. Now come I to my sister; mark the moan she makes. Now the dog all this while sheds not a tear nor speaks a word; but see how I lay the dust with my tears.

[Enter Panthino.]

Pant. Launce, away, away, aboard! Thy master is shipped, and thou art to post after with oars. What's the matter? why weepest thou, man? Away, ass! you'll lose the tide if you tarry any longer.

Launce. It is no matter if the tied were lost; for it is the unkindest tied that ever any man tied.

Pant. What's the unkindest tide?

Launce. Why, he that's tied here, Crab, my dog.

Pant. Tut, man, I mean thou'lt lose the flood; and, in losing the flood, lose thy voyage, and, in losing thy voyage, lose thy master; and, in losing thy master, lose thy service; and, in losing thy service,—Why dost thou stop my mouth?

Launce. For fear thou shouldst lose thy tongue.

Pant. Where should I lose my tongue?

Launce. In thy tale.

Pant. In thy tail!

Launce. Lose the tide, and the voyage, and the master, and the service, and the tied! Why, man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears; if the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighs.

Pant. Come, come away, man; I was sent to call thee.

Launce. Sir, call me what thou darest.

Pant. Wilt thou go?

Launce. Well, I will go. Exeunt.

142, 143 earnest . . . none; cf. n. 150 again reply: reply 154 speak in print: speak precisely; cf. n. 156 dined: i.e. feasted on the sight of Silvia 4 turn: change, prove unfaithful 15 tide; cf. n. on I.i.54

2 kind: family, kindred 3 proportion, prodigious: malapropisms for 'portion' and 'prodigal' 4 imperial's: emperor's 24 wood: mad, distracted; cf. n. 25 up and down: exactly 31 tide; cf. n. on I.i.48

Scene Fourth

[Milan. A Room in the Duke's Palace]
Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, [and] Speed; [and later,] Duke [and] Proteus.

Sil. Servant!
Val. Mistress?
Speed. Master, Sir Thurio frowns on you.
Val. Ay, boy, it's for love.
Speed. Not of you.
Val. Of my mistress, then.
Speed. 'Twere good you knock'd him. [Exit.]
Sil. Servant, you are sad.
Val. Indeed, madam, I seem so.
Thu. Seem you that you are not?
Val. Haply I do.
Thu. So do counterfeits.
Val. So do you.
Thu. What seem I that I am not?
Val. Wise.
Thu. What instance of the contrary?
Val. Your folly.
Thu. And how quote you my folly?
Val. I quote it in your jerkin.
Thu. My jerkin is a doublet.
Val. Well, then, I'll double your folly.
Thu. How?
Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio! do you change colour?
Val. Give him leave, madam; he is a kind of chameleon.
Thu. That hath more mind to feed on your blood than live in your air.
Val. You have said, sir.
Thu. Ay, sir, and done too, for this time.
Val. I know it well, sir: you always end ere you begin.
Sil. A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and quickly shot off.
Val. 'Tis indeed, madam; we thank the giver.
Sil. Who is that, servant?
Val. Yourself, sweet lady; for you gave the fire. Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your ladyship's looks, and spends what he borrows kindly in your company.
Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt.
Val. I know it well, sir; you have an ex-chequer of words, and, I think, no other treasure to give your followers; for it appears by their bare liveries that they live by your bare words.
Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more. Here comes my father.

[Enter Duke.]

Duke. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard beset.
Sir Valentine, your father's in good health:
What say you to a letter from your friends
Of much good news?
Val. My Lord, I will be thankful
To any happy messenger from thence.
Duke. Know ye Don Antonio, your countryman?
Val. Ay, my good lord; I know the gentleman
To be of worth and worthy estimation,
And not without desert so well reputed.
Duke. Hath he not a son?
Val. Ay, my good lord; a son that well deserves
The honour and regard of such a father.
Duke. You know him well?
Val. I know him as myself; for from our infancy
We have convers'd and spent our hours together;
And though myself have been an idle truant,
Omitting the sweet benefit of time
To clothe mine age with angel-like perfection,
Yet hath Sir Proteus,—for that's his name,—
Made use and fair advantage of his days;
His years but young, but his experience old;
His head unmellow'd, but his judgment ripe;
And, in a word,—for far behind his worth
Come all the praises that I now bestow,—
He is complete in feature and in mind
With all good grace to grace a gentleman.
Duke. Beshrew me, sir, but if he make this good,
He is as worthy for an empress' love
As meet to be an emperor's counsellor.
Well, sir, this gentleman is come to me
With commendation from great potentates;
And here he means to spend his time awhile.
I think, 'tis no unwelcome news to you.
Val. Should I have wish'd a thing, it had been he.
Duke. Welcome him then according to his worth.
Silvia, I speak to you; and you, Sir Thurio;
For Valentine, I need not cite him to it.
I;ll send him hither to you presently. [Exit.]
Val. This is the gentleman I told your ladyship
Had come along with me, but that his mistress
Did hold his eyes lock'd in her crystal looks.
Sil. Belike that now she hath enfranchis'd them
Upon some other pawn for fealty.
Val. Nay, sure, I think she holds them prisoners still.
Sil. Nay, then he should be blind; and, being blind,
How could he see his way to seek out you?
Val. Why, lady, Love hath twenty pair of eyes.
Thu. They say that Love hath not an eye at all.
Val. To see such lovers, Thurio, as yourself.
Upon a homely object Love can wink.
Sil. Have done, have done. Here comes the gentleman.
[Exit Thurio.]

[Enter Proteus.]

Val. Welcome, dear Proteus! Mistress, I beseech you,
Confirm his welcome with some special favour.
Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither,
If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from.
Val. Mistress, it is. Sweet lady, entertain him
To be my fellow-servant to your ladyship.
Sil. Too low a mistress for so high a servant.
Pro. Not so, sweet lady; but too mean a servant
To have a look of such a worthy mistress.
Val. Leave off discourse of disability.
Sweet lady, entertain him for your servant.

18 quote: observe; cf. n. 20 jerkin, doublet; cf. n. 26 live ... air; cf. n. 48 happy messenger: bearer of good news
58 convers'd: been companions 60 Omitting: disregarding 65 unmellow'd: untinged with grey 68 feature: outward form 80 cite: urge 84 lock'd ... looks; cf. n. 85 Belike: 'tis likely enfranchis'd: released from confinement 100 entertain: take into service

Pro. My duty will I boast of, nothing else.
Sil. And duty never yet did want his meed.
Servant, you are welcome to a worthless mistress.
Pro. I'll die on him that says so but yourself.
Sil. That you are welcome?
Pro. That you are worthless.

[Enter Thurio.]

Thu. Madam, my lord your father would speak with you.
Sil. I wait upon his pleasure. Come, Sir Thurio,
Go with me. Once more, new servant, welcome.
I'll leave you to confer of home-affairs;
When you have done, we look to hear from you.
Pro. We'll both attend upon your ladyship.
[Exeunt Silvia and Thurio.]
Val. Now, tell me, how do all from whence you came?
Pro. Your friends are well and have them much commended.
Val. And how do yours?
Pro. I left them all in health.
Val. How does your lady, and how thrives your love?
Pro. My tales of love were wont to weary you;
I know you joy not in a love-discourse.
Val. Ay, Proteus, but that life is alter'd now.
I have done penance for contemning love;
Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd me
With bitter fasts, with penitential groans,
With nightly tears and daily heart-sore sighs;
For, in revenge of my contempt of love,
Love hath chas'd sleep from my enthralled eyes,
And made them watchers of mine own heart's sorrow.
O, gentle Proteus! Love's a mighty lord,
And hath so humbled me as I confess
There is no woe to his correction,
Nor to his service no such joy on earth.
Now no discourse, except it be of love;
Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep,
Upon the very naked name of love.
Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye.
Was this the idol that you worship so?
Val. Even she; and is she not a heavenly saint?
Pro. No; but she is an earthly paragon.
Val. Call her divine.
Pro. I will not flatter her.
Val. O! flatter me, for love delights in praises.
Pro. When I was sick, you gave me bitter pills,
And I must minister the like to you.
Val. Then speak the truth by her; if not divine,
Yet let her be a principality,
Sovereign to all the creatures on the earth
Pro. Except my mistress.
Val. Sweet, except not any,
Except thou wilt except against my love.
Pro. Have I not reason to prefer mine own?
Val. And I will help thee to prefer her too.
She shall be dignified with this high honour,—
To bear my lady's train, lest the base earth
Should from her vesture chance to steal a kiss,
And, of so great a favour growing proud,
Disdain to root the summer-swelling flower,
And make rough winter everlastingly.
Pro. Why, Valentine, what braggardism is this?
Val. Pardon me, Proteus; all I can is nothing
To her whose worth makes other worthies nothing.
She is alone.
Pro. Then, let her alone.
Val. Not for the world. Why, man, she is mine own,
And I as rich in having such a jewel
As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl,
The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold.
Forgive me that I do not dream on thee,
Because thou see'st me dote upon my love.
My foolish rival, that her father likes
Only for his possessions are so huge,
Is gone with her along, and I must after,
For love, thou know'st, is full of jealousy.
Pro. But she loves you?
Val. Ay, and we are betroth'd; nay, more, our marriage-hour,
With all the cunning manner of our flight,
Determin'd of: how I must climb her window,
The ladder made of cords, and all the means
Plotted and 'greed on for my happiness.
Good Proteus, go with me to my chamber,
In these affairs to aid me with thy counsel.
Pro. Go on before; I shall inquire you forth.
I must unto the road, to disembark
Some necessaries that I needs must use,
And then I'll presently attend you.
Val. Will you make haste?
Pro. I will. Exit [Valentine].
Even as one heat another heat expels,
Or as one nail by strength drives out another,
So the remembrance of my former love
Is by a newer object quite forgotten.
Is it mine [eye], or Valentinus' praise,
Her true perfection, or my false transgression,
That makes me reasonless to reason thus?
She's fair; and so is Julia that I love,—
That I did love, for now my love is thaw'd,
Which, like a waxen image 'gainst a fire,
Bears no impression of the thing it was.
Methinks my zeal to Valentine is cold,
And that I love him not as I was wont.
O! but I love his lady too-too much;
And that's the reason I love him so little.
How shall I dote on her with more advice,
That thus without advice begin to love her?
'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld,
And that hath dazzled my reason's light;
But when I look on her perfections,
There is no reason but I shall be blind.
If I can check my erring love, I will;
If not, to compass her I'll use my skill. [Exit.]

108 meed: reward 110 die on: die in fight with 120, 121 them much commended: sent kind remembrances 137 to: comparable to 152 principality; cf. n. 156 except against: object to 158 prefer: advance in station

168 alone: peerless 177 for: because 189 forth: out 190 road: anchorage; cf. n. on I.i.55 195 Even . . . expels; cf. n. 210 advice: deliberation 212 picture: i.e. outer form 215 no reason but: no doubt that 217 compass: obtain

Scene Fifth

[The Same. A Street]
Enter Speed and Launce [severally].

Speed. Launce! by mine honesty, welcome to Milan!

Launce. Forswear not thyself, sweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this always that a man is never undone till he be hanged; nor never welcome to a place till some certain shot be paid and the hostess say, 'Welcome!'

Speed. Come on, you madcap, I'll to the alehouse with you presently; where, for one shot of five pence, thou shalt have five thousand welcomes. But, sirrah, how did thy master part with Madam Julia?

Launce. Marry, after they closed in earnest, they parted very fairly in jest.

Speed. But shall she marry him?

Launce. No.

Speed. How then? Shall he marry her?

Launce. No, neither.

Speed. What, are they broken?

Launce. No, they are both as whole as a fish.

Speed. Why then, how stands the matter with them?

Launce. Marry, thus: when it stands well with him, it stands well with her.

Speed. What an ass art thou! I understand thee not.

Launce. What a block art thou, that thou canst not! My staff understands me.

Speed. What thou sayest?

Launce. Ay, and what I do too. Look thee, I'll but lean, and my staff understands me.

Speed. It stands under thee, indeed.

Launce. Why, stand-under and under-stand is all one.

Speed. But tell me true, will 't be a match?

Launce. Ask my dog. If he say ay, it will; if he say no, it will; if he shakes his tail and say nothing, it will.

Speed. The conclusion is, then, that it will.

Launce. Thou shalt never get such a secret from me but by a parable.

Speed. 'Tis well that I get it so. But, Launce, how sayest thou, that my master is become a notable lover?

Launce. I never knew him otherwise.

Speed. Than how?

Launce. A notable lubber, as thou reportest him to be.

Speed. Why, thou whoreson ass, thou mistakest me.

Launce. Why, fool, I meant not thee; I meant thy master.

Speed. I tell thee, my master is become a hot lover.

Launce. Why, I tell thee, I care not though he burn himself in love. If thou wilt, go with me to the alehouse; if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Jew, and not worth the name of a Christian.

Speed. Why?

Launce. Because thou hast not so much charity in thee as to go to the ale with a Christian. Wilt thou go?

Speed. At thy service.

Exeunt.

4 shot: tavern-reckoning 10 closed: came to terms, or (possibly) embraced 35, 36 how sayest thou: what have you to say to this 44-46 go . . . Christian; cf. n.

Scene Sixth

[The Same. A Room in the Duke's Palace]
Enter Proteus solus.

Pro. To leave my Julia, shall I be forsworn;
To love fair Silvia, shall I be forsworn;
To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworn;
And even that power which gave me first my oath
Provokes me to this threefold perjury.
Love bade me swear, and Love bids me forswear.
O sweet-suggesting Love! if thou hast sinn'd,
Teach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it.
At first I did adore a twinkling star,
But now I worship a celestial sun.
Unheedful vows may heedfully be broken;
And he wants wit that wants resolved will
To learn his wit to exchange the bad for better.
Fie, fie, unreverend tongue! to call her bad,
Whose sovereignty so oft thou hast preferr'd
With twenty thousand soul-confirming oaths.
I cannot leave to love, and yet I do;
But there I leave to love where I should love.
Julia I lose and Valentine I lose.
If I keep them, I needs must lose myself;
If I lose them, thus find I by their loss,
For Valentine, myself; for Julia, Silvia.
I to myself am dearer than a friend,
For love is still most precious in itself;
And Silvia—witness heaven that made her fair!—
Shows Julia but a swarthy Ethiope.
I will forget that Julia is alive,
Remembering that my love to her is dead;
And Valentine I'll hold an enemy,
Aiming at Silvia as a sweeter friend.
I cannot now prove constant to myself
Without some treachery us'd to Valentine.
This night he meaneth with a corded ladder
To climb celestial Silvia's chamber-window,
Myself in counsel, his competitor.
Now presently, I'll give her father notice
Of their disguising and pretended flight;
Who, all enrag'd, will banish Valentine;
For Thurio, he intends, shall wed his daughter;
But, Valentine being gone, I'll quickly cross
By some sly trick blunt Thurio's dull proceeding.
Love, lend me wings to make my purpose swift,
As thou hast lent me wit to plot this drift! Exit.

Scene Seventh

[Verona. A Room in Julia's House]
Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. Counsel, Lucetta; gentle girl, assist me;
And e'en in kind love I do conjure thee,
Who art the table wherein all my thoughts

7 sweet-suggesting: sweetly seductive 13 learn: teach 17 leave: cease 35 competitor: associate, confidant 37 pretended: intended 41 blunt: stupid 43 drift: scheme 3 table: tablet for memoranda

Are visibly character'd and engrav'd,
To lesson me and tell me some good mean
How, with my honour, I may undertake
A journey to my loving Proteus.
Luc. Alas! the way is wearisome and long.
Jul. A true-devoted pilgrim is not weary
To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps;
Much less shall she that hath Love's wings to fly,
And when the flight is made to one so dear,
Of such divine perfection, as Sir Proteus.
Luc. Better forbear till Proteus make return.
Jul. O! know'st thou not his looks are my soul's food?
Pity the dearth that I have pined in,
By longing for that food so long a time.
Didst thou but know the inly touch of love,
Thou wouldst as soon go kindle fire with snow
As seek to quench the fire of love with words.
Luc. I do not seek to quench your love's hot fire,
But qualify the fire's extreme rage,
Lest it should burn above the bounds of reason.
Jul. The more thou damm'st it up, the more it burns.
The current that with gentle murmur glides,
Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently doth rage;
But when his fair course is not hindered,
He makes sweet music with th' enamell'd stones,
Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage;
And so by many winding nooks he strays
With willing sport, to the wild ocean.
Then let me go and hinder not my course.
I'll be as patient as a gentle stream
And make a pastime of each weary step,
Till the last step have brought me to my love;
And there I'll rest, as after much turmoil
A blessed soul doth in Elysium.
Luc. But in what habit will you go along?
Jul. Not like a woman; for I would prevent
The loose encounters of lascivious men.
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds
As may beseem some well-reputed page.
Luc. Why, then, your ladyship must cut your hair.
Jul. No, girl; I'll knit it up in silken strings
With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots.
To be fantastic may become a youth
Of greater time than I shall show to be.
Luc. What fashion, madam, shall I make your breeches?
Jul. That fits as well as 'Tell me, good my lord,
What compass will you wear your farthingale?'
Why, even what fashion thou best lik'st, Lucetta.
Luc. You must needs have them with a cod-piece, madam.
Jul. Out, out, Lucetta! that will be ill-favour'd.
Luc. A round hose, madam, now's not worth a pin,
Unless you have a cod-piece to stick pins on.
Jul. Lucetta, as thou lov'st me, let me have
What thou think'st meet and is most mannerly,
But tell me, wench, how will the world repute me
For undertaking so unstaid a journey?

4 character'd: inscribed 18 inly: inward 41 encounters: accostings 47 fantastic: fanciful, capricious 48 time: years 51 farthingale: hooped petticoat 53 cod-piece; cf. n. 54 ill-favour'd: ill-looking 55 round hose; cf. n. 60 unstaid: unbecoming

I fear me, it will make me scandaliz'd.
Luc. If you think so, then stay at home and go not.
Jul. Nay, that I will not.
Luc. Then never dream on infamy, but go.
If Proteus like your journey when you come,
No matter who's displeas'd when you are gone.
I fear me, he will scarce be pleas'd withal.
Jul. That is the least, Lucetta, of my fear.
A thousand oaths, an ocean of his tears,
And instances of infinite of love
Warrant me welcome to my Proteus.
Luc. All these are servants to deceitful men.
Jul. Base men, that use them to so base effect;
But truer stars did govern Proteus' birth;
His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles,
His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate,
His tears pure messengers sent from his heart,
His heart as far from fraud as heaven from earth.
Luc. Pray heaven he prove so when you come to him!
Jul. Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that wrong
To bear a hard opinion of his truth.
Only deserve my love by loving him,
And presently go with me to my chamber,
To take a note of what I stand in need of
To furnish me upon my longing journey.
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,
My goods, my lands, my reputation;
Only, in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence.
Come, answer not, but to it presently!
I am impatient of my tarriance. Exeunt.

Act Third ❧ Scene First

[Milan. An anteroom in the Duke's Palace]
Enter Duke, Thurio, [and] Proteus; [and later,] Valentine, Launce, [and] Speed.

Duke. Sir Thurio, give us leave, I pray, awhile;
We have some secrets to confer about. [Exit Thurio.]
Now tell me Proteus, what's your will with me?
Pro. My gracious lord, that which I would discover
The law of friendship bids me to conceal;
But when I call to mind your gracious favours
Done to me, undeserving as I am,
My duty pricks me on to utter that
Which else no worldly good should draw from me.
Know, worthy prince, Sir Valentine, my friend,
This night intends to steal away your daughter.
Myself am one made privy to the plot.
I know you have determin'd to bestow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates;
And should she thus be stol'n away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age.
Thus, for my duty's sake, I rather chose
To cross my friend in his intended drift,
Than, by concealing it, heap on your head

61 scandaliz'd: disgraced, subject to scandal 67 withal: with it 70 infinite: infinity 85 longing: prompted by longing 86 dispose: disposal 90 tarriance: delay 1 give . . . leave: polite form of dismissal 4 discover: disclose 18 drift: scheme

A pack of sorrows which would press you down,
Being unprevented, to your timeless grave.
Duke. Proteus, I thank thee for thine honest care,
Which to requite, command me while I live.
This love of theirs myself have often seen,
Haply when they have judg'd me fast asleep,
And oftentimes have purpos'd to forbid
Sir Valentine her company and my court;
But fearing lest my jealous aim might err
And so unworthily disgrace the man,—
A rashness that I ever yet have shunn'd,—
I gave him gentle looks, thereby to find
That which thyself hast now disclos'd to me.
And, that thou mayst perceive my fear of this,
Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested,
I nightly lodge her in an upper tower,
The key whereof myself have ever kept;
And thence she cannot be convey'd away.
Pro. Know, noble lord, they have devis'd a mean
How he her chamber-window will ascend
And with a corded ladder fetch her down;
For which the youthful lover now is gone
And this way comes he with it presently;
Where, if it please you, you may intercept him.
But, good my lord, do it so cunningly
That my discovery be not aimed at;
For love of you, not hate unto my friend,
Hath made me publisher of this pretence.
Duke. Upon mine honour, he shall never know
That I had any light from thee of this.
Pro. Adieu, my lord; Sir Valentine is coming. [Exit.

[Enter Valentine.]

Duke. Sir Valentine, whither away so fast?
Val. Please it your Grace, there is a messenger
That stays to bear my letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.
Duke. Be they of much import?
Val. The tenour of them doth but signify
My health and happy being at your court.
Duke. Nay then, no matter; stay with me awhile;
I am to break with thee of some affairs
That touch me near, wherein thou must be secret.
'Tis not unknown to thee that I have sought
To match my friend Sir Thurio to my daughter.
Val. I know it well, my lord; and sure, the match
Were rich and honourable; besides, the gentleman
Is full of virtue, bounty, worth, and qualities
Beseeming such a wife as your fair daughter.
Cannot your Grace win her to fancy him?
Duke. No, trust me; she is peevish, sullen, froward,
Proud, disobedient, stubborn, lacking duty;
Neither regarding that she is my child,
Nor fearing me as if I were her father;
And, may I say to thee, this pride of hers,
Upon advice, hath drawn my love from her;
And, where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should have been cherish'd by her childlike duty,
I now am full resolv'd to take a wife
And turn her out to who will take her in.
Then let her beauty be her wedding-dower;
For me and my possessions she esteems not.
Val. What would your Grace have me to do in this?
Duke. There is a lady of Verona here,
Whom I affect; but she is nice and coy
And nought esteems my aged eloquence.
Now therefore, would I have thee to my tutor,—
For long agone I have forgot to court;
Besides, the fashion of the time is chang'd,—
How and which way I may bestow myself
To be regarded in her sun-bright eye.
Val. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words.
Dumb jewels often in their silent kind
More than quick words do move a woman's mind.
Duke. But she did scorn a present that I sent her.
Val. A woman sometime scorns what best contents her.
Send her another; never give her o'er,
For scorn at first makes after-love the more.
If she do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more love in you;
If she do chide, 'tis not to have you gone;
For why the fools are mad if left alone.
Take no repulse, whatever she doth say;
For 'get you gone,' she doth not mean 'away!'
Flatter and praise, commend, extol their graces;
Though ne'er so black, say they have angels' faces.
That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.
Duke. But she I mean is promis'd by her friends
Unto a youthful gentleman of worth,
And kept severely from resort of men,
That no man hath access by day to her.
Val. Why then, I would resort to her by night.
Duke. Ay, but the doors be lock'd and keys kept safe,
That no man hath recourse to her by night.
Val. What lets but one may enter at her window?
Duke. Her chamber is aloft, far from the ground,
And built so shelving that one cannot climb it
Without apparent hazard of his life.
Val. Why then, a ladder quaintly made of cords,
To cast up, with a pair of anchoring hooks,
Would serve to scale another Hero's tower,
So bold Leander would adventure it.
Duke. Now, as thou art a gentleman of blood,
Advise me where I may have such a ladder.
Val. When would you use it? Pray, sir, tell me that.
Duke. This very night; for Love is like a child,
That longs for everything that he can come by.
Val. By seven o'clock I'll get you such a ladder.
Duke. But hark thee; I will go to her alone.
How shall I best convey the ladder thither?
Val. It will be light, my lord, that you may bear it
Under a cloak that is of any length.

21 timeless: untimely 28 aim: conjecture 34 suggested: led astray 45 discovery: disclosure aimed at: guessed 47 pretence: intention 59 break with thee of: disclose to thee 67 fancy: love 73 advice: deliberation 74 where: whereas

82 nice: fastidious 85 forgot: forgotten how 87 bestow: conduct 89 respect: heed 90 kind: nature 99 For why: because 101 When she says 'away!' she does not mean 'get you gone!' 103 black: dark-complexioned 109, 112 That: so that 113 lets: hinders 116 apparent: obvious 117 quaintly: skilfully 119, 120 Hero's . . . Leander; cf. n. on I.i.22 120 So: provided that 121 blood: good parentage 130 of any length: tolerably long

Duke. A cloak as long as thine will serve the turn?
Val. Ay, my good lord.
Duke. Then let me see thy cloak;
I'll get me one of such another length.
Val. Why, any cloak will serve the turn, my lord.
Duke. How shall I fashion me to wear a cloak?
I pray thee, let me feel thy cloak upon me.
[Pulls open Valentine's cloak.]
What letter is this same? What's here?—To Silvia!
And here an engine fit for my proceeding!
I'll be so bold to break the seal for once. [Reads.]
'My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly;
And slaves they are to me that send them flying.
O! could their master come and go as lightly,
Himself would lodge where senseless they are lying!
My herald thoughts in thy pure bosom rest them;
While I, their king, that thither them importune,
Do curse the grace that with such grace hath bless'd them,
Because myself do want my servants' fortune.
I curse myself, for they are sent by me,
That they should harbour where their lord would be.'
What's here?
'Silvia, this night I will enfranchise thee.'
'Tis so; and here's the ladder for the purpose.
Why, Phaethon,—for thou art Merops' son,—
Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car
And with thy daring folly burn the world?
Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine on thee?
Go, base intruder! overweening slave!
Bestow thy fawning smiles on equal mates,
And think my patience, more than thy desert,
Is privilege for thy departure hence.
Thank me for this more than for all the favours
Which all too much I have bestow'd on thee.
But if thou linger in my territories
Longer than swiftest expedition
Will give thee time to leave our royal court,
By heaven! my wrath shall far exceed the love
I ever bore my daughter or thyself.
Be gone! I will not hear thy vain excuse;
But, as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from hence. [Exit.]
Val. And why not death rather than living torment?
To die is to be banish'd from myself;
And Silvia is myself. Banish'd from her
Is self from self,—a deadly banishment!
What light is light, if Silvia be not seen?
What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by?
Unless it be to think that she is by
And feed upon the shadow of perfection.
Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no music in the nightingale;
Unless I look on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to look upon.
She is my essence; and I leave to be,
If I be not by her fair influence
Foster'd, illumin'd, cherish'd, kept alive.

131 turn: occasion 134 such another: the same 139 engine: contrivance (the rope ladder) 141 harbour: lodge 143 lightly: easily 144 senseless: insensible 145 herald: bearing messages 146 importune: command 147 grace ... grace; cf. n. 154 Phaethon ... Merops' son; cf. n. 161 Is privilege for: grants the privilege of 178 shadow: illusion 184 influence; cf. n.

I fly not death, to fly his deadly doom.
Tarry I here, I but attend on death;
But, fly I hence, I fly away from life.

[Enter Proteus and Launce.]

Pro. Run, boy; run, run, and seek him out.
Launce. Soho! soho!
Pro. What seest thou?
Launce. Him we go to find. There's not a hair on's head but 'tis a Valentine.
Pro. Valentine?
Val. No.
Pro. Who then? His spirit?
Val. Neither.
Pro. What then?
Val. Nothing.
Launce. Can nothing speak? Master, shall I strike?
Pro. Who would'st thou strike?
Launce. Nothing.
Pro. Villain, forbear.
Launce. Why, sir, I'll strike nothing. I pray you,—
Pro. Sirrah, I say, forbear.—Friend Valentine, a word.
Val. My ears are stopp'd and cannot hear good news,
So much of bad already hath possess'd them.
Pro. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine,
For they are harsh, untuneable and bad.
Val. Is Silvia dead?
Pro. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Silvia!
Hath she forsworn me?
Pro. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn me!
What is your news?
Launce. Sir, there is a proclamation that you are vanished.
Pro. That thou art banished, O, that's the news,
From hence, from Silvia, and from me thy friend.
Val. O, I have fed upon this woe already,
And now excess of it will make me surfeit.
Doth Silvia know that I am banished?
Pro. Ay, ay; and she hath offer'd to the doom—
Which, unrevers'd, stands in effectual force—
A sea of melting pearl, which some call tears.
Those at her father's churlish feet she tender'd;
With them, upon her knees, her humble self;
Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became them
As if but now they waxed pale for woe.
But neither bended knees, pure hands held up,
Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding tears,
Could penetrate her uncompassionate sire;
But Valentine, if he be ta'en, must die.
Besides, her intercession chaf'd him so,
When she for thy repeal was suppliant,
That to close prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of biding there.
Val. No more; unless the next word that thou speak'st
Have some malignant power upon my life.
If so, I pray thee, breathe it in mine ear,
As ending anthem of my endless dolour.

186 I ... doom; cf. n. 187 attend on: wait for 190 Soho; cf. n. 193, 194 Valentine. Valentine? cf. n. 235 repeal: recall 241 anthem: song of grief

Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not help,
And study help for that which thou lament'st.
Time is the nurse and breeder of all good.
Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love;
Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life.
Hope is a lover's staff; walk hence with that
And manage it against despairing thoughts.
Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence;
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd
Even in the milk-white bosom of thy love.
The time now serves not to expostulate.
Come, I'll convey thee through the city-gate,
And, ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concern thy love-affairs.
As thou lov'st Silvia, though not for thyself,
Regard thy danger, and along with me!

Val. I pray thee, Launce, and if thou seest my boy,
Bid him make haste and meet me at the North-gate.

Pro. Go, sirrah, find him out. Come, Valentine.

Val. O my dear Silvia! hapless Valentine!

[Exeunt Valentine and Proteus.]

Launce. I am but a fool, look you; and yet I have the wit to think my master is a kind of a knave; but that's all one, if he be but one knave. He lives not now that knows me to be in love; yet I am in love; but a team of horse shall not pluck that from me, nor who 'tis I love; and yet 'tis a woman; but what woman, I will not tell myself; and yet 'tis a milkmaid; yet 'tis not a maid, for she hath had gossips; yet 'tis a maid, for she is her master's maid, and serves for wages. She hath more qualities than a water-spaniel,—which is much in a bare Christian. [Pulling out a paper.] Here is the catalog of her condition. 'Imprimis: She can fetch and carry.' Why, a horse can do no more; nay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry; therefore, is she better than a jade. 'Item: She can milk'; look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

[Enter Speed.]

Speed. How now, Signior Launce! what news with your mastership?

Launce. With my master's ship? why, it is at sea.

Speed. Well, your old vice still: mistake the word. What news, then, in your paper?

Launce. The blackest news that ever thou heardest.

Speed. Why, man, how black?

Launce. Why, as black as ink.

Speed. Let me read them.

Launce. Fie on thee, jolthead! thou canst not read.

Speed. Thou liest; I can.

Launce. I will try thee. Tell me this: who begot thee?

Speed. Marry, the son of my grandfather.

Launce. O, illiterate loiterer! it was the son of thy grandmother. This proves that thou canst not read.

Speed. Come, fool, come; try me in thy paper.

Launce. There; and Saint Nicholas be thy speed!

Speed. [Reads.] 'Imprimis: She can milk.'

Launce. Ay, that she can.

Speed. 'Item: She brews good ale.'

Launce. And thereof comes the proverb, 'Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale.'

Speed. 'Item: She can sew.'

Launce. That's as much as to say, 'Can she so?'

Speed. 'Item: She can knit.'

Launce. What need a man care for a stock with a wench, when she can knit him a stock?

Speed. 'Item: She can wash and scour.'

Launce. A special virtue; for then she need not be washed and scoured.

Speed. 'Item: She can spin.'

Launce. Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.

Speed. 'Item: She hath many nameless virtues.'

Launce. That's as much as to say, bastard virtues; that, indeed, know not their fathers, and therefore have no names.

Speed. Here follow her vices.

Launce. Close at the heels of her virtues.

Speed. 'Item: She is not be to [kissed] fasting, in respect of her breath.'

Launce. Well, that fault may be mended with a breakfast. Read on.

Speed. 'Item: She hath a sweet mouth.'

Launce. That makes amends for her sour breath.

Speed. 'Item: She doth talk in her sleep.'

Launce. It's no matter for that, so she sleep not in her talk.

Speed. 'Item: She is slow in words.'

Launce. O villain, that set this down among her vices! To be slow in words is a woman's only virtue. I pray thee, out with 't, and place it for her chief virtue.

Speed. 'Item: She is proud.'

Launce. Out with that too; it was Eve's legacy, and cannot be ta'en from her.

Speed. 'Item: She hath no teeth.'

Launce. I care not for that neither, because I love crusts.

Speed. 'Item: She is curst.'

Launce. Well, the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.

Speed. 'Item: She will often praise her liquor.'

Launce. If her liquor be good, she shall; if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.

Speed. 'Item: She is too liberal.'

Launce. Of her tongue she cannot, for that's writ down she is slow of; of her purse she shall not, for that I'll keep shut. Now, of another thing she may, and that cannot I help. Well, proceed.

Speed. 'Item: She hath more hair than wit, and more faults than hairs, and more wealth than faults.'

Launce. Stop there; I'll have her. She was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that last article. Rehearse that once more.

Speed. 'Item: She hath more hair than wit,'

Launce. More hair than wit it may be; I'll prove it. The cover of the salt hides the salt, and therefore it is more than the salt; the hair that covers the wit is more than the wit, for the greater hides the less. What's next?

Speed. 'And more faults than hairs,'—

248 manage: wield 252 expostulate: discuss 256 though: even though 263, 264 that's . . . knave; cf. n. 265 horse: horses 268 gossips: sponsors for a child of hers 270 water-spaniel; cf. n. bare: mere 272 condition: characteristics Imprimis: in the first place 274 jade; cf. n. 285 jolthead: blockhead 289 loiterer: idler 292 Saint Nicholas: patron saint of scholars

301 stock: dowry 302 stock: stocking 307 set . . . wheels: live at ease 309 nameless: inexpressible 318 sweet mouth: sweet tooth 327 Eve's legacy; cf. n. 331 curst: shrewish 333 praise: appraise 336 liberal: bold, wanton 341 more . . . wit: a proverbial expression

Launce. That's monstrous! O, that that were out!
Speed. 'And more wealth than faults.'
Launce. Why, that word makes the faults gracious. Well, I'll have her; and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible,—
Speed. What then?
Launce. Why, then will I tell thee,—that thy master stays for thee at the North-gate.
Speed. For me?
Launce. For thee! ay; who are thou? He hath stayed for a better man than thee.
Speed. And must I go to him?
Launce. Thou must run to him, for thou hast stayed so long that going will scarce serve the turn.
Speed. Why didst not tell me sooner? Pox of your love-letters! [Exit.]
Launce. Now will he be swing'd for reading my letter. An unmannerly slave, that will thrust himself into secrets. I'll after, to rejoice in the boy's correction. [Exit.]

Scene Second

[The Same. A Room in the Duke's Palace]
Enter Duke [and] Thurio; [and later,] Proteus.

Duke. Sir Thurio, fear not but that she will love you,
Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.
Thu. Since his exile she hath despis'd me most,
Forsworn my company and rail'd at me,
That I am desperate of obtaining her.
Duke. This weak impress of love is as a figure
Trenched in ice, which with an hour's heat
Dissolves to water and doth lose his form.
A little time will melt her frozen thoughts,
And worthless Valentine shall be forgot.

[Enter Proteus.]

How now, Sir Proteus! Is your countryman
According to our proclamation gone?
Pro. Gone, my good lord.
Duke. My daughter takes his going grievously.
Pro. A little time, my lord, will kill that grief.
Duke. So I believe; but Thurio thinks not so.
Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee,—
For thou hast shown some sign of good desert,—
Makes me the better to confer with thee.
Pro. Longer than I prove loyal to your Grace
Let me not live to look upon your Grace.
Duke. Thou know'st how willingly I would effect
The match between Sir Thurio and my daughter.
Pro. I do, my lord.
Duke. And also, I think, thou are not ignorant
How she opposes her against my will.
Pro. She did, my lord, when Valentine was here.
Duke. Ay, and perversely she persevers so.
What might we do to make the girl forget
The love of Valentine, and love Sir Thurio?
Pro. The best way is to slander Valentine
With falsehood, cowardice, and poor descent,
Three things that women highly hold in hate.
Duke. Ay, but she'll think that it is spoke in hate.
Pro. Ay, if his enemy deliver it;
Therefore it must with circumstance be spoken
By one whom she esteemeth as his friend.
Duke. Then you must undertake to slander him.
Pro. And that, my lord, I shall be loath to do:
'Tis an ill office for a gentleman,
Especially against his very friend.
Duke. Where your good word cannot advantage him,
Your slander never can endamage him;
Therefore the office is indifferent,
Being entreated to it by your friend.
Pro. You have prevail'd, my lord. If I can do it,
By aught that I can speak in his dispraise,
She shall not long continue love to him.
But say this weed her love from Valentine,
It follows not that she will love Sir Thurio.
Thu. Therefore, as you unwind her love from him,
Lest it should ravel and be good to none,
You must provide to bottom it on me;
Which must be done by praising me as much
As you in worth dispraise Sir Valentine.
Duke. And, Proteus, we dare trust you in this kind,
Because we know, on Valentine's report,
You are already Love's firm votary
And cannot soon revolt and change your mind.
Upon this warrant shall you have access
Where you with Silvia may confer at large;
For she is lumpish, heavy, melancholy,
And, for your friend's sake, will be glad of you;
Where you may temper her, by your persuasion
To hate young Valentine and love my friend.
Pro. As much as I can do I will effect.
But you, Sir Thurio, are not sharp enough;
You must lay lime to tangle her desires
By wailful sonnets, whose composed rimes
Should be full-fraught with serviceable vows.
Duke. Ay,
Much is the force of heaven-bred poesy.
Pro. Say that upon the altar of her beauty
You sacrifice your tears, your sighs, your heart.
Write till your ink be dry, and with your tears
Moist it again, and frame some feeling line
That may discover such integrity;
For Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews,
Whose golden touch could soften steel and stones,
Make tigers tame and huge leviathans
Forsake unsounded deeps to dance on sands.
After your dire-lamenting elegies,
Visit by night your lady's chamber-window
With some sweet consort; to their instruments
Tune a deploring dump; the night's dead silence
Will well become such sweet-complaining grievance.
This, or else nothing, will inherit her.
Duke. This discipline shows thou hast been in love.

354 gracious: acceptable 369 correction: punishment 5 desperate: without hope 7 Trenched: cut 14 grievously: sorrowfully 17 conceit: opinion

36 circumstance: much detail 41 very: true 44 indifferent: neither good nor bad 45 your friend: i.e. the Duke 52 ravel: become entangled 53 bottom it; cf. n. 62 lumpish: spiritless 64 temper: mould 68 lime: bird lime tangle: ensnare 70 serviceable: devoted 77 discover such integrity: disclose such true devotion 78 sinews: nerves 84 consort: company of musicians 85 dump: mournful melody 86 grievance: grieving 87 inherit: obtain 88 discipline: instruction

Thu. And thy advice this night I'll put in practice.
Therefore, sweet Proteus, my direction-giver,
Let us into the city presently
To sort some gentlemen well skill'd in music.
I have a sonnet that will serve the turn
To give the onset to thy good advice.
Duke. About it, gentlemen!
Pro. We'll wait upon your grace till after supper,
And afterward determine our proceedings.
Duke. Even now about it! I will pardon you. Exeunt.

Act Fourth

Scene First

[A forest between Milan and Verona]
Enter Valentine, Speed, and [at another door] certain Outlaws.

1. Out. Fellows, stand fast; I see a passenger.
2. Out. If there be ten, shrink not, but down with 'em.
3. Out. Stand, sir, and throw us that you have about ye.
If not, we'll make you sit and rifle you.
Speed. Sir, we are undone; these are the villains
That all the travellers do fear so much.
Val. My friends,—
1. Out. That's not so, sir; we are your enemies.
2. Out. Peace! we'll hear him.
3. Out. Ay, by my beard, will we, for he is a proper man.
Val. Then know, that I have little wealth to lose.
A man I am cross'd with adversity;
My riches are these poor habiliments,
Of which if you should here disfurnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I have.
2. Out. Whither travel you?
Val. To Verona.
1. Out. Whence came you?
Val. From Milan.
3. Out. Have you long sojourn'd there?
Val. Some sixteen months; and longer might have stay'd,
If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.
2. Out. What! were you banish'd thence?
Val. I was.
2. Out. For what offence?
Val. For that which now torments me to rehearse.
I kill'd a man, whose death I much repent;
But yet I slew him manfully, in fight,
Without false vantage or base treachery.
1. Out. Why, ne'er repent it, if it were done so.
But were you banish'd for so small a fault?
Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doom.
2. Out. Have you the tongues?
Val. My youthful travel therein made me happy,
Or else I often had been miserable.
3. Out. By the bare scalp of Robin Hood's fat friar,
This fellow were a king for our wild faction!
1. Out. We'll have him. Sirs, a word.
Speed. Master, be one of them;
It is an honourable kind of thievery.
Val. Peace, villain!
2. Out. Tell us this: have you anything to take to?
Val. Nothing but my fortune.
3. Out. Know then, that some of us are gentlemen,
Such as the fury of ungovern'd youth
Thrust from the company of awful men.
Myself was from Verona banished
For practising to steal away a lady,
An heir, and near allied unto the duke.
2. Out. And I from Mantua, for a gentleman
Who, in my mood, I stabb'd unto the heart.
1. Out. And I for such like petty crimes as these.
But to the purpose; for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawless lives;
And, partly, seeing you are beautified
With goodly shape, and by your own report
A linguist, and a man of such perfection
As we do in our quality much want—
2. Out. Indeed, because you are a banish'd man,
Therefore, above the rest, we parley to you.
Are you content to be our general?
To make a virtue of necessity
And live, as we do, in this wilderness?
3. Out. What say'st thou? Wilt thou be of our consort?
Say ay, and be the captain of us all.
We'll do thee homage and be rul'd by thee,
Love thee as our commander and our king.
1. Out. But if thou scorn our courtesy, thou diest.
2. Out. Thou shalt not live to brag what we have offer'd.
Val. I take your offer and will live with you,
Provided that you do no outrages
On silly women, or poor passengers.
3. Out. No; we detest such vile, base practices.
Come, go with us; we'll bring thee to our crews,
And show thee all the treasure we have got,
Which, with ourselves, all rest at thy dispose. Exeunt.

92 sort: select 94 give ... to: make a beginning of following 98 pardon: excuse 1 passenger: passer-by, traveler 10 proper: handsome 33 glad ... doom: i.e. glad to get off so cheaply 34 tongues: foreign languages 37 friar: Friar Tuck 43 anything to take to: any means of subsistence 47 awful: commanding respect 49 practising: plotting 52 mood: anger 59 quality: occupation 61 the rest: any other reason 65 consort: fellowship 73 silly: helpless 3 colour: pretence 9 commend: deliver

Scene Second

[Milan. The Court of the Duke's Palace]
Enter Proteus; [and later,] Thurio, Julia, Host, Musician[s], [and] Silvia.

Pro. Already have I been false to Valentine,
And now I must be as unjust to Thurio.
Under the colour of commending him,
I have access my own love to prefer.
But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy,
To be corrupted with my worthless gifts.
When I protest true loyalty to her,
She twits me with my falsehood to my friend;
When to her beauty I commend my vows,
She bids me think how I have been forsworn
In breaking faith with Julia whom I lov'd:

And notwithstanding all her sudden quips,
The least whereof would quell a lover's hope,
Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love,
The more it grows, and fawneth on her still.
But here comes Thurio. Now must we to her window,
And give some evening music to her ear.

[Enter Thurio, and Musicians.]

Thu. How now, Sir Proteus! are you crept before us?
Pro. Ay, gentle Thurio; for you know that love
Will creep in service where it cannot go.
Thu. Ay; but I hope, sir, that you love not here.
Pro. Sir, but I do; or else I would be hence.
Thu. Who? Silvia?
Pro. Ay, Silvia, for your sake.
Thu. I thank you for your own. Now, gentlemen,
Let's tune, and to it lustily a while.

[Enter Host and Julia behind. Julia in boy's clothes.]

Host. Now, my young guest, methinks you're allycholly. I pray you, why is it?
Jul. Marry, mine host, because I cannot be merry.
Host. Come, we'll have you merry. I'll bring you where you shall hear music, and see the gentleman that you asked for.
Jul. But shall I hear him speak?
Host. Ay, that you shall.
Jul. That will be music. [Music plays.]
Host. Hark! hark!
Jul. Is he among these?
Host. Ay; but peace! let's hear 'em.

Song.

'Who is Silvia? what is she?
That all our swains commend her?
Holy, fair, and wise is she;
The heaven such grace did lend her,
That she might admired be.

'Is she kind as she is fair?
For beauty lives with kindness:
Love doth to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness;
And, being help'd, inhabits there.

'Then to Silvia let us sing,
That Silvia is excelling;
She excels each mortal thing
Upon the dull earth dwelling.
To her let us garlands bring.'

Host. How now! are you sadder than you were before?
How do you, man? The music likes you not.
Jul. You mistake; the musician likes me not.
Host. Why, my pretty youth?
Jul. He plays false, father.
Host. How? Out of tune on the strings?
Jul. Not so; but yet so false that he grieves my very heartstrings.
Host. You have a quick ear.
Jul. Ay; I would I were deaf; it makes me have a slow heart.
Host. I perceive you delight not in music.
Jul. Not a whit,—when it jars so.
Host. Hark! what fine change is in the music!
Jul. Ay, that change is the spite.
Host. You would have them always play but one thing?
Jul. I would always have one play but one thing.
But, host, doth this Sir Proteus that we talk on
Often resort unto this gentlewoman?
Host. I will tell you what Launce, his man, told me: he lov'd her out of all nick.
Jul. Where is Launce?
Host. Gone to seek his dog; which to-morrow, by his master's command, he must carry for a present to his lady.
Jul. Peace! stand aside; the company parts.
Pro. Sir Thurio, fear not you. I will so plead
That you shall say my cunning drift excels.
Thu. Where meet me?
Pro. At Saint Gregory's well.
Thu. Farewell. [Exeunt Thurio and Musicians.]

[Enter Silvia above, at her window.]

Pro. Madam, good even to your ladyship.
Sil. I thank you for your music, gentlemen.
Who is that that spake?
Pro. One, lady, if you knew his pure heart's truth,
You would quickly learn to know him by his voice.
Sil. Sir Proteus, as I take it.
Pro. Sir Proteus, gentle lady, and your servant.
Sil. What is your will?
Pro. That I may compass yours.
Sil. You have your wish; my will is even this:
That presently you hie you home to bed.
Thou subtle, perjur'd, false, disloyal man!
Think'st thou I am so shallow, so conceitless,
To be seduced by thy flattery,
That hast deceiv'd so many with thy vows?
Return, return, and make thy love amends.
For me, by this pale queen of night I swear,
I am so far from granting thy request
That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit,
And by and by intend to chide myself
Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.
Pro. I grant, sweet love, that I did love a lady;
But she is dead.
Jul. [Aside.] 'Twere false, if I should speak it;
For I am sure she is not buried.
Sil. Say that she be; yet Valentine thy friend
Survives, to whom, thyself art witness,
I am betroth'd; and art thou not asham'd
To wrong him with thy importunacy?
Pro. I likewise hear that Valentine is dead.
Sil. And so suppose am I; for in his grave,
Assure thyself my love is buried.
Pro. Sweet lady, let me rake it from the earth.
Sil. Go to thy lady's grave and call hers thence;
Or, at the least, in hers sepulchre thine.

12 quips: sharp utterances 20 go: walk 27 allycholly: i.e. melancholy 49 inhabits: dwells 56 likes: pleases

64 slow: heavy 68 change: modulation 75 out . . . nick: beyond all reckoning 81 drift: scheme 96 subtle: crafty 97 conceitless: witless

Jul. [Aside.] He heard not that.
Pro. Madam, if your heart be so obdurate.
Vouchsafe me yet your picture for my love,
The picture that is hanging in your chamber.
To that I'll speak, to that I'll sigh and weep;
For since the substance of your perfect self
Is else devoted, I am but a shadow,
And to your shadow will I make true love.
Jul. [Aside.] If 'twere a substance, you would, sure, deceive it,
And make it but a shadow, as I am.
Sil. I am very loath to be your idol, sir;
But, since your falsehood shall become you well
To worship shadows and adore false shapes,
Send to me in the morning and I'll send it.
And so, good rest.
Pro. As wretches have o'er night
That wait for execution in the morn.
[Exeunt Proteus and Silvia, severally.]
Jul. Host, will you go?
Host. By my halidom, I was fast asleep.
Jul. Pray you, where lies Sir Proteus?
Host. Marry, at my house. Trust me, I think 'tis almost day.
Jul. Not so; but it hath been the longest night
That e'er I watch'd, and the most heaviest. [Exeunt.]

Scene Third

[The Same]
Enter Eglamour, [and later,] Silvia.

Egl. This is the hour that Madam Silvia
Entreated me to call, and know her mind:
There's some great matter she'd employ me in.
Madam, Madam!

[Enter Silvia above, at her window.]

Sil. Who calls?
Egl. Your servant, and your friend;
One that attends your ladyship's command.
Sil. Sir Eglamour, a thousand times good morrow.
Egl. As many, worthy lady, to yourself.
According to your ladyship's impose,
I am thus early come to know what service
It is your pleasure to command me in.
Sil. O Eglamour, thou art a gentleman—
Think not I flatter, for I swear I do not—
Valiant, wise, remorseful, well-accomplish'd.
Thou art not ignorant what dear good will
I bear unto the banish'd Valentine,
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vain Thurio, whom my very soul abhors.
Thyself hast lov'd; and I have heard thee say
No grief did ever come so near thy heart
As when thy lady and thy true love died,
Upon whose grave thou vow'dst pure chastity.
Sir Eglamour, I would to Valentine,
To Mantua, where I hear he makes abode;
And, for the ways are dangerous to pass,
I do desire thy worthy company,
Upon whose faith and honour I repose.
Urge not my father's anger, Eglamour,
But think upon my grief, a lady's grief,
And on the justice of my flying hence,
To keep me from a most unholy match,
Which heaven and fortune still rewards with plagues.
I do desire thee, even from a heart
As full of sorrows as the sea of sands,
To bear me company and go with me.
If not, to hide what I have said to thee,
That I may venture to depart alone.
Egl. Madam, I pity much your grievances;
Which since I know they virtuously are plac'd,
I give consent to go along with you,
Recking as little what betideth me
As much I wish all good befortune you.
When will you go?
Sil. This evening coming.
Egl. Where shall I meet you?
Sil. At Friar Patrick's cell,
Where I intend holy confession.
Egl. I will not fail your ladyship.
Good morrow, gentle lady.
Sil. Good morrow, kind Sir Eglamour.
Exeunt [severally].

Scene Fourth

[The Same]
Enter Launce [with his dog; and later enter] Proteus, Julia, [and] Silvia.

Launce. When a man's servant shall play the cur with him, look you, it goes hard; one that I brought up of a puppy; one that I saved from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went to it. I have taught him, even as one would say precisely, 'Thus I would teach a dog.' I was sent to deliver him as a present to Mistress Silvia from my master, and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber but he steps me to her trencher and steals her capon's leg. O! 'tis a foul thing when a cur cannot keep himself in all companies. I would have, as one should say, one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit than he, to take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily he had been hanged for 't; sure as I live, he had suffered for 't. You shall judge. He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentleman-like dogs under the duke's table. He had not been there—bless the mark—a piss-ing-while, but all the chamber smelt him. 'Out with the dog!' says one; 'What cur is that?' says another; 'Whip him out!' says the third; 'Hang him up!' says the duke. I, having been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab, and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogs. 'Friend,' quoth I, 'you mean to whip the dog?' 'Ay, marry, do I,' quoth he. 'You do him the more wrong,' quoth I; ' 'twas I did the thing you wot of.' He makes me no more ado, but whips me out of the chamber. How many masters would do this for his servant? Nay, I'll be sworn, I have sat in the stocks for puddings he hath stolen, otherwise he had been executed; I have stood on the pillory for geese he hath killed, otherwise he had suffered for 't. Thou thinkest not of this now. Nay, I remember the trick you served me when I took my leave of Madam Silvia. Did not I bid thee still mark me and do as I do? When didst thou see me heave up my leg and make water against a gentlewoman's farthingale! Didst thou ever see me do such a trick?

126 else: elsewhere shadow: lifeless person 127 shadow: portrait 139 halidom: anything regarded as sacred 140 lies: lodges, sleeps 143 watch'd: remained awake through 10 impose: command 15 remorseful: full of pity 16 dear: affectionate 26 for: because 39 grievances: distresses 43 befortune: befall 2 of: from 4 to it: to their deaths 7 me; cf. n. 8 trencher: wooden plate 9 keep: restrain 11 a dog at: adept at 16 bless the mark; cf. n.

[Enter Proteus, and Julia in boy's clothes.]

Pro. Sebastian is thy name? I like thee well,
And will employ thee in some service presently.
Jul. In what you please; I will do what I can.
Pro. I hope thou wilt. [To Launce.] How now, you whoreson peasant!
Where have you been these two days loitering?
Launce. Marry, sir, I carried Mistress Silvia the dog you bade me.
Pro. And what says she to my little jewel?
Launce. Marry, she says, your dog was a cur, and tells you, currish thanks is good enough for such a present.
Pro. But she received my dog?
Launce. No, indeed, did she not; here have I brought him back again.
Pro. What! didst thou offer her this from me?
Launce. Ay, sir; the other squirrel was stolen from me by the hangman boys in the marketplace; and then I offered her mine own, who is a dog as big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.
Pro. Go, get thee hence, and find my dog again,
Or ne'er return again into my sight.
Away, I say! Stay'st thou to vex me here? [Exit Launce.]
A slave that still an end turns me to shame.
Sebastian, I have entertained thee,
Partly that I have need of such a youth,
That can with some discretion do my business,
For 't is no trusting to yond foolish lout;
But chiefly for thy face and thy behaviour,
Which, if my augury deceive me not,
Witness good bringing up, fortune, and truth.
Therefore, know thou, for this I entertain thee.
Go presently, and take this ring with thee;
Deliver it to Madam Silvia.
She lov'd me well deliver'd it to me.
Jul. It seems you lov'd not her, to leave her token.
She's dead, belike?
Pro. Not so; I think she lives.
Jul. Alas!
Pro. Why dost thou cry 'alas'?
Jul. I cannot choose
But pity her.
Pro. Wherefore should'st thou pity her?
Jul. Because methinks that she lov'd you as well
As you do love your lady Silvia.

23 wot: know 26 puddings: animals' intestines (sometimes stuffed) 38 whoreson: used in coarse playfulness 49 squirrel: cf. n. 50 hangman: fit for the hangman 56 still an end: continually 64 entertain: take into service 67 deliver'd: who delivered 68 leave: part with

She dreams on him that has forgot her love;
You dote on her that cares not for your love.
'Tis pity love should be so contrary;
And thinking on it makes me cry, 'alas'!
Pro. Well, give her that ring and therewithal
This letter. That's her chamber. Tell my lady
I claim the promise for her heavenly picture.
Your message done, hie home unto my chamber,
Where thou shalt find me sad and solitary. [Exit.]
Jul. How many women would do such a message?
Alas, poor Proteus! thou hast entertain'd
A fox to be the shepherd of thy lambs.
Alas, poor fool! why do I pity him
That with his very heart despiseth me?
Because he loves her, he despiseth me;
Because I love him, I must pity him.
This ring I gave him when he parted from me,
To bind him to remember my good will;
And now am I—unhappy messenger—
To plead for that which I would not obtain,
To carry that which I would have refus'd,
To praise his faith which I would have disprais'd.
I am my master's true-confirmed love,
But cannot be true servant to my master,
Unless I prove false traitor to myself.
Yet will I woo for him; but yet so coldly
As heaven it knows, I would not have him speed.

[Enter Silvia, attended.]

Gentlewoman, good day! I pray you, be my mean
To bring me where to speak with Madam Silvia.
Sil. What would you with her, if that I be she?
Jul. If you be she, I do entreat your patience
To hear me speak the message I am sent on.
Sil. From whom?
Jul. From my master, Sir Proteus, madam.
Sil. O! he sends you for a picture?
Jul. Ay, madam.
Sil. Ursula, bring my picture there.
[A picture brought.]
Go, give your master this. Tell him from me,
One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget,
Would better fit his chamber than this shadow.
Jul. Madam, please you peruse this letter.—
Pardon me, madam, I have unadvis'd
Deliver'd you a paper that I should not.
This is the letter to your ladyship.
Sil. I pray thee, let me look on that again.
Jul. It may not be; good madam, pardon me.
Sil. There, hold.
I will not look upon your master's lines.
I know they are stuff'd with protestations
And full of new-found oaths, which he will break
As easily as I do tear his paper.
Jul. Madam, he sends your ladyship this ring.
Sil. The more shame for him that he sends it me;
For I have heard him say a thousand times,
His Julia gave it him at his departure.
Though his false finger have profan'd the ring,

90 poor fool: referring to herself 104 speed: be successful 119 unadvis'd: inadvertently

Mine shall not do his Julia so much wrong.
Jul. She thanks you.
Sil. What say'st thou?
Jul. I thank you, madam, that you tender her.
Poor gentlewoman! my master wrongs her much.
Sil. Dost thou know her?
Jul. Almost as well as I do know myself:
To think upon her woes, I do protest
That I have wept a hundred several times.
Sil. Belike she thinks that Proteus hath forsook her.
Jul. I think she doth, and that's her cause of sorrow.
Sil. Is she not passing fair?
Jul. She hath been fairer, madam, than she is.
When she did think my master lov'd her well,
She, in my judgment, was as fair as you;
But since she did neglect her looking-glass
And threw her sun-expelling mask away,
The air hath starv'd the roses in her cheeks
And pinch'd the lily-tincture of her face,
That now she is become as black as I.
Sil. How tall was she?
Jul. About my stature; for, at Pentecost,
When all our pageants of delight were play'd,
Our youth got me to play the woman's part,
And I was trimm'd in Madam Julia's gown,
Which served me as fit, by all men's judgments,
As if the garment had been made for me.
Therefore I know she is about my height.
And at that time I made her weep agood,
For I did play a lamentable part.
Madam, 'twas Ariadne passioning
For Theseus' perjury and unjust flight;
Which I so lively acted with my tears
That my poor mistress, moved therewithal,
Wept bitterly, and would I might be dead
If I in thought felt not her very sorrow!
Sil. She is beholding to thee, gentle youth.—
Alas, poor lady, desolate and left!
I weep myself to think upon thy words.
Here, youth, there is my purse. I give thee this
For thy sweet mistress' sake, because thou lov'st her.
Farewell.
Jul. And she shall thank you for 't, if e'er you know her.—
[Exit Silvia, with Attendants.]
A virtuous gentlewoman, mild and beautiful.
I hope my master's suit will be but cold,
Since she respects my mistress' love so much.
Alas, how love can trifle with itself!
Here is her picture; let me see; I think,
If I had such a tire, this face of mine
Were full as lovely as is this of hers;
And yet the painter flatter'd her a little,
Unless I flatter with myself too much.
Her hair is auburn, mine is perfect yellow:
If that be all the differences in his love,
I'll get me such a colour'd periwig.
Her eyes are grey as glass, and so are mine.

137 tender: regard tenderly 155 Pentecost: Whitsuntide 156 pageants of delight: delightful theatrical representations 158 trimm'd: dressed 162 agood: in earnest 164 passioning: sorrowing 170 beholding: indebted 179 cold: ineffectual 180 my mistress': repeating the fiction of l. 167 183 tire: headdress

Ay, but her forehead's low, and mine's as high.
What should it be that he respects in her
But I can make respective in myself,
If this fond Love were not a blinded god?
Come, shadow, come, and take this shadow up,
For 'tis thy rival. O thou senseless form!
Thou shalt be worshipp'd, kiss'd, lov'd, and ador'd,
And, were there sense in his idolatry,
My substance should be statue in thy stead.
I'll use thee kindly for thy mistress' sake,
That us'd me so; or else, by Jove I vow,
I should have scratch'd out your unseeing eyes,
To make my master out of love with thee. [Exit.]

Act Fifth

Scene First

[Milan. An Abbey]
Enter Eglamour, [and later,] Silvia.

Egl. The sun begins to gild the western sky,
And now it is about the very hour
That Silvia at Friar Patrick's cell should meet me.
She will not fail; for lovers break not hours,
Unless it be to come before their time,
So much they spur their expedition.
See, where she comes.

[Enter Silvia.]

Lady, a happy evening!
Sil. Amen, amen! go on, good Eglamour,
Out at the postern by the abbey-wall.
I fear I am attended by some spies.
Egl. Fear not; the forest is not three leagues off;
If we recover that, we're sure enough. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Same. A Room in the Duke's Palace]
Enter Thurio, Proteus, Julia; [and later,] Duke.

Thu. Sir Proteus, what says Silvia to my suit?
Pro. O, sir, I find her milder than she was;
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.
Thu. What! that my leg is too long?
Pro. No, that it is too little.
Thu. I'll wear a boot to make it somewhat rounder.
[Jul. Aside.] But love will not be spurr'd to what it loathes.
Thu. What says she to my face?
Pro. She says it is a fair one.
Thu. Nay then, the wanton lies; my face is black.
Pro. But pearls are fair, and the old saying is,
'Black men are pearls in beauteous ladies' eyes.'
[Jul. Aside.] 'Tis true, such pearls as put out ladies' eyes;
For I had rather wink than look on them.
Thu. How likes she my discourse?

193 respective: worthy of respect 195 shadow . . . shadow; cf. n. on IV.ii.128 take . . . up: pun on sense of 'oppose' 10 postern: small back or side door 13 recover: reach sure: safe 3 takes exceptions at: objects to 9 fair; cf. n. 11 pearls: cataracts

Pro. Ill, when you talk of war.
Thu. But well, when I discourse of love and peace?
Jul. [Aside.] But better, indeed, when you hold your peace.
Thu. What says she to my valour?
Pro. O, sir, she makes no doubt of that.
Jul. [Aside.] She needs not, when she knows it cowardice.
Thu. What says she to my birth?
Pro. That you are well deriv'd.
Jul. [Aside.] True; from a gentleman to a fool.
Thu. Considers she my possessions?
Pro. O, ay; and pities them.
Thu. Wherefore?
Jul. [Aside.] That such an ass should owe them.
Pro. That they are out by lease.
Jul. Here comes the duke.

[Enter Duke.]

Duke. How now, Sir Proteus! how now, Thurio!
Which of you saw Sir Eglamour of late?
Thu. Not I.
Pro. Nor I.
Duke. Saw you my daughter?
Pro. Neither.
Duke. Why then,
She's fled unto that peasant Valentine,
And Eglamour is in her company.
'Tis true; for Friar Laurence met them both,
As he in penance wander'd through the forest.
Him he knew well, and guess'd that it was she,
But, being mask'd, he was not sure of it.
Besides, she did intend confession
At Patrick's cell this even, and there she was not.
These likelihoods confirm her flight from hence.
Therefore, I pray you, stand not to discourse,
But mount you presently and meet with me
Upon the rising of the mountain-foot,
That leads towards Mantua, whither they are fled.
Dispatch, sweet gentlemen, and follow me. [Exit.]
Thu. Why, this it is to be a peevish girl,
That flies her fortune when it follows her.
I'll after, more to be reveng'd on Eglamour
Than for the love of reckless Silvia. [Exit.]
Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love
Than hate of Eglamour that goes with her. [Exit.]
Jul. And I will follow, more to cross that love
Than hate for Silvia that is gone for love. [Exit.]

Scene Third

[Frontiers of Mantua. The Forest]
[Enter] Silvia [and] Outlaws.

1. Out. Come, come,
Be patient; we must bring you to our captain.
Sil. A thousand more mischances than this one
Have learn'd me how to brook this patiently.
2. Out. Come, bring her away.
1. Out. Where is the gentleman that was with her?
3. Out. Being nimble-footed, he hath outrun us;
But Moyses and Valerius follow him.
Go thou with her to the west end of the wood;
There is our captain. We'll follow him that's fled.
The thicket is beset; he cannot 'scape.
[Exeunt all except the First Outlaw and Silvia.]
1. Out. Come, I must bring you to our captain's cave.
Fear not; he bears an honourable mind,
And will not use a woman lawlessly.
Sil. O Valentine! this I endure for thee. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[Another Part of the Forest]
Enter Valentine; [and later,] Proteus, Silvia, Julia, Duke, Thurio, [and] Outlaws.

Val. How use doth breed a habit in a man!
This shadowy desert, unfrequented woods,
I better brook than flourishing peopled towns.
Here can I sit alone, unseen of any,
And to the nightingale's complaining notes
Tune my distresses and record my woes.
O thou that dost inhabit in my breast,
Leave not the mansion so long tenantless,
Lest, growing ruinous, the building fall
And leave no memory of what it was!
Repair me with thy presence, Silvia!
Thou gentle nymph, cherish thy forlorn swain!
[Noise within.]
What halloing and what stir is this to-day?
These are my mates, that make their wills their law,
Have some unhappy passenger in chase.
They love me well; yet I have much to do
To keep them from uncivil outrages.
Withdraw thee, Valentine: who's this comes here?
[Steps aside.]

[Enter Proteus, Silvia, and Julia.]

Pro. Madam, this service I have done for you—
Though you respect not aught your servant doth—
To hazard life and rescue you from him
That would have forc'd your honour and your love.
Vouchsafe me, for my meed, but one fair look;
A smaller boon than this I cannot beg,
And less than this, I am sure, you cannot give.
Val. [Aside.] How like a dream is this I see and hear!
Love, lend me patience to forbear awhile.
Sil. O, miserable, unhappy that I am!
Pro. Unhappy were you, madam, ere I came;
But by my coming I have made you happy.
Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most unhappy.
Jul. [Aside.] And me, when he approacheth to your presence.
Sil. Had I been seized by a hungry lion,
I would have been a breakfast to the beast,

23 deriv'd: descended; hence the quibble following 25, 26 possessions . . . pities; cf. n. 28 owe: own 29 out by lease: let out to others 38 peasant: base person 49 mountain-foot: foothill 52 peevish: perverse 4 learn'd: thought brook: endure

2 desert: any uninhabited region 6 record: sing 7 inhabit: lodge 12 swain: lover 15 Have: who have 20 respect: heed 31 approach: amatory advance (probably)

Rather than have false Proteus rescue me.
O! heaven be judge how I love Valentine,
Whose life's as tender to me as my soul;
And full as much—for more there cannot be—
I do detest false perjur'd Proteus.
Therefore be gone, solicit me no more.
Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to death,
Would I not undergo for one calm look!
O, 'tis the curse in love, and still approv'd,
When women cannot love where they're belov'd!
Sil. When Proteus cannot love where he's belov'd.
Read over Julia's heart, thy first best love,
For whose dear sake thou didst then rend thy faith
Into a thousand oaths; and all those oaths
Descended into perjury to love me.
Thou hast no faith left now, unless thou'dst two,
And that's far worse than none. Better have none
Than plural faith, which is too much by one.
Thou counterfeit to thy true friend!
Pro. In love
Who respects friend?
Sil. All men but Proteus.
Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words
Can no way change you to a milder form,
I'll woo you like a soldier, at arms' end,
And love you 'gainst the nature of love,—force ye.
Sil. O heaven!
Pro. I'll force thee yield to my desire.
Val. [Coming forward.] Ruffian, let go that rude uncivil touch;
Thou friend of an ill fashion!
Pro. Valentine!
Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love—
For such is a friend now! Treacherous man,
Thou hast beguil'd my hopes! Naught but mine eye
Could have persuaded me. Now I dare not say
I have one friend alive; thou wouldst disprove me.
Who should be trusted now, when one's right hand
Is perjur'd to the bosom? Proteus,
I am sorry I must never trust thee more,
But count the world a stranger for thy sake.
The private wound is deep'st. O time most curst!
'Mongst all foes that a friend should be the worst!
Pro. My shame and guilt confounds me.
Forgive me, Valentine. If hearty sorrow
Be a sufficient ransom for offence,
I tender 't here; I do as truly suffer
As e'er I did commit.
Val. Then I am paid;
And once again I do receive thee honest.
Who by repentance is not satisfied
Is nor of heaven nor earth; for these are pleas'd.
By penitence the Eternal's wrath's appeas'd;
And, that my love may appear plain and free,
All that was mine in Silvia I give thee.
Jul. O me unhappy! [Swoons.]
Pro. Look to the boy.
Val. Why, boy! why, wag! how now! what's the matter?
Look up; speak.
Jul. O good sir, my master charg'd me
To deliver a ring to Madam Silvia,
Which out of my neglect was never done.
Pro. Where is that ring, boy?
Jul. Here 'tis; this is it. [Gives a ring.]
Pro. How! let me see.
Why this is the ring I gave to Julia.
Jul. O, cry you mercy, sir; I have mistook;
This is the ring you sent to Silvia.
[Shows another ring.]
Pro. But how cam'st thou by this ring?
At my depart I gave this unto Julia.
Jul. And Julia herself did give it me;
And Julia herself hath brought it hither.
Pro. How! Julia!
Jul. Behold her that gave aim to all thy oaths,
And entertain'd them deeply in her heart.
How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the root!
O Proteus! let this habit make thee blush.
Be thou asham'd that I have took upon me
Such an immodest raiment, if shame live
In a disguise of love.
It is the lesser blot, modesty finds,
Women to change their shapes than men their minds.
Pro. Than men their minds! 'tis true. O heaven! were man
But constant, he were perfect. That one error
Fills him with faults; makes him run through all the sins:
Inconstancy falls off ere it begins.
What is in Silvia's face, but I may spy
More fresh in Julia's with a constant eye?
Val. Come, come, a hand from either.
Let me be blest to make this happy close;
'Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.
Pro. Bear witness, heaven, I have my wish for ever.
Jul. And I mine.

[Enter Outlaws with Duke and Thurio.]

Out. A prize! a prize! a prize!
Val. Forbear, forbear, I say; it is my lord the duke.
Your Grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd,
Banished Valentine.
Duke. Sir Valentine!
Thu. Yonder is Silvia; and Silvia's mine.
Val. Thurio, give back, or else embrace thy death;
Come not within the measure of my wrath;
Do not name Silvia thine; if once again,
Verona shall not hold thee. Here she stands;
Take but possession of her with a touch,—
I dare thee but to breathe upon my love.
Thu. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I.
I hold him but a fool that will endanger
His body for a girl that loves him not.
I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.
Duke. The more degenerate and base art thou,
To make sure means for her as thou hast done,
And leave her on such slight conditions.

37 tender: precious 42 calm: i.e. gentle 43 still approv'd: continually confirmed by experience 55 respects: takes into account 59 arms' end: sword's point 67 common: base 82 commit: transgress 84 receive: acknowledge

101 cry you mercy: I beg your pardon 108 gave aim to: was the object of 110 root: bottom of the heart 111 habit: garb 113, 114 if . . . love; cf. n. 120 Inconstancy . . . begins; cf. n. 124 close: union 134 give back: fall back 135 measure: reach 145 means: efforts 146 on . . . conditions: so easily

Now, by the honour of my ancestry,
I do applaud thy spirit, Valentine,
And think thee worthy of an empress' love.
Know then, I here forget all former griefs,
Cancel all grudge, repeal thee home again,
Plead a new state in thy unrivall'd merit,
To which I thus subscribe: Sir Valentine,
Thou art a gentleman and well deriv'd;
Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserv'd her.
Val. I thank your Grace; the gift hath made me happy.
I now beseech you, for your daughter's sake,
To grant one boon that I shall ask of you.
Duke. I grant it, for thine own, whate'er it be.
Val. These banish'd men, that I have kept withal
Are men endu'd with worthy qualities:
Forgive them what they have committed here,
And let them be recall'd from their exile.
They are reformed, civil, full of good,
And fit for great employment, worthy lord.

Duke. Thou hast prevail'd; I pardon them, and thee;
Dispose of them as thou know'st their deserts.
Come, let us go; we will include all jars
With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity.
Val. And as we walk along, I dare be bold
With our discourse to make your Grace to smile.
What think you of this page, my lord?
Duke. I think the boy hath grace in him; he blushes.
Val. I warrant you, my lord, more grace than boy.
Duke. What mean you by that saying?
Val. Please you, I'll tell you as we pass along,
That you will wonder what hath fortuned.
Come, Proteus; 'tis your penance but to hear
The story of your loves discovered;
That done, our day of marriage shall be yours;
One feast, one house, one mutual happiness. Exeunt.

FINIS

151 repeal: recall from exile 152 Plead . . . merit: cf. n. 160 kept withal: lived with 168 include: conclude jars: discords 169 triumphs: public festivities solemnity: festivity 177 fortuned: happened

Notes

Dramatis Personæ. In the First Folio the Dramatis Personæ ('The names of all the Actors') appear at the end of the play.

I.i.22. Leander. A youth who nightly swam across the Hellespont to visit his beloved Hero. One night he was drowned in his attempt; whereupon Hero also leaped to her death in the Hellespont. Cf. III.i.119, 120.

I.i.55. shipp'd. Although it may be shown that in Shakespeare's time there was probably some sort of water-route between Verona and Milan, we may assume that the dramatist is merely casual here, having vaguely in mind a departure by sea from London rather than pretending to accuracy in Italian geography and topography.

I.i.73, 74. shipp'd . . . sheep. It appears that in pronunciation these two words were sufficiently similar to allow a pun. Cf. note on I.i.54.

I.i.97. laced mutton. Apparently a play upon the words 'lost' and 'laced' in this speech is intended. Presumably the similarity between the two words in pronunciation was greater than now.

I.i.118. Marry. A mild interjection, originally the name of the Virgin Mary used as an oath or invocation.

I.i.141. destin'd to a drier death on shore. A reference to the proverbial notion, 'He that is born to be hanged shall never be drowned.'

I.ii.9. Sir Eglamour. This personage is not to be confused with Silvia's friend, who appears later.

I.ii.71. stomach. A play upon the two meanings, 'anger' and 'appetite.'

I.ii.71, 72. meat . . . maid. Probably a quibble, 'meat' being pronounced like 'mate.'

I.ii.85. set. 'Set to music.' The next line quibblingly implies the meaning, 'set store by.'

I.ii.89. burden. Refrain, or, more exactly, a musical figure repeated, throughout the song, in the bass (French bourdon) or underpart.

I.ii.100. flat. A quibble on the word in its musical meaning and in the sense of 'downright.'

I.ii.101, 102. And mar the concord with too harsh a descant. There wanteth but a mean to fill your song. 'Descant' means the air sung extempore upon a given bass. The 'mean' is the intermediate part (alto or tenor) between the treble and bass. Here the word 'mean' seems to refer also to the correct pitch of any musical note, precisely between 'sharp' and 'flat' of lines 88 and 90.

I.ii.104. bid the base. A phrase from the game of prisoner's base. Possibly Lucetta 'bids the base' by challenging Julia to pursue her, thus setting free Proteus, the prisoner at the base.

I.ii.111. would I were so anger'd with the same. 'Would that the same letter still existed, and inspired no more anger than I now feel.'

I.iii.28. emperor. We need not infer that Shakespeare had in mind the occasional sojourns of Charles V (Emperor, 1519-1556) at Milan. 'Emperor' here probably refers only to the Duke of Milan.

I.iii.45. in good time. The phrase is equivalent to 'à propos,' and is often used when a character arrives opportunely.

II.i.2, 3. on . . . one. In the sixteenth century these two words were often spelled alike, and in pronunciation were sufficiently similar to allow a pun.

II.i.24. Hallowmas. All Saints' Day, November 1. On this day beggars often received special alms, including 'soul-cake.'

II.i.25. one of the lions. Possibly a reference to lions in the Tower of London, or to lions on a royal standard displayed in the theater, or to lions in general.

II.i.85, 86. motion . . . puppet . . . interpret. In a puppet-play, or 'motion,' the manipulator of the puppets supplied a discourse designed to 'interpret' the action.

II.i.90. servant. A man who pays authorized attentions to a lady, without her pledging herself by accepting them.

II.i.142, 143. earnest . . . none. A pun upon 'earnest' as an adjective, and as a noun meaning 'money paid as an installment to secure a bargain.'

II.i.154. speak in print. The source of the four lines that Speed found 'in print' is not known. They are evidently composed in 'King Cambyses' vein.'

II.iii.24. wood. Possibly there is a pun upon the noun, as indicating a shoe made of wood.

II.iv.18. quote. A quibble is probably intended upon 'quote' in the next line, pronounced to sound like 'coat.'

II.iv.20. jerkin, doublet. The doublet was a loose upper garment; the jerkin, a long jacket worn over the doublet, or in place of it.

II.iv.26. live in your air. The chameleon was supposed to live on air. See II.i.181.

II.iv.84. lock'd in her crystal looks. This expression probably arises from a belief that a spirit might be enclosed in a crystal sphere and made to obey commands.

II.iv.152. principality. A member of the seventh order of celestial beings. The hierarchy of these beings may be arranged as follows: (1) Seraphim, (2) Cherubim, (3) Thrones, (4) Dominions, (5) Virtues, (6) Powers, (7) Principalities, (8) Archangels, and (9) Angels.

II.iv.195. Even as one heat another heat expels. Apparently a reference to an old practice of exposing a burned part of the body to a fire, in the belief that external heat expelled the heat from the burn. Cf. Romeo and Juliet, I.ii.46: 'Tut! man, one fire burns out another's burning.'

II.v.44-46. go to the ale with a Christian. A reference to 'Church-ale,' a village festival at which ale was sold to raise funds for a church.

II.vii.53. cod-piece. A part of a man's breeches made indelicately conspicuous in Shakespeare's time.

II.vii.55. round hose. An article of clothing which covered both legs and loins, and which puffed out at the hips.

III.i.147. Do curse the grace that with such grace hath bless'd them. grace . . . grace: 'graciousness . . . favour.' The first 'grace' may mean either 'gracious person' or 'one of the Graces.'

III.i.154. Phaethon . . . Merops' son. Phaethon's father was Phoebus, and his mother was Clymene, wife of Merops. Phaethon rashly persuaded his father to allow him to drive the chariot of the sun for one day. Failing to control the horses, he came too near the earth, a result referred to in lines 155 and 156. In the classical reference the Duke presumably means merely to taunt Valentine with rashness. It has been suggested, however, that the name Merops provides a pun on the 'ropes' of the ladder.

III.i.184. influence. Probably refers to the 'influence' of a star, in the astrological sense of blessing or protection.

III.i.186. I fly not death, to fly his deadly doom. 'I do not escape death by flying from the Duke's sentence of death.'

III.i.190. Soho. A hunting cry used when a hare is seen. Hence the pun upon 'hair' in Launce's next speech.

III.i.193, 194. Valentine. Valentine? The pun is upon 'valentine' as a token of true-love and 'Valentine' as a proper name. The same pun occurs in lines 212, 215.

III.i.263, 264. that's all one, if he be but one knave. 'That's no matter, if he be but slightly a knave.' 'But one knave' implies degrees in knavery, 'two knaves' being a term for excessive knavery.

III.i.270. water-spaniel. This animal was thought to be especially given to fawning.

III.i.274. jade. Probably a pun upon the meanings 'an ill-conditioned horse' and 'a woman of low morals.'

III.i.345. Eve's legacy. Apparently Launce takes 'proud' of the preceding speech as meaning 'hot-blooded' or 'lascivious.' Possibly there is also an allusion to pride as the original deadly sin.

III.ii.53. bottom it. 'Wind it as a skein or ball of thread on a core, or bottom, of thread or harder material.'

IV.iv.7. me. This equivalent of the Latin 'ethical dative' is used merely to show a certain interest felt by the person indicated. The same use is seen in lines 14 and 20.

IV.iv.16. bless the mark. In its origin probably a formula to avert an evil omen; and hence used also as an apology when something improper or obnoxious is being said.

IV.iv.49. squirrel. Possibly an expression commonly applied to a small dog; or possibly a contemptuous epithet suggested by the fact that sometimes squirrels were actually carried about by ladies.

V.ii.9. fair. The meaning may be 'pale,' with a suggestion of effeminacy; or 'fair-faced,' in the sense of 'deceptive.'

V.ii.25, 26. possessions . . . pities. Probably a quibble upon 'possessions' in the sense of 'property' and 'possessions by spirits.' Hence there is probably a double meaning in 'pities': 'despises' (the property) and 'pities' (the possessions by spirits).

V.iv.113, 114. if shame live In a disguise of love. 'If there be any shame in a disguise assumed because of love'; or, possibly, referring to Proteus' duplicity, 'if there be any shame in one who falsely pretends to love.'

V.iv.120. Inconstancy falls off ere it begins. Probably this means, 'An inconstant man begins to be faithless even before he has declared his love.'

V.iv.152. Plead a new state in thy unrivall'd merit. The meaning of this line is uncertain. The following possibilities are offered: (1) 'Plead (in excuse for my change) that your exhibition of such merit creates a new situation'; (2) 'Plead for a new standing for myself in thy unrivall'd merit'; (3) 'Argue for (or utter) a new estimate of thy unrivall'd merit.'

The Text of the Present Edition

The earliest known text of The Two Gentlemen of Verona is that of the First Folio of 1623.

By permission of the Oxford University Press, the text of the present edition is that of the Oxford Shakespeare edited by W. J. Craig. Departures from Craig's text, and from that of the First Folio, are indicated below.

1. Minor changes in spelling and pronunciation have not been listed.

2. Craig's text and the present one follow the division into acts and scenes indicated in the First Folio; but the Latin designations in the Folio (e.g. Actus primus, Scena prima) are replaced by English equivalents.

In the First Folio the Dramatis Personæ ('The names of all the Actors') appear at the end of the play.

3. The stage-directions and list of dramatis personæ of the First Folio have been restored as far as possible, all additions being enclosed within square brackets. Aside from editorial additions within brackets, the stage-directions of the present edition differ from those of the First Folio only in the following instances, the readings of the Folio appearing after the colons:

I.iii.92 S.d. Exeunt.: Exeunt. Finis.
II.iv.217 S.d. [Exit.]: Exeunt.
III.i.369 S.d. [Exit.]: Exeunt.
IV.iv.203 S.d. [Exit.]: Exeunt.
V.ii.7 S.d. [Jul. Aside.]: Pro.
13 S.d. [Jul. Aside.]: Thu.
59 S.d. [Exit.]: Exeunt.

4. In the text of the speeches the present edition departs from the text of Craig, and restores the readings of the First Folio, in the following instances, Craig's readings appearing after the colons:

I.i.108 Speed. [Nodding.] Ay.: [Speed nods.] Did she nod? Speed. Ay.
ii. 54 'fool: fool
II.iii.15 in it: in
iv. 90 pair: pairs
199 [eye]: eye
v. 44 alehouse: alehouse so
45 an: a
III.i.315 [kissed]: kissed
IV.iv.5 I would: would I
82 Well,: Well, well,

5. In the present edition, and in that of Craig, the text of the speeches departs from the text of the First Folio in the following instances, the readings of the Folio appearing after the colons:

I. i.66 leave: love
74 a sheep: Sheepe
136 testerned: cestern'd
ii. 103 your: you
iii. 88 father calls: Fathers call's
II.iii.33 tied: tide
34 tied that ever any man tied.: Tide, that euer any man tide.
36 tied: tide
46 tied: tide
iv. 57 know: knew
104 mistress: a Mistresse
167 makes: make
199 Is it: It is 199 Valentinus': Valentines
v. 2 Milan: Padua
36 that my: that that my
III.i.81 of Verona: in Verona
150 would be: should be
IV.i.36 miserable: often miserable
50 An heir, and near: And heire and Neece,
ii. 114 his: her
iii. 19 abhors: abhor'd
iv. 50 hangman: Hangmans
64 thou: thee
68 to leave: not leaue
V.ii.32 Sir Eglamour: Eglamoure
iv. 72 trusted now,: trusted

The Taming of the Shrew

Edited by
THOMAS G. BERGIN

Dramatis Personae

A LORD
CHRISTOPHER SLY, a Tinker
HOSTESS, PAGE, PLAYERS,
HUNTSMEN, AND SERVANTS } persons in Act I, Scene 1
BAPTISTA, a rich Gentleman of Padua
VINCENTIO, an old Gentleman of Pisa
LUCENTIO, Son to Vincentio; in love with Bianca
PETRUCHIO, a Gentleman of Verona; Suitor to Katherina
GREMIO
HORTENSIO } Suitors to Bianca
TRANIO
BIONDELLO } Servants to Lucentio

GRUMIO
CURTIS
NATHANIEL
PHILIP
JOSEPH
NICHOLAS
PETER } Servants to Petruchio
PEDANT, set up to impersonate Vincentio
KATHERINA, THE SHREW
BIANCA } Daughters to Baptista
WIDOW
TAILOR, HABERDASHER, AND SERVANTS

SCENE—Padua, and Petruchio's house in the country.

The Taming of the Shrew

Introduction

Text and Date

The text of this edition follows that of the First Folio (1623), the earliest printed version of the play. The First Quarto edition (1631) is based on the First Folio as are the versions of all subsequent Folio editions (of which there are three).

We have had before us the facsimile edition of the First Folio (Oxford, 1902) and have made our basic principle fidelity to the text. We have, however, indicated some act and scene divisions missing in the Folio and supplied a few stage directions which have become conventional. We have also modernized the spelling, except in cases where the spelling reveals the pronunciation of the time, and we have repunctuated in line with modern practice. Apart from such changes all departures from the Folio reading, for the most part of very minor nature, are indicated in the glosses or notes.

Sources of the Play

In discussing the sources of The Taming of the Shrew one must bear in mind that as the play stands it contains three plot ingredients: the beggar transported to a higher realm, the wife tamed, and a pair of lovers united by the machinations of quick-witted servants. All of these elements are of considerable antiquity. The beggar motif goes back as far at least as the Arabian Nights. The theme of shrew-taming, in the words of Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, is 'as old as the hills,' though we may note that it is also the subject of several folk ballads closer to Shakespeare's own time, for example, A Merry Jest of a Shrewd and Curst Wife Lapped in Morel's Skin for her Good Behavior (mid-16th century). The devices of the subplot go back through Ariosto to Roman comedy.

The remote sources are clear enough in the main. When we touch on the question of Shakespeare's immediate source we enter more dangerous ground—not by any means unsurveyed but rather too carefully and contradictorily charted. For we must begin with an examination of the relationship of our play to the earlier work The Taming of a Shrew (referred to for brevity as A Shrew), a problem that has teased Shakespearean editors and critics over the years and which still awaits a solution satisfactory to all. While the first printed edition of The Shrew appears in the First Folio (1623), A Shrew was published in 1594, and Henslowe's Diary notes, for June of that same year, a performance of a play of that name by the Lord Chamberlain's servants (i.e., Shakespeare's company) at Newington Butts. A Shrew is made of coarser stuff than The Shrew; it is by comparison of unpolished texture, and the characterization is cruder; indeed it is by nature a farce. At the same time it is in certain respects a more finished product than The Shrew: Sly is not ignored after the introductory scenes but consistent use is made of him for comment and at the end he goes off content with the moral of wife-beating, and—another example of tidiness—Katherina is provided with a second sister who pairs off with Hortensio.

The similarities, however, are much more noteworthy than the differences. Both plays begin with the prank played on Sly; the main plot follows an identical development with many scenes the same in action and often in wording; the subplot, borrowed from Gascoigne's The Supposes (1556), a translation of Ludovico Ariosto's I Suppositi (1509), is likewise similar, though here some minor differences may be noted. The role of Tranio, the elderly suitor (Gremio), the Pedant's relationship to the disguised servant, the device used to persuade the Pedant to undertake the imposture, the confronting of the true and false fathers, the names Petruchio and Licio (though assigned to minor characters in Gascoigne's play)—all these are elements found in both The Supposes and the subplot of The Shrew though not in A Shrew. It seems clear that Shakespeare was not content, as far as the secondary plot was concerned, to take the material from A Shrew but went back to Gascoigne whose play thus becomes doubly, at first and second hand as it were, the source of the subplot of The Shrew.

Yet this is merely to lay the groundwork for the main problem of the relationship between A Shrew and The Shrew. Given the priority of printing dates and Henslowe's reference, the normal assumption would be that A Shrew is the older play and Shakespeare, in accordance with the habits of the times and indeed his own practice, used it as a basis for his own creation. This is in fact a perfectly tenable theory. But there are others. One, advanced relatively recently by P. Alexander (in the Time Literary Supplement, Sept. 16, 1926), holds that the printed version of A Shrew is a memorial reconstruction (i.e. a version taken down from the memorization of actors) of the play that we know as The Shrew, explaining the differences above noted as adaptations deemed necessary for the presentation before provincial audiences. According to this theory Henslowe actually saw The Shrew. This theory has convinced one of the editors of the New Cambridge edition of the play, Dover Wilson, though not his colleague, Quiller-Couch.

Yet a third hypothesis, advanced by Ten Brink (in the Shakespeare-Jahrbuch, 12 [1877], 94), suggests that both plays go back to the common source of an original Shrew play, eine Jugendarbeit Shakespeares in Ten Brink's opinion. The most recent advocate of the Ten Brink theory is Hardin Craig who, without attributing the source to Shakespeare's own hand, postulates 'a lost original shrew play.' Craig argues that such a hypothesis not only would explain the discrepancies in the plays but also 'has the advantage of showing that everybody is right and everybody is wrong. That is, A Shrew might readily be mistaken for the source of The Shrew, because A Shrew is a version of that source. It might readily be regarded as a "bad" quarto of The Shrew because it is a "bad" quarto of the source of The Shrew.'[1]

1 'The Shrew and A Shrew; Possible Settlement of an Old Debate,' in Elizabethan Studies and Other Essays in Honor of George F. Reynolds, Boulder, 1945, p. 154.

Those who argue for the memorial reconstruction theory are at least spared the burden of finding a suitable author for the early play, save of course insofar as they may regard both works as collaborative enterprises. Critics who cannot accept A Shrew as Shakespeare's work have so far failed to reach unanimous accord on any one author; it has been assigned, in the words of Bond 'in turn to every near and important predecessor of Shakespeare save Lyly and Nash'; many modern critics have seen in it the hand of some imitator of Marlowe, and Quiller-Couch indeed finds 'nothing incredible' in the supposition that Marlowe may have written it himself 'with or without collaborators.' Pope, without waiting for the theory of memorial reconstruction, claimed A Shrew for Shakespeare himself, a claim recently restated by Courthope in his History of English Poetry.

As for the authorship of The Shrew, although various editors have sensed the presence of another hand than Shakespeare's, especially in the subplot, opinion has been by no means unanimous on this point and most recently editions, though hesitantly, and with various shades of reservation, attribute the work to Shakespeare. Bond, for example, after enumerating the scenes that have by common consent been assigned to Shakespeare adds for the rest, 'while admitting the presence of other work, I do Not feel that we have ground enough for denying Shakespeare's revision, however hasty, of the whole.' Quiller-Couch, too, seems reluctant to accept a collaborator; for his colleague, Dover Wilson, Shakespeare either 'created or recreated the play,' and Craig in his recent edition of Shakespeare's plays (New York, 1952) also thinks of it as 'probably' Shakespeare's play.

There can be no general agreement on the date of the play, in view of the various theories of its relationship to A Shrew. Some rather complicated reasoning by Bond leads him to date the play as of 1594–95, Craig opts for 1593, and Dover Wilson would place it 'before the summer of 1592 or at any rate before 2 May 1594.'[2]

2 For further discussion of the genesis of The Shrew, in addition to the authorities cited, see: R. A. Houk, 'Evolution of The Taming of the Shrew,' PMLA, December 1942, pp. 1009–38; and 'Strata in the Taming of the Shrew,' Studies in Philology, 1942, 291–302; H. Dugdale Sykes, The Authorship of 'The Taming of a Shrew,' Shakespeare Association, 1919; E. P. Kuhl, 'The Authorship of The Taming of the Shrew,' PMLA, 40, 551–618; G. I. Duthie, 'The Taming of a Shrew and The Taming of the Shrew' (Review of English Studies, 19 (1948), 337–56).

ACT FIRST ❧ SCENE FIRST

Enter Beggar [Christopher Sly] and Hostess.

Sly. I'll pheeze you, in faith.

Hostess. A pair of stocks, you rogue!

Sly. Y'are a baggage: the Slys are no rogues; look in the chronicles; we came in with Richard Conqueror. Therefore, paucas pallabris; let the world slide. Sessa!

Hostess. You will not pay for the glasses you have burst?

Sly. No, not a denier. Go, by St. Jeronimy, go to thy cold bed and warm thee.

Hostess. I know my remedy: I must go fetch the third-borough. [Exit.]

Sly. Third or fourth or fifth borough, I'll answer him by law. I'll not budge an inch, boy: let him come and kindly. Falls asleep.

Wind horns. Enter a Lord from hunting, with his train.

Lord. Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds:
Broach Merriman, the poor cur is emboss'd,
And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd brach.
Saw'st thou not, boy, how Silver made it good
At the hedge-corner in the coldest fault?
I would not lose the dog for twenty pound.

1. Huntsman. Why Bellman is as good as he, my lord;
He cried upon it at the merest loss
And twice today pick'd out the dullest scent.
Trust me, I take him for the better dog.

Lord. Thou art a fool: if Echo were as fleet,
I would esteem him worth a dozen such.
But sup them well and look unto them all.
Tomorrow I intend to hunt again.

1. Huntsman. I will, my lord.

Lord. What's here? one dead or drunk? See, doth he breathe?

2. Huntsman. He breathes, my lord. Were he not warm'd with ale
This were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.

Lord. O monstrous beast! how like a swine he lies!
Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine image!
Sirs, I will practice on this drunken man.
What think you, if he were convey'd to bed,
Wrapp'd in sweet clothes, rings put upon his fingers,
A most delicious banquet by his bed,
And brave attendants near him when he wakes,
Would not the beggar then forget himself?

1. Huntsman. Believe me, lord, I think he cannot choose.

2. Huntsman. It would seem strange unto him when he wak'd.

Lord. Even as a flatt'ring dream or worthless fancy.
Then take him up and manage well the jest.
Carry him gently to my fairest chamber
And hang it round with all my wanton pictures,
Balm his foul head in warm distilled waters
And burn sweet wood to make the lodging sweet.
Procure me music ready when he wakes
To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound;
And if he chance to speak be ready straight,
And with a low submissive reverence
Say, 'What is it your honor will command?'
Let one attend him with a silver basin
Full of rose water and bestrew'd with flowers;
Another bear the ewer, the third a diaper,
And say, "Will't please your lordship cool your hands?'
Some one be ready with a costly suit
And ask him what apparel he will wear,
Another tell him of his hounds and horse
And that his lady mourns at his disease.
Persuade him that he hath been lunatic;
And when he says he is, say that he dreams,
For he is nothing but a mighty lord.
This do, and do it kindly, gentle sirs.
It will be pastime passing excellent,
If it be husbanded with modesty.

1. Huntsman. My lord, I warrant you we will play our part,
As he shall think, by our true diligence,
He is no less than what we say he is.

Lord. Take him up gently, and to bed with him,
And each one to his office when he wakes.
[Sly is borne out.] Sound trumpets.
Sirrah, go see what trumpet 'tis that sounds: [Exit Servingman.]
Belike some noble gentleman that means,
Traveling some journey, to repose him here.

Enter Servingman.

How now! who is it?

Servingman. An't please your honor, players
That offer service to your lordship.

Enter Players.

Lord. Bid them come near.
Now, fellows, you are welcome.

Players. We thank your honor.

Lord. Do you intend to stay with me tonight?

A Player. So please your lordship to accept our duty.

Lord. With all my heart. This fellow I remember
Since once he play'd a farmer's eldest son:
'Twas where you woo'd the gentlewoman so well.
I have forgot your name; but sure that part
Was aptly fitted and naturally perform'd.

A Player. I think 'twas Soto that your honor means.

Lord. 'Tis very true: thou didst it excellent.
Well, you are come to me in happy time,
The rather for I have some sport in hand

ACT 1, SCENE 1 SD ENTER . . . HOSTESS (SD is used throughout to indicate stage directions.) F Enter Begger and Hostess, Christopher Sly. 1 Sly: F Begger throughout Cf. n. pheeze you: do for you 2 stocks: The hostess threatens Sly with being put in the stocks 4 Richard: Sly's error for 'William' 5 paucas pallabris: few words (corrupt Spanish). 6 Sessa: be quiet (French cessez) 9 denier: small copper coin, 'tenth of an English pennie' St. Jeronimy; Cf. n. 12 third-borough: constable; F Head-borough 16 tender well: take good care of 17 Broach: F Brach Cf. n. emboss'd: foaming at the mouth from hard running 18 couple: Cf. n. brach bitch 20 in the coldest fault where the scent was nearly lost 23 cried upon it: gave tongue merest loss: when it was quite lost 36 practice: play a trick 42 brave: finely dressed

47 even: read 'e'en' 51 Balm: perfume 55 straight: at once 60 diaper: towel 67 when he says he is: i.e. when Sly says he is now mad 69 kindly: naturally 70 passing: surpassingly 71 husbanded: managed modesty: moderation 72 warrant: read 'warn't' 73 As: so that 79 Belike: probably 82 An't: if it SD Enter Players: Cf. n. 84 come near: enter 88 A Player: F Player duty: expression of respect 93 naturally: read 'nat'rally' 94 A Player: F Sincklo Cf. n. Soto: Cf. n. 97 The rather for: the more so because

Wherein your cunning can assist me much.
There is a lord will hear you play tonight;
But I am doubtful of your modesties, Lest, over-eyeing of his odd behavior—
For yet his honor never heard a play—
You break into some merry passion
And so offend him; for I tell you, sirs,
If you should smile he grows impatient.
A Player. Fear not, my lord, we can contain ourselves
Were he the veriest antic in the world.
Lord. Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery
And give them friendly welcome every one.
Let them want nothing that my house affords.
Exit one with the Players.
Sirrah, go you to Barthol'mew my page
And see him dress'd in all suits like a lady:
That done, conduct him to the drunkard's chamber
And call him 'madam'; do him obeisance.
Tell him from me—as he will win my love—
He bear himself with honorable action
Such as he hath observ'd in noble ladies
Unto their lords, by them accomplished:
Such duty to the drunkard let him do
With soft low tongue and lowly courtesy,
And say, 'What is't your honor will command
Wherein your lady and your humble wife
May show her duty and make known her love?'
And then, with kind embracements, tempting kisses,
And with declining head into his bosom,
Bid him shed tears, as being overjoy'd
To see her noble lord restor'd to health
Who for this seven years hath esteemed him
No better than a poor and loathsome beggar.
And if the boy have not a woman's gift
To rain a shower of commanded tears
An onion will do well for such a shift,
Which in a napkin being close convey'd
Shall in despite enforce a watery eye.
See this dispatch'd with all the haste thou canst:
Anon I'll give thee more instructions. Exit a Servingman.
I know the boy will well usurp the grace,
Voice, gait, and action of a gentlewoman.
I long to hear him call the drunkard husband,
And how my men will stay themselves from laughter
When they do homage to this simple peasant.
I'll in to counsel them: haply my presence
May well abate the over merry spleen
Which otherwise would grow into extremes. [Exeunt.]

Scene Second

Enter aloft the drunkard [Sly], with attendants, some with apparel, [others with] basin and ewer, and other appurtenances, and Lord.

Sly. For God's sake! a pot of small ale.
1. Servingman. Will't please your lordship drink a cup of sack?
2. Servingman. Will't please your honor taste of these conserves?
3. Servingman. What raiment will your honor wear today?
Sly. I am Christophero Sly; call not me honor nor lordship. I ne'er drank sack in my life; and if you give me any conserves, give me conserves of beef. Ne'er ask me what raiment I'll wear for I have no more doublets than backs, no more stockings than legs nor no more shoes than feet: nay, sometime more feet than shoes or such shoes as my toes look through the overleather.
Lord. Heaven cease this idle humor in your honor! O that a mighty man of such descent,
Of such possessions and so high esteem
Should be infused with so foul a spirit!
Sly. What! would you make me mad? Am not I Christopher Sly, old Sly's son, of Burton-heath; by birth a pedlar, by education a cardmaker, by transmutation a bearherd, and now by present profession a tinker? Ask Marian Hacket, the fat ale-wife of Wincot, if she know me not: if she say I am not fourteen pence on the score for sheer ale score me up for the lyingest knave in Christendom. What! I am not bestraught: here's—
3. Servingman. O! this it is that makes your lady mourn.
2. Servingman. O! this is it that makes your servants droop.
Lord. Hence comes it that your kindred shuns your house.
As beaten hence by your strange lunacy.
O noble lord, bethink thee of thy birth,
Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment
And banish hence these abject lowly dreams.
Look how thy servants do attend on thee,
Each in his office ready at thy beck.
Wilt thou have music? hark! Apollo plays, Music.
And twenty caged nightingales do sing.
Or wilt thou sleep? we'll have thee to a couch
Softer and sweeter than the lustful bed
On purpose trimm'd up for Semiramis.
Say thou wilt walk, we will bestrow the ground;
Or wilt thou ride? thy horses shall be trapp'd,
Their harness studded all with gold and pearl.
Dost thou love hawking? thou hast hawks will soar
Above the morning lark; or wilt thou hunt?

98 cunning: skill 100 modesties: discretion over-eyeing: observing 103 merry passion: fits of laughter 107 antic: eccentric 108 buttery: room where drink is kept 110 want: lack 111 page; Cf. n. 112 in all suits: in every respect 118 them: pleonastic, referring to ladies accomplished: performed 119 duty: service 128 him: himself 132 shift: purpose 133 napkin: handkerchief close: secretly 134 watery: read 'wat'ry' 136 anon: presently 137 usurp: imitate 140 stay: keep 143 spleen: mood (the spleen was thought to be the seat of passions)

SD aloft: i.e. on the balcony at the back of the stage. ewer: wide-mouthed pitcher 3 sack: Spanish and Canary wine 9 conserves of beef: salt beef 15 idle humor: absurd fancy 20 Sly's: F. Sies Burton-heath: perhaps Barton-on-the-Heath, a Warwickshire village 21 cardmaker: cards are instruments for combing wool 22 bearherd: one who leads about a tame bear 24 Wincot: a place, once a hamlet, near Stratford 25 sheer ale: i.e. ale only 27 bestraught: Sly means 'distraught' 28 3. Servingman: F 3 Man 34 ancient thoughts: former reason 38 Apollo: god of music 42 Semiramis: legendary lustful queen of Assyria 44 trapp'd: adorned 46 will soar: which will soar

Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.
1. Servingman. Say thou wilt course, thy greyhounds are as swift
As breathed stags, ay, fleeter than the roe.
2. Servingman. Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee straight
Adonis painted by a running brook
And Cytherea all in sedges hid,
Which seem to move and wanton with her breath
Even as the waving sedges play with wind.
Lord. We'll show thee Io as she was a maid
And how she was beguiled and surpris'd
As lively painted as the deed was done.
3. Servingman. Or Daphne roaming through a thorny wood,
Scratching her legs that one shall swear she bleeds;
And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep,
So workmanly the blood and tears are drawn.
Lord. Thou art a lord and nothing but a lord;
Thou hast a lady far more beautiful
Than any woman in this waning age.
1. Servingman. And till the tears that she hath shed for thee
Like envious floods o'errun her lovely face
She was the fairest creature in the world,
And yet she is inferior to none.
Sly. Am I a lord? and have I such a lady?
Or do I dream? or have I dream'd till now?
I do not sleep; I see, I hear, I speak;
I smell sweet savors and I feel soft things:
Upon my life, I am a lord indeed
And not a tinker nor Christopher Sly.
Well, bring our lady hither to our sight
And once again, a pot o' th' smallest ale.
2. Servingman. Will't please your mightiness to wash your hands?
O, how we joy to see your wit restor'd!
O, that once more you knew but what you are!
These fifteen years you have bin in a dream.
Or when you wak'd so wak'd as if you slept.
Sly. These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly nap.
But did I never speak of all that time?
1. Servingman. O yes, my lord, but very idle words;
For though you lay here in this goodly chamber,
Yet would you say ye were beaten out of door
And rail upon the hostess of the house
And say you would present her at the leet
Because she brought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts.
Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket.
Sly. Ay, the woman's maid of the house.
3. Servingman. Why, sir, you know no house nor no such maid
Nor no such men as you have reckon'd up,
As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Greece,
And Peter Turf, and Henry Pimpernell,
And twenty more such names and men as these
Which never were nor no man ever saw.
Sly. Now, Lord be thanked for my good amends!
All. Amen.

Enter [the Page, as a] Lady, with Attendants.

Sly. I thank thee; thou shalt not lose by it.
Page. How fares my noble lord?
Sly. Marry, I fare well for here is cheer enough.
Where is my wife?
Page. Here, noble lord: what is thy will with her?
Sly. Are you my wife and will not call me husband?
My men should call me lord: I am your goodman.
Page. My husband and my lord, my lord and husband;
I am your wife in all obedience.
Sly. I know it well. What must I call her?
Lord. Madam.
Sly. Al'ce madam or Joan madam?
Lord. Madam and nothing else: so lords call ladies.
Sly. Madam wife, they say that I have dream'd
And slept above some fifteen year or more.
Page. Ay, and the time seems thirty unto me,
Being all this time abandon'd from your bed.
Sly. 'Tis much. Servants, leave me and her alone.
Madam, undress you and come now to bed.
Page. Thrice noble lord, let me entreat of you
To pardon me yet for a night or two,
Or, if not so, until the sun be set:
For your physicians have expressly charg'd,
In peril to incur your former malady,
That I should yet absent me from your bed.
I hope this reason stands for my excuse.
Sly. Ay, it stands so, that I may hardly tarry so long; but I would be loath to fall into my dreams again: I will therefore tarry in despite of the flesh and the blood.

Enter a Messenger.

Messenger. Your honor's players, hearing your amendment,
Are come to play a pleasant comedy;
For so your doctors hold it very meet,
Seeing too much sadness hath congeal'd your blood,
And melancholy is the nurse of frenzy:
Therefore they thought it good you hear a play
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
Which bars a thousand harms and lengthens life.
Sly. Marry, I will let them play. It is not a comonty, a Christmas gambold, or a tumbling-trick?
Page. No, my good lord, it is more pleasing stuff.
Sly. What! household stuff?
Page. It is a kind of history.
Sly. Well, we'll see't. Come, madam wife, sit by my side and let the world slip: we shall nere be younger. Flourish.

48 welkin: sky 50 course: hunt hares with greyhounds 52 breathed: in full breath roe: a type of small deer 55 Adonis; Cf. n. 56 Cytherea: Venus 57 wanton: sway lasciviously 58 even: read 'e'en' 59 Io: Greek maiden loved by Zeus 62 Daphne; Cf. n. 65 workmanly: skillfully 68 waning: degenerate 80 smallest: weakest 83 wit: reason 87 by my: read 'bim' fay: faith 88 of: in 93 leet: manorial court where, among others, those accused of using false measures were tried 94 seal'd: stamped with official seal indicating capacity 95 Cicely: read 'Cic'ly' 100, 101 As Stephen Sly . . . Henry Pimpernell; Cf. n.

104 amends: recovery SD Page, as a Lady: F Lady throughout 122 abandon'd: banished 129 to incur: of incurring 131 reason: pronounced 'raisin,' allowing play on 'raising' 145 comonty: Sly's version of 'comedy' 146 gambold: gambol, 'stunt' 151 nere: never SD Flourish: meaning 'sound the trumpets'

Scene Third

Enter Lucentio and his man Tranio.

Lucentio. Tranio, since for the great desire I had
To see fair Padua, nursery of arts,
I am arriv'd for fruitful Lumbardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy,
And by my father's love and leave am arm'd
With his good will and thy good company,
My trusty servant well approv'd in all,
Here let us breathe and haply institute
A course of learning and ingenious studies.
Pisa, renowned for grave citizens,
Gave me my being and my father first,
A merchant of great traffic through the world,
Vincentio come of the Bentivolii.
Vincentio's son, brought up in Florence,
It shall become to serve all hopes conceiv'd,
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study,
Virtue and that part of philosophy
Will I apply that treats of happiness
By virtue specially to be achiev'd.
Tell me thy mind, for I have Pisa left
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A shallow plash to plunge him in the deep
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.
Tranio. Me pardonato, gentle master mine:
I am in all affected as yourself,
Glad that you thus continue your resolve
To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy.
Only, good master, while we do admire
This virtue and this moral discipline,
Let's be no stoics nor no stocks, I pray;
Or so devote to Aristotle's checks
As Ovid be an outcast quite abjur'd.
Balk logic with acquaintance that you have
And practice rhetoric in your common talk.
Music and poesy use to quicken you;
The mathematics and the metaphysics,
Fall to them as you find your stomach serves you.
No profit grows where is no pleasure tane;
In brief, sir, study what you most affect.
Lucentio. Gramercies, Tranio, well dost thou advise.
If, Biondello, thou wert come ashore,
We could at once put us in readiness
And take a lodging fit to entertain
Such friends as time in Padua shall beget.
But stay awhile: what company is this?
Tranio. Master, some show to welcome us to town.

Enter Baptista with his two daughters, Katherina and Bianca, Gremio, a Pantaloon, [and] Hortensio, suitor to Bianca. Lucentio [and] Tranio stand by.

2, 3 Padua: ... Lumbardy; Cf. n. 3 for: in 7 approv'd: tried 8 institute: begin 9 ingenious: intellectual 15 serve: fulfill 19 apply: study 23 plash: pool 25 Me pardonato: begging your pardon (bad Italian) 26 affected: disposed 31 stocks: wooden creatures, like posts—with play on 'stoics' 32 devote: devoted checks: restraints 33 As: so that Ovid: the poet of love 34 Balk logic: bandy arguments, use dialectic 36 poesy: monosyllabic here quicken: stimulate 37 metaphysics; Cf. n. 38 stomach: inclination 39 tane: taken 40 affect: care for 41 Gramercies: many thanks SD Pantaloon; Cf. n. Katherina: F Katerina, and so pronounced suitor: F sister by: aside

Baptista. Gentlemen, importune me no farther,
For how I firmly am resolv'd you know;
That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter
Before I have a husband for the elder.
If either of you both love Katherina,
Because I know you well and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.
Gremio. To cart her rather; she's too rough for me.
There, there, Hortensio, will you any wife?
Katherina. I pray you, sir, is it your will
To make a stale of me amongst these mates?
Hortensio. Mates, maid! how mean you that? no mates for you
Unless you were of gentler, milder mold.
Katherina. I' faith, sir, you shall never need to fear:
Iwis it is not halfway to her heart;
But if it were, doubt not her care should be
To comb your noddle with a three-legg'd stool
And paint your face and use you like a fool.
Hortensio. From all such divels, good Lord deliver us!
Gremio. And me too, good Lord!
Tranio. Husht, master! here is some good pastime toward.
That wench is stark mad or wonderful froward.
Lucentio. But in the other's silence do I see
Maid's mild behavior and sobriety.
Peace, Tranio!
Tranio. Well said, master; mum! and gaze your fill.
Baptista. Gentlemen, that I may soon make good
What I have said—Bianca, get you in:
And let it not displease thee, good Bianca,
For I will love thee nere the less, my girl.
Katherina. A pretty pet! it is best
Put finger in the eye, an she knew why.
Bianca. Sister, content you in my discontent.
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:
My books and instruments shall be my company,
On them to look and practice by myself.
Lucentio. Hark, Tranio! thou mayst hear Minerva speak.
Hortensio. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange?
Sorry am I that our good will effects
Bianca's grief.
Gremio. Why will you mew her up,
Signior Baptista, for this fiend of hell
And make her bear the penance of her tongue?
Baptista. Gentlemen, content ye; I am resolv'd.
Go in, Bianca: [Exit Bianca.]
And for I know she taketh most delight
In music, instruments, and poetry,
Schoolmasters will I keep within my house,
Fit to instruct her youth. If you, Hortensio,
Or Signior Gremio, you, know any such,
Prefer them hither; for to cunning men
I will be very kind, and liberal
To mine own children in good bringing up;
And so, farewell. Katherina, you may stay
For I have more to commune with Bianca. Exit.

57 cart; Cf. n. 60 stale: laughingstock mates: (low) fellows, with pun on 'stalemate,' chess term 61 mates: husbands 65 Iwis: indeed 68 paint your face: i.e. with scratches 71 toward: at hand 72 froward: bold 76 master: F. Mr. 81, 82 it is best ... knew why: let her cry—if she only knew what cause she has 87 Minerva: goddess of wisdom 88 strange: unkind (to Bianca) 91 mew: shut, a term from falconry 96 for: since 101 prefer: recommend cunning: well-trained, able Katherina. Why, and I trust I may go too; may I not?

What! shall I be appointed hours, as though, belike,
I knew not what to take and what to leave? Ha! Exit.

Gremio. You may go to the divel's dam: your gifts are so good, here's none will hold you. Their love is not so great, Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together and fast it fairly out; our cake's dough on both sides. Farewell: yet, for the love I bear my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means light on a fit man to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish him to her father.

Hortensio. So will I, Signor Gremio: but a word, I pray. Though the nature of our quarrel yet never brooked parle, know now, upon advice, it toucheth us both—that we may yet again have access to our fair mistress and be happy rivals in Bianca's love—to labor and effect one thing specially.

Gremio. What's that, I pray?

Hortensio. Marry, sir, to get a husband for her sister.

Gremio. A husband! a divel.

Hortensio. I say, a husband.

Gremio. I say, a divel. Thinkst thou, Hortensio, though her father be very rich, any man is so very
a fool to be married to hell?

Hortensio. Tush, Gremio! though it pass your patience and mine to endure her loud alarums, why, man, there be good fellows in the world, an a man could light on them, would take her with all faults, and money enough.

Gremio. I cannot tell; but I had as lief take her dowry with this condition, to be whipped at the high-cross every morning.

Hortensio. Faith, as you say, there's small choice in rotten apples. But come; since this bar in law makes us friends, it shall be so far forth friendly maintained, till by helping Baptista's eldest daughter to a husband, we set his youngest free for a husband, and then have to't afresh. Sweet Bianca! Happy man be his dole! He that runs fastest gets the ring. How say you, Signior Gremio?

Gremio. I am agreed: and would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooing, that would thoroughly woo her, wed her, and bed her, and rid the house of her. Come on.

Exeunt ambo. Mane[n]t Tranio and Lucentio.

Tranio. I pray, sir, tell me, is it possible
That love should of a sudden take such hold?

Lucentio. O Tranio! till I found it to be true
I never thought it possible or likely.
But see, while idly I stood looking on,
I found the effect of love in idleness
And now in plainness do confess to thee,
That art to me as secret and as dear
As Anna to the Queen of Carthage was,
Tranio, I burn, I pine, I perish, Tranio,
If I achieve not this young modest girl.
Counsel me, Tranio, for I know thou canst.
Assist me, Tranio, for I know thou wilt.

Tranio. Master, it is no time to chide you now;
Affection is not rated from the heart:
If love have touch'd you, nought remains but so,
Redime te captam, quam queas minimo.

Lucentio. Gramercies, lad; go forward. This contents;
The rest will comfort, for thy counsel's sound.

Tranio. Master, you look'd so longly on the maid,
Perhaps you mark'd not what's the pith of all.

Lucentio. O yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face,
Such as the daughter of Agenor had,
That made great Jove to humble him to her hand
When with his knees he kiss'd the Cretan strond.

Tranio. Saw you no more? mark'd you not how her sister
Began to scold and raise up such a storm
That mortal ears might hardly endure the din?

Lucentio. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move
And with her breath she did perfume the air.
Sacred and sweet was all I saw in her.

Tranio. Nay, then, 'tis time to stir him from his trance.
I pray, awake, sir: if you love the maid
Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it stands:
Her elder sister is so curst and shrewd
That till the father rid his hands of her,
Master, your love must live a maid at home;
And therefore has he closely mew'd her up,
Because she will not be annoy'd with suitors.

Lucentio. Ah, Tranio, what a cruel father's he!
But art thou not advis'd he took some care
To get her cunning schoolmasters to instruct her?

Tranio. Ay, marry, am I, sir; and now 'tis plotted.

Lucentio. I have it, Tranio.

Tranio. Master, for my hand,
Both our inventions meet and jump in one.

Lucentio. Tell me thine first.

Tranio. You will be schoolmaster
And undertake the teaching of the maid;
That's your device.

Lucentio. It is; may it be done?

Tranio. Not possible, for who shall bear your part
And be in Padua here Vincentio's son?
Keep house and ply his book, welcome his friends,
Visit his countrymen and banquet them?

Lucentio. Basta, content thee; for I have it full.
We have not yet been seen in any house
Nor can we be distinguish'd by our faces
For man or master: then, it follows thus:
Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead,
Keep house, and port, and servants, as I should.
I will some other be; some Florentine,

109 to the divel's dam: to the devil gifts: endowments 110, 111 Their love is not so great: The love of women is not so important; Cf. n. 111, 112 blow our nails together: be patient fairly: well 113, 114 our cake's . . . sides: our goose is cooked 115 wish: recommend 119 brooked parle: permitted negotiation advice: reflection 129 to be: as to be 132 be: are (old plural) 136 high-cross: cross in the central square or market of a town 143 have to't afresh: resume our rivalry 143, 144 Happy man be his dole: may his lot be that of a happy man SD ambo: both (Gremio and Hortensio) Mane[n]t: remain 155 the effect: read 'th'effect' love in idleness; Cf. n.

158 Anna; Cf. n. 164 rated: driven out by scolding 165 Redime . . . minimo; Cf. n. 167 Gramercies: many thanks 169 longly: longingly or persistently 170 pith: essential point 172 daughter of Agenor; Cf. n. 174 strond: strand 184 to achieve: read 't'achieve' (cf. 1. 227) 185 curst: bad tempered shrewd: shrewdish 189 Because she will not: so that she may not 191 advis'd: aware 195 for: I'll bet 196 jump: join 201 may: can 206 Basta: enough (Italian) full: all planned 210 port: style of living

Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Pisa.
'Tis hatch'd and shall be so: Tranio, at once
Uncase thee, take my color'd hat and cloak.
When Biondello comes he waits on thee;
But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.
Tranio. So had you need.
In brief, sir, sith it your pleasure is
And I am tied to be obedient—
For so your father charg'd me at our parting;
'Be serviceable to my son,' quoth he,
Although I think 'twas in another sense—
I am content to be Lucentio
Because so well I love Lucentio.
Lucentio. Tranio, be so, because Lucentio loves,
And let me be a slave, t'achieve that maid
Whose sudden sight hath thrall'd my wounded eye.
Here comes the rogue.

Enter Biondello.

Sirrah, where have you bin?
Biondello. Where have I been! Nay, how now! where are you?
Master, has my fellow Tranio stolne your clothes,
Or you stolne his? or both? pray, what's the news?
Lucentio. Sirrah, come hither: 'tis no time to jest,
And therefore frame your manners to the time.
Your fellow Tranio, here, to save my life,
Puts my apparel and my count'nance on
And I for my escape have put on his;
For in a quarrel since I came ashore
I kill'd a man and fear I was descried.
Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes,
While I make way from hence to save my life.
You understand me?
Biondello. I, sir! nere a whit.
Lucentio. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth.
Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio.
Biondello. The better for him: would I were so too!
Tranio. So could I, faith, boy, to have the next wish after,
That Lucentio indeed had Baptista's youngest daughter.
But, sirrah, not for my sake, but your master's, I advise
You use your manners discreetly in all kind of companies:
When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio;
But in all places else your master, Lucentio.
Lucentio. Tranio, let's go.
One thing more rests, that thyself execute,
To make one among these wooers: if thou ask me why,
Sufficeth my reasons are both good and weighty. Exeunt.

The Presenters above speak.

1. Servingman. My lord, you nod; you do not mind the play.
Sly. Yes, by Saint Anne, I do. A good matter, surely; comes there any more of it?
Page. My lord, 'tis but begun.

213 meaner: of lower class 215 Uncase thee: take off your coat color'd: Tranio, as becomes a servant, is wearing a sober costume; Lucentio is more gaily clad 217 charm: compel by enchantments 219 sith: since 228 thrall'd: enthralled 230 Sirrah: usual form of addressing servants 233 stolne: stolen 238 count'nance: outward appearance 249–254 So could I . . . your master, Lucentio: F sets as prose 256 rests: remains execute: carry out SD Presenters: actors speak: F speakes 259 mind: pay attention to

Sly. 'Tis a very excellent piece of work, madam lady: would 'twere done! They sit and mark.

Scene Fourth

Enter Petruchio, and his man Grumio.

Petruchio. Verona, for awhile I take my leave
To see my friends in Padua; but, of all
My best beloved and approved friend,
Hortensio; and I trow this is his house.
Here, sirrah Grumio; knock, I say.
Grumio. Knock, sir? whom should I knock? is there any man has rebused your worship?
Petruchio. Villain, I say, knock me here soundly.
Grumio. Knock you here, sir? why, sir, what am I, sir, that I should knock you here, sir?
Petruchio. Villain, I say, knock me at this gate
And rap me well or I'll knock your knave's pate.
Grumio. My master is grown quarrelsome. I should knock you first
And then I know after who comes by the worst.
Petruchio. Will it not be?
Faith, sirrah, and you'll not knock, I'll ring it;
I'll try how you can sol, fa, and sing it.
He wrings him by the ears.
Grumio. Help, masters, help! my master is mad.
Petruchio. Now, knock when I bid you, sirrah villain!

Enter Hortensio.

Hortensio. How now, what's the matter? My old friend Grumio! and my good friend Petruchio! How do you all at Verona?
Petruchio. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray?
Con tutto il cuore ben trovato, may I say.
Hortensio. Alla nostra casa ben venuto, molto honorato signior mio Petruchio.
Rise, Grumio, rise: we will compound this quarrel.
Grumio. Nay, 'tis no matter, sir, what he 'leges in Latin. If this be not a lawful cause for me to leave his service, look you, sir, he bid me knock him and rap him soundly, sir: well, was it fit for a servant to use his master so; being, perhaps, for aught I see, two-and-thirty, a peep out?
Whom would to God, I had well knock'd at first,
Then had not Grumio come by the worst.
Petruchio. A senseless villain! Good Hortensio,
I bade the rascal knock upon your gate
And could not get him for my heart to do it.
Grumio. Knock at the gate? O heavens! Spake you not these words plain, 'Sirrah, knock me here, rap

SD mark: watch 4 trow: believe 7 rebused: Grumio's version of 'abused' 8 me: i.e. 'for me' (the ethical dative); Grumio willfully misunderstands me here as 'my ear' soundly: vigorously 12 pate: head 17 and: if ring: with play on 'wring'; see following SD 18 sol, fa: notes on the scale, said to the accompaniment of the stage business 19 masters: F mistris 25 Con . . . trovato: with all my heart well met (literally, 'found'); F Con tutti le core bene trobatto 26, 27 Alla . . . Petruchio: Welcome to our house, my most honored Signor Petruchio ben: F bene molto: F multo honorato: F honorata 28 compound: settle 29 'leges: alleges 30 Latin: so the foregoing 'foreign talk' seems to Grumio 34 two-and-thirty, a peep out: expression derived from an old card game, meaning 'intoxicated' peep: pip, one of the suit markings on a playing card 35, 6 Whom would . . . the worst: F sets as prose me here, knock me well, and knock me soundly?' And come you now with 'knocking at the gate'?

Petruchio. Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise you.

Hortensio. Petruchio, patience; I am Grumio's pledge.
Why, this a heavy chance 'twixt him and you,
Your ancient, trusty, pleasant servant Grumio.
And tell me now, sweet friend, what happy gale
Blows you to Padua here from old Verona?

Petruchio. Such wind as scatters young men through the world
To seek their fortunes farther than at home,
Where small experience grows. But in a few,
Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me:
Antonio, my father, is deceas'd
And I have thrust myself into this maze,
Happily to wive and thrive as best I may.
Crowns in my purse I have and goods at home
And so am come abroad to see the world.

Hortensio. Petruchio, shall I then come roundly to thee
And wish thee to a shrewd ill-favor'd wife?
Thou'dst thank me but a little for my counsel
And yet I'll promise thee she shall be rich,
And very rich: but thou'rt too much my friend
And I'll not wish thee to her.

Petruchio. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we Few words suffice; and therefore, if thou know
One rich enough to be Petruchio's wife,
As wealth is burthen of my wooing dance,
Be she as foul as was Florentius' love,
As old as Sibyl, and as curst and shrowd
As Socrates' Zentippe, or a worse,
She moves me not, or not removes, at least,
Affection's edge in me, were she as rough
As are the swelling Adriatic seas.
I come to wive it wealthily in Padua;
If wealthily, then happily in Padua.

Grumio. Nay, look you, sir, he tells you flatly what his mind is; why, give him gold enough and marry him to a puppet or an aglet-baby or an old trot with ne'er a tooth in her head, though she have as many diseases as two-and-fifty horses: why, nothing comes amiss so money comes withal.

Hortensio. Petruchio, since we are stepp'd thus far in,
I will continue that I broach'd in jest.
I can, Petruchio, help thee to a wife
With wealth enough and young and beauteous,
Brought up as best becomes a gentlewoman.
Her only fault—and that is faults enough—
Is that she is intolerable curst
And shrowd and froward, so beyond all measure,
That were my state far worser than it is
I would not wed her for a mine of gold.

Petruchio. Hortensio, peace! thou know'st not gold's effect.
Tell me her father's name, and 'tis enough;
For I will board her though she chide as loud
As thunder when the clouds in autumn crack.

Hortensio. Her father is Baptista Minola,
An affable and courteous gentleman;
Her name is Katherina Minola,
Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.

Petruchio. I know her father though I know not her,
And he knew my deceased father well.
I will not sleep, Hortensio, till I see her;
And therefore let me be thus bold with you,
To give you over at this first encounter
Unless you will accompany me thither.

Grumio. I pray you, sir, let him go while the humor lasts. A my word, and she knew him as well as I do she would think scolding would do little good upon him. She may perhaps call him half a score knaves or so; why, that's nothing: and he begin once, he'll rail in his rope-tricks. I'll tell you what, sir, an she stand him but a little, he will throw a figure in her face and so disfigure her with it that she shall have no more eyes to see withal than a cat. You know him not, sir.

Hortensio. Tarry, Petruchio, I must go with thee
For in Baptista's keep my treasure is.
He hath the jewel of my life in hold,
His youngest daughter, beautiful Bianca,
And her withholds from me and other more,
Suitors to her and rivals in my love,
Supposing it a thing impossible,
For those defects I have before rehears'd,
That ever Katherina will be woo'd.
Therefore this order hath Baptista tane,
That none shall have access unto Bianca
Till Katherine the curst have got a husband.

Grumio. Katherine the curst!
A title for a maid of all titles the worst.

Hortensio. Now shall my friend Petruchio do me grace
And offer me, disguis'd in sober robes,
To old Baptista as a schoolmaster
Well seen in music, to instruct Bianca,
That so I may, by this device, at least
Have leave and leisure to make love to her
And unsuspected court her by herself.

Enter Gremio, and Lucentio disguised.

Grumio. Here's no knavery! See, to beguile the old folks, how the young folks lay their heads together! Master, master, look about you: who goes there, ha?

Hortensio. Peace, Grumio! it is the rival of my love. Petruchio, stand by awhile.

Grumio. A proper stripling, and an amorous!

Gremio. O! very well; I have perus'd the note.
Hark you, sir; I'll have them very fairly bound:
All books of love, see that at any hand,
And see you read no other lectures to her.

46 this: this is heavy: sad 53 in a few: i.e. words 58 crowns: coins 60 come roundly: speak plainly 69 burthen: the accompaniment 70 foul: ugly Florentius' Cf. n. 71 Sibyl: legendary female prophet Cf. n. shrowd: shrewd 72 Zentippe: Xanthippe, Socrates' shrewish wife 74 as: F is as 80 aglet-baby: small figure carved on the tag of a point of lace (French aiguillete) trot: hag 85 that: what 90 intolerable: intolerably 91 froward: contrary 92 state: financial condition

97 board: approach, woo chide: scold 107 give you over: leave you 110 A: on 114 rope-tricks: tricks worthy of the rope (i.e. hanging) with play on 'rhetorics'; cf. figure, 1. 115 114 stand: withstand 117 cat: perhaps because a cat has eyes half closed in daytime, with incidental play on 'cat' and 'Kate' 123 me and other more: F me. Other more 128 order . . . tane: measures . . . taken 133 grace: a favor 136 seen: instructed 145 proper stripling: fine young man (ironical) 146 note: memorandum 148 at any hand: in any case

You understand me. Over and beside
Signior Baptista's liberality,
I'll mend it with a largess. Take your paper too
And let me have them very well perfum'd,
For she is sweeter than perfume itself
To whom they go to. What will you read to her?
Lucentio. What ere I read to her, I'll plead for you,
As for my patron, stand you so assur'd,
As firmly as yourself were still in place;
Yea, and perhaps with more successful words
Than you unless you were a scholar, sir.
Gremio. O! this learning, what a thing it is.
Grumio. O! this woodcock, what an ass it is.
Petruchio. Peace, sirrah!
Hortensio. Grumio, mum! God save you, Signior Gremio!
Gremio. And you are well met, Signior Hortensio.
Trow you whither I am going? To Baptista Minola.
I promis'd to inquire carefully
About a schoolmaster for the fair Bianca,
And, by good fortune, I have lighted well
On this young man; for learning and behavior
Fit for her turn; well read in poetry
And other books, good ones, I warrant ye.
Hortensio. 'Tis well: and I have met a gentleman
Hath promis'd me to help me to another,
A fine musician to instruct our mistress:
So shall I no whit be behind in duty
To fair Bianca, so belov'd of me.
Gremio. Belov'd of me, and that my deeds shall prove.
Grumio. And that his bags shall prove.
Hortensio. Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our love.
Listen to me, and if you speak me fair
I'll tell you news indifferent good for either.
Here is a gentleman whom by chance I met,
Upon agreement from us to his liking,
Will undertake to woo curst Katherine;
Yea, and to marry her if her dowry please.
Gremio. So said, so done, is well.
Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?
Petruchio. I know she is an irksome, brawling scold:
If that be all, masters, I hear no harm.
Gremio. No, sayst me so, friend? What countryman?
Petruchio. Born in Verona, old Antonio's son:
My father dead, my fortune lives for me;
And I do hope good days and long to see.
Gremio. O, sir, such a life, with such a wife, were strange!
But if you have a stomach, to't a God's name:
You shall have me assisting you in all.
But will you woo this wildcat?
Petruchio. Will I live?
Grumio. [Aside.] Will he woo her? ay, or I'll hang her.
Petruchio. Why came I hither but to that intent?
Think you a little din can daunt mine ears?
Have I not in my time heard lions roar?
Have I not heard the sea, puff'd up with winds,
Rage like an angry boar chafed with sweat?
Have I not heard great ordnance in the field
And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies?
Have I not in a pitched battle heard
Loud larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets' clang?
And do you tell me of a woman's tongue,
That gives not half so great a blow to hear
As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?
Tush, tush! fear boys with bugs.
Grumio. [Aside.] For he fears none.
Gremio. Hortensio, hark:
This gentleman is happily arriv'd,
My mind presumes, for his own good and ours.
Hortensio. I promis'd we would be contributors,
And bear his charge of wooing, whatsoere.
Gremio. And so we will, provided that he win her.
Grumio. [Aside.] I would I were as sure of a good dinner.

Enter Tranio brave, and Biondello.

Tranio. Gentlemen, God save you! If I may be bold,
Tell me, I beseech you, which is the readiest way
To the house of Signior Baptista Minola?
Biondello. He that has the two fair daughters: is't he you mean?
Tranio. Even he, Biondello!
Gremio. Hark you, sir; you mean not her to—
Tranio. Perhaps, him and her, sir: what have you to do?
Petruchio. Not her that chides, sir, at any hand, I pray.
Tranio. I love no chiders, sir. Biondello, let's away.
Lucentio. Well begun, Tranio.
Hortensio. Sir, a word ere you go:
Are you a suitor to the maid you talk of, yea or no?
Tranio. And if I be, sir, is it any offence?
Gremio. No, if without more words, you will get you hence.
Tranio. Why, sir, I pray, are not the streets as free
For me as for you?
Gremio. But so is not she.
Tranio. For what reason, I beseech you?
Gremio. For this reason, if you'll know,
That she's the choice love of Signior Gremio.
Hortensio. That she's the chosen of Signior Hortensio.
Tranio. Softly, my masters! if you be gentlemen
Do me this right; hear me with patience.
Baptista is a noble gentleman
To whom my father is not all unknown,
And were his daughter fairer than she is
She may more suitors have, and me for one.
Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand wooers;
Then well one more may fair Bianca have,
And so she shall; Lucentio shall make one
Though Paris came in hope to speed alone.
Gremio. What! this gentleman will out-talk us all.
Lucentio. Sir, give him head. I know he'll prove a jade.
Petruchio. Hortensio, to what end are all these words?
Hortensio. Sir, let me be so bold as ask you,

152 paper: i.e. note; cf. 1.146 153 them: i.e. the books; cf. 1. 147 158 as yourself: as if you yourself in place: present 162 woodcock: bird easily caught, hence symbol of stupidity 166 trow: know 174 help me: F help one 179 bags: moneybags 180 vent: express 182 indifferent: equally 183 gentleman: disyllabic here, 'gemman' 184 upon agreement: on terms 192 Antonio's: F. Butonio's 197 a: in

206 chafed: heated, irritated 207 ordnance: cannon 208 heaven's: monosyllable artillery: trisyllable 210 larums: alarms 214 fear: frighten bugs: bogeymen 218 ours: F yours 220 charge: expense SD brave: finely dressed 251 Leda's daughter: Helen of Troy 252 one more: i.e. than she now has 254 Paris: Trojan prince who won Helen from her husband, King Menelaus came: were to come speed: succeed 256 jade: worthless nag

Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter?
Tranio. No, sir; but hear I do that he hath two,
The one as famous for a scolding tongue
As is the other for beauteous modesty.
Petruchio. Sir, sir, the first's for me; let her go by.
Gremio. Yea, leave that labor to great Hercules
And let it be more than Alcides' twelve.
Petruchio. Sir, understand you this of me in sooth:
The youngest daughter, whom you hearken for,
Her father keeps from all access of suitors
And will not promise her to any man
Until the elder sister first be wed;
The younger then is free, and not before.
Tranio. If it be so, sir, that you are the man
Must stead us all, and me amongst the rest;
And if you break the ice and do this feat,
Achieve the elder, set the younger free
For our access, whose hap shall be to have her
Will not so graceless be to be ingrate.
Hortensio. Sir, you say well, and well you do conceive;
And since you do profess to be a suitor
You must, as we do, gratify this gentleman
To whom we all rest generally beholding.
Tranio. Sir, I shall not be slack: in sign whereof,
Please ye we may contrive this afternoon
And quaff carouses to our mistress' health
And do as adversaries do in law,
Strive mightily but eat and drink as friends.
Grumio. Biondello. } O excellent motion! Fellows, let's be gone.
Hortensio. The motion's good indeed, and be it so:—
Petruchio, I shall be your ben venuto. Exeunt.

Act Second ❧ Scene First

Enter Katherina and Bianca [with her hands tied].

Bianca. Good sister, wrong me not nor wrong yourself
To make a bondmaid and a slave of me;
That I disdain: but for these other gawds,
Unbind my hands, I'll pull them off myself,
Yea, all my raiment, to my petticoat;
Or what you will command me will I do,
So well I know my duty to my elders.
Katherina. Of all thy suitors, here I charge thee, tell
Whom thou lov'st best: see thou dissemble not.
Bianca. Believe me, sister, of all the men alive
I never yet beheld that special face
Which I could fancy more than any other.
Katherina. Minion, thou liest. Is't not Hortensio?
Bianca. If you affect him, sister, here I swear
I'll plead for you myself but you shall have him.
Katherina. O! then, belike, you fancy riches more:
You will have Gremio to keep you fair.
Bianca. Is it for him you do envy me so?
Nay, then you jest and now I well perceive
You have but jested with me all this while.
I prithee, sister Kate, untie my hands.
Katherina. If that be jest then all the rest was so.
Strikes her.

Enter Baptista.

Baptista. Why, how now, dame! whence grows this insolence?
Bianca, stand aside. Poor girl! she weeps.
Go ply thy needle; meddle not with her.
For shame, thou hilding of a divelish spirit,
Why dost thou wrong her that did nere wrong thee?
When did she cross thee with a bitter word?
Katherina. Her silence flouts me and I'll be reveng'd.
Flies after Bianca.
Baptista. What! in my sight? Bianca, get thee in.
Exit [Bianca].
Katherina. What! will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see
She is your treasure, she must have a husband;
I must dance barefoot on her wedding day,
And, for your love to her, lead apes in hell.
Talk not to me: I will go sit and weep
Till I can find occasion of revenge. [Exit.]
Baptista. Was ever gentleman thus griev'd as I?
But who comes here?

Enter Gremio, [with] Lucentio in the habit of a mean man; Petruchio, with [Hortensio as a Musician; and] Tranio, with his boy [Biondello] bearing a lute and books.

Gremio. Good morrow, neighbor Baptista.
Baptista. Good morrow, neighbor Gremio. God save you, gentlemen!
Petruchio. And you, good sir. Pray, have you not a daughter
Call'd Katherina, fair and virtuous?
Baptista. I have a daughter, sir, call'd Katherina.
Gremio. You are too blunt: go to it orderly.
Petruchio. You wrong me, Signior Gremio: give me leave.
I am a gentleman of Verona, sir,
That, hearing of her beauty and her wit,
Her affability and bashful modesty,
Her wondrous qualities and mild behavior,
Am bold to show myself a forward guest
Within your house, to make mine eye the witness
Of that report which I so oft have heard.
And, for an entrance to my entertainment,
I do present you with a man of mine, [Presenting Hortensio.]
Cunning in music and the mathematics,
To instruct her fully in those sciences,
Whereof I know she is not ignorant.
Accept of him, or else you do me wrong:
His name is Licio, born in Mantua.
Baptista. Y'are welcome, sir; and he, for your good sake.
But for my daughter Katherina, this I know,

265 Alcide's: Hercules Cf. n. 267 hearken: lie in wait, long 273 stead: help 274 feat: F seeke 276 whose hap shall be: whoever has the good luck 277 to: as to ingrate: ungrateful 280 gratify: reward 281 generally: read 'gen'rally' 283 contrive: while away 284 carouses: full glasses of liquor 290 I . . . venuto: I shall sponsor you, see to your reception. 3 gawds: adornments; F goods 13 Minion: minx

17 fair: richly dressed 18 envy: (stressed — –˘) dislike 27 hilding: wretch 34 dance barefoot on her wedding day: Cf. n. 35 lead apes in hell: proverbial destiny of old maids Cf. Much Ado About Nothing II.1.39. 58 To instruct: read 't'instruct'

She is not for your turn, the more my grief.
Petruchio. I see you do not mean to part with her
Or else you like not of my company.
Baptista. Mistake me not; I speak but as I find.
Whence are you, sir? what may I call your name?
Petruchio. Petruchio is my name, Antonio's son,
A man well known throughout all Italy.
Baptista. I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.
Gremio. Saving your tale, Petruchio, I pray,
Let us, that are poor petitioners, speak too.
Bacare! you are marvelous forward.
Petruchio. O, pardon me, Signior Gremio, I would fain be doing.
Gremio. I doubt it not, sir; but you will curse your wooing.
Neighbor, this is a gift very grateful, I am sure of
it. To express the like kindness myself, that have been more kindly beholding to you than any, freely give unto you this young scholar, [Presenting Lucentio.] that hath been long studying at Rheims; as cunning in Greek,
Latin, and other languages, as the other in music and mathematics. His name is Cambio; pray accept his service.
Baptista. A thousand thanks, Signior Gremio; Welcome, good Cambio.—[To Tranio.] But, gentle sir, methinks you walk like a stranger: may I be so bold to know the cause of your coming?
Tranio. Pardon me, sir, the boldness is mine own,
That, being a stranger in this city here,
Do make myself a suitor to your daughter,
Unto Bianca, fair and virtuous.
Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me
In the preferment of the eldest sister.
This liberty is all that I request,
That, upon knowledge of my parentage,
I may have welcome 'mongst the rest that woo
And free access and favor as the rest.
And, toward the education of your daughters
I here bestow a simple instrument,
And this small packet of Greek and Latin books:
If you accept them, then their worth is great.
Baptista. Lucentio is your name, of whence, I pray?
Tranio. Of Pisa, sir; son to Vincentio.
Baptista. A mighty man of Pisa; by report
I know him well. You are very welcome, sir.
[To Hortensio.] Take you that lute, [To Lucentio.] and you
the set of books;
You shall go see your pupils presently.
Holla, within!

Enter a Servant.

Sirrah, lead these gentlemen
To my daughters and tell them both
These are their tutors: bid them use them well.
[Exit Servant, with Lucentio and Hortensio, Biondello following.]
We will go walk a little in the orchard
And then to dinner. You are passing welcome
And so I pray you all to think yourselves.
Petruchio. Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste
And every day I cannot come to woo.
You knew my father well, and in him me,
Left solely heir to all his lands and goods,
Which I have better'd rather than decreas'd:
Then tell me, if I get your daughter's love
What dowry shall I have with her to wife?
Baptista. After my death the one half of my lands,
And in possession twenty thousand crowns.
Petruchio. And, for that dowry, I'll assure her of
Her widowhood, be it that she survive me,
In all my lands and leases whatsoever.
Let specialties be therefore drawn between us
That convenants may be kept on either hand.
Baptista. Ay, when the special thing is well obtain'd,
That is, her love; for that is all in all.
Petruchio. Why, that is nothing; for I tell you, father,
I am as peremptory as she proud-minded;
And where two raging fires meet together
They do consume the thing that feeds their fury:
Though little fire grows great with little wind,
Yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all;
So I to her, and so she yields to me;
For I am rough and woo not like a babe.
Baptista. Well mayst thou woo and happy be thy speed!
But be thou arm'd for some unhappy words.
Petruchio. Ay, to the proof; as mountains are for winds,
That shake not, though they blow perpetually.

Enter Hortensio, with his head broke.

Baptista. How now, my friend! why dost thou look so pale?
Hortensio. For fear, I promise you, if I look pale.
Baptista. What, will my daughter prove a good musician?
Hortensio. I think she'll sooner prove a soldier.
Iron may hold with her but never lutes.
Baptista. Why, then thou canst not break her to the lute?
Hortensio. Why, no; for she hath broke the lute to me.
I did but tell her she mistook her frets
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering;
When, with a most impatient divelish spirit,
'Frets, call you these?' quoth she; 'I'll fume with them';
And, with that word, she stroke me on the head,
And through the instrument my pate made way.
And there I stood amazed for a while
As on a pillory, looking through the lute,
While she did call me rascal, fiddler,
And twangling Jack, with twenty such vilde terms
As had she studied to misuse me so.
Petruchio. Now, by the world, it is a lusty wench!
I love her ten times more than ere I did:
O! how I long to have some chat with her!
Baptista. [To Hortensio.] Well, go with me, and be not so discomfited.
Proceed in practice with my younger daughter;

64 turn: purpose 66 like not of: do not care for 72-74 saving . . . forward: F sets as prose 72 Saving: with all due respect 74 Bacare: back (burlesque Latin) marvelous: marvelously 77, 78 your wooing. Neighbor: F your wooing neighbors 78-88 Neighbor . . . your coming: F sets as verse 81 you: F omits 114 orchard: garden 115 passing: exceedingly

127 widowhood: widow's share of estate 129 specialties: specific contracts 134 peremptory: stressed — — ˋ — 138 extreme: stressed ˊ — 141 speed: fortune 143 to the proof: as if in proved (i.e. tested) armor 144 shake: F shakes 148 soldier: three syllables here 149 hold: with resist 152 frets: ridges on the neck of the lute where the strings are pressed 153 bow'd: bent 155 Frets . . . fume with them: plays on 'fret' and 'fume' 156 stroke: struck 161 twangling: twanging vilde: vile 162 As had: . . . i.e. as if she had made special preparation to abuse me 163 lusty: lively

She's apt to learn and thankful for good turns.
Signior Petruchio, will you go with us
Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you?

Exit [Baptista, with Gremio, Tranio, and Hortensio]. Manet Petruchio.

Petruchio. I pray you do; I will attend her here
And woo her with some spirit when she comes.
Say that she rail; why then I'll tell her plain
She sings as sweetly as a nightingale:
Say that she frown; I'll say she looks as clear
As morning roses newly wash'd with dew:
Say she be mute and will not speak a word;
Then I'll commend her volubility,
And say she uttereth piercing eloquence.
If she do bid me pack I'll give her thanks
As though she bid me stay by her a week;
If she deny to wed I'll crave the day
When I shall ask the banes, and when be married.
But here she comes; and now, Petruchio, speak.

Enter Katherina.

Good morrow, Kate; for that's your name, I hear.
Katherina. Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing:
They call me Katerina that do talk of me.
Petruchio. You lie, in faith; for you are call'd plain Kate,
And bonny Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst;
But, Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendom;
Kate or Kate-Hall, my super-dainty Kate,
For dainties are all Kates: and therefore, Kate,
Take this of me, Kate of my consolation;
Hearing thy mildness prais'd in every town,
Thy virtues spoke of, and thy beauty sounded—
Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs—
Myself am mov'd to woo thee for my wife.
Katherina. Mov'd! in good time: let him that mov'd you hether.
Remove you hence. I knew you at the first,
You were a movable.
Petruchio. Why, what's a movable?
Katherina. A joint stool.
Petruchio. Thou hast hit it: come sit on me.
Katherina. Asses are made to bear and so are you.
Petruchio. Women are made to bear and so are you.
Katherina. No such jade as you, if me you mean.
Petruchio. Alas! good Kate, I will not burthen thee;
For, knowing thee to be but young and light—
Katherina. Too light for such a swain as you to catch
And yet as heavy as my weight should be.
Petruchio. Should be! should—buzz!
Katherina. Well tane, and like a buzzard.
Petruchio. O slow-wing'd turtle! shall a buzzard take thee?
Katherina. Ay, for a turtle, as he takes a buzzard.
Petruchio. Come, come, you wasp; i' faith you are too angry.
Katherina. If I be waspish best beware my sting.
Petruchio. My remedy is then to pluck it out.
Katherina. Ay, if the fool could find it where it lies.
Petruchio. Who knows not where a wasp does wear his sting?
In his tail.
Katherina. In his tongue.
Petruchio. Whose tongue?
Katherina. Yours, if you talk of tales; and so farewell.
Petruchio. What! with my tongue in your tail? nay, come, again.
Good Kate, I am a gentleman.
Katherina. That I'll try.

She strikes him.

Petruchio. I swear I'll cuff you if you strike again.
Katherina. So may you lose your arms:
If you strike me you are no gentleman,
And if no gentleman, why then no arms.
Petruchio. A herald, Kate? O! put me in thy books.
Katherina. What is your crest? a coxcomb?
Petruchio. A combless cock, so Kate will be my hen.
Katherina. No cock of mine; you crow too like a craven.
Petruchio. Nay, come, Kate, come; you must not look so sour.
Katherina. It is my fashion when I see a crab.
Petruchio. Why, here's no crab, and therefore look not sour.
Katherina. There is, there is.
Petruchio. Then show it me.
Katherina. Had I a glass I would.
Petruchio. What, you mean my face?
Katherina. Well aim'd of such a young one.
Petruchio. Now, by Saint George, I am too young for you.
Katherina. Yet you are wither'd.
Petruchio. 'Tis with cares.
Katherina. I care not.
Petruchio. Nay, hear you, Kate: in sooth you scape not so.
Katherina. I chafe you if I tarry: let me go.
Petruchio. No, not a whit: I find you passing gentle.
'Twas told me you were rough and coy and sullen,
And now I find report a very liar;
For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing courteous,
But slow in speech, yet sweet as springtime flowers.
Thou canst not frown, thou canst not look a sconce,
Nor bite the lip as angry wenches will,
Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk;
But thou with mildness entertain'st thy wooers,
With gentle conference, soft and affable.
Why does the world report that Kate doth limp?
O sland'rous world! Kate, like the hazel-twig
Is straight and slender, and as brown in hue

169 apt: ready 180 uttereth: read 'utt'reth' 181 pack: be off 183 deny: refuse 184 banes: banns 187-197 hard ... sounded; Cf. n. 193 Kate-Hall; Cf. n. 200 in good time: indeed 203 movable: pun on 'piece of furniture' 205 joint stool: stool made by a joiner 207, 208 bear: i.e. 1) a man, 2) children 209 jade: worthless nag, worthless person 212 swain: young rustic 214 be: pun on 'bee' buzz: 1) hum, 2) tush buzzard: 1) kind of hawk, 2) blockhead, 3) large insect 217 turtle: turtledove

219 Ay, for a turtle; ... Cf. n. 229 talk of tales: talk idly 237 arms: pun on 'coat of arms' 238 herald: and hence authority on heraldry books: heraldic registers, with pun on 'in your good books' 239 coxcomb: badge of the court fool 240 combless: gentle, with crest cut down 241 craven: cowardly (cock-fighting term) 244 crab: crab apple 251 aim'd of: guessed for 257 scape: escape 259 chafe: irritate 261 coy: haughty 265 a sconce: askance 269 conference: conversation

As hazelnuts and sweeter than the kernels.
O! let me see thee walk: thou dost not halt.
Katherina. Go, fool, and whom thou keep'st command.
Petruchio. Did ever Dian so become a grove
As Kate this chamber with her princely gait?
O! be thou Dian and let her be Kate,
And then let Kate be chaste and Dian sportful!
Katherina. Where did you study all this goodly speech?
Petruchio. It is extempore, from my mother-wit.
Katherina. A witty mother! witless else her son.
Petruchio. Am I not wise?
Katherina. Yes; keep you warm.
Petruchio. Marry, so I mean, sweet Katherina, in thy bed;
And therefore, setting all this chat aside,
Thus in plain terms: your father hath consented
That you shall be my wife, your dowry 'greed on;
And will you, nill you, I will marry you.
Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn;
For, by this light, whereby I see thy beauty—
Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well—
Thou must be married to no man but me.

Enter Baptista, Gremio, [and] Tranio.

For I am he am born to tame you, Kate,
And bring you from a wild Kate to a Kate
Conformable as other household Kates.
Here comes your father: never make denial;
I must and will have Katherine to my wife.
Baptista. Now, Signior Petruchio, how spend you with my daughter?
Petruchio. How but well, sir? how but well?
It were impossible I should speed amiss.
Baptista. Why, how now, daughter Katherine! in your dumps.
Katherina. Call you me daughter? now, I promise you
You have show'd a tender fatherly regard
To wish me wed to one half lunatic,
A madcap ruffian and a swearing Jack
That thinks with oaths to face the matter out.
Petruchio. Father, 'tis thus: yourself and all the world.
That talk'd of her have talk'd amiss of her.
If she be curst it is for policy,
For she's not froward but modest as the dove,
She is not hot but temperate as the morn;
For patience she will prove a second Grissel
And Roman Lucrece for her chastity;
And to conclude, we have 'greed so well together
That upon Sunday is the wedding day.
Katherina. I'll see thee hang'd on Sunday first.
Gremio. Hark, Petruchio: she says she'll see thee hang'd first.
Tranio. Is this your speeding? nay, then good night our part!
Petruchio. Be patient, gentlemen, I choose her for myself;
If she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you?
'Tis bargain'd 'twixt us twain, being alone,
That she shall still be curst in company.
I tell you, 'tis incredible to believe
How much she loves me. O! the kindest Kate,
She hung about my neck, and kiss on kiss
She vied so fast, protesting oath on oath,
That in a twink she won me to her love.
O! you are novices; 'tis a world to see
How tame, when men and women are alone,
A meacock wretch can make the curstest shrew.
Give me thy hand, Kate: I will unto Venice
To buy apparel 'gainst the wedding day.
Provide the feast, father, and bid the guests;
I will be sure my Katherine shall be fine.
Baptista. I know not what to say; but give me your hands.
God send you joy, Petruchio! 'tis a match.
Gremio. } Amen, say we: we will be witnesses.
Tranio. }
Petruchio. Father, and wife, and gentlemen, adieu.
I will to Venice; Sunday comes apace.
We will have rings and things and fine array;
And, kiss me, Kate, we will be married a' Sunday.
Exeunt Petruchio and Katherine.
Gremio. Was ever match clapp'd up so suddenly?
Baptista. Faith, gentlemen, now I play a marchant's part
And venture madly on a desperate mart.
Tranio. 'Twas a commodity lay fretting by you;
'Twill bring you gain or perish on the seas.
Baptista. The gain I seek is quiet in the match.
Gremio. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch.
But now, Baptista, to your younger daughter:
Now is the day we long have looked for;
I am your neighbor, and was suitor first.
Tranio. And I am one that love Bianca more
Than words can witness or your thoughts can guess.
Gremio. Youngling, thou canst not love so dear as I.
Tranio. Greybeard, thy love doth freeze.
Gremio. But thine doth fry.
Skipper, stand back, 'tis age that nourisheth.
Tranio. But youth in ladies' eyes that flourisheth.
Baptista. Content you, gentlemen; I will compound this strife:
'Tis deeds must win the prize, and he, of both,
That can assure my daughter greatest dower
Shall have my Bianca's love.
Say, Signior Gremio, what can you assure her?
Gremio. First, as you know, my house within the city
Is richly furnished with plate and gold:
Basins and ewers to lave her dainty hands;
My hangings all of Tyrian tapestry;
In ivory coffers I have stuff'd my crowns;
In cypress chests my arras counterpoints,

274 halt: limp 275 whom thou keep'st command: i.e. tell your servants (not me) what to do 276 Dian: Diana, chaste goddess of the hunt 284 warm: with reference to the proverbial expression 'wit enough to keep oneself warm'; as we should say 'enough sense to come in out of the rain' 289 nill you: will you not 295 wild Kate: pun on 'cat' as in 1.298 303 in your dumps: downcast 305 promise: assure 306 You have: read 'you've' 309 face: brazen 312 for policy: with calculated purpose 313 froward: perverse 314 temperate: read 'temp'rate' 315, 316 Grissel . . . Lucrece: Cf. n. 317 we have: read 'we've' 321 speeding: success

331 vied so fast: i.e. rivaled me in eagerness to exchange kisses 332 twink: twinkling 333 world: worth a world; i.e. wonderful 335 meacock: meet or cowardly 339 fine: handsomely dressed 340 give me your hands: i.e. to join them in betrothal 348 clapp'd up: arranged 349 marchant's: merchant's 350 mart: market 351 fretting: of cloth ravaged by moths, hence 'wasting away,' with pun on Kate's fretful temper 363 Skipper: one whose gait reveals lack of maturity and dignity, 'prancer' 365 Content you: be calm compound: settle 367 he, of both: whichever of the two 374 Tyrian: purple, dark red 376 arras counterpoints: tapestry woven in squares of contrasting colors, made in Arras, France

Costly apparel, tents, and canopies.
Fine linen, Turkey cushions boss'd with pearl,
Valance of Venice gold in needlework,
Pewter and brass, and all things that belong
To house or housekeeping. Then, at my farm
I have a hundred milch-kine to the pail,
Six score fat oxen standing in my stalls
And all things answerable to this portion.
Myself am strook in years, I must confess;
And if I die tomorrow, this is hers,
If whilst I live she will be only mine.
Tranio. That 'only' came well in. Sir, list to me:
I am my father's heir and only son,
If I may have your daughter to my wife
I'll leave her houses three or four as good,
Within rich Pisa walls, as any one
Old Signior Gremio has in Padua;
Besides two thousand ducats by the year
Of fruitful land, all which shall be her jointer.
What, have I pinch'd you, Signior Gremio?
Gremio. Two thousand ducats by the year of land!
My land amounts not to so much in all:
That she shall have besides an argosy
That now is lying in Marcellus' road.
What, have I chok'd you with an argosy?
Tranio. Gremio, 'tis known my father hath no less
Than three great argosies, besides two galliasses
And twelve tight galleys; these I will assure her
And twice as much, whatere thou offer'st next.
Gremio. Nay, I have off'red all, I have no more;
And she can have no more than all I have.
If you like me, she shall have me and mine.
Tranio. Why, then the maid is mine from all the world
By your firm promise. Gremio is outvied.
Baptista. I must confess your offer is the best
And, let your father make her the assurance,
She is your own; else, you must pardon me,
If you should die before him, where's her dower?
Tranio. That's but a cavil: he is old, I young.
Gremio. And may not young men die as well as old?
Baptista. Well, gentlemen,
I am thus resolv'd. On Sunday next, you know,
My daughter Katherine is to be married:
Now, on the Sunday following, shall Bianca
Be bride to you if you make this assurance;
If not, to Signior Gremio:
And so I take my leave and thank you both. Exit.
Gremio. Adieu, good neighbor. Now I fear thee not:
Sirrah young gamester, your father were a fool
To give thee all and in his waning age
Set foot under thy table. Tut! a toy!
An old Italian fox is not so kind, my boy. Exit.
Tranio. A vengeance on your crafty wither'd hide!
Yet I have fac'd it with a card of ten.
'Tis in my head to do my master good:
I see no reason, but suppos'd Lucentio
Must get a father, called 'suppos'd Vincentio';
And that's a wonder: fathers commonly
Do get their children, but in this case of wooing
A child shall get a sire if I fail not of my cunning. Exit.

377 tents and canopies: bed-hangings 378 Turkey cushions boss'd with pearl: oriental cushions embroidered with pearls 379 Valance: fringes, draperies of bed or couch 380 belong: F belongs 382 milch-kine to the pail: cows giving milk for the dairy (not to calves) 384 answerable to this portion: in agreement with this marriage settlement 385 strook: struck, 'advanced' 394 ducats: Venetian coins 395 jointer: jointure, marriage settlement 399 That: i.e. the whole value of my land argosy: large merchant-ship 400 Marcellus': Marseilles' road: harbor 403 galliasses: large galleys 410 outvied: outbid 412 assurance: guarantee 415 cavil: trifling argument 418 I am: read 'I'm' 425 gamester: adventurer were: would be 427 Set foot under thy table: live as your pensioner a toy: nonsense

430 fac'd . . . ten: bluff'd him; making him think my ten spot was a face card, a term from the game of primero 433 get: beget ACT III, SCENE 1 F Actus Tertia 4 know this lady is: F this is Cf. n. 6 prerogative: precedence 12 pain: toil 15 braves: pretensions 18 breeching scholar: schoolboy liable to whipping 19 'pointed: appointed 22 the whiles: meanwhile 28, 29 Hic ibat . . . celsa senis; Cf. n. 30 conster: construe 35 port: appearance 36 pantaloon; Cf. n. to I.3.SD. 37-39 Cf. n.

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

Enter Lucentio, Hortensio, and Bianca.

Lucentio. Fiddler, forbear; you grow too forward, sir.
Have you so soon forgot the entertainment
Her sister Katherine welcom'd you withal?
Hortensio. But, wrangling pedant, know this lady is
The patroness of heavenly harmony;
Then give me leave to have prerogative,
And when in music we have spent an hour
Your lecture shall have leisure for as much.
Lucentio. Preposterous ass, that never read so far
To know the cause why music was ordain'd!
Was it not to refresh the mind of man
After his studies or his usual pain?
Then give me leave to read philosophy,
And while I pause, serve in your harmony.
Hortensio. Sirrah, I will not bear these braves of thine.
Bianca. Why, gentlemen, you do me double wrong
To strive for that which resteth in my choice.
I am no breeching scholar in the schools;
I'll not be tied to hours nor 'pointed times,
But learn my lessons as I please myself.
And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down;
Take you your instrument, play you the whiles;
His lecture will be done ere you have tun'd.
Hortensio. You'll leave his lecture when I am in tune?
Lucentio. That will be never; tune your instrument.
Bianca. Where left we last?
Lucentio. Here, madam:—
'Hic ibat Simois; hic est Sigeria tellus;
Hic steterat Priami regia celsa senis.'
Bianca. Conster them.
Lucentio. Hic ibat, as I told you before, Simois,
I am Lucentio, hic est, son unto Vincentio of Pisa,
Sigeria tellus, disguised thus to get your love;
Hic steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a wooing,
Priami, is my man Tranio, regia, bearing my port,
celsa senis, that we might beguile the old pantaloon.
Hortensio. Madam, my instrument's in tune.
Bianca. Let's hear.—O fie! the treble jars.
Lucentio. Spit in the hole, man, and tune again.

Bianca. Now let me see if I can conster it: Hic ibat Simois, I know you not, hic est Sigeria tellus, I trust you not; Hic steterat Priami, take heed he hear us not, regia, presume not, celsa senis, despair not.

Hortensio. Madam, 'tis now in tune.

Lucentio. All but the bass.

Hortensio. The bass is right; 'tis the base knave that jars. [Aside.] How fiery and forward our pedant is! Now, for my life, the knave doth court my love; Pedascule, I'll watch you better yet.

Bianca. In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.

Lucentio. Mistrust it not; for, sure, Æacides Was Ajax, call'd so from his grandfather.

Bianca. I must believe my master; else, I promise you, I should be arguing still upon that doubt; But let it rest. Now, Licio, to you. Good master, take it not unkindly, pray, That I have been thus pleasant with you both.

Hortensio. You may go walk and give me leave a while; My lessons make no music in three parts.

Lucentio. Are you so formal, sir? [Aside.] Well, I must wait And watch withal; for, but I be deceiv'd, Our fine musician groweth amorous.

Hortensio. Madam, before you touch the instrument To learn the order of my fingering, I must begin with rudiments of art To teach you gamouth in a briefer sort, More pleasant, pithy, and effectual, Than hath been taught by any of my trade; And there it is in writing, fairly drawn.

Bianca. Why, I am past my gamouth long ago.

Hortensio. Yet read the gamouth of Hortensio.

Bianca.

'"Gamouth" I am, the ground of all accord,
"A re," to plead Hortensio's passion;
"B mi," Bianca, take him for thy lord,
"C fa ut," that loves with all affection;
"D sol re," one cliffe, two notes have I;
"E la mi," show pity or I die.'

Call you this gamouth? tut, I like it not. Old fashions please me best; I am not so nice To change true rules for odd inventions.

Enter a Messenger.

Messenger. Mistress, your father prays you leave your books And help to dress your sister's chamber up; You know tomorrow is the wedding day.

Bianca. Farewell, sweet masters both; I must be gone. [Exeunt Bianca and Messenger.]

Lucentio. Faith, mistress, then I have no cause to stay. [Exit.]

Hortensio. But I have cause to pry into this pedant. Methinks he looks as though he were in love. Yet if thy thoughts, Bianca, be so humble To cast thy wand'ring eyes on every stale, Seize thee that list; if once I find thee ranging, Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing. Exit.

Scene Second

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, Katherina, Bianca [Lucentio,] and others, attendants.

Baptista. [To Tranio.] Signior Lucentio, this is the 'pointed day
That Katherine and Petruchio should be married,
And yet we hear not of our son-in-law.
What will be said? what mockery will it be
To want the bridegroom when the priest attends
To speak the ceremonial rites of marriage!
What says Lucentio to this shame of ours?

Katherina. No shame but mine; I must, forsooth, be forc'd
To give my hand oppos'd against my heart
Unto a mad-brain rudesby, full of spleen,
Who woo'd in haste and means to wed at leisure.
I told you, I, he was a frantic fool,
Hiding his bitter jests in blunt behavior;
And to be noted for a merry man,
He'll woo a thousand, point the day of marriage,
Make friends, invite, and proclaim the banes;
Yet never means to wed where he hath woo'd.
Now must the world point at poor Katherine
And say, 'Lo! there is mad Petruchio's wife,
If it would please him come and marry her.'

Tranio. Patience, good Katherine, and Baptista too.
Upon my life, Petruchio means but well,
Whatever fortune stays him from his word.
Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise;
Though he be merry, yet withal he's honest.

Katherina. Would Katherine had never seen him though! Exit weeping [followed by Bianca and others].

Baptista. Go, girl: I cannot blame thee now to weep,
For such an injury would vex a very saint,
Much more a shrew of thy impatient humor.

Enter Biondello.

Biondello. Master, master! news! and such old news as you never heard of!

Baptista. Is it new and old too? how may that be?

Biondello. Why, is it not news to hear of Petruchio's coming?

Baptista. Is he come?

Biondello. Why, no, sir.

Baptista. What then?

Biondello. He is coming.

Baptista. When will he be here?

Biondello. When he stands where I am and sees you there.

Tranio. But, say, what to thine old news?

Biondello. Why, Petruchio is coming, in a new hat and an old jerkin; a pair of old breeches thrice turn'd;

47–49 Cf. n. 49 Pedascule: pedant (synthetic Latin) 51, 52 Cf. n. 53–57 Cf. n. 61 but: unless 66 gamouth: gamut, i.e. the diatonic scale; Cf. n. 72 ground: beginning, basis 74 B mi: F Beeme 76 cliffe: clef (key in music) 79 nice: capricious 80 to: as to change: F charge odd: F old 81 Messenger: F Nicke Cf. n.

90 stale: lure, decoy 91 Seize thee that list: let them take thee that will ranging: roving 92 be quit: get even by changing: by loving another 5 mockery: read 'mock'ry' 11 rudesby: bumpkin spleen: impulsive temper 15 noted for: known as 16 point: appoint 17 banes: banns 31 old: rare; F omits Cf. n.

a pair of boots that have been candle-cases, one buckled, another lac'd; an old rusty sword tane out of the town-armory, with a broken hilt, and chapeless; with two broken points: his horse hipp'd with an old mothy saddle and stirrups of no kindred; besides, possessed with the glanders and like to mose in the chine; troubled with the lampass, infected with the fashions, full of windgalls, sped with spavins, rayed with the yellows, past cure of the fives, stark spoil'd with the staggers, begnawn with the bots, swayed in the back, and shoulder-shotten; near-legg'd before, and with a half-chekt bit, and a head-stall of sheep's leather, which, being restrain'd to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst and now repaired with knots; one girth six times piec'd, and a woman's crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name fairly set down in studs, and here and there piec'd with packthread.

Baptista. Who comes with him?

Biondello. O, sir! his lackey, for all the world caparison'd like the horse; with a linen stock on one leg and a kersey boot-hose on the other, gart'red with a red and blue list; an old hat, and the 'humor of forty fancies' prick'd in't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in apparel, and not like a Christain footboy or a gentleman's lackey.

Tranio. 'Tis some odd humor pricks him to this fashion, Yet oftentimes he goes but mean-apparell'd.

Baptista. I am glad he's come, howsoere he comes.

Biondello. Why, sir, he comes not.

Baptista. Didst thou not say he comes?

Biondello. Who? that Petruchio came?

Baptista. Ay, that Petruchio came.

Biondello. No, sir; I say his horse comes, with him on his back.

Baptista. Why, that's all one.

Biondello.

Nay, by Saint Jamy,
I hold you a penny,
A horse and a man
Is more than one
And yet not many.

Enter Petruchio and Grumio.

Petruchio. Come, where be these gallants? who is at home?

Baptista. You are welcome, sir.

Petruchio. And yet I come not well.

Baptista. And yet you halt not.

Tranio. Not so well apparell'd As I wish you were.

Petruchio. Were it better, I should rush in thus. But where is Kate? where is my lovely bride? How does my father? Gentles, methinks you frown. And wherefore gaze this goodly company As if they saw some wondrous monument, Some comet, or unusual prodigy?

Baptista. Why, sir, you know this is your wedding day. First were we sad, fearing you would not come; Now sadder that you come so unprovided. Fie! doff this habit, shame to your estate, An eyesore to our solemn festival.

Tranio. And tell us what occasion of import Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife And sent you hither so unlike yourself?

Petruchio. Tedious it were to tell and harsh to hear. Sufficeth, I am come to keep my word Though in some part enforced to digress; Which, at more leisure, I will so excuse As you shall well be satisfied with all. But where is Kate? I stay too long from her; The morning wears, 'tis time we were at church.

Tranio. See not your bride in these unreverent robes. Go to my chamber; put on clothes of mine.

Petruchio. Not I, believe me; thus I'll visit her.

Baptista. But thus, I trust, you will not marry her.

Petruchio. Good sooth, even thus; therefore ha' done with words: To me she's married, not unto my clothes. Could I repair what she will wear in me As I can change these poor acouterments, 'Twere well for Kate and better for myself. But what a fool am I to chat with you When I should bid good morrow to my bride And seal the title with a lovely kiss!

Exit [with Grumio].

Tranio. He hath some meaning in his mad attire. We will persuade him, be it possible, To put on better ere he go to church.

Baptista. I'll after him and see the event of this.

Exit [with Gremio and Attendants].

Tranio. But to her love concerneth us to add Her father's liking; which to bring to pass, As I before imparted to your worship, I am to get a man—whatere he be It skills not much, we'll fit him to our turn— And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa, And make assurance here in Padua, Of greater sums than I have promised. So shall you quietly enjoy your hope, And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Lucentio. Were it not that my fellow schoolmaster

45 candle-cases: i.e. worn out and used as receptacles for candle ends 48 chapeless: the chape is the metal tip at the end of the sheath points: garters hipp'd: lamed in the hip 49 of no kindred: not matching 50 glanders: swellings under the jaw 50, 51 mose in the chine: a dark discharge from the nostrils (a horse disease) 51 lampass: infected mouth (in horses) 52 fashions: farcins, i.e. small tumors on horse's body windgalls: swelling on fetlock joints spavins: a disease of the hock 53 rayed: befouled yellows: kind of jaundice fives: (a) vives, i.e. swellings at base of the ear 53, 54 stark spoil'd with the staggers: a prey to a kind of horse palsy 54 begnawn with the bots: gnawed by small intestinal worms 55 swayed: with rolling gate, due to back strain; F Waid shoulder-shotten: with dislocated shoulder 55, 56 near-legg'd before: with forefeet that knock together 56 half-chekt: 'half-checked' or 'half-cheeked,' loose 56, 57 head-stall: part of the bridle surrounding the head sheep's leather: inferior leather, not pigskin as would become a person of consequence restrain'd: drawn tight 59 piec'd: patched 60 crupper: strap fastened to back of saddle and passing around the horse's tail velure: velvet 64 caparison'd: decked out 65 stock: stocking 66 kersey boot-hose: coarse woolen stocking worn under the riding boot 67 list: strip of cloth 67, 68 'humor of forty fancies': parcel of ribbons tied together (instead of the conventional feather) Cf. n. 70 footboy: attendant in livery 71 pricks: drives 83 hold: bet 87 gallants: fine fellows

91, 92 Not . . . were: set as one line in F 95 Gentles: gentlemen 102 habit: costume estate: social position 109 enforced to digress: compelled to deviate from my promise (II.1.338–341) 118 Good sooth: indeed even: read 'e'en' 121 wear: wear out 126 lovely: loving 130 event: outcome; read 'th'event' 131 But to her love: F. But, sir, Love 135 skills: matters

Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly
'Twere good, methinks, to steal our marriage;
Which once perform'd, let all the world say no,
I'll keep mine own despite of all the world.
Tranio. That by degrees we mean to look into
And watch our vantage in this business
We'll overreach the greybeard, Gremio,
The narrow-prying father, Minola,
The quaint musician, amorous Licio;
All for my master's sake, Lucentio.

Enter Gremio.

Signior Gremio, came you from the church?
Gremio. As willingly as ere I came from school.
Tranio. And is the bride and bridegroom coming home?
Gremio. A bridegroom say you? 'Tis a groom indeed,
A grumbling groom, and that the girl shall find.
Tranio. Curster than she? why, 'tis impossible.
Gremio. Why, he's a devil, a devil, a very fiend.
Tranio. Why, she's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam.
Gremio. Tut! she's a lamb, a dove, a fool to him.
I'll tell you, Sir Lucentio: when the priest
Should ask, if Katherine should be his wife,
'Ay, by goggs woones!' quoth he; and swore so loud
That, all amaz'd, the priest let fall the book
And, as he stoop'd again to take it up
This mad-brain'd bridegroom took him such a cuff
That down fell priest and book and book and priest.
'Now, take them up,' quoth he, 'if any list.'
Tranio. What said the wench when he rose again?
Gremio. Trembled and shook; for why, he stamp'd and swore,
As if the vicar meant to cozen him.
But after many ceremonies done
He calls for wine: 'A health!' quoth he, as if
He had been aboard, carousing to his mates
After a storm; quaff'd off the muscadel
And threw the sops all in the sexton's face,
Having no other reason
But that his beard grew thin and hungerly,
And seem'd to ask him sops as he was drinking.
This done, he took the bride about the neck
And kiss'd her lips with such a clamorous smack
That at the parting all the church did echo,
And I, seeing this, came thence for very shame;
And after me, I know, the rout is coming.
Such a mad marriage never was before.
Hark, hark! I hear the minstrels play.

Music plays.

Enter Petruchio, Katherina, Bianca, Baptista, Hortensio [with Grumio and train].

Petruchio. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your pains.
I know you think to dine with me today
And have prepar'd great store of wedding cheer,
But so it is, my haste doth call me hence
And therefore here I mean to take my leave.
Baptista. Is't possible you will away tonight?
Petruchio. I must away today, before night come.
Make it no wonder; if you knew my business,
You would entreat me rather go than stay.
And, honest company, I thank you all,
That have beheld me give away myself
To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife.
Dine with my father, drink a health to me,
For I must hence; and farewell to you all.
Tranio. Let us entreat you stay till after dinner.
Petruchio. It may not be.
Gremio. Let me entreat you.
Petruchio. It cannot be.
Katherina. Let me entreat you.
Petruchio. I am content.
Katherina. Are you content to stay?
Petruchio. I am content you shall entreat me stay,
But yet not stay, entreat me how you can.
Katherina. Now if you love me, stay.
Petruchio. Grumio, my horse!
Grumio. Ay, sir, they be ready; the oats have eaten the horses.
Katherina. Nay then,
Do what thou canst, I will not go today;
No, nor tomorrow, not till I please myself.
The door is open, sir, there lies your way;
You may be jogging whiles your boots are green;
For me, I'll not be gone till I please myself.
'Tis like you'll prove a jolly surly groom,
That take it on you at the first so roundly.
Petruchio. O Kate! content thee; prethee, be not angry.
Katherina. I will be angry; what hast thou to do?
Father, be quiet; he shall stay my leisure.
Gremio. Ay, marry, sir, now it begins to work.
Katherina. Gentlemen, forward to the bridal dinner:
I see a woman may be made a fool
If she had not a spirit to resist.
Petruchio. They shall go forward, Kate, at thy command.
Obey the bride, you that attend on her;
Go to the feast, revel and domineer,
Carouse full measure to her maidenhead,
Be mad and merry, or go hang yourselves;
But for my bonny Kate, she must with me.
Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret;
I will be master of what is mine own.
She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house,
My household stuff, my field, my barn,
My horse, my ox, my ass, my anything;
And here she stands, touch her whoever dare;
I'll bring mine action on the proudest he
That stops my way in Padua. Grumio,
Draw forth thy weapon, we are beset with thieves;

143 steal our marriage: elope 147 vantage: advantage business: three syllables here 150 quaint: artful amorous: read 'am'rous' 155 groom: i.e., rough as a servingman 159 dam: the very mother of the devil; cf. I.3.109 163 goggs woones: corruption of 'God's wounds,' a common oath 166 took: dealt 168 list: choose to 170–187 F sets these lines as prose 172 cozen: cheat (with invalid ceremony) 175 He had: read 'he'd' aboard: aboard ship 176 muscadel: sweet wine, commonly drunk at weddings 177 sops: dregs 174 hungerly: sparsely 180 sops: pieces of cake dipped in wine 182 clamorous: read 'clam'rous' 185 rout: mob

197 Make it no wonder: do not be surprised 214 horse: horses 221 green: fresh; proverbial for getting an early start 223 jolly: overbearing 224 roundly: unceremoniously 225 prethee: prithee, I pray thee; 234 domineer: carouse 238 big: pompous (addressed to the crowd, not Katherina) 242 anything: with allusion to the language of the Tenth Commandment 244 bring mine action: bring a law suit

Rescue thy mistress, if thou be a man.
Fear not, sweet wench; they shall not touch thee, Kate:
I'll buckler thee against a million.

Exeunt Petruchio, Katherina [and Grumio].

Baptista. Nay, let them go, a couple of quiet ones.
Gremio. Went they not quickly I should die with laughing.
Tranio. Of all mad matches never was the like.
Lucentio. Mistress, what's your opinion of your sister?
Bianca. That being mad herself, she's madly mated.
Gremio. I warrant him, Petruchio is Kated.
Baptista. Neighbors and friends, though bride and bridegroom wants
For to supply the places at the table,
You know there wants no junkets at the feast.
Lucentio, you shall supply the bridegroom's place,
And let Bianca take her sister's room.
Tranio. Shall sweet Bianca practice how to bride it?
Baptista. She shall, Lucentio. Come, gentlemen, let's go.

Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter Grumio.

Grumio. Fie, fie, on all tired jades, on all mad masters, and all foul ways! Was ever man so beaten? was ever man so ray'd? was ever man so weary? I am sent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warm them. Now were not I a little pot and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roof of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me; but I, with blowing the fire, shall warm myself; for, considering the weather, a taller man than I will take cold. Holla, ho! Curtis.

Enter Curtis.

Curtis. Who is that calls so coldly?
Grumio. A piece of ice; if thou doubt it, thou mayst slide from my shoulder to my heel with no greater a run but my head and my neck. A fire, good Curtis.
Curtis. Is my master and his wife coming, Grumio?
Grumio. O! ay, Curtis, ay; and therefore, fire, fire; cast on no water.
Curtis. Is she so hot a shrew as she's reported?
Grumio. She was, good Curtis, before this frost but thou knowest winter tames man, woman, and beast; for it hath tam'd my old master, and my new mistress, and myself, fellow Curtis.
Curtis. Away, you three-inch fool! I am no beast.
Grumio. Am I but three inches? why, thy horn is a foot; and so long am I at the least. But wilt thou make a fire or shall I complain on thee to our mistress, whose hand—she being now at hand—thou shalt soon feel, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office?
Curtis. I prethee, good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world?
Grumio. A cold world, Curtis, in every office but thine; and therefore, fire. Do thy duty, and have thy duty, for my master and mistress are almost frozen to death.
Curtis. There's fire ready; and therefore, good Grumio, the news?
Grumio. Why, 'Jack, boy! ho, boy!' and as much news as wilt thou.
Curtis. Come, you are so full of cony-catching.
Grumio. Why therefore fire, for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the cook? Is supper ready, the house trimm'd, rushes strew'd, cobwebs swept; the servingmen in their new fustian, their white stockings, and every officer his wedding-garment on? Be the jacks fair within, the jills fair without, the carpets laid and everything in order?
Curtis. All ready; and therefore, I pray thee, news?
Grumio. First, know, my horse is tired; my master and mistress falne out.
Curtis. How?
Grumio. Out of their saddles into the dirt—and thereby hangs a tale.
Curtis. Let's ha't, good Grumio
Grumio. Lend thine ear.
Curtis. Here.
Grumio. There. [Strikes him.]
Curtis. This 'tis to feel a tale, not to hear a tale.
Grumio. And therefore 'tis called a sensible tale, and this cuff was but to knock at your ear and beseech listening. Now I begin: Imprimis, we came down a foul hill, my master riding behind my mistress—
Curtis. Both of one horse?
Grumio. What's that to thee?
Curtis. Why, a horse.
Grumio. Tell thou the tale; but hadst thou not cross'd me thou shouldst have heard how her horse fell and she under her horse; thou shouldst have heard in how miry a place, how she was bemoil'd: how he left her with the horse upon her; how he beat me because her horse stumbled; how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me: how he swore; how she pray'd, that never pray'd before; how I cried; how the horses ran away; how her bridle was burst; how I lost my crupper; with many things of worthy memory, which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienc'd to thy grave.
Curtis. By this reck'ning he is more shrew than she.
Grumio. Ay; and that, thou and the proudest of you all shall find when he comes home. But what talk I of this? Call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugarsop, and the rest; let their

249 buckler: shield 257 wants: are lacking 259 junkets: sweetmeats Scene 3 Cf. n. 3 ray'd: dirtied 5 little pot: proverbial reference to small stature and quick temper 10 taller: with play on the meaning 'finer' 15 run: take-off 24 I am no beast: Curtis resents being called a fellow of Grumio who has just designated himself 'a beast' 25 horn: i.e. as proverbially worn by a cuckold

30 office: duty, task 35 duty: due, reward (proverbial) 39 'Jack, boy! ho, boy!': from a song (catch) relating the 'news' that the cat is in the well 41 cony-catching: evasive tricks, with play on the catch of l. 39 44 trimm'd: made trim, orderly rushes strew'd: i.e. on the floor 45 fustian: coarse cotton cloth their: F the 46 officer: servant 47 jacks: 1) servingmen, 2) half-pint drinking vessels jills: 1) maidservants, 2) smaller drinking vessels (gills) 47, 48 carpets: table-covers 51 falne: fallen 60 sensible: 1) making sense, 2) capable of being felt 62 Imprimis: first of all (Latin) 64 of: on 70 bemoil'd: covered with mud heads be slickly comb'd, their blue coats brush'd and their garters of an indifferent knit; let them curtsy with their left legs and not presume to touch a hair of my master's horsetail till they kiss their hands. Are they all ready?

Curtis. They are.

Grumio. Call them forth.

Curtis. Do you hear? ho! you must meet my master to countenance my mistress.

Grumio. Why, she hath a face of her own.

Curtis. Who knows not that?

Grumio. Thou, it seems, that calls for company to countenance her.

Curtis. I call them forth to credit her.

Grumio. Why, she comes to borrow nothing of them.

Enter four or five Servingmen.

Nathaniel. Welcome home, Grumio!

Philip. How now, Grumio?

Joseph. What, Grumio!

Nicholas. Fellow Grumio!

Nathaniel. How now, old lad!

Grumio. Welcome, you; how now, you; what, you; fellow, you; and thus much for greeting. Now, my spruce companions, is all ready and all things neat?

Nathaniel. All things is ready. How near is our master?

Grumio. E'en at hand, alighted by this; and therefore be not—Cock's passion, silence! I hear my master.

Enter Petruchio and Kate.

Petruchio. Where be these knaves? What! no man at door
To hold my stirrup nor to take my horse?
Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip?—

All Servingmen. Here, here, sir; here, sir.

Petruchio. Here, sir! here, sir! here, sir! here, sir!
You loggerheaded and unpolish'd grooms!
What, no attendance? no regard? no duty?
Where is the foolish knave I sent before?

Grumio. Here, sir; as foolish as I was before.

Petruchio. You peasant swain! you whoreson malt-horse drudge!
Did I not bid thee meet me in the park
And bring along these rascal knaves with thee.

Grumio. Nathaniel's coat, sir, was not fully made
And Gabrel's pumps were all unpink'd i' th' heel;
There was no link to color Peter's hat
And Walter's dagger was not come from sheathing;
There were none fine but Adam, Rafe, and Gregory;
The rest were ragged, old, and beggarly.
Yet, as they are, here are they come to meet you.

Petruchio. Go, rascals, go, and fetch my supper in.

Exeunt Servants.

'Where is the life that late I led?'
Where are those—? Sit down, Kate, and welcome.
Food, food, food, food!

Enter Servants with supper.

Why, when, I say?—Nay, good sweet Kate, be merry.—
Off with my boots, you rogues! you villains! When?
'It was the friar of orders grey,
As he forth walked on his way':
Out, you rogue! you pluck my foot awry;
Take that, and mend the plucking of the other.

[Strikes him.]

Be merry, Kate. Some water, here; what, ho!

Enter one with water.

Where's my spaniel Troilus? Sirrah, get you hence
And bid my cousin Ferdinand come hither: [Exit Servant.]
One, Kate, that you must kiss and be acquainted with.
Where are my slippers? Shall I have some water?
Come, Kate, and wash, and welcome heartily.—
You whoreson villain! will you let it fall? [Strikes him.]

Katherina. Patience, I pray you; 'twas a fault unwilling.

Petruchio. A whoreson, beetle-headed, flap-ear'd knave!
Come, Kate, sit down; I know you have a stomach.
Will you give thanks, sweet Kate, or else shall I?—
What's this? mutton?

1. Servingman. Ay.

Petruchio. Who brought it?

Peter. I.

Petruchio. 'Tis burnt; and so is all the meat.
What dogs are these! Where is the rascal cook?
How durst you, villains, bring it from the dresser,
And serve it thus to me that love it not?

[Throws the meat about the stage.]

There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all.
You heedless joltheads and unmanner'd slaves!
What, do you grumble? I'll be with you straight.

Katherina. I pray you, husband, be not so disquiet:
The meat was well if you were so contented.

Petruchio. I tell thee, Kate, 'twas burnt and dried away
And I expressly am forbid to touch it,
For it engenders choler, planteth anger,
And better 'twere that both of us did fast,
Since, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric,
Than feed it with such overroasted flesh.
Be patient; tomorrow't shall be mended,
And for this night we'll fast for company.
Come, I will bring thee to thy bridal chamber. Exeunt.

Enter Servants severally.

Nathaniel. Peter, didst ever see the like?

Peter. He kills her in her own humor.

Enter Curtis, a Servant.

84 slickly: smoothly 85 indifferent knit: moderately handsome Cf. n. 92 countenance: do honor to 96 countenance: give a face to 97 credit: Curtis means 'pay respect to,' Grumio plays with the other meaning 'extend credit' 111 Cock's: corruption of 'God's' 118 loggerheaded: blockheaded 122 peasant swain: country lout whoreson: contemptible malt-horse drudge: i.e. slow and clumsy as the horse used to grind malt in a brewery 127 unpink'd: with ornamental embroidery frayed or missing 128 link: pitchtorch, used to give old hats a new blacking 129 sheathing: having sheath made or repaired 130 fine: well turned out

134 'Where . . . led': line of an old song; cf. 2 Henry IV, V.3.131 136 Food . . . food: F Soud . . . soud Cf. n. 138 When: exclamation of impatience; cf. Richard II, I.1.163 139, 140 'It . . . way': fragment of an old song 152 stomach: 1) appetite, 2) temper 160 dresser: sideboard 162 trenchers: wooden plates 164 with you: even with you straight: immediately 169 choler: the humor that makes one short-tempered, choleric 171 for: in 177 kills . . . humor: subdues her by employing her own kind of bad temper SD Enter Curtis: F 1.173

Grumio. Where is he?
Curtis. In her chamber, making a sermon of continency to her:
And rails and swears and rates, that she, poor soul,
Knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak,
And sits as one new-risen from a dream.
Away, away! for he is coming hither. [Exeunt.]

Enter Petruchio.

Petruchio. Thus have I politicly begun my reign
And 'tis my hope to end successfully.
My falcon now is sharp and passing empty
And till she stoop she must not be full gorg'd,
For then she never looks upon her lure.
Another way I have to man my haggard,
To make her come and know her keeper's call;
That is, to watch her as we watch these kites
That bate and beat and will not be obedient.
She eat no meat today, nor none shall eat;
Last night she slept not, nor tonight she shall not:
As with the meat, some undeserved fault
I'll find about the making of the bed
And here I'll fling the pillow, there the bolster,
This way the coverlet, another way the sheets.
Ay, and amid this hurly I intend
That all is done in reverend care of her,
And in conclusion she shall watch all night;
And if she chance to nod I'll rail and brawl
And with the clamor keep her still awake.
This is a way to kill a wife with kindness,
And thus I'll curb her mad and headstrong humor.
He that knows better how to tame a shrew,
Now let him speak: 'tis charity to shrew. Exit.

Scene Fourth

Enter Tranio and Hortensio

Tranio. Is't possible, friend Licio, that Mistress Bianca
Doth fancy any other but Lucentio?
I tell you, sir, she bears me fair in hand.
Hortensio. Sir, to satisfy you in what I have said,
Stand by and mark the manner of his teaching.
[They stand aside.]

Enter Bianca [and Lucentio].

Lucentio. Now mistress, profit you in what you read?
Bianca. What, master, read you? first resolve me that.
Lucentio. I read that I profess, the Art of Love.
Bianca. And may you prove, sir, master of your art!
Lucentio. While you, sweet dear, prove mistress of my heart.

Hortensio. Quick proceeders, marry! Now, tell me, I pray,
You that durst swear that your mistress Bianca
Lov'd none in the world so well as Lucentio.
Tranio. O despiteful love! unconstant womankind!
I tell thee, Licio, this is wonderful.
Hortensio. Mistake no more: I am not Licio,
Nor a musician, as I seem to be;
But one that scorns to live in this disguise,
For such a one as leaves a gentleman
And makes a god of such a cullion.
Know, sir, that I am call'd Hortensio.
Tranio. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard
Of your entire affection to Bianca,
And since mine eyes are witness of her lightness
I will with you, if you be so contented,
Forswear Bianca and her love forever.
Hortensio. See, how they kiss and court! Signior Lucentio,
Here is my hand and here I firmly vow
Never to woo her more, but do forswear her,
As one unworthy all the former favors
That I have fondly flatter'd her withal.
Tranio. And here I take the like unfeigned oath,
Never to marry with her though she would entreat.
Fie on her! see how beastly she doth court him.
Hortensio. Would all the world but he had quite forsworn!
For me, that I may surely keep mine oath,
I will be married to a wealthy widow
Ere three days pass, which hath as long lov'd me
As I have lov'd this proud disdainful haggard.
And so farewell, Signior Lucentio.
Kindness in women, not their beauteous looks,
Shall win my love; and so I take my leave
In resolution as I swore before. [Exit]
Tranio. Mistress Bianca, bless you with such grace
As longeth to a lover's blessed case!
Nay, I have tane your napping, gentle love,
And have forsworn you with Hortensio.
Bianca. Tranio, you jest. But have you both forsworn me?
Tranio. Mistress, we have.
Lucentio. Then we are rid of Licio.
Tranio. I' faith, he'll have a lusty widow now,
That shall be woo'd and wedded in a day.
Bianca. God give him joy!
Tranio. Ay, and he'll tame her.
Bianca. He says so, Tranio.
Tranio. Faith, he is gone unto the taming-school.
Bianca. The taming-school! what, is there such a place?
Tranio. Ay, mistress, and Petruchio is the master,
That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long
To tame a shrew and charm her chattering tongue.

Enter Biondello.

Biondello. O master, master! I have watch'd so long
That I'm dog-weary, but at last I spied
An ancient angel coming down the hill

179–183 F sets these lines as prose 181 rates: berates that: so that 187 sharp . . . empty: fasting and hence keen for prey 188 stoop: 1) swoop (falconry), 2) bow to authority full gorg'd: well fed 189 then: i.e. when well fed lure: decoy used to recall a falcon Cf. n. 190 man: tame haggard: wild female hawk 192 watch: to keep from sleep kites: scavenging birds 193 bate and beat: flap and flutter, words similarly pronounced 194 eat: ate 195 Last night . . . shall not: Cf. n. 200 hurly: commotion intend: pretend 202 watch: stay awake 205 kill a wife with kindness: Cf. n. 207, 208 shrew . . . shrew: both pronounced with -ow 3 bears me fair in hand: leads me on 4, 5 F assigns these lines to Lucensio 6 F assigns this line to Hortensio 7 resolve: answer 8 F assigns this line to Hortensio 8–11 Cf. n.

12 marry: a mild oath, originally to Mary the Virgin 14 none: F me 19 scorns: F scorne 21 cullion: (three syllables here) low creature 32 her: F them 47 longeth: belongeth 48 tane: taken 56 and: if 61 tricks eleven and twenty long: Cf. n. 65 ancient angel: fellow of the old stamp (angel, here 'coin')

Will serve the turn.
Tranio. What is he, Biondello?
Biondello. Master, a marcantant or a pedant—
I know not what; but formal is apparel,
In gait and countenance surely like a father.
Lucentio. And what of him, Tranio?
Tranio. If he be credulous and trust my tale
I'll make him glad to seem Vincentio,
And give assurance to Baptista Minola
As if he were the right Vincentio.
Take in your love and then let me alone.
[Exeunt Lucentio and Bianca.]

Enter a Pedant.

Pedant. God save you, sir!
Tranio. And you, sir! you are welcome.
Travel you far on, or are you at the farthest?
Pedant. Sir, at the farthest for a week or two,
But then up farther and as far as Rome;
And so to Tripoli if God lend me life.
Tranio. What countryman, I pray?
Pedant. Of Mantua.
Tranio. Of Mantua, sir! marry, God forbid!
And come to Padua, careless of your life?
Pedant. My life, sir! how, I pray? for that goes hard.
Tranio. 'Tis death for anyone in Mantua
To come to Padua. Know you not the cause?
Your ships are stay'd at Venice and the duke—
For private quarrel 'twixt your duke and him—
Hath publish'd and proclaim'd it openly.
'Tis marvel, but that you are but newly come,
You might have heard it else proclaim'd about.
Pedant. Alas, sir! it is worse for me than so,
For I have bills for money by exchange
From Florence and must here deliver them.
Tranio. Well, sir, to do you courtesy,
This will I do and this I will advise you:
First, tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?
Pedant. Ay, sir, in Pisa have I often bin;
Pisa, renowned for grave citizens.
Tranio. Among them, know you one Vincentio?
Pedant. I know him not but I have heard of him;
A merchant of incomparable wealth.
Tranio. He is my father, sir; and, sooth to say,
In count'nance somewhat doth resemble you.
Biondello. [Aside.] As much as an apple doth an oyster, and all one.
Tranio. To save your life in this extremity
This favor will I do for his sake,
And think it not the worst of all your fortunes
That you are like to Sir Vincentio.
His name and credit shall you undertake
And in my house you shall be friendly lodg'd.
Look that you take upon you as you should!
You understand me, sir; so shall you stay
Till you have done your business in the city.
If this be court'sy, sir, accept of it.

66 Will serve: who will serve 67 What: who 68 marcantant: Biondello's pronunciation of Italian mercantante (merchant) 70 countenance: read 'count'nance' 76 Take in: F Par. Take me 87 goes hard: is serious 90 stay'd: detained 109 all one: no matter 114 undertake: assume 116 take upon you: comport yourself

Pedant. O sir, I do; and will repute you ever
The patron of my life and liberty.
Tranio. Then go with me to make the matter good.
This, by the way, I let you understand:
My father is here look'd for every day
To pass assurance of a dower in marriage
'Twixt me and one Baptista's daughter here.
In all these circumstances I'll instruct you.
Go with me to clothe you as becomes you. Exeunt.

Act Fourth ❧ Scene First

Enter Katherina and Grumio.

Grumio. No, no, forsooth; I dare not for my life.
Katherina. The more my wrong, the more his spite appears.
What, did he marry me to famish me?
Beggars, that come unto my father's door,
Upon entreaty have a present alms;
If not, elsewhere they meet with charity.
But I, who never knew how to entreat
Nor never needed that I should entreat,
Am starv'd for meat, giddy for lack of sleep,
With oaths kept waking and with brawling fed.
And that which spites me more than all these wants,
He does it under name of perfect love,
As who should say, if I should sleep or eat
'Twere deadly sickness or else present death.
I prithee go and get me some repast;
I care not what, so it be wholesome food.
Grumio. What say you to a neat's foot?
Katherina. 'Tis passing good: I prethee let me have it.
Grumio. I fear it is too choleric a meat.
How say you to a fat tripe finely broil'd?
Katherina. I like it well: good Grumio, fetch it me.
Grumio. I cannot tell; I fear 'tis choleric.
What say you to a piece of beef and mustard?
Katherina. A dish that I do love to feed upon.
Grumio. Ay, but the mustard is too hot a little.
Katherina. Why then, the beef, and let the mustard rest.
Grumio. Nay then, I will not; you shall have the mustard
Or else you get no beef of Grumio.
Katherina. Then both or one, or anything thou wilt.
Grumio. Why then, the mustard without the beef.
Katherina. Go, get thee gone, thou false deluding slave, Beats him.
That feed'st me with the very name of meat.
Sorrow on thee and all the pack of you
That triumph thus upon my misery!
Go, get thee gone, I say.

Enter Petruchio, and Hortensio with meat.

Petruchio. How fares my Kate? What, sweeting, all amort?
Hortensio. Mistress, what cheer?
Katherina. Faith, as cold as can be.

125 pass: convey (legal term) 127 circumstances: details 2 more: greater 5 present: immediate 13 As who should say: as if to say 17 neat: ox or calf 19 choleric: productive of temper; cf. III.3.169 37 all amort: out of spirits

Petruchio. Pluck up thy spirits; look cheerfully upon me.
Here, love; thou seest how diligent I am
To dress thy meat myself and bring it thee.
I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindness merits thanks.
What! not a word? Nay then, thou lov'st it not
And all my pains is sorted to no proof.
Here, take away this dish.
Katherina. I pray you, let it stand.
Petruchio. The poorest service is repaid with thanks
And so shall mine, before you touch the meat.
Katherina. I thank you, sir.
Hortensio. Signior Petruchio, fie! you are to blame.
Come, Mistress Kate, I'll bear you company.
Petruchio. Eat it up all, Hortensio, if thou lov'st me.
Much good do it unto thy gentle heart!
Kate, eat apace. And now, my honey love,
Will we return unto thy father's house
And revel it as bravely as the best,
With silken coats and caps and golden rings,
With ruffs and cuffs and fardingales and things;
With scarfs and fans and double change of brav'ry,
With amber bracelets, beads, and all this knav'ry.
What! hast thou din'd? The tailor stays thy leisure
To deck thy body with his ruffling treasure.

Enter Tailor.

Come, tailor, let us see these ornaments;
Lay forth the gown.—

Enter Haberdasher.

What news with you, sir?
Haberdasher. Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.
Petruchio. Why, this was molded on a porringer;
A velvet dish: fie, fie! 'tis lewd and filthy:
Why, 'tis a cockle or a walnut shell,
A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap—
Away with it! come, let me have a bigger.
Katherina. I'll have no bigger, this doth fit the time
And gentlewomen wear such caps as these.
Petruchio. When you are gentle you shall have one too—
And not till then.
Hortensio. [Aside.] That will not be in haste.
Katherina. Why, sir, I trust I may have leave to speak,
And speak I will; I am no child, no babe.
Your betters have endur'd me say my mind
And if you cannot, best you stop your ears.
My tongue will tell the anger of my heart
Or else my heart, concealing it, will break,
And rather than it shall I will be free
Even to the uttermost, as I please, in words.
Petruchio. Why, thou sayst true; it is a paltry cap,
A custard-coffin, a bauble, a silken pie.
I love thee well in that thou lik'st it not.
Katherina. Love me or love me not, I like the cap
And it I will have or I will have none. Exit Haberdasher.
Petruchio. Thy gown? why, ay: come, tailor, let us see't.
O mercy, God! what masquing stuff is here?
What's this? a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-cannon.
What! up and down, carv'd like an apple tart?
Here's snip and nip and cut and slish and slash,
Like to a censer in a barber's shop.
Why, what, a devil's name, tailor, call'st thou this?
Hortensio. [Aside.] I see, she's like to have neither cap nor gown.
Tailor. You bid me make it orderly and well,
According to the fashion and the time.
Petruchio. Marry, and did; but if you be rememb'red,
I did not bid you mar it to the time.
Go, hop me over every kennel home,
For you shall hop without my custom, sir.
I'll none of it: hence! make your best of it.
Katherina. I never saw a better-fashion'd gown,
More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable.
Belike you mean to make a puppet of me.
Petruchio. Why, true; he means to make a puppet of thee.
Tailor. She says your worship means to make a puppet of her.
Petruchio. O monstrous arrogance!
Thou liest, thou thread, thou thimble,
Thou yard, three-quarters, half yard, quarter, nail!
Thou flea, thou nit, thou winter-cricket thou!
Brav'd in mine own house with a skein of thread!
Away! thou rag, thou quantity, thou remnant,
Or I shall so bemete thee with thy yard
As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou liv'st!
I tell thee, I, that thou hast marr'd her gown.
Tailor. Your worship is deceiv'd; the gown is made
Just as my master had direction.
Grumio gave order how it should be done.
Grumio. I gave him no order; I gave him the stuff.
Tailor. But how did you desire it should be made?
Grumio. Marry, sir, with needle and thread.
Tailor. But did you not request to have it cut?
Grumio. Thou hast fac'd many things.
Tailor. I have.
Grumio. Face not me; thou hast brav'd many men; brave not me; I will neither be fac'd nor brav'd. I say unto thee, I bid thy master cut out the gown but I did not bid him cut it to pieces; ergo, thou liest.
Tailor. Why, here is the note of the fashion to testify.
Petruchio. Read it.
Grumio. The note lies in's throat if he say I said so.
Tailor. 'Imprimis, a loose-bodied gown.'
Grumio. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gown, sew me in the skirts of it and beat me to death with a bottom of brown thread. I said, a gown.

45 sorted to no proof: attended by no corresponding result; fruitless 57 bravely: finely dressed 59 fardingales: hoopskirts 60 brav'ry: finery 61 knav'ry: coquettish adornment 62 stays: awaits 63 ruffling: ornamented with ruffles SD Haberdasher: F Fel. 67 bespeak: order 69 lewd: vile 70 cockle: sea shell 71 knack: knick-knack trick: trifle 73 fit the time: suit the present fashion 87 custard-coffin: raised crust of pastry pie: shaped like a meat pie, i.e. circular and five or six inches high

92 masquing: fit only for masquerade 93 demi-cannon: kind of large cannon 96 censer: brazier with perforated cover, used by barbers to burn perfumes and thus sweeten air of the shop 98 to have: read 't'have' 102 did: I did be rememb'red: remember 104 kennel: gutter 108 quaint: pretty 116 nail: measure of two and a quarter inches 117 nit: egg of a louse 118 Brav'd: defied with: by 119 quantity: small fragment 120 bemete: measure 121 think on prating: remember your idle talk 130 fac'd: trimmed 132 face: affront brav'd: dressed in finery brave: defy 135 ergo: therefore (Latin) 143 bottom: ball

Petruchio. Proceed.
Tailor. 'With a small compass'd cape.'
Grumio. I confess the cape.
Tailor. 'With a trunk sleeve.'
Grumio. I confess two sleeves.
Tailor. 'The sleeves curiously cut.'
Petruchio. Ay, there's the villainy.
Grumio. Error i' th' bill, sir; error i' th' bill. I commanded the sleeves should be cut out and sewed up again and that I'll prove upon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.
Tailor. This is true that I say; and I had thee in place where, thou shouldst know it.
Grumio. I am for thee straight. Take thou the bill, give me thy mete-yard, and spare not me.
Hortensio. God-a-mercy, Grumio! then he shall have no odds.
Petruchio. Well, sir, in brief, the gown is not for me.
Grumio. You are i' th' right, sir; 'tis for my mistress.
Petruchio. Go, take it up unto thy master's use.
Grumio. Villain, not for thy life! take up my mistress' gown for thy master's use!
Petruchio. Why sir, what's your conceit in that?
Grumio. O, sir, the conceit is deeper than you think for. Take up my mistress' gown to his master's use! O, fie, fie, fie!
Petruchio. [Aside.] Hortensio, say thou wilt see the tailor paid.
Go take it hence; be gone and say no more.
Hortensio. Tailor, I'll pay thee for thy gown tomorrow; Take no unkindness of his hasty words.
Away! I say; commend me to thy master. Exit Tailor.
Petruchio. Well, come, my Kate; we will unto your father's,
Even in these honest mean habiliments.
Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor,
For 'tis the mind that makes the body rich;
And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds
So honor peereth in the meanest habit.
What, is the jay more precious than the lark
Because his feathers are more beautiful?
Or is the adder better than the eel
Because his painted skin contents the eye?
O no, good Kate; neither art thou the worse
For this poor furniture and mean array.
If thou account'st it shame, lay it on me.
And therefore frolic; we will hence forthwith
To feast and sport us at thy father's house.
Go call my men, and let us straight to him;
And bring our horses unto Long-lane end;
There will we mount, and thither walk on foot.
Let's see; I think 'tis now some seven o'clock
And well we may come there by dinnertime.
Katherina. I dare assure you, sir, 'tis almost two
And 'twill be suppertime ere you come there.
Petruchio. It shall be seven ere I go to horse.
Look, what I speak or do or think to do,
You are still crossing it. Sirs, let't alone:
I will not go today; and ere I do,
It shall be what o'clock I say it is.
Hortensio. Why, so this gallant will command the sun.
Exeunt.

145 compass'd: i.e. with the edge forming a circle 147 trunk sleeve: very full sleeve; Cf. l. 93 above 149 curiously: carefully 155 and: and if 155, 156 in place where: in a suitable place 157 bill: with pun on usual meaning and the sense of 'halberd' 158 mete-yard: yardstick 163 unto thy master's use: i.e. for whatever purpose he can find for it 166 conceit: meaning 181 peereth: appears habit: dress 187 furniture: adornment, costume 188 account'st: F accountedst

Scene Second

Enter Tranio, and the Pedant dressed like Vincentio.

Tranio. Sir, this is the house: please it you that I call?
Pedant. Ay, what else? and, but I be deceived,
Signior Baptista may remember me,
Near twenty years ago, in Genoa,
Where we were lodgers at the Pegasus.
Tranio. 'Tis well; and hold your own in any case
With such austerity as longeth to a father.
Pedant. I warrant you. But sir, here comes your boy;
'Twere good he were school'd.

Enter Biondello.

Tranio. Fear you not him. Sirrah Biondello,
Now do your duty throughly, I advise you:
Imagine 'twere the right Vincentio.
Biondello. Tut! fear not me.
Tranio. But hast thou done thy errand to Baptista?
Biondello. I told him that your father was at Venice,
And that you look'd for him this day in Padua.
Tranio. Th' art a tall fellow: hold thee that to drink.
Here comes Baptista. Set your countenance, sir.

Enter Baptista and Lucentio.

Signior Baptista, you are happily met.
[To the Pedant.] Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of.
I pray you, stand good father to me now,
Give me Bianca for my patrimony.
Pedant. Soft, son!
Sir, by your leave: having come to Padua
To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio
Made me acquainted with a weighty cause
Of love between your daughter and himself.
And—for the good report I hear of you,
And for the love he beareth to your daughter,
And she to him—to stay him not too long,
I am content, in a good father's care,
To have him match'd; and if you please to like
No worse than I, upon some agreement
Me shall you find ready and willing
With one consent to have her so bestow'd;
For curious I cannot be with you,
Signior Baptista, of whom I hear so well.
Baptista. Sir, pardon me in what I have to say:
Your plainness and your shortness please me well.
Right true it is, your son Lucentio here
Doth love my daughter and she loveth him—
Or both dissemble deeply their affections—

1 Sir: F Sirs this is: read 'this' 5 F assigns this line to Tranio Pegasus: common name for an inn 7 longeth: belongs 11 throughly: thoroughly 17 tall: clever hold: take (Tranio tips him) 18 countenance: read 'count'nance' SD F adds Pedant booted and bare-headed Cf. n. 20 this is: read 'this' 23, 4 Soft . . . Padua: F sets as one line 36 curious: cautious

And therefore, if you say no more than this,
That like a father you will deal with him
And pass my daughter a sufficient dower,
The match is made; and all is done;
Your son shall have my daughter with consent.
Tranio. I thank you, sir. Where then, do you know best
We be affied and such assurance tane
As shall with either part's agreement stand?
Baptista. Not in my house, Lucentio; for, you know,
Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants.
Besides, old Gremio is heark'ning still,
And happily we might be interrupted.
Tranio. Then at my lodging and it like you:
There doth my father lie, and there this night
We'll pass the business privately and well.
Send for your daughter by your servant here;
My boy shall fetch the scrivener presently.
The worst is this, that, at so slender warning,
You are like to have a thin and slender pittance.
Baptista. It likes me well. Cambio, hie you home
And bid Bianca make her ready straight;
And, if you will, tell what hath happened:
Lucentio's father is arriv'd in Padua,
And how she's like to be Lucentio's wife.
Lucentio. I pray the gods she may with all my heart!
Exit Lucentio.
Tranio. Dally not with the gods, but get thee gone.
Signior Baptista, shall I lead the way?
Welcome! one mess is like to be your cheer.
Come, sir; we will better it in Pisa.
Baptista. I follow you. Exeunt.

Enter Lucentio and Biondello.

Biondello. Cambio!
Lucentio. What sayst thou, Biondello?
Biondello. You saw my master wink and laugh upon you?
Lucentio. Biondello, what of that?
Biondello. Faith, nothing; but has left me here behind to expound the meaning or moral of his signs and tokens.
Lucentio. I pray thee, moralize them.
Biondello. Then thus. Baptista is safe, talking with the deceiving father of a deceitful son.
Lucentio. And what of him?
Biondello. His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper.
Lucentio. And then?
Biondello. The old priest at Saint Luke's church is at your command at all hours.
Lucentio. And what of all this?
Biondello. I cannot tell, except they are busied about a counterfeit assurance: take you assurance of her, cum previlegio ad impremendum solem. To th' church! take the priest, clark, and some sufficient honest witnesses.
If this be not that you look for, I have no more to say,
But bid Bianca farewell forever and a day.
Lucentio. Hear'st thou, Biondello?
Biondello. I cannot tarry: I knew a wench married in an afternoon as she went to the garden for parsley to stuff a rabbit; and so may you, sir; and so, adieu, sir. My master hath appointed me to go to Saint Luke's, to bid the priest be ready to come against you come with your appendix. Exit.
Lucentio. I may, and will, if she be so contented.
She will be pleas'd; then wherefore should I doubt?
Hap what hap may, I'll roundly go about her;
It shall go hard if Cambio go without her. Exit.

Scene Third

Enter Petruchio, Katherina, Hortensio [with Servants.]

Petruchio. Come on, a God's name; once more toward our father's.
Good Lord, how bright and goodly shines the moon!
Katherina. The moon! the sun: it is not moonlight now.
Petruchio. I say it is the moon that shines so bright.
Katherina. I know it is the sun that shines so bright.
Petruchio. Now, by my mother's son, and that's myself,
It shall be moon or star or what I list,
Or ere I journey to your father's house.
Go on and fetch our horses back again.
Evermore cross'd and cross'd; nothing but cross'd!
Hortensio. Say as he says or we shall never go.
Katherina. Forward, I pray, since we have come so far,
And be it moon or sun or what you please.
And if you please to call it a rush-candle,
Henceforth I vow it shall be so for me.
Petruchio. I say it is the moon.
Katherina. I know it is the moon.
Petruchio. Nay, then you lie; it is the blessed sun.
Katherina. Then God be bless'd, it is the blessed sun!
But sun it is not when you say it is not,
And the moon changes even as your mind.
What you will have it nam'd, even that it is;
And so it shall be so for Katherine.
Hortensio. Petruchio, go thy ways; the field is won.
Petruchio. Well, forward, forward! thus the bowl should run
And not unluckily against the bias.
But soft! company is coming here.

Enter Vincentio.

[To Vincentio.] Good morrow, gentle mistress: where away?
Tell me, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too,
Hast thou beheld a fresher gentlewoman?
Such war of white and red within her cheeks!
What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty
As those two eyes become that heavenly face?
Fair lovely maid, once more good day to thee.
Sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake.

49 affied: formally betrothed 53 heark'ning still: always listening 54 happily: perhaps 55 and it like: if it please 56 lie: lodge 57 pass: transact 59 scrivener: notary; read 'scriv'ner' 61 pittance: meal 62 likes: pleases 66 like: likely 67 F assigns this line to Biondello Cf. n. 68 F adds SD Enter Peter Cf. n. 71 mess: dish cheer: entertainment 79 has: he has 82 moralize: explain 92 except: F expect 93 assurance: betrothal 94 cum . . . solem: Cf. n.

104 against: by the time that 105 appendix: addition or adjunct, here 'wife' 1 a: in 9 Or ere: before 15 rush-candle: rush, dipped in grease to serve as candle 19 is: F in 26 bowl: wooden ball used in game of bowls 27 bias: Cf. n.

Hortensio. A will make the man mad, to make a woman of him.

Katherina. Young budding virgin, fair and fresh and sweet,
Whether away, or where is thy abode?
Happy the parents of so fair a child;
Happier the man, whom favorable stars
Allot thee for his lovely bedfellow!

Petruchio. Why, how now, Kate! I hope thou art not mad;
This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, wither'd,
And not a maiden, as thou sayst he is.

Katherina. Pardon, old father, my mistaking eyes
That have been so bedazzled with the sun
That everything I look on seemeth green.
Now I perceive thou art a reverent father;
Pardon, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking.

Petruchio. Do, good old grandsire; and withal make known.
Which way thou travellest: if along with us,
We shall be joyful of thy company.

Vincentio. Fair sir, and you my merry mistress,
That with your strange encounter much amaz'd me,
My name is called Vincentio; my dwelling, Pisa;
And bound I am to Padua, there to visit
A son of mine, which long I have not seen.

Petruchio. What is his name?

Vincentio. Lucentio, gentle sir.

Petruchio. Happily met; the happier for thy son.
And now by law, as well as reverent age,
I may entitle thee my loving father:
The sister to my wife, this gentlewoman,
Thy son by this hath married. Wonder not
Nor be not griev'd: she is of good esteem,
Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth;
Beside, so qualified as may beseem
The spouse of any noble gentleman.
Let me embrace with old Vincentio
And wander we to see thy honest son,
Who will of thy arrival be full joyous.

Vincentio. But is this true? or is it else your pleasure,
Like pleasant travelers, to break a jest
Upon the company you overtake?

Hortensio. I do assure thee, father, so it is.

Petruchio. Come, go along, and see the truth hereof;
For our first merriment hath made thee jealous.

Exeunt [all but Hortensio].

Hortensio. Well, Petruchio, this has put me in heart.
Have to my widow! and if she be froward,
Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be untoward. Exit.

Scene Fourth

Enter Biondello, Lucentio, and Bianca; Gremio is out before.

Biondello. Softly and swiftly, sir, for the priest is ready.

Lucentio. I fly, Biondello, but they may chance to need thee at home; therefore leave us. Exit [with Bianca].

Biondello. Nay, faith, I'll see the church a your back; and then come back to my master's as soon as I can. [Exit.]

Gremio. I marvel Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Vincentio, [and] Grumio with Attendants.

Petruchio. Sir, here's the door, this is Lucentio's house:
My father's bears more toward the market place;
Thither must I and here I leave you, sir.

Vincentio. You shall not choose but drink before you go.
I think I shall command your welcome here
And, by all likelihood, some cheer is toward. Knock.

Gremio. They're busy within; you were best knock louder.

Pedant looks out of the window.

Pedant. What's he that knocks as he would beat down the gate?

Vincentio. Is Signior Lucentio within, sir?

Pedant. He's within, sir, but not to be spoken withal.

Vincentio. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two, to make merry withal?

Pedant. Keep your hundred pounds to yourself; he shall need none so long as I live.

Petruchio. Nay, I told you your son was well beloved in Padua. Do you hear, sir? To leave frivolous circumstances, I pray you tell Signior Lucentio that his father is come from Pisa and is here at the door to speak with him.

Pedant. Thou liest; his father is come from Padua and here looking out at the window.

Vincentio. Art thou his father?

Pedant. Ay sir, so his mother says, if I may believe her.

Petruchio. [To Vincentio.] Why how now, gentleman! why this is flat knavery, to take upon you another man's name.

Pedant. Lay hands on the villain; I believe, a means to cozen somebody in this city under my countenance.

Enter Biondello.

Biondello. I have seen them in the church together; God send 'em good shipping! But who is here? mine old master, Vincentio! now we are undone and brought to nothing.

Vincentio. Come hither, crack-hemp.

Biondello. I hope I may choose, sir.

Vincentio. Come hither, you rogue. What, have you forgot me?

37 A: he 40 Whether: whither where: F whether 43 Allot: F A lots 49 green: metaphorically, 'young' 50 reverent: read 'rev'rent' 56 mistress: read 'misteress' 57 encounter: greeting 68 esteem: reputation 70 so qualified: having such qualities 76 pleasant: i.e. fond of pleasantries 80 jealous: suspicious 82 froward: preserves 83 untoward: hard to manage

Scene 4 Cf. n. SD out before: on the forestage, where he is unaware of the others 4, 5 a your back: on your back; I'll see you into the church 5 master's: F mistris 9 bears: stands 15 What's he: who is he 19 withal: with 25, 26 frivolous circumstances: unimportant details 35 flat: downright 37 a: he 40 good shipping: i.e. 'fair sailing' 43 crack-hemp: gallows bird 44 I . . . sir: Allow me, sir! Cf. n.

Biondello. Forgot you! no sir. I could not forget you, for I never saw you before in all my life.

Vincentio. What, you notorious villain! didst thou never see thy master's father, Vincentio?

Biondello. What, my old, worshipful old master? yes, marry, sir: see where he looks out of the window.

Vincentio. Is't so, indeed? He beats Biondello.

Biondello. Help, help, help! here's a madman will murder me. [Exit.]

Pedant. Help, son! help, Signior Baptista! [Exit from above.]

Petruchio. Prithee, Kate, let's stand aside and see the end of this controversy. [They retire.]

Enter Pedant [below] with Servants, Baptista, [and] Tranio.

Tranio. Sir, what are you that offer to beat my servant?

Vincentio. What am I, sir! nay, what are you, sir? O immortal gods! O fine villain! A silken doublet! a velvet hose! a scarlet cloak! and a copatain hat! O, I am undone! I am undone! while I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the university.

Tranio. How now! what's the matter?

Baptista. What, is the man lunatic?

Tranio. Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman by your habit, but your words show you a madman. Why sir, what cerns it you if I wear pearl and gold? I thank my good father, I am able to maintain it.

Vincentio. Thy father! O villain! he is a sailmaker in Bergamo.

Baptista. You mistake, sir, you mistake, sir. Pray, what do you think is his name?

Vincentio. His name! as if I knew not his name! I have brought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is Tranio.

Pedant. Away, away, mad ass! his name is Lucentio and he is mine only son, and heir to the lands of me, Signior Vincentio.

Vincentio. Lucentio! O he hath murd'red his master. Lay hold on him, I charge you in the duke's name. O my son, my son! tell me, thou villain, where is my son Lucentio?

Tranio. Call forth an officer.

[Enter one with an Officer.]

Carry this mad knave to the jail. Father Baptista, I charge you see that he be forthcoming.

Vincentio. Carry me to the jail!

Gremio. Stay, officer: he shall not go to prison.

Baptista. Talk not, Signior Gremio. I say he shall go to prison.

Gremio. Take heed, Signior Baptista, lest you be cony-catched in this business. I dare swear this is the right Vincentio.

Pedant. Swear, if thou dar'st.

Gremio. Nay, I dare not swear it.

Tranio. Then thou wert best say that I am not Lucentio.

Gremio. Yes, I know thee to be Signior Lucentio.

Baptista. Away with the dotard; to the jail with him!

Vincentio. Thus strangers may be hal'd and abused; O monstrous villain!

Enter Biondello, Lucentio, and Bianca.

Biondello. O we are spoil'd; and yonder he is: deny him, forswear him, or else we are all undone.

Exeunt Biondello, Tranio, and Pedant as fast as may be.

Lucentio. Pardon, sweet father. Kneel.

Vincentio. Lives my sweet son?

Bianca. Pardon, dear father.

Baptista. How hast thou offended? Where is Lucentio?

Lucentio. Here's Lucentio,
Right son to the right Vincentio,
That have by marriage made thy daughter mine
While counterfeit supposes blear'd thine eyne.

Gremio. Here's packing, with a witness, to deceive us all!

Vincentio. Where is that damned villain Tranio That fac'd and brav'd me in this matter so?

Baptista. Why, tell me, is not this my Cambio?

Bianca. Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Lucentio. Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's love
Made me exchange my state with Tranio
While he did bear my countenance in the town,
And happily I have arriv'd at the last
Unto the wished haven of my bliss.
What Tranio did, myself enforc'd him to;
Then pardon him, sweet father, for my sake.

Vincentio. I'll slit the villain's nose, that would have sent me to the jail.

Baptista. But do you hear, sir? Have you married my daughter without asking my good will?

Vincentio. Fear not, Baptista; we will content you, go to: but I will in, to be reveng'd for this villainy. Exit.

Baptista. And I, to sound the depth of this knavery. Exit.

Lucentio. Look not pale, Bianca; thy father will not frown. Exeunt [Lucentio and Bianca.]

Gremio. My cake is dough, but I'll in among the rest Out of hope of all but my share of the feast. [Exit.]

Katherina. Husband, let's follow, to see the end of this ado.

Petruchio. First kiss me, Kate, and we will.

Katherina. What! in the midst of the street?

Petruchio. What! art thou asham'd of me?

Katherina. No sir, God forbid; but asham'd to kiss.

Petruchio. Why, then let's home again. Come sirrah, let's away.

Katherina. Nay, I will give thee a kiss; now pray thee, love, stay.

Petruchio. Is not this well?: Come, my sweet Kate; Better once than never, for never too late. Exeunt.

50 master's: F Mistris 57 Prithee: F Preethe 63 copatain hat: high sugar-loaf hat 65 husband: frugal manager 70 habit: outward semblance 71 cerns: concerns 95 cony-catched: duped SD Exeunt: F Exit

115 supposes: substitutions, probably with allusion to Gascoigne's play; see Sources of the Play eyne: eyes 116 packing: plotting with a witness: with a vengeance 124 countenance: read 'count'nance' 134 go to: expressions of remonstrance (or, sometimes, impatience) 138 My cake is dough: proverbial for failure of an enterprise; cf. 1.3.108–109 141 ado: commotion 151 Better . . . late: i.e. 'better late than never'

ACT FIFTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

Enter Baptista, Vincentio, Gremio, the Pedant, Lucentio, and Bianca, Tranio, Biondello, Grumio, [Petruchio, Katherina, Hortensio,] and Widow; the Servingmen with Tranio bringing in a banquet.

Lucentio. At last, though long, our jarring notes agree;
And time it is, when raging war is done,
To smile at scapes and perils overblown.
My fair Bianca, bid my father welcome
While I with self-same kindness welcome thine.
Brother Petruchio, sister Katherina,
And thou, Hortensio, with thy loving widow,
Feast with the best and welcome to my house;
My banket is to close our stomachs up
After our great good cheer. Pray you, sit down;
For now we sit to chat as well as eat.

Petruchio. Nothing but sit and sit, and eat and eat!

Baptista. Padua affords this kindness, son Petruchio.

Petruchio. Padua affords nothing but what is kind.

Hortensio. For both our sakes I would that word were true.

Petruchio. Now, for my life, Hortensio fears his widow.

Widow. Then never trust me, if I be afeard.

Petruchio. You are very sensible and yet you miss my sense: I mean, Hortensio is afeard of you.

Widow. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round.

Petruchio. Roundly replied.

Katherina. Mistress, how mean you that?

Widow. Thus I conceive by him.

Petruchio. Conceives by me! How likes Hortensio that?

Hortensio. My widow says, thus she conceives her tale.

Petruchio. Very well mended. Kiss him for that, good widow.

Katherina. 'He that is giddy thinks the world turns round': I pray you, tell me what you meant by that.

Widow. Your husband, being troubled with a shrew, Measures my husband's sorrow by his woe, And now you know my meaning.

Katherina. A very mean meaning.

Widow. Right, I mean you.

Katherina. And I am mean indeed, respecting you.

Petruchio. To her, Kate!

Hortensio. To her, widow!

Petruchio. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her down.

Hortensio. That's my office.

Petruchio. Spoke like an officer; ha' to thee, lad.

Drinks to Hortensio.

Baptista. How likes Gremio these quick-witted folks?

Gremio. Believe me, sir, they butt together well.

Bianca. Head and butt! an hasty-witted body
Would say your head and butt were head and horn.

Vincentio. Ay, mistress bride, hath that awaken'd you?

Bianca. Ay, but not frighted me; therefore I'll sleep again.

Petruchio. Nay, that you shall not, since you have begun,
Have at you for a bitter jest or two.

Bianca. Am I your bird? I mean to shift my bush;
And then pursue me as you draw your bow.
You are welcome all.

Exit Bianca [with Katherina and Widow].

Petruchio. She hath prevented me. Here, Signior Tranio;
This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not:
Therefore a health to all that shot and miss'd.

Tranio. O sir! Lucentio slipp'd me, like his greyhound,
Which runs himself and catches for his master.

Petruchio. A good swift simile but something currish.

Tranio. 'Tis well, sir, that you hunted for yourself;
'Tis thought your deer does hold you at a bay.

Baptista. O ho, Petruchio! Tranio hits you now.

Lucentio. I thank thee for that gird, good Tranio.

Hortensio. Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here?

Petruchio. A has a little gall'd me, I confess;
And, as the jest did glance away from me,
'Tis ten to one it maim'd you two outright.

Baptista. Now, in good sadness, son Petruchio,
I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.

Petruchio. Well, I say no: and therefore, for assurance,
Let's each one send unto his wife,
And he whose wife is most obedient
To come at first when he doth send for her
Shall win the wager which we will propose.

Hortensio. Content. What's the wager?

Lucentio. Twenty crowns.

Petruchio. Twenty crowns!
I'll venture so much of my hawk or hound,
But twenty times so much upon my wife.

Lucentio. A hundred then.

Hortensio. Content.

Petruchio. A match! 'tis done.

Hortensio. Who shall begin?

Lucentio. That will I.
Go Biondello, bid your mistress come to me.

Biondello. I go. Exit.

Baptista. Son, I'll be your half, Bianca comes.

Lucentio. I'll have no halves; I'll bear it all myself.

Enter Biondello.

How now! what news?

Biondello. Sir, my mistress sends you word
That she is busy and she cannot come.

Petruchio. How! she is busy and she cannot come!
Is that an answer?

Gremio. Ay, and a kind one too;
Pray God, sir, your wife send you not a worse.

Petruchio. I hope, better.

Hortensio. Sirrah Biondello, go and entreat my wife
To come to me forthwith. Exit Biondello.

Petruchio. O ho! entreat her!
Nay, then she must needs come.

Hortensio. I am afraid, sir,
Do what you can, yours will not be entreated.

Enter Biondello.

SD banquet: dessert; spelled banket 1.9 1 long: after a long time 2 done: F come 9 stomachs: with second sense of 'quarrel' 17 fears: used by Petruchio in current sense; the widow takes it in the sense of 'frighten' 18 afeard: suspicious 22 Roundly: frankly 24 Thus I conceive by him: that is my impression of his state. Petruchio plays on the other meaning in his reply 40 ha' to: here's to 48 Have at you: here goes bitter: sharp; F better

49 bird: in the sense of a target 52 prevented: anticipated 55 slipp'd: unleashed 59 deer: with a pun on 'dear' at a bay: at bay 61 gird: taunt 63 A: he gall'd: scratched 66 good sadness: all seriousness 68 for assurance: to make sure for: F sir 76 of: on 80 A match: i.e. it's a bet 85 be your half: take half of your bet

Now where's my wife?
Biondello. She says you have some goodly jest in hand.
She will not come; she bids you come to her.
Petruchio. Worse and worse; she will not come! O vilde,
Intolerable, not to be endur'd!
Sirrah Grumio, go to your mistress; say
I command her come to me. Exit [Grumio].
Hortensio. I know her answer.
Petruchio. What?
Hortensio. She will not.
Petruchio. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Enter Katherina.

Baptista. Now, by my hollidam, here comes Katherina!
Katherina. What is your will, sir, that you send for me?
Petruchio. Where is your sister, and Hortensio's wife?
Katherina. They sit conferring by the parlor fire.
Petruchio. Go fetch them hither; if they deny to come,
Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands.
Away, I say, and bring them hither straight. [Exit Katherina.]
Lucentio. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.
Hortensio. And so it is. I wonder what it bodes.
Petruchio. Marry, peace it bodes, and love, and quiet life,
An awful rule and right supremacy;
And, to be short, what not that's sweet and happy.
Baptista. Now fair befall thee, good Petruchio!
The wager thou hast won and I will add
Unto their losses twenty thousand crowns,
Another dowry to another daughter,
For she is chang'd, as she had never been.
Petruchio. Nay, I will win my wager better yet
And show more sign of her obedience,
Her new-built virtue and obedience.

Enter Kate, Bianca, and Widow.

See where she comes and brings your froward wives
As prisoners to her womanly persuasion.
Katerine, that cap of yours becomes you not:
Off with that bauble, throw it under foot.
Widow. Lord! let me never have a cause to sigh
Till I be brought to such a silly pass!
Bianca. Fie! what a foolish duty call you this?
Lucentio. I would your duty were as foolish too;
The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca,
Hath cost me five hundred crowns since suppertime.
Bianca. The more fool you are for laying on my duty.
Petruchio. Katherine, I charge thee, tell these headstrong women
What duty they do owe their lords and husbands.
Widow. Come, come, you're mocking; we will have no telling.
Petruchio. Come on, I say; and first begin with her.
Widow. She shall not.
Petruchio. I say she shall: and first begin with her.
Katherina. Fie, fie! unknit that threat'ning unkind brow
And dart not scornful glances from those eyes
To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor.
It blots thy beauty as frosts do bite the meads,
Confounds thy fame as whirlwinds shake fair buds,
And in no sense is meet or amiable.
A woman mov'd is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty;
And while it is so, none so dry or thirsty
Will deign to sip or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance commits his body
To painful labor both by sea and land,
To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
Whilst thou li'st warm at home, secure and safe;
And craves no other tribute at thy hands
But love, fair looks, and true obedience;
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duty as the subject owes the prince,
Even such a woman oweth to her husband;
And when she is froward, peevish, sullen, sour,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foul contending rebel
And graceless traitor to her loving lord?—
I am asham'd that women are so simple
To offer war where they should kneel for peace,
Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.
Why are our bodies soft and weak and smooth,
Unapt to toil and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions and our hearts
Should well agree with our external parts?
Come, come, you forward and unable worms!
My mind hath been as big as one of yours,
My heart as great, my reason haply more,
To bandy word for word and frown for frown;
But now I see our lances are but straws,
Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare,
That seeming to be most which we indeed least are.
Then vail your stomachs, for it is no boot,
And place your hands below your husband's foot:
In token of which duty, if he please,
My hand is ready; may it do him ease.
Petruchio. Why, there's a wench! Come on and kiss me, Kate.
Lucentio. Well, go thy ways, old lad, for thou shalt ha't.
Vincentio. 'Tis a good hearing when children are toward.
Lucentio. But a harsh hearing when women are froward.
Petruchio. Come, Kate, we'll to bed.
We three are married, but you two are sped.
'Twas I won the wager, [to Lucentio.] though you hit the white;
And, being a winner, God give you good night!
Exit Petruchio [with Katherina].
Hortensio. Now, go thy ways; thou hast tam'd a curst shrow.
Lucentio. 'Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tam'd so.
[Exeunt.]

FINIS

104 vilde: vile 112 hollidam: halidom (salvation) 116 deny: refuse 117 Swinge: whip 121 awful rule: order commanding respect 124 fair befall thee: good luck to you 133 prisoners: read 'pris'ners' 141 five hundred: Lucentio is exaggerating—or has made some side-bets 142 laying: betting 143–145 Katherine . . . husbands: F sets as prose

155 fame: reputation 157 mov'd: angry 181 Unapt: unsuited 182 conditions: characteristics 191 Then . . . boot: so bring down your pride, for it is of no use 198 toward: obedient 201 sped: done for 202 white: center of the target, with play on the name Bianca, meaning 'white'

Notes

I.i. Editors, following Pope, have disregarded the Folio and have labeled the first two scenes of the play 'The Induction.' Our text follows the Folio here as well as in the beginnings of Acts IV and V which were altered by Pope and Warburton.

I.i.1. Sly. A Stephen Sly lived in Stratford in Shakespeare's lifetime, and although the name Slie does appear in A Shrew, it is likely that Shakespeare is making use of his native country and its inhabitants. A family by the name of Hacket did live in Wincot, so the reference to Marian Hacket, the fat ale-wife of Wincot (I.2 23–24) enforces this view. There is added interest in the fact that a Will Sly was a member of Shakespeare's company.

I.i.9. St. Jeronimy. Many editors amend to read 'Go by, Jeronimy,' a phrase from Kyd's Spanish Tragedy (III.12.31) and said to be current in Shakespeare's day as an expression of impatience or dismissal. The rest of the line may echo Hieronimo's speech in the same play (II.5.1.): 'What outcries pluck me from my naked bed?'

I.i.17, 18. Broach. Brach of 1. 17 seems clearly an error in the Folio (perhaps the printer's eyes strayed to the end of the following line) not only because Merriman is a name commonly given a dog and not a bitch but more cogently because the construction requires a verb. Various emendations have been suggested: tash meaning 'to put on a separate leash,' in contrast to the treatment accorded Clowder who is to be 'coupled' (i.e. put on double leash) with another dog; bath (or bathe) not inappropriate for an 'embossed' dog, and broach meaning to 'bleed,' Dover Wilson's and Kittredge's choice. The possible spelling of this verb, broch, would be close to the Folio and would indicate another likely treatment of the distressed animal. It seems on the whole the happiest choice. For a discussion of this passage see the article on hunting by J. W. Fortescue in Shakespeare's England, 2, 348–50.

I.i.82. Players. Bands of strolling players traveled the English countryside presenting their plays wherever they could find an audience, in a market square, a town hall, or in the hall of a nobleman's residence. Particularly in the years 1596–97 when the plague closed the London theatres, Shakespeare's company traveled in the provinces. Hamlet's welcome to the player's (Hamlet II.2) indicates the popularity of such groups.

I.i.SD. Enter Players. The stage direction indicates a constant feature of Elizabethan dramatic practice: the necessity for a time interval between an actor's entrance through a door in the back of the stage and his appearance as a speaking character on the forestage. He had to cover a distance of some thirty feet and usually the stage directions indicate entries several lines before the characters speak in order to allow for this. Practically all editors have altered the position of stage directions to suit the proscenium-arch stage, and the Shakespearean playing has thus been lost.

I.i.94. A Player. The Folio's Sincklo indicates that this part was played by one Sincklow of the King's company whose name also appears in the Quarto (1600) of 2 Henry IV, the First Folio version of 3 Henry VI, and elsewhere, although he does not seem to have been sufficiently important to merit inclusion among the 'Principall Actors' listed at the beginning of the Folio.

I.i.94. Soto. Soto is one of the minor roles in Fletcher's Woman Pleased (1620). The reference here is either a later insertion or Fletcher's play goes back to some earlier production of the Shakespearean company.

I.i.111. page. It was the custom of acting companies to employ boys to play the female roles. It was not until the Restoration that the parts were played by women. For an interesting account of a boy actor see Bryher's novel, The Player's Boy (New York, 1953).

I.ii.55. Adonis. The story of Adonis, the young hunter beloved of Venus and slain by a wild boar, is retold in Shakespeare's own Venus and Adonis.

I.ii.62. Daphne. Daphne, a Greek girl loved by Apollo, escaped his pursuit by being turned into the laurel. Lines 62–65 off this scene suggest Golding's translation of Ovid's Metamorphoses, which Shakespeare had read.

I.ii.100, 101. As Stephen Sly . . . Henry Pimpernell. Possibly the proper names in these lines are names of real people. There was a Stephen Sly of Stratford, and Greece may be a corruption of Greet, a Gloucestershire village, home of 'old John Naps.' See Sydney Lee, Life of Shakespeare, p. 167.

I.iii.2–3. Padua . . . Lumbardy. Padua is a town in northeastern Italy, famous for its University. Lumbardy (Lombardy) is here rather loosely used as a general term for northern Italy. It includes the region modern Italians know as Venetia, where Padua is located.

I.iii.37. Metaphysics. Tranio is here talking about the subjects studied in universities of the time.

I.iii.SD. Pantaloon. This is the name of one of the maschere or stock characters in the old Italian commedia dell' arte. Traditionally the name was used for the role of an old man, often the butt of other characters. Presumably Gremio is here garbed in the costume of such a character, with slippers, spectacles, and baggy pantaloons. Shakespeare (As You Like It, II.7) so describes the sixth of man's seven ages:

> The sixth age shifts
> Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon
> With spectacles on nose and pouch on side,
> His youthful hose, well saved, a world too wide
> For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice
> Turning again to childish trebles, pipes
> And whistles in his sound.

I.iii.57. cart. Disorderly women were sometimes punished by being driven around the town in an open cart, exposed to the jeers of the populace.

I.iii.110, 111. Their love is not so great. Some editors believe that their refers to the love between Katherina and her father (which is not so great as to prevent him from appreciating Bianca); others interpret it as referring to the love between Bianca and Baptista. Dover Wilson, following the Quarto and earlier editors, prints There, love . . . . Later Folios read our for their.

I.iii.155. love in idleness. This is the popular name of the pansy, here probably used literally; cf. A Midsummer Night's Dream II, 1.172 ff.

I.iii.158. Anna. She was the sister and confidante of Dido, queen of Carthage; cf. Aeneid, Bk IV.

I.iii.165. Redime . . . minimo. The Latin means 'Ransom your captive self as cheaply as you can.' The phrase quoted (incorrectly) from Terence (Eunuchus I.1.29) appears in Lyly's Latin grammar where Shakespeare apparently found it.

I.iii.172. daughter of Agenor. Zeus, in the form of a bull, carried off Europa, daughter of Agenor, to Crete; cf. Ovid. Metamorphoses, II, 858 ff.

I.iv.70. Florentius. Florentius is the knight who in Gower's version (in the Confessio Amantis) of the old fairy tale promised to marry an old hag in return for the solution of a riddle that would save his life. Much against his will he kept his promise, and his bride turned into a beautiful maiden. Chaucer also tells this story in 'The Wife of Bath's Tale.'

I.iv.71. Sybil. The Cumean Sybil was granted extreme longevity by Apollo who bestowed on her as many years as the grains of sand which she could hold in her hand.

I.iv.265. Alcides. The Pythian oracle at Delphi ordered Hercules to serve Eurystheus, king of Tiryus, for the space of twelve years. During this time he performed twelve feats of extraordinary bravery and strength which are commonly referred to as 'the twelve labors of Hercules.'

II.i.34. dance barefoot on her wedding day. It was popularly believed that an unmarried elder sister could gain a husband by dancing barefoot at the wedding of her younger sister; thus the phrase is proverbial description of an old maid.

II.i.189–199. Several puns occur in these lines: hard—heard (pronounced 'hard'), bonny—bony (the F spelling), Kates—cates (sweetmeats), and sounded 'proclaimed,' with a quibble in the following line on the meaning 'plumbed.'

II.i.195. Kate-Hall. Kate-Hall may refer to St. Catherine's Hall at Cambridge or to 'a dining house at Katherine Hall' (New Cambridge ed.) where Queen Elizabeth stopped during a royal progress in 1591.

II.i.220. Ay, for a turtle . . . . Bond reads she for he, suggesting that the initial letter may have been lost in the final s of as. He interprets Katherina's speech thus: 'A fool may well think her meek and manageable, as she thinks him' or else, 'as she takes a buzzard for a buzzard,' i.e. a fool for a fool. But it is perhaps better to take buzzard in the third sense given above, 'a large insect,' usually a large moth or cockchafer (OED).

II.i.317, 318. Grissel . . . Lucrece. Griselda, wife of the Marquis of Saluzzo, in Boccaccio's tale (Decameron X, 10) blindly obeyed her husband, and hence became the paragon of wifely docility. Lucrece, a Roman matron who, violated by Sextus, son of King Tarquin of Rome, killed herself, became the symbol of chastity and wifely honor. Cf. Shakespeare's The Rape of Lucrece.

III.i.4. know this lady's. Hammer first suggested this emendation which clarifies the meaning and gives the line its proper number of syllables.

III.i.28, 29. Hic ibat . . . celsa senis. 'Here flowed Simois; here is the Trojan land; here stood old Priam's lofty palace.' Ovid, Heroides I. 33–4.

III.i.37–39. This is the F arrangement. Some editors, however, reproduce these lines as verse, thus:

Hortensio. Madam, my instrument's in tune.
Bianca. Let's hear.
O fie! the treble jars.
Lucentio. Spit in the hole, man,
And tune again.

III.i.47–49. F assigns these lines to Lucentio.

III.i.51–52. F assigns these lines to Bianca.

III.i.53–57. F assigns these lines to Hortensio.

III.i.66. gamouth. Gamouth is the Elizabethan spelling of gamut, the name for the diatonic scale. This derives from the Greek gamma which was the name of the first note in the scale. The suffix -ut denotes the first note of a hexachord and the resultant word acquires the meaning of all the notes in the scale.

III.i.81. Messenger. The Folio Nicke may quite possibly refer to Nicholas Tooley, listed among the 'Principall actors of all these plays' in the First Folio. This hardly seems a part for a 'principal actor' but we may assume he played other parts as well.

III.ii.31. old. The reference to old in the following line suggests that its omission in this one is an error. Many editors (following Capell) amend to read: 'news, old news, and such news.' We are inclined to agree with Dover Wilson that the insertion of the word after such seems 'the simplest and most natural' reading.

III.ii.67–68. humor of forty fancies. Doubtless Dover Wilson is right in his assertion that 'no one knows what this phrase means.' Our note follows Halliwell; other guesses include 'some ballad or drollery' (Warburton), 'a collection of short poems such as were called fancies' (Steevens), 'a fantastic ornament comprising the humor of forty different fancies' (Malone).

III. iii. Pope, disregarding the act division indicated in the Folio text, chose to begin the fourth act at this point. All subsequent editors have followed this arbitrary emendation. The present text follows the Folio.

III.iii.85. indifferent knit. The ambiguous word is indifferent, variously explained as 'not different' (Johnson), 'particolor' (Malone) and with adverbial meaning (Bond) as we have taken it.

III.iii.136. Food . . . food. The Folio soud has baffled the commentators. Some have taken it as an indication of a sound expressing fatigue, some see in it an echo of the refrain of an old song. 'Soudledum, soudledum' (Halliwell) and Hammer took it as representing the humming of Petruchio. Dover Wilson's emendation Food, which we have followed, certainly seems appropriate to the circumstances and the stage business, and is understandable as a printer's confusion of long s and f.

III.iii.189. lure. A lure was a small wicker container covered with feathers used first in training a hawk. Meat was placed inside and the falconer swung the lure in a circle over his head to create a whistling sound. The hawk pouncing on the lure received her food. After the hawk was trained, the mere swinging up of the lure would recall her.

III.iii.195. Last night . . . shall. not Either this is a guess on Petruchio's part or Shakespeare has forgotten that the pair has been married only today.

III.iii.205. kill a wife with kindness. Of this line Bond wisely remarks: 'This being a common phrase for mistaken indulgence, we need not suppose an allusion to Heywood's A Woman Killed with Kindness, 1607, nor adjust the date of our play thereto.'

III.iv.8–11. Art of Love. An allusion to Ovid's Ars amatoria. These lines contain a series of common puns, namely art—heart—hart (pronounced alike), dear—deer, and proceeders, with a play on its usual meaning and the sense of candidates for degree, with reference to the master of art of 1. 9.

III.iv.61. tricks eleven and twenty long. This is an allusion to the card game referred to in I.4.33, and means 'tricks suitable to the needs of the case.'

IV.ii.SD. Enter Baptista and Lucentio. Since the Pedant is already on the stage, the stage direction in the Folio is either an afterthought or an instruction to the Pedant to remove his hat at the entrance of Baptista and Lucentio. Such directions for stage business are rather rare in the Folio.

IV.ii.67. I pray . . . my heart. The Folio's assignment of 1. 67 to Biondello has caused some editors to change the Cambio of 1. 62 to Biondello. Yet here Perry's reasoning (Yale Shakespeare, 1928) is quite convincing: Lucentio is Baptista's servant and so would naturally be ordered about by him; furthermore it is essential to the plot to have Bianca fetched by Lucentio. We may assume that Lucentio moves off to another part of the stage, where he awaits Biondello. The Folio provides only one Exit but the stage direction of 1. 72 seems to indicate that the pair has joined up, either on stage as indicated or just off stage. I would take it that Tranio's speech in 1. 68, though picking up Lucentio's phrase, is addressed to Biondello in dismissal. The Folio SD of 1. 68 has baffled editors; Bond suggests Peter may be the name of an actor, playing the part of a servant come to tell Tranio that dinner awaits.

IV.ii.94. cum . . . solem. This is an ancient copyright formula meaning 'with privilege of exclusive printing' (cum privilegio ad imprimendum solum); it is here used metaphorically by Biondello, whose Latin is not perfect. Cf. the same metaphorical use of appendix in 1. 105.

IV.iii.27. bias. In lawn bowling the balls employed are weighted on one side so that they will roll in an arc thus enabling a bowler to go around a ball of an opponent which lies between him and the jack or small white ball which is the target. If the ball is properly bowled it will run with and not against the bias.

IV. iv. Again our text follows the Folio. Warburton began Act V at this point, and all subsequent editors have followed him rather than the Folio.

IV.iv.44. I . . . sir. This expression was used to a disagreeable person who barred one's path in the street, according to the New Cambridge editors; cf. The Merchant of Venice, 1.2.41.

Love's Labour's Lost

Edited by WILBUR CROSS
and
TUCKER BROOKE

Dramatis Personae

FERDINAND, King of Navarre

BEROWNE, LONGAVILLE, DUMAINE — three Lords attending upon the King in his retirement

BOYET, MARCADE — Lords attending upon the Princess of France

DON ADRIANO DE ARMADO, a fantastical Spaniard
NATHANIEL, a Curate
DULL, a Constable
HOLOFERNES, a Schoolmaster
COSTARD, a Clown
MOTH, Page to Don Adriano de Armado
A FORESTER
PRINCESS OF FRANCE

ROSALINE, MARIA, KATHARINE — Ladies attending on the Princess

JAQUENETTA, a country Wench
OFFICERS AND OTHER ATTENDANTS UPON THE KING AND PRINCESS

SCENE—Navarre.

Love's Labour's Lost

Introduction

Sources of the Play

The central idea of Love's Labour's Lost—that a scholarly prince binds himself and his chosen associates to a quasi-monastic scheme of life, which is immediately shattered by the intrusion of amorous sentiment[1]—would seem much too obvious to be the original invention of Shakespeare; yet no earlier work, either of fiction or of history, has been discovered which can reasonably be regarded as a source of the play, and modern scholarship can only repeat, as regards the main plot, the confession of the first great detector of Shakespearean sources, Langbaine (1691): 'Loves Labour Lost (sic), a Comedy: the Story of which I can give no Account of.' Even more, then, than A Midsummer Night's Dream and The Tempest, Love's Labour's Lost stands out as an example of Shakespeare's rare practice of inventing rather than adapting a dramatic plot.

Like the main plot, the constituent elements which make up the play owe little, apparently, to Shakespeare's reading. They seem rather to be drawn from two non-literary sources upon which the play depends in nearly equal degree. The less conspicuous half of it—involving the characters of Costard, Jaquenetta, Dull, Holofernes, and Nathaniel, and the show of the Nine Worthies—is a heightened study of English country types, evidently founded upon personal observation. The other half, dealing with the French lords and ladies, seems based—in so far as it has a basis outside the poet's imagination—upon the political talk of London in the period about 1589.[2] In 1880 (Sir) Sidney Lee pointed out three features of this part of the play which bear an analogy to contemporary history:

(1) The King of Navarre, Berowne, Longaville, and Dumaine have names which are identical or practically so with those of four conspicuous leaders in the French civil war of 1589–1593: Henri IV (Henry of Navarre); his two generals, Marshal Biron and the Duke of Longueville; and his great opponent, the Duke du Maine, or de Mayenne, brother to the Duke of Guise.[3]

(2) In 1586 Catherine de Medici, Queen-Mother of France, conducted a diplomatic conference with Henry of Navarre at St.-Bris, at which the Queen attempted to influence the course of negotiations by means of a band of gay and charming ladies in waiting.[4]

(3) In 1582–1583 an official deputation of Muscovites was at Queen Elizabeth's court to treat concerning the marriage of the Czar Ivan to a kinswoman of the English Queen. They made themselves ridiculous and became the butt of a practical joke. (See V. ii. 121 and note.)

The pertinence of these parallels is hardly questionable, but the flippancy and vagueness with which Shakespeare utilizes the historical incidents certainly suggest that his knowledge comes from current talk rather than from definite printed accounts. The dramatist, of course, was not purporting to write contemporary history, as Marlowe was when he produced his Massacre at Paris. Doubtless Shakespeare first devised his fiction of Navarre and France at a period when it was possible to weave into it recent names and incidents still too vague in their connotation for English auditors to jar against the playful spirit of the comedy.[5] He seems to have conceived of his Navarre, Berowne, Longaville, and Dumaine as living in some pleasant remote time, and it is entirely possible that the real nucleus of the Navarre-France portion of the story is to be found in some such passage as that of Monstrelet's history,[6] cited by Hunter in 1845, the relevancy of which Lee and nearly all subsequent critics have denied. Monstrelet writes as follows: 'At this same season [ca. 1403], Charles king of Navarre came to Paris to wait on the king. He negotiated so successfully with the king and his privy council, that he obtained a gift of the castle of Nemours, with some of its dependent castlewicks, which territory was made a duchy. He instantly did homage for it, and at the same time surrendered to the king the castle of Cherbourg, the county of Évreux, and all other lordships he possessed within the kingdom of France, renouncing all claim or profit in them to the king and his successors, on consideration that with this duchy of Nemours the king of France engaged to pay him two hundred thousand gold crowns of the coin of the king our lord.' In this rather complicated transaction Shakespeare may have found the suggestion for the still more complex business of the play, in which likewise a deceased King Charles (cf. II. i. 167) of Navarre and a total sum of two hundred thousand crowns (cf. II. i. 132-136) are involved.[7]

The French and English halves of the play are joined together by the characters of Armado and his page Moth, who are neither French nor convincingly English. In these two figures literary precedent is more evident than elsewhere, and it is clearly John Lyly whom Shakespeare is following. Compare the talk of Armado and Moth in II. i with the following scene between a braggart and his page in Lyly's Endimion.[8]

1 This idea is evidently a kind of reverse of that in Tennyson's poem, The Princess.

2 Several recent writers see English topical references in the Princess of France's visit to Navarre. Thus Mr. Arthur Acheson (Shakespeare's Lost Years in London, 1920, p. 119, 165 ff.) conjectures that Love's Labour's Lost 'was written late in 1591, or early in 1592, as a reflection of the Queen's progress [August, 1591] to Cowdray House, the home of the Earl of Southampton's maternal grandfather, Viscount Montague, and that the shooting of deer by the Princess and her ladies fancifully records phases of the entertainments arranged for the Queen during her visit.' Cf. note on IV. i. 114.

3 Dumaine is prominent in Marlowe's Massacre at Paris as an enemy of Navarre. It is very likely, as Hart and Charlton diffidently suggest, that Shakespeare confused him with Marshal d'Aumont, who, though originally anti-Huguenot, was one of the first to recognize Navarre after Henri III's death (1589) and shared with him in the victory at Ivry (1590). Longueville gained a great victory for the Huguenots at Senlis in 1589. Lee's further assumption that Moth is named after La Motte, a French ambassador at Elizabeth's court in earlier days, lacks probability.

4 Lefranc would substitute for the meeting at St.-Bris an earlier meeting of Catherine and Navarre at Nérac in 1580.

5 See Shakespeare's Original Text and His Revision.

6 Monstrelet, who died in 1453, continued the Chronicles of Froissart from the year 1400. The passage quoted comes near the commencement of his work (bk. i, ch. 17). A number of French editions were available in Shakespeare's time, but there appears to have been no translation into English before that of Thomas Johnes in 1809.

7 Professor Lefranc (Sous le Masque de 'William Shakespeare') makes an important addition by showing that discussions concerning Navarre's holdings in the province of Aquitaine were rife between him and the King of France about 1580.

8 Act V, sc. ii. The date of Endimion is probably 1586.

'Sir Tophas. Epi, loue hath iustled my libertie from the wall, and taken the vpper hand of my reason.
Epiton. Let mee then trippe vp the heeles of your affection, and thrust your goodwill into the gutter.
Sir To. No, Epi, Loue is a Lorde of misrule, and keepeth Christmas in my corps.
Epi. No doubt there is good cheere: what dishes of delight doth his Lordshippe feast you withal?
Sir To. First, with a great platter of plum-porridge of pleasure, wherein is stued the mutton of mistrust.
Epi. Excellent loue lappe.
Sir To. Then commeth a Pye of patience, a Henne of honnie, a Goose of gall, a Capon of care, and many other Viandes, some sweete and some sowre; which proueth loue to bee, as it was saide of in olde yeeres, Dulce venenum.
Epi. A braue banquet.
Sir To. But, Epi, I praye thee feele on my chinne, some thing prycketh mee. What dost thou feele or see?
Epi. There are three or foure little haires.
Sir To. I pray thee call it my bearde. Howe shall I bee troubled when this younge springe shall growe to a great wood!
Epi. O, sir, your chinne is but a quyller yet, you will be most maiesticall when it is full fledge. But I maruell that you loue Dipsas, that old Crone,' etc.

The chief literary influence in Love's Labour's Lost is certainly Lyly's, poor though the latter's work seems by contrast. Shakespeare at once differentiates himself from the artificial prose comedy of Lyly by his vindication of common sense against affectation and by his deep interest in sonorous verse effects. It is not unlikely that the play is also related superficially to Marlowe's Massacre at Paris (written toward the end of 1589), in which the historical Navarre and Dumaine are both introduced, and which opens with Navarre's marriage to the Princess of France.[9]

Shakespeare's Original Text and His Revision

The date of composition of Shakespeare's original (lost) version of Love's Labour's Lost and its relation to the text of 1598, corrected and augmented for performance at court, have been the subject of long discussion, to which daring contributions have been made within the last half-dozen years. The conjectured dates of original composition range, according to Dr. Furness' table, from 1588 or earlier till after 1596. Metrical evidence, persisting even in the augmented text, supports the assumption of Furnivall, Dowden, and Sir Sidney Lee that Love's Labour's Lost is the earliest of all Shakespeare's plays. Hart (Arden ed., x-xvii) finds other internal evidence pointing 'to 1590 for the date of the earliest form of the play.' Such till recently has been the generally accepted opinion.

In the Modern Language Review (July, October, 1918) Mr. H. B. Charlton published a monograph on 'The Date of Love's Labour's Lost,' in which he argues for the latter part of 1592 as the time of first composition and assumes only a slight revision immediately previous to the performance of 1597–8. Subsequent writers have apparently inclined to accept Mr. Charlton's rather iconoclastic conclusions. Professor J. Q. Adams[10] agrees that '1592 is the earliest date that can possibly be assigned to the play,' and conjectures that it was composed during the inhibition of acting from June till December of that year. The recent Cambridge editors (1923) go farther and, joining Mr. Charlton's deductions to some fancied evidences in the play of hostility to Sir Walter Raleigh and his associates, arrive at 1593 for the year of writing: 'We give it as our belief, and no more, that Love's Labour's Lost was written in 1593 for a private performance in the house of some grandee who had opposed Raleigh and Raleigh's "men"—possibly the Earl of Southampton's.'

I venture to suggest briefly some reasons for thinking that the probability of an early version of Love's Labour's Lost, written not later than 1590 and standing very near the beginning of Shakespeare's dramatic work, remains unimpaired.[11] Mr. Charlton agrees that Shakespeare's use of topical names (Navarre, Berowne, Longaville, Dumaine) is a concession to English interest, in contemporary events in France. This interest, he maintains, really began with the sending of an expeditionary force to the aid of Henry of Navarre in July, 1591, while 'the summer and autumn of 1592 marked the highest level of English public interest in the French wars.[12] It seems clear, on the other hand, that if Shakespeare gave his sentimental students these topical names out of consideration for public interest in their namesakes, he could only have done so before the public, or he himself, had yet acquired any clear notion of the character and achievements of the latter. To call the King of Navarre Ferdinand rather than Henry and ignore his pretensions to the French crown, to say nothing (virtually) of the military fame of the four gentlemen and associate Dumaine in friendship with the rest, or alternatively, to confuse Dumaine with d'Aumont,[13] would have affronted common intelligence if attempted very long after the death of Henri III (August 2, 1589) had brought them all upon the centre of the political stage. I take it that the period between Henri III's assassination and the battle of Ivry (March 14, 1590) was the latest at which an English dramatist could have thought of thus irrelevantly employing the names of the leading French generals for the heroes of a comedy of love and the simple life.

Mr. Charlton's assumption that the revision of the play was slight is contradicted by the large amount of discrepancy between mature and immature work, and also by the curious and cumbrous structure of the existing text, in which the first three acts together are only half the length of the last two and not as long as the colossal second scene of Act V.

The first three acts doubtless represent the scale upon which the comedy was originally written. The earliest critic who attempted to distinguish closely between the two texts (of ca. 1590 and ca. 1597) appears to have been Spedding, whose apportionment, made in 1839, is quoted by Dr. Furnivall.[14] In a paper on 'The Original Version of Love's Labour's Lost' (1918) Professor 9 Dr. Johnson made the plausible conjecture that Shakespeare's character of Holofernes owes something to the pedantic schoolmaster, Rombus, in Sir Philip Sidney's pastoral play, The Lady of May, acted before Queen Elizabeth in 1578.

10 Life of Shakespeare, 1923, p. 142 f. Compare Professor O. F. Emerson in an article on 'Shakespeare's Sonneteering,' Studies in Philology, April, 1923, p. 122.

11 I do not deal with the special allusions which Mr. Charlton finds in individual passages of the play to books and events of the period 1590–1592. In most cases the dates implied do not seem to me decisive, and Mr. Charlton's unsupported hypothesis that practically everything in the play was in it from the beginning removes the matter from the field of argument.

12 Dr. Furnivall refers to Stow's statement that in September, 1589, 'the citizens of London furnished a thousand men to be sent over into France, to the aiding of Henry, late King of Navarre, then challenging the crown of France.' Mr. Charlton rather perversely, as it seems to me, refuses to believe that there can have been sufficient public interest at this date.

13 See Sources of the Play, p. 91, note 3.

14 Facsimile of 1598 Quarto, pp. viii, ix; Leopold Shakespere, p. xxiii.

H. D. Gray has attempted with interesting results to discover the scope of the original play, basing his arguments upon evidences of organic unity and 'youthful love of symmetry,' as well as upon style. In the recent Cambridge edition Mr. Dover Wilson has made a similar attempt,[15] independently and by means of totally different criteria—chiefly the bibliographical phenomena of the Quarto and Folio texts. The various results are of course contradictory in many details, but the investigators all agree in assigning a large preponderance of the first three acts to the original version and the larger part of the last two to the revision.

The History of the Play

The known history of Love's Labour's Lost begins with the evidence found on the title-page of the earliest edition[16] the Quarto of 1598. This reads: 'A Pleasant Conceited Comedie Called, Loues labors lost. As it vvas presented before her Highnes this last Christmas. Newly corrected and augmented By W. Shakespeare.' Her Highness was Queen Elizabeth and the Christmas performance alluded to probably took place during the season of December, 1597–January, 1598.[17] The statement that the play had been newly corrected and augmented is substantiated beyond all question by the text itself, particularly in the fourth and fifth acts.[18]

Love's Labour's Lost is the earliest of Shakespeare's plays concerning which we have notice of a special performance at court and probably also the earliest to name Shakespeare as author on the printed title-page. It is mentioned in Meres 'Palladis Tamia' (1598), third in the list of six comedies ascribed to the poet, and again in the same year in Robert Tofte's Alba, where the allusion is casual and more complimentary to the actors than to the dramatist:

'Loues Labor Lost, I once did see a Play
Ycleped so, so called to my paine,
Which I to heare to my small Ioy did stay,
Giuing attendance on my froward Dame,
My misgiuing minde presaging to me Ill,
Yet was I drawne to see it gainst my Will.

'This Play no Play, but Plague was vnto me,
For there I lost the Loue I liked most:
And what to others seemde a Iest to be,
I that in earnest found vnto my cost:
To euery one (saue me) twas Comicall,
Whilst Tragick like to me it did befall.

'Each Actor plaid in cunning wise his part,
But chiefly Those entrapt in Cupids snare:
Yet all was fained, twas not from the hart,
They seemde to grieue, but yet they felt no care:
Twas I that Griefe (indeed) did beare in brest,
The others did but make a show in Iest.'

The sonnets of Berowne (IV. ii. 104–117) and Longaville (IV. iii. 55–68) and Dumaine's 'ode' (IV. iii. 99–118) were reprinted by William Jaggard in 1599 in the pirated volume called The Passionate Pilgrim, and Dumaine's poem was also included in the anthology, England's Helicon, in 1600. Later William Drummond of Hawthornden lists the comedy as one of the 'Bookes red be me, anno 1606,' when Drummond was staying in London. Property rights in the published play are affirmed when, on January 22, 1606/7, Burby, the publisher of the 1598 Quarto (who seems not to have entered it himself), transferred Love's Labour's Lost, along with Romeo and Juliet and The Taming of a Shrew to Nicholas Linge. Less than a year later Linge surrendered all three plays (November 19, 1607) to John Smethwick, who was later one of the partners in the Folio Shakespeare.

Though probably never notably popular, Love's Labour's Lost showed unusual staying powers during the Shakespearean era. First produced at the opening of the poet's career, it was rewritten, as we have seen, in 1597–8 for the particular amusement of Queen Elizabeth. A little over a year after her death it was again selected for court performance in order to divert her successor, Anne of Denmark (Queen of James I), as is witnessed by the following very interesting letter from Sir Walter Cope to Viscount Cranborne (i.e. Sir Robert Cecil, later Lord Salisbury):

'Sir,—I haue sent and bene all thys morning huntyng for players Juglers & Such kinde of Creaturs, but fynde them harde to fynde; wherefore leauing notes for them to seek me, Burbage ys come, and sayes there is no new playe that the quene hath not seene, but they haue reuyued an olde one, cawled Loves Labore Lost, which for wytt & mirthe he sayes will please her exceedingly. And thys ys appointed to be played to morrowe night at my Lord of Sowthamptons, unless yow send a wrytt to remove the corpus cum causa to your howse in Strande. Burbage ys my messenger ready attending your pleasure.' This is dated '1604,' and the performance referred to is fixed by Mr. Chambers as between January 8 and January 15, 1604/5.[19] The audit office accounts for 1604–5 record the acting 'By his Majesty's players' of 'A play of Loues Labours Lost' between New Year's Day and Twelfth Day (January 6).

A certain degree of continued popularity is indicated by the publication of another Quarto edition of Love's Labour's Lost in 1631, during the period, that is, between the appearance of the first and second Folio editions of Shakespeare, when relatively few of his plays were being called for in separate form. The statement on the title-page of this Quarto, 'As it was acted by his Majesty's Servants at the Blackfriars and the Globe,' if correct, proves that revivals must have occurred after 1608–9, when Shakespeare's company first began to use the Blackfriars' Theatre.

Later the play fell into total obscurity for over a century. No performances or adaptations are known during the period of the Restoration or the first half of the eighteenth century. Dryden in 1672[20] groups Love's Labour's Lost with The Winter's Tale and Measure for Measure as examples of the worst of Shakespeare's plays, 'which were either grounded on impossibilities, or at least so meanly written, that the comedy neither caused your mirth, 15 The results are summarized on p. 116, of the Cambridge edition.

16 Mr. Pollard has argued that this Quarto was probably preceded by a piratical earlier edition of which no trace remains. The evidence is purely bibliographical and circumstantial, but carries weight.

17 The Elizabethan year began with March 25. Hence if the Quarto was printed between January 1 and March 24, 'this last Christmas' would be Christmas, 1598, by our reckoning. Halliwell-Phillipps (Furness, p. 336) suggested a connection of the performance of the play with a recorded payment in December, 1597, 'for altering and making readie of soundrie chambers at Whitehall against Christmas, and for the plaies, and for making readie in the hall for her Maiestie.' Shakespeare's company acted at court on December 26 of both years, 1597 and 1598, and also on the following January 1 (1598 and 1599).

18 See notes on IV. iii. 313–317 and V. ii. 861–867.

19 Elizabethan Stage, iv. 139 f.

20 The Conquest of Granada, Pt. II. Defence of the Epilogue.

nor the serious part your concernment.' Jeremy Collier (1699) says briefly of it that 'the poet plays the fool egregiously, for the whole play is a very silly one'; and Gildon (1710) brands it as 'one of the worst of Shakespear's Plays, nay, I think I may say, the very worst.'

When As You Like It was revived in 1740, the cuckoo song from the close of Love's Labour's Lost was interpolated into the acting version of the other play, where it long continued to be used.[21] This would seem to be the only part of Love's Labour's Lost that ever appeared on the eighteenth-century stage. The first known adaptation of our play was printed in 1762 with the title: 'The Students. A Comedy Altered from Shakespeare's Love's Labours Lost, and Adapted to the Stage.' Though equipped with elaborate prologue and epilogue in heroic couplets, there is no evidence that this work ever reached the stage for which it had been 'adapted.' Only about 800 lines of the original play are retained;[22] the characters of Holofernes and Nathaniel are omitted entirely, and the mask of Muscovites and show of Nine Worthies are replaced by a 'comic dance' in dumb-show. The alterations of Shakespeare's main plot are rather remarkable. Berowne puts on a coat intended for Costard, and having thus easily rendered himself irrecognizable, carries messages between the lords and ladies. In this way he secures information enough about the real sentiments of them all to dominate the situation and force an immediate happy ending instead of the year's postponement proposed by the Princess. His closing words express the author's high sense of his improvement upon the original:

'Our wooing now doth end like an old play;
Jack hath his Jill; these ladies' courtesie
Hath nobly made our sport a Comedy.'

Another apparently unacted revision of Love's Labour's Lost, likewise anonymous, is preserved in a single copy at the British Museum. It dates from about the year 1800. This version also eliminates Holofernes and Nathaniel and concludes with the ladies' consent to immediate matrimony, brought about in a manner quite different from that employed in The Students. The characters of Costard and Jaquenetta (Jaquelina) are much romanticized, and they too are made happy at the end. Armado is presented as a demi-villain, and eavesdropping is employed even more copiously than in the original play.

On September 30, 1839, the first recorded performance of Love's Labour's Lost since Shakespearean times was given at Covent Garden. Madame Vestris played Rosaline; Harley, Armado; and Anderson, Berowne. The piece was performed nine times and three slightly differing versions of the acting text were published. In 1857 Samuel Phelps presented the play at the Sadler's Wells Theatre, Phelps himself taking the part of Armado. In 1885 and again in 1907 it was produced at the Memorial Theatre, Stratford-on-Avon, as the Shakespeare Birthday play (April 23), Mr. F. R. Benson playing Berowne on the latter occasion. The English Drama Society gave it in Bloomsbury Hall, April 24, 1906. Other productions are recorded by the companies of Charles Fry, Ben Greet, and Florence Glossop-Harris. An acting version, 'adapted by Elsie Fogerty for Girls' Schools,' was published in 1912. Recently, under the management of Miss Lillian Baylis, Love's Labour's Lost has appeared frequently in the repertory of the Royal Victoria Hall ('Old Vic.') in London; e.g. in the spring of 1918 and during the season that began September 22, 1923. The most recent production was that given by the Oxford University Dramatic Society in Wadham College garden, June 21, 1924. The enthusiastic tone of the critics of these late performances[23] shows that the play is now gaining in the esteem of audiences as during the past generation it has gained in the favor of critics and general readers.

The most important American productions of Love's Labour's Lost were those arranged by Augustin Daly in New York, in 1874, and again in 1891. The German Shakespeare scholar, Rudolph Genée, brought out in 1887 a considerably altered version in three acts for the German stage. In recent times this has usually been supplanted by translations which adhere more closely to the original.

21 Cf. Furness, p. 316, note on line 976. Both the cuckoo song and the other song of winter were printed in 1671 in an anthology called The New Academy of Compliments.

22 As counted by F. Schult, Bühnenbearbeitungen von Shakespeares "Love's Labour's Lost," 1910.

23 See reviews, for example, in the Manchester Guardian, September 28, 1923, and June 27, 1924.

ACT FIRST ❧ SCENE FIRST

[The King of Navarre's Park]
Enter Ferdinand King of Navarre, Berowne, Longaville, and Dumaine.

King. Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live register'd upon our brazen tombs,
And then grace us in the disgrace of death;
When, spite of cormorant devouring Time,
Th' endeavour of this present breath may buy
That honour which shall bate his scythe's keen edge,
And make us heirs of all eternity.
Therefore, brave conquerors,—for so you are,
That war against your own affections
And the huge army of the world's desires,—
Our late edict shall strongly stand in force:
Navarre shall be the wonder of the world;
Our court shall be a little academe,
Still and contemplative in living art.
You three, Berowne, Dumaine, and Longaville,
Have sworn for three years' term to live with me,
My fellow-scholars, and to keep those statutes
That are recorded in this schedule here:
Your oaths are pass'd; and now subscribe your names,
That his own hand may strike his honour down
That violates the smallest branch herein.
If you are arm'd to do, as sworn to do,
Subscribe to your deep oaths, and keep it too.
Long. I am resolv'd; 'tis but a three years' fast:
The mind shall banquet, though the body pine:
Fat paunches have lean pates, and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits.
Dum. My loving lord, Dumaine is mortified:
The grosser manner of these world's delights
He throws upon the gross world's baser slaves:
To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die;
With all these living in philosophy.
Ber. I can but say their protestation over;
So much, dear liege, I have already sworn,
That is, to live and study here three years.
But there are other strict observances;
As, not to see a woman in that term,
Which I hope well is not enrolled there:
And one day in a week to touch no food,
And but one meal on every day beside;
The which I hope is not enrolled there:
And then, to sleep but three hours in the night,
And not be seen to wink of all the day,—
When I was wont to think no harm all night
And make a dark night too of half the day,—
Which I hope well is not enrolled there.
O! these are barren tasks, too hard to keep,
Not to see ladies, study, fast, not sleep.
King. Your oath is pass'd to pass away from these.
Ber. Let me say no, my liege, an if you please.
I only swore to study with your Grace,
And stay here in your court for three years' space.
Long. You swore to that, Berowne, and to the rest.
Ber. By yea and nay, sir, then I swore in jest.
What is the end of the study? let me know.
King. Why, that to know which else we should not know.
Ber. Things hid and barr'd, you mean, from common sense?
King. Ay, that is study's godlike recompense.
Ber. Come on then; I will swear to study so,
To know the thing I am forbid to know;
As thus: to study where I well may dine,
When I to feast expressly am forbid;
Or study where to meet some mistress fine,
When mistresses from common sense are hid;
Or, having sworn too hard-a-keeping oath,
Study to break it, and not break my troth.
If study's gain be thus, and this be so,
Study knows that which yet it doth not know.
Swear me to this, and I will ne'er say no.
King. These be the stops that hinder study quite,
And train our intellects to vain delight.
Ber. Why, all delights are vain; but that most vain
Which, with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain:
As, painfully to pore upon a book,
To seek the light of truth; while truth the while
Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look:
Light seeking light doth light of light beguile:
So, ere you find where light in darkness lies,
Your light grows dark by losing of your eyes.
Study me how to please the eye indeed,
By fixing it upon a fairer eye,
Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his heed,
And give him light that it was blinded by.
Study is like the heaven's glorious sun,
That will not be deep-search'd with saucy looks:
Small have continual plodders ever won,
Save base authority from others' books.
These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights,
That give a name to every fixed star,
Have no more profit of their shining nights
Than those that walk and wot not what they are.
Too much to know is to know nought but fame;
And every godfather can give a name.
King. How well he's read, to reason against reading!
Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding!
Long. He weeds the corn, and still lets grow the weeding.
Ber. The spring is near, when green geese are abreeding.
Dum. How follows that?
Ber. Fit in his place and time.
Dum. In reason nothing.
Ber. Something, then, in rime.
King. Berowne is like an envious sneaping frost
That bites the first-born infants of the spring.
Ber. Well, say I am: why should proud summer boast
Before the birds have any cause to sing?
Why should I joy in any abortive birth?

LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST; cf. n. 4 cormorant: ravenous 6 bate: blunt 12 Navarre; cf. n. 13 academe: academy 14 living art: the art of living; cf. n. 19 subscribe: sign 22 arm'd: ready 26 pates: heads 27 wits: faculties of the mind 28 mortified: dead so far as pleasures and passions are concerned 32 all these: i.e. love, wealth, pomp 38 there: i.e. in the schedule 43 wink of: close the eyes during 47 barren: fruitless, futile 50 an if: if

54 By yea and nay: i.e. by the most positive oath of affirmation and denial 57 common sense: ordinary sight or perception 62 feast cf. n. 67, 68 Cf. n. 73 Cf. n. 76 his: its 77 beguile: deprive 79 light: i.e. sight 80–83 Study me . . . blinded by; cf. n. 85 saucy: bold 86 Small: little 88–93 Cf. n. 91 wot: know 95 Proceeded; cf. n. 97 green geese: grass-fed goslings, i.e. simpletons 101 Cf. n. 102 sneaping: nipping 103 infants: buds or flowers

At Christmas I no more desire a rose
Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled shows;
But like of each thing that in season grows.
So you, to study now it is too late,
Climb o'er the house to unlock the little gate.
King. Well, sit you out: go home, Berowne: adieu!
Ber. No, my good lord; I have sworn to stay with you:
And though I have for barbarism spoke more
Than for that angel knowledge you can say,
Yet confident I'll keep what I have sworn,
And bide the penance of each three years' day.
Give me the paper; let me read the same;
And to the strictest decrees I'll write my name.
King. How well this yielding rescues thee from shame!
Ber. 'Item. That no woman shall come with-in a mile of my court.' Hath this been proclaimed?
Long. Four days ago.
Ber. Let's see the penalty. 'On pain of losing her tongue.' Who devised this penalty?
Long. Marry, that did I.
Ber. Sweet lord, and why?
Long. To fright them hence with that dread penalty.
[Ber.]. A dangerous law against gentility!
'Item. If any man be seen to talk with a woman within the term of three years, he shall endure such public shame as the rest of the court can possibly devise.'
This article, my liege, yourself must break;
For well you know here comes in embassy
The French king's daughter with yourself to speak—
A maid of grace and complete majesty—
About surrender up of Aquitaine
To her decrepit, sick, and bed-rid father.
Therefore this article is made in vain,
Or vainly comes th' admired princess hither.
King. What say you, lords? why, this was quite forgot.
Ber. So study evermore is overshot:
While it doth study to have what it would,
It doth forget to do the thing it should;
And when it hath the thing it hunteth most,
'Tis won as towns with fire; so won, so lost.
King. We must of force dispense with this decree;
She must lie here on mere necessity.
Ber. Necessity will make us all forsworn
Three thousand times within this three years' space:
For every man with his affects is born,
Not by might master'd, but by special grace.
If I break faith, this word shall speak for me:
I am forsworn 'on mere necessity.'
So to the laws at large I write my name: [Signs.]
And he that breaks them in the least degree
Stands in attainder of eternal shame.
Suggestions are to others as to me;
But I believe, although I seem so loath,
I am the last that will last keep his oath.
But is there no quick recreation granted?
King. Ay, that there is. Our court, you know, is haunted
With a refined traveller of Spain,
A man in all the world's new fashion planted,
That hath a mint of phrases in his brain;
One who the music of his own vain tongue
Doth ravish like enchanting harmony;
A man of complements, whom right and wrong
Have chose as umpire of their mutiny.
This child of fancy, that Armado hight,
For interim to our studies shall relate
In high-born words the worth of many a knight
From tawny Spain lost in the world's debate.
How you delight, my lords, I know not, I;
But, I protest, I love to hear him lie,
And I will use him for my minstrelsy.
Ber. Armado is a most illustrious wight,
A man of fire-new words, fashion's own knight.
Long. Costard the swain and he shall be our sport;
And, so to study, three years is but short.

Enter a Constable [Dull] with Costard with a Letter.

Const. Which is the duke's own person?
Ber. This, fellow. What wouldst?
Const. I myself reprehend his own person, for I am his Grace's tharborough: but I would see his own person in flesh and blood.
Ber. This is he.
Const. Signior Arm—Arm—commends you. There's villainy abroad: this letter will tell you more.
Cost. Sir, the contempts thereof are as touching me.
King. A letter from the magnificent Armado.
Ber. How low soever the matter, I hope in God for high words.
Long. A high hope for a low heaven: God grant us patience!
Ber. To hear, or forbear laughing?
Long. To hear meekly, sir, and to laugh moderately, or to forbear both.
Ber. Well, sir, be it as the style shall give us cause to climb in the merriness.
Cost. The matter is to me, sir, as concerning Jaquenetta. The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.
Ber. In what manner?
Cost. In manner and form following, sir; all those three: I was seen with her in the manor-house, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park; which, put together, is, in manner and form following. Now, sir, for the manner,—it is the manner of a man to speak to a woman, for the form,—in some form.
Ber. For the following, sir?
Cost. As it shall follow in my correction; and God defend the right!
King. Will you hear this letter with attention?
Ber. As we would hear an oracle.
Cost. Such is the simplicity of man to hearken after the flesh.
King. [Reads.] 'Great deputy, the welkin's vice-gerent,

108 new-fangled shows: cf. n. 111 Cf. n. 112 sit you out: withdraw 116 confident: I am confident; cf. n. 117 each three years' day: each day for three years 121 Item: likewise 129 gentility: courtesy 148 lie: lodge mere: absolute 151 affects: affections, passions 152 special grace: divine help 157 in attainder: convicted 158 Suggestions: temptations 161 quick: lively

166 who: whom 168 complements: accomplishments 170 hight: is called 172 high-born: lofty 173 debate: warfare 176 for my minstrelsy: as my minstrel 178 fire-new: brand-new 181 duke's: i.e. king's 183 reprehend: i.e. represent 184 tharborough: third borough (constable) 189 contempts: i.e. contents 190 magnificent: showy, vainglorious 193 low heaven: i.e. moderate pleasure 200 with the manner (mainour): in the act 204 form: bench 209 correction: punishment and sole dominator of Navarre, my soul's earth's God, and body's fostering patron,—'

Cost. Not a word of Costard yet.

King. [Reads.] 'So it is,—'

Cost. It may be so; but if he say it is so, he is, in telling true, but so.—

King. Peace!

Cost. Be to me and every man that dares not fight.

King. No words!

Cost. Of other men's secrets, I beseech you.

King. [Reads.]. 'So it is, besieged with sable-coloured melancholy, I did commend the black-oppressing humour to the most wholesome physic of thy health-giving air; and, as I am a gentleman, betook myself to walk. The time when? About the sixth hour; when beasts most graze, birds best peck, and men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper: so much for the time when. Now for the ground which; which, I mean, I walked upon: it is ycleped thy park. Then for the place where; where, I mean, I did encounter that most obscene and preposterous event, that draweth from my snow-white pen the ebon-coloured ink, which here thou viewest, beholdest, surveyest, or seest. But to the place where, it standeth north-north-east and by east from the west corner of thy curious-knotted garden. There did I see that low-spirited swain, that base minnow of thy mirth,—'

Cost. Me?

King. [Reads.] 'that unlettered small-knowing soul,—'

Cost. Me?

King. [Reads.] 'that shallow vessel,—'

Cost. Still me?

King. [Reads.] 'which, as I remember, hight Costard,—'

Cost. O me!

King. [Reads.] 'sorted and consorted, contrary to thy established proclaimed edict and continent canon, with—with,—O! with—but with this I passion to say wherewith,—'

Cost. With a wench.

King. [Reads.] 'with a child of our grandmother Eve, a female; or, for thy more sweet understanding, a woman. Him I,—as my ever-esteemed duty pricks me on,—have sent to thee, to receive the meed of punishment, by thy sweet Grace's officer, Anthony Dull; a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, and estimation.'

Dull. Me, an 't shall please you; I am Anthony Dull.

King. [Reads.] 'For Jaquenetta,—so is the weaker vessel called which I apprehended with the aforesaid swain,—I keep her as a vessel of thy law's fury; and shall, at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine, in all compliments of devoted and heart-burning heat of duty, Don Adriano de Armado.'

Ber. This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that ever I heard.

King. Ay, the best for the worst. But, sirrah, what say you to this?

Cost. Sir, I confess the wench.

King. Did you hear the proclamation?

Cost. I do confess much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

King. It was proclaimed a year's imprisonment to be taken with a wench.

Cost. I was taken with none, sir: I was taken with a damsel.

King. Well, it was proclaimed 'damsel.'

Cost. This was no damsel neither, sir: she was a virgin.

King. It is so varied too; for it was proclaimed 'virgin.'

Cost. If it were, I deny her virginity: I was taken with a maid.

King. This maid will not serve your turn, sir.

Cost. This maid will serve my turn, sir.

King. Sir, I will pronounce your sentence: you shall fast a week with bran and water.

Cost. I had rather pray a month with mutton and porridge.

King. And Don Armado shall be your keeper.
My Lord Berowne, see him deliver'd o'er:
And go we, lords, to put in practice that
Which each to other hath so strongly sworn.
[Exeunt King, Longaville, and Dumaine.]

Ber. I'll lay my head to any good man's hat,
These oaths and laws will prove an idle scorn.
Sirrah, come on.

Cost. I suffer for the truth, sir: for true it is I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true girl; and therefore welcome the sour cup of prosperity! Affliction may one day smile again; and till then, sit thee down, sorrow! Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Same]
Enter Armado and Moth his Page.

Arm. Boy, what sign is it when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

Boy. A great sign, sir, that he will look sad.

Arm. Why, sadness is one and the self-same thing, dear imp.

Boy. No, no; O Lord, sir, no.

Arm. How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvenal?

Boy. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough senior.

Arm. Why tough senior? why tough senior?

Boy. Why tender juvenal? why tender juvenal?

Arm. I spoke it, tender juvenal, as a congruent epitheton appertaining to thy young days, which we may nominate tender.

Boy. And I, tough senior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Arm. Pretty, and apt.

Boy. How mean you, sir? I pretty, and my saying apt? or I apt, and my saying pretty?

Arm. Thou pretty, because little.

Boy. Little pretty, because little. Wherefore apt?

Arm. And therefore apt, because quick.

Boy. Speak you this in my praise, master?

Arm. In thy condign praise.

Boy. I will praise an eel with the same praise.

Arm. What! that an eel is ingenious?

Boy. That an eel is quick.

Arm. I do say thou art quick in answers: thou heat'st my blood.

233 ycleped: called 238 curious-knotted: fancifully laid out in intricate beds 248 sorted: associated 249 continent: i.e. containing a summary of offenses 250 passion: grieve 271 marking of: paying attention to

275 damsel: a young unmarried woman of good birth 284 mutton: slang for 'loose woman' 289 lay: wager 4 imp: child 12 congruent epitheton: suitable epithet 13 nominate: call 14 appertinent: appropriate

Boy. I am answered, sir.

Arm. I love not to be crossed.

Boy. [Aside.] He speaks the mere contrary; crosses love not him.

Arm. I have promised to study three years with the duke.

Boy. You may do it in an hour, sir.

Arm. Impossible.

Boy. How many is one thrice told?

Arm. I am ill at reckoning; it fitteth the spirit of a tapster.

Boy. You are a gentleman and a gamester, sir.

Arm. I confess both: they are both the varnish of a complete man.

Boy. Then, I am sure you know how much the gross sum of deuce-ace amounts to.

Arm. It doth amount to one more than two.

Boy. Which the base vulgar do call three.

Arm. True.

Boy. Why, sir, is this such a piece of study? Now, here is three studied, ere ye'll thrice wink; and how easy it is to put 'years' to the word 'three,' and study three years in two words, the dancing horse will tell you.

Arm. A most fine figure!

Boy. To prove you a cipher.

Arm. I will hereupon confess I am in love; and as it is base for a soldier to love, so am I in love with a base wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection would deliver me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take Desire prisoner, and ransom him to any French courtier for a new devised curtsy. I think scorn to sigh: methinks I should outswear Cupid. Comfort me, boy: what great men have been in love?

Boy. Hercules, master.

Arm. Most sweet Hercules! More authority, dear boy, name more; and, sweet my child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Boy. Samson, master: he was a man of good carriage, great carriage, for he carried the towngates on his back like a porter; and he was in love.

Arm. O well-knit Samson! strong-jointed Samson! I do excel thee in my rapier as much as thou didst me in carrying gates. I am in love too. Who was Samson's love, my dear Moth?

Boy. A woman, master.

Arm. Of what complexion?

Boy. Of all the four, or the three, or the two, or one of the four.

Arm. Tell me precisely of what complexion.

Boy. Of the sea-water green, sir.

Arm. Is that one of the four complexions?

Boy. As I have read, sir; and the best of them too.

Arm. Green indeed is the colour of lovers; but to have a love of that colour, methinks Samson had small reason for it. He surely affected her for her wit.

Boy. It was so, sir, for she had a green wit.

Arm. My love is most immaculate white and red.

Boy. Most maculate thoughts, master, are masked under such colours.

Arm. Define, define, well-educated infant.

Boy. My father's wit, and my mother's tongue, assist me!

Arm. Sweet invocation of a child; most pretty and pathetical!

Boy. If she be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne'er be known,
For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,
And fears by pale white shown:
Then if she fear, or be to blame,
By this you shall not know,
For still her cheeks possess the same
Which native she doth owe.
A dangerous rime, master, against the reason of white and red.

Arm. Is there not a ballet, boy, of the King and the Beggar?

Boy. The world was very guilty of such a ballet some three ages since; but I think now 'tis not to be found; or, if it were, it would neither serve for the writing nor the tune.

Arm. I will have that subject newly writ o'er, that I may example my digression by some mighty precedent. Boy, I do love that country girl that I took in the park with the rational hind Costard: she deserves well.

Boy. [Aside.] To be whipped; and yet a better love than my master.

Arm. Sing, boy: my spirit grows heavy in love.

Boy. And that's great marvel, loving a light wench.

Arm. I say, sing.

Boy. Forbear till this company be past.

Enter Clown [Costard], Constable [Dull], and Wench [Jaquenetta].

Const. Sir, the duke's pleasure is, that you keep Costard safe: and you must suffer him to take no delight nor no penance, but a' must fast three days a week. For this damsel, I must keep her at the park; she is allowed for the day-woman. Fare you well.

Arm. I do betray myself with blushing. Maid!

Maid. [Jaq.] Man?

Arm. I will visit thee at the lodge.

Maid. That's hereby.

Arm. I know where it is situate.

Maid. Lord, how wise you are!

Arm. I will tell thee wonders.

Maid. With that face?

Arm. I love thee.

Maid. So I heard you say.

Arm. And so farewell.

Maid. Fair weather after you!

Const. Come, Jaquenetta, away!

Exeunt [Dull and Jaquenetta].

Arm. Villain, thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

Clow. Well, sir, I hope, when I do it, I shall do it on a full stomach.

Arm. Thou shalt be heavily punished.

Clow. I am more bound to you than your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Arm. Take away this villain: shut him up.

Boy. Come, you transgressing slave: away!

Clow. Let me not be pent up, sir: I will fast, being loose.

31 crosses: coins (which had crosses on them) 49 dancing horse: cf. n. 50 figure: illustration 54 humour of affection: caprice of being in love 57 think: think it 70 complexion: disposition; cf. n. 79 affected: liked wit: understanding 80 green wit: cf. n.

87 pathetical: touching 95 native: naturally owe: own, possess 97 Cf. n. ballet: ballad 99 ages: generations 102 digression: deviation from my nature, i.e. debasement 103 rational: reasoning, i.e. not stupid 105 love: lover 114 a': he 115 allowed: approved of day-woman: dairy-woman

Boy. No, sir; that were fast and loose: thou shalt to prison.

Clow. Well, if ever I do see the merry days of desolation that I have seen, some shall see—

Boy. What shall some see?

Clow. Nay, nothing, Master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be too silent in their words; and therefore I will say nothing: I thank God I have as little patience as another man, and therefore I can be quiet.

Exit [Costard; also Moth].

Arm. I do affect the very ground, which is base, where her shoe, which is baser, guided by her foot, which is basest, doth tread. I shall be forsworn,—which is a great argument of falsehood,—if I love. And how can that be true love which is falsely attempted? Love is a familiar; Love is a devil: there is no evil angel but Love. Yet was Samson so tempted, and he had an excellent strength; yet was Solomon so seduced, and he had a very good wit. Cupid's butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules' club, and therefore too much odds for a Spaniard's rapier. The first and second cause will not serve my turn; the passado he respects not, the duello he regards not: his disgrace is to be called boy, but his glory is to subdue men. Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! be still, drum! for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. Assist me some extemporal god of rime, for I am sure I shall turn sonnet. Devise, wit; write, pen; for I am for whole volumes in folio. Exit.

ACT SECOND ❧ SCENE FIRST

[The King of Navarre's Park. A Pavilion and Tents at a distance] Enter the Princess of France, with three attending Ladies [Rosaline, Maria, Katharine,] and three Lords [Boyet and attending Lords].

Boyet. Now, madam, summon up your dearest spirits:
Consider whom the king your father sends,
To whom he sends, and what's his embassy:
Yourself, held precious in the world's esteem,
To parley with the sole inheritor
Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchless Navarre; the plea of no less weight
Than Aquitaine, a dowry for a queen.
Be now as prodigal of all dear grace
As Nature was in making graces dear,
When she did starve the general world beside,
And prodigally gave them all to you.

Prin. Good Lord Boyet, my beauty, though but mean,
Needs not the painted flourish of your praise:
Beauty is bought by judgment of the eye,
Not utter'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues.
I am less proud to hear you tell my worth
Than you much willing to be counted wise
In spending your wit in the praise of mine.
But now to task the tasker: good Boyet,
You are not ignorant, all-telling fame
Doth noise abroad, Navarre hath made a vow,
Till painful study shall outwear three years,
No woman may approach his silent court:
Therefore to's seemeth it a needful course,
Before we enter his forbidden gates,
To know his pleasure; and in that behalf,
Bold of your worthiness, we single you
As our best-moving fair solicitor.
Tell him, the daughter of the King of France,
On serious business, craving quick dispatch,
Importunes personal conference with his Grace.
Haste, signify so much; while we attend,
Like humble-visag'd suitors, his high will.

Boyet. Proud of employment, willingly I go. Exit Boyet.

Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so.
Who are the votaries, my loving lords,
That are vow-fellows with this virtuous duke?

[A] Lord. Longaville is one.

Prin. Know you the man?

1. Lad. [Maria]. I know him, madam: at a marriage feast,
Between Lord Perigort and the beauteous heir
Of Jacques Falconbridge solemnized,
In Normandy saw I this Longaville.
A man of sovereign parts he is esteem'd;
Well fitted in the arts, glorious in arms:
Nothing becomes him ill that he would well.
The only soil of his fair virtue's gloss,—
If virtue's gloss will stain with any soil,—
Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a will;
Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still wills
It should none spare that come within his power.

Prin. Some merry mocking lord, belike; is 't so?

1. Lad. They say so most that most his humours know.

Prin. Such short-liv'd wits do wither as they grow.
Who are the rest?

2. Lad. [Kath.] The young Dumaine, a well-accomplish'd youth,
Of all that virtue love for virtue lov'd:
Most power to do most harm, least knowing ill,
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace though he had no wit.
I saw him at the Duke Alençon's once;
And much too little of that good I saw
Is my report to his great worthiness.

3. Lad. [Ros.]. Another of these students at that time
Was there with him, if I have heard a truth.
Berowne they call him; but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal.
His eye begets occasion for his wit;
For every object that the one doth catch
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest,
Which his fair tongue, conceit's expositor,
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

140 fast and loose: cheating game of a sharper 141 desolation; cf. n. 148 affect: love 150 argument: proof 152 familiar: familiar spirit, i.e. demon 155 butt-shaft: arrow, without barb, for shooting at butts (targets) 157 cause: cause of quarrel 158 passado: pass, or thrust, in fencing duello: duel 161 manager: wielder of weapons 162 turn sonnet: grow into a sonnet(?), turn sonneteer(?) 1 dearest: best 7 Navarre: King of Navarre plea: suit 16 utter'd: sold chapmen's: shopmen's

25 to's: to us 28 Bold: confident 29 best-moving fair: persuasive and just 33 attend: await 38 duke: i.e. king (cf. I. i. 181, I. ii. 135) 42 Lord Perigort; cf. n. 47 would: i.e. would do 50 blunt: harsh 51 still: ever 59 Of: by 61 shape: form, or figure 65 report: testimony; cf. n. 70 withal: with 74 conceit's expositor: expounder of fancy 76 Cf. n.

Prin. God bless my ladies! are they all in love,
That every one her own hath garnished
With such bedecking ornaments of praise?
[A] Lord. Here comes Boyet.

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Now, what admittance, lord?
Boyet. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;
And he and his competitors in oath
Were all address'd to meet you, gentle lady,
Before I came. Marry, thus much I have learnt;
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes here to besiege his court,
Than seek a dispensation for his oath,
To let you enter his unpeopled house.

Enter Navarre, Longaville, Dumaine, and Berowne.

Here comes Navarre.
King. Fair princess, welcome to the court of Navarre.
Prin. 'Fair' I give you back again; and 'welcome' I have not yet: the roof of this court is too high to be yours, and welcome to the wide fields too base to be mine.
King. You shall be welcome, madam, to my court.
Prin. I will be welcome, then: conduct me thither.
King. Hear me, dear lady; I have sworn an oath.
Prin. Our Lady help my lord! he'll be forsworn.
King. Not for the world, fair madam, by my will.
Prin. Why, will shall break it; will, and nothing else.
King. Your ladyship is ignorant what it is.
Prin. Were my lord so, his ignorance were wise,
Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance.
I hear your grace hath sworn out house-keeping:
'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath, my lord,
And sin to break it.
But pardon me, I am too sudden-bold:
To teach a teacher ill beseemeth me.
Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming,
And suddenly resolve me in my suit. [Gives a paper.]
King. Madam, I will, if suddenly I may.
Prin. You will the sooner that I were away,
For you'll prove perjur'd if you make me stay.
Ber. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?
Ros. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?
Ber. I know you did.
Ros. How needless was it then
To ask the question!
Ber. You must not be so quick.
Ros. 'Tis 'long of you that spur me with such questions.
Ber. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, 'twill tire.
Ros. Not till it leave the rider in the mire.
Ber. What time o' day?
Ros. The hour that fools should ask.
Ber. How fair befall your mask!
Ros. Fair fall the face it covers!
Ber. And send you many lovers!
Ros. Amen, so you be none.
Ber. Nay, then will I be gone.
King. Madam, your father here doth intimate
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns;
Being but the one half of an entire sum
Disbursed by my father in his wars.
But say that he, or we,—as neither have,— Receiv'd that sum, yet there remains unpaid
A hundred thousand more; in surety of the which,
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not valu'd to the money's worth.
If then the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth,
For here he doth demand to have repaid
A hundred thousand crowns; and not demands,
On payment of a hundred thousand crowns,
To have his title live in Aquitaine;
Which we much rather had depart withal,
And have the money by our father lent,
Than Aquitaine, so gelded as it is.
Dear princess, were not his requests so far
From reason's yielding, your fair self should make
A yielding 'gainst some reason in my breast,
And go well satisfied to France again.
Prin. You do the king my father too much wrong,
And wrong the reputation of your name,
In so unseeming to confess receipt
Of that which hath so faithfully been paid.
King. I do protest I never heard of it;
And if you prove it, I'll repay it back
Or yield up Aquitaine.
Prin. We arrest your word.
Boyet, you can produce acquittances
For such a sum from special officers
Of Charles his father.
King. Satisfy me so.
Boyet. So please your Grace, the packet is not come
Where that and other specialties are bound:
To-morrow you shall have a sight of them.
King. It shall suffice me: at which interview
All liberal reason I will yield unto.
Meantime, receive such welcome at my hand
As honour, without breach of honour, may
Make tender of to thy true worthiness.
You may not come, fair princess, in my gates;
But here without you shall be so receiv'd,
As you shall deem yourself lodg'd in my heart,
Though so denied fair harbour in my house.
Your own good thoughts excuse me, and farewell:
To-morrow shall we visit you again.
Prin. Sweet health and fair desires consort your Grace!
King. Thy own wish wish I thee in every place! Exit [King].
Ber. Lady, I will commend you to mine own heart.
Ros. Pray you, do my commendations; I would be glad to see it.
Ber. I would you heard it groan.
Ros. Is the fool sick?

85 competitors: associates 86 address'd: ready 95 roof of this court: i.e. the heaven 105 Where: whereas 106 sworn out house-keeping: forsworn hospitality 112 suddenly: quickly 122 'long: along, because 127 fair befall: mercy on

134 Cf. n. 150 depart withal: part with 152 gelded: maimed 155 A . . . reason: a rather unreasonable yielding 159 unseeming: seeming not 164 arrest: take up, challenge 170 specialties: corroborative documents 179 As: that 183 consort: accompany

Ber. Sick at the heart.
Ros. Alack! let it blood.
Ber. Would that do it good?
Ros. My physic says, 'ay.'
Ber. Will you prick't with your eye?
Ros. No point, with my knife.
Ber. Now, God save thy life!
Ros. And yours from long living!
Ber. I cannot stay thanksgiving. Exit [i.e. Retires].
Dum. [Advancing.] Sir, I pray you a word: what lady is that same?
Boyet. The heir of Alençon, Katharine her name.
Dum. A gallant lady. Monsieur, fare you well. Exit.
Long. I beseech you a word: what is she in the white.
Boyet. A woman sometimes, an you saw her in the light?
Long. Perchance light in the light. I desire her name.
Boyet. She hath but one for herself; to desire that were a shame.
Long. Pray you, sir, whose daughter?
Boyet. Her mother's, I have heard.
Long. God's blessing on your beard!
Boyet. Good sir, be not offended.
She is an heir of Falconbridge.
Long. Nay, my choler is ended.
She is a most sweet lady.
Boyet. Not unlike, sir; that may be. Exit Longaville.

Enter Berowne [i.e. he advances].

Ber. What's her name, in the cap?
Boyet. Rosaline, by good hap.
Ber. Is she wedded or no?
Boyet. To her will, sir, or so.
Ber. You are welcome, sir. Adieu.
Boyet. Farewell to me, sir, and welcome to you.
Exit Berowne.
Mar. That last is Berowne, the merry madcap lord:
Not a word with him but a jest.
Boyet. And every jest but a word.
Prin. It was well done of you to take him at his word.
Boyet. I was as willing to grapple, as he was to board.
Kath. Two hot sheeps, marry!
Boyet. And wherefore not ships?
No sheep, sweet lamb, unless we feed on your lips.
Kath. You sheep, and I pasture: shall that finish the jest?
Boyet. So you grant pasture for me. [Offering to kiss her.]
Kath. Not so, gentle beast.
My lips are no common, though several they be.
Boyet. Belonging to whom?
Kath. To my fortunes and me.
Prin. Good wits will be jangling; but, gentles, agree.
This civil war of wits were much better us'd
On Navarre and his book-men, for here 'tis abus'd.
Boyet. If my observation,—which very seldom lies,
By the heart's still rhetoric disclosed with eyes,—
Deceive me not now, Navarre is infected.
Prin. With what?
Boyet. With that which we lovers entitle affected.
Prin. Your reason.
Boyet. Why, all his behaviours did make their retire
To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire.
His heart, like an agate, with your print impress'd,
Proud with his form, in his eye pride express'd.
His tongue, all impatient to speak and not see,
Did stumble with haste in his eyesight to be;
All senses to that sense did make their repair,
To feel only looking on fairest of fair:
Methought all his senses were lock'd in his eye,
As jewels in crystal for some prince to buy;
Who, tend'ring their own worth from where they were glass'd,
Did point you to buy them, along as you pass'd.
His face's own margent did quote such amazes,
That all eyes saw his eyes enchanted with gazes.
I'll give you Aquitaine, and all that is his,
An you give him for my sake but one loving kiss.
Prin. Come to our pavilion: Boyet is dispos'd.
Boyet. But to speak that in words which his eye hath disclos'd.
I only have made a mouth of his eye,
By adding a tongue which I know will not lie.
Ros. Thou art an old love-monger, and speak'st skilfully.
Mar. He is Cupid's grandfather, and learns news of him.
Kath. Then was Venus like her mother, for her father is but grim.
Boyet. Do you hear, my mad wenches?
Ros. No.
Boyet. What, then, do you see?
Ros. Ay, our way to be gone.
Boyet. You are too hard for me.
Exeunt Omnes.

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

[The King of Navarre's Park]
Enter Braggart [Armado] and his Boy [Moth].

Arm. Warble, child; make passionate my sense of hearing.
Moth. [Singing.] Concolinel,—
Arm. Sweet air! Go, tenderness of years; take this key, give enlargement to the swain, bring him festinately hither; I must employ him in a letter to my love.
Moth. Master, will you win your love with a French brawl?
Arm. How meanest thou? brawling in French?
Moth. No, my complete master; but to jig off a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with your feet, humour it with turning up your eyelids, sigh a note and sing a note, sometime through the throat, [as] if you swallowed love by singing love, sometime through [the] nose, as if you snuffed up love by smelling love; with your hat penthouse-like o'er the shop of your eyes; with your arms crossed on your thin belly-doublet

191 let it blood; cf. n. 195 No point; cf. n. 201 Katharine; cf. n. 204 an: if 205 light in the light: of light conduct if known 210 Cf. n. 215 unlike: unlikely 221 Cf. n. 227 Kath.; cf. n. 233 common, though several; cf. n. 238 abus'd: misused 240 rhetoric: language

243 affected: loving, sentimental 246 court: governing center 248 with his: with its 249 to speak and not see: not to be able to see rather than to speak 252 To feel only looking: that they might feel only in looking 256 point: invite 257 margent: margin; cf. n. quote: note 261 dispos'd: inclined to be merry 262 But: i.e. disposed only 2 Concolinel; cf. n. 4 festinately: quickly 6 brawl: dance; cf. n. 9 canary: dance; cf. n. 13 penthouse-like: porch-like like a rabbit on a spit; or your hands in your pocket like a man after the old painting; and keep not too long in one tune, but a snip and away. These are complements, these are humours, these betray nice wenches, that would be betrayed without these; and make them men of note,—do you note? men,—that most are affected to these.

Arm. How hast thou purchased this experience?

Moth. By my penny of observation.

Arm. But O—but O,—

Moth. 'The hobby-horse is forgot.'

Arm. Callest thou my love 'hobby-horse'?

Moth. No, master; the hobby-horse is but a colt, and your love perhaps a hackney. But have you forgot your love?

Arm. Almost I had.

Moth. Negligent student! learn her by heart.

Arm. By heart, and in heart, boy.

Moth. And out of heart, master: all those three I will prove.

Arm. What wilt thou prove?

Moth. A man, if I live; and this, by, in, and without, upon the instant: by heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her; in heart you love her, because your heart is in love with her; and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her.

Arm. I am all these three.

Moth. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.

Arm. Fetch hither the swain: he must carry me a letter.

Moth. A message well sympathized: a horse to be ambassador for an ass.

Arm. Ha, ha! what sayest thou?

Moth. Marry, sir, you must send the ass upon the horse, for he is very slow-gaited. But I go.

Arm. The way is but short: away!

Moth. As swift as lead, sir.

Arm. The meaning, pretty ingenious?
Is not lead a metal heavy, dull, and slow?

Moth. Minime, honest master; or rather, master, no.

Arm. I say, lead is slow.

Moth. You are too swift, sir, to say so.
Is that lead slow which is fir'd from a gun?

Arm. Sweet smoke of rhetoric!
He reputes me a cannon; and the bullet, that's he:
I shoot thee at the swain.

Moth. Thump, then, and I flee.

[Exit.]

Arm. A most acute juvenal; volable and free of grace!
By thy favour, sweet welkin, I must sigh in thy face:
Most rude melancholy, valour gives thee place.
My herald is return'd.

Enter Page [Moth] and Clown [Costard].

Moth. A wonder, master! here's a costard broken in a shin.

Arm. Some enigma, some riddle: come, thy l'envoy; begin.

Cost. No egma, no riddle, no l'envoy; no salve in the mail, sir. O! sir, plantain, a plain plantain: no l'envoy, no l'envoy: no salve, sir, but a plantain.

Arm. By virtue, thou enforcest laughter; thy silly thought, my spleen; the heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling: O! pardon me, my stars. Doth the inconsiderate take salve for l'envoy, and the word l'envoy for a salve?

Moth. Do the wise think them other? is not l'envoy a salve?

Arm. No, page: it is an epilogue or discourse, to make plain
Some obscure precedence that hath tofore been sain.
I will example it:
The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee
Were still at odds, being but three.
There's the moral. Now the l'envoy.

Moth. I will add the l'envoy. Say the moral again.

Arm. The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee
Were still at odds, being but three.

Moth. Until the goose came out of door,
And stay'd the odds by adding four.
Now will I begin your moral, and do you follow with my l'envoy.
The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee
Were still at odds, being but three.

Arm. Until the goose came out of door,
Staying the odds by adding four.

Moth. A good l'envoy, ending in the goose.
Would you desire more?

Cost. The boy hath sold him a bargain, a goose, that's flat.
Sir, your pennyworth is good, an your goose be fat.
To sell a bargain well is as cunning as fast and loose.
Let me see: a fat l'envoy; ay, that's a fat goose.

Arm. Come hither, come hither. How did this argument begin?

Moth. By saying that a costard was broken in a shin.
Then call'd you for the l'envoy.

Cost. True, and I for a plantain: thus came your argument in;
Then the boy's fat l'envoy, the goose that you bought;
And he ended the market.

Arm. But tell me: how was there a costard broken in a shin?

Moth. I will tell you sensibly.

Cost. Thou hast no feeling of it, Moth: I will speak that l'envoy:
I, Costard, running out, that was safely within,
Fell over the threshold and broke my shin.

Arm. We will talk no more of this matter.

Cost. Till there be more matter in the shin.

Arm. Sirrah Costard, I will enfranchise thee.

Cost. O! marry me to one Frances: I smell some l'envoy, some goose, in this.

Arm. By my sweet soul, I mean setting thee at liberty, enfreedoming thy person: thou wert immured, restrained, captivated, bound.

Cost. True, true, and now you will be my purgation and let me loose.

Arm. I give thee thy liberty, set thee from durance; and in lieu thereof, impose on thee nothing but this: —[Giving a letter.] Bear this significant to the country maid Jaquenetta. [Giving money.] There is remuneration; for the best ward of mine honour is rewarding my dependents. Moth, follow. [Exit.]

Moth. Like the sequel, I. Signior Costard, adieu. Exit.

17 complements: accomplishments 18 nice: coy 22 penny: i.e., purchasing medium 24 Cf. n. 27 hackney: i.e. loose woman 41 well sympathized: i.e. the message is well suited to the bearer 50 Minime: by no means 57 Thump: bang! 58 volable: quick of wit 59 welkin: sky 62 costard: head 64 mail: bag; cf. n.

68 spleen: mirth 71 l'envoy a salve; cf. n. 73 sain: said 82 adding: i.e. making 91 hath . . . bargain; cf. n. 102 market; c.f. n. 104 sensibly: feelingly 121 significant: token, i.e. letter 123 ward: guard

Cost. My sweet ounce of man's flesh! my incony Jew!—
Now will I look to his remuneration. Remuneration! O that's the Latin word for three farthings: three farthings, remuneration. 'What's the price of this inkle?' 'One penny.' 'No, I'll give you a remuneration': why, it carries it. Remuneration!
why, it is a fairer name than French crown. I will never buy and sell out of this word.

Enter Berowne.

Ber. O my good knave Costard, exceedingly well met!
Cost. Pray you, sir, how much carnation ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?
Ber. What is a remuneration?
Cost. Marry, sir, halfpenny farthing.
Ber. Oh! Why then, three-farthing-worth of silk.
Cost. I thank your worship. God be wi' you!
Ber. O stay, slave; I must employ thee.
As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave,
Do one thing for me that I shall entreat.
Cost. When would you have it done, sir?
Ber. O, this afternoon.
Cost. Well, I will do it, sir. Fare you well.
Ber. O, thou knowest not what it is.
Cost. I shall know, sir, when I have done it.
Ber. Why, villain, thou must know first.
Cost. I will come to your worship to-morrow morning.
Ber. It must be done this afternoon. Hark, slave, it is but this:
The princess comes to hunt here in the park,
And in her train there is a gentle lady:
When tongues speak sweetly, then they name her name,
And Rosaline they call her: ask for her
And to her white hand see thou do commend
This seal'd-up counsel. [Gives him a shilling.] There's thy guerdon: go.
Cost. Gardon, O sweet gardon! better than remuneration;
a 'leven-pence farthing better. Most sweet gardon! I will do it, sir, in print. Gardon! remuneration!
Ber. O! And I,—
Forsooth, in love! I, that have been love's whip;
A very beadle to a humorous sigh;
A critic, nay, a night-watch constable,
A domineering pedant o'er the boy,
Than whom no mortal so magnificent!
This wimpled, whining, purblind, wayward boy,
This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid;
Regent of love-rimes, lord of folded arms,
The anointed sovereign of sighs and groans,
Liege of all loiterers and malcontents,
Dread prince of plackets, king of codpieces,
Sole imperator and great general
Of trotting 'paritors: O my little heart!
And I to be a corporal of his field,
And wear his colours like a tumbler's hoop!
What! I love! I sue! I seek a wife!
A woman that is like a German clock,
Still a-repairing, ever out of frame,
And never going aright, being a watch,
But being watch'd that it may still go right!
Nay, to be perjur'd, which is worst of all;
And, among three, to love the worst of all;
A whitely wanton with a velvet brow,
With two pitch balls stuck in her face for eyes.
Ay, and, by heaven, one that will do the deed,
Though Argus were her eunuch and her guard.
And I to sigh for her! to watch for her!
To pray for her! Go to: it is a plague
That Cupid will impose for my neglect
Of his almighty dreadful little might.
Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue, groan:
Some men must love my lady, and some Joan. [Exit.]

126 incony: fine 129 inkle: tape 130 it carries it: it carries off the palm 131 name: word 139 wi': with 157 counsel: private communication 158 guerdon: reward 161 in print: precisely 164 beadle . . . sigh; cf. n. 167 magnificent: pompous, overbearing 168 wimpled: veiled purblind: totally blind 169 Cf. n. 173 plackets: petticoats, or slits in petticoats or skirts codpieces: baggy appendages to the front of breeches 175 'paritors: apparitors, officials of the ecclesiastical court 177 like . . . hoop: like the flaunting ribbons attached to a tumbler's hoop

180 frame: order 185 whitely: pale-skinned 188 Argus: a monster having a hundred eyes 194 Joan: stock name for a peasant wench; cf. IV.iii. 183 and V.ii. 967 9 coppice: thicket 10 stand: hunter's station 18 fair: beauty 19 my glass: mirror, i.e. the Forester 21 inherit: possess 22 merit: good deeds 23 heresy; cf. n. 24 giving: generous 31 out of question: undoubtedly

ACT FOURTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

[The King of Navarre's Park]
Enter the Princess, a Forester, her Ladies, and her Lords.

Prin. Was that the king, that spurr'd his horse so hard
Against the steep uprising of the hill?
Boyet. I know not; but I think it was not he.
Prin. Whoe'er a' was, a' show'd a mounting mind.
Well, lords, to-day we shall have our dispatch;
On Saturday we will return to France.
Then, forester, my friend, where is the bush
That we must stand and play the murtherer in?
For. Hereby, upon the edge of yonder coppice;
A stand where you may make the fairest shoot.
Prin. I thank my beauty, I am fair that shoot,
And thereupon thou speak'st the fairest shoot.
For. Pardon me, madam, for I meant not so.
Prin. What, what? first praise me, and again say no?
O short-liv'd pride! Not fair? alack for woe!
For. Yes, madam, fair.
Prin. Nay, never paint me now:
Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow.
Here, good my glass.—[Gives money.] Take this for telling true:
Fair payment for foul words is more than due.
For. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit.
Prin. See, see! my beauty will be sav'd by merit.
O heresy in fair, fit for these days!
A giving hand, though foul, shall have fair praise.
But come, the bow: now mercy goes to kill,
And shooting well is then accounted ill.
Thus will I save my credit in the shoot:
Not wounding, pity would not let me do 't;
If wounding, then it was to show my skill,
That more for praise than purpose meant to kill.
And out of question so it is sometimes,
Glory grows guilty of detested crimes,

When, for fame's sake, for praise, an outward part,
We bend to that the working of the heart;
As I for praise alone now seek to spill
The poor deer's blood, that my heart means no ill.
Boyet. Do not curst wives hold that self-sovereignty
Only for praise' sake, when they strive to be
Lords o'er their lords?
Prin. Only for praise; and praise we may afford
To any lady that subdues a lord.

Enter Clown [Costard].

Boyet. Here comes a member of the commonwealth.
Cost. God dig-you-den all! Pray you, which is the head lady?
Prin. Thou shalt know her, fellow, by the rest that have no heads.
Cost. Which is the greatest lady, the highest?
Prin. The thickest, and the tallest.
Cost. The thickest, and the tallest: it is so; truth is truth.
An your waist, mistress, were as slender as my wit,
One o' these maids' girdles for your waist should be fit.
Are not you the chief woman? you are the thickest here.
Prin. What's your will, sir? what's your will?
Cost. I have a letter from Monsieur Berowne to one Lady Rosaline.
Prin. O thy letter, thy letter! He's a good friend of mine.
Stand aside, good bearer. Boyet, you can carve;
Break up this capon.
Boyet. I am bound to serve.—
This letter is mistook; it importeth none here:
It is writ to Jaquenetta.
Prin. We will read it, I swear.
Break the neck of the wax, and every one give ear.
Boyet. [Reads.] 'By heaven, that thou art fair, is most infallible; true, that thou art beauteous; truth itself, that thou art lovely. More fairer than fair, beautiful than beauteous, truer than truth itself, have commiseration on thy heroical vassal. The magnanimous and most illustrate king Cophetua set eye upon the pernicious and indubitate beggar Zenelophon, and he it was that might rightly say veni, vidi, vici; which to anatomize in the vulgar—O base and obscure vulgar!—videlicet, he came, saw, and overcame: he came, one; saw, two; overcame, three. Who came? the king: Why did he come? to see: Why did he see? to overcome: To whom came he? to the beggar: What saw he? the beggar. Who overcame he? the beggar. The conclusion is victory: on whose side? the king's; the captive is enriched: on whose side? the beggar's. The catastrophe is a nuptial: on whose side? the king's, no, on both in one, or one in both. I am the king, for so stands the comparison; thou the beggar, for so witnesseth thy lowliness. Shall I command thy love? I may: Shall I enforce thy love? I could: Shall I entreat thy love? I will. What shalt thou exchange for rags? robes; for tittles? titles; for thyself? me. Thus, expecting thy reply, I profane my lips on thy foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy every part.
Thine, in the dearest design of Industry,

Don Adriano de Armado.
Thus dost thou hear the Nemean lion roar
'Gainst thee, thou lamb, that standest as his prey:
Submissive fall his princely feet before,
And he from forage will incline to play.
But if thou strive, poor soul, what art thou then?
Food for his rage, repasture for his den.'
Prin. What plume of feathers is he that indited this letter?
What vane? what weathercock? did you ever hear better?
Boyet. I am much deceiv'd but I remember the style.
Prin. Else your memory is bad, going o'er it erewhile.
Boyet. This Armado is a Spaniard, that keeps here in court;
A phantasime, a Monarcho, and one that makes sport
To the prince and his book-mates.
Prin. Thou fellow, a word.
Who gave thee this letter?
Cost. I told you; my lord.
Prin. To whom shouldst thou give it?
Cost. From my lord to my lady.
Prin. From which lord, to which lady?
Cost. From my lord Berowne, a good master of mine,
To a lady of France, that he call'd Rosaline.
Prin. Thou hast mistaken his letter. Come, lords, away.
Here, sweet, put up this: 'twill be thine another day.
Exeunt [Princess and Train].
Boyet. Who is the suitor? who is the suitor?
Ros. Shall I teach you to know?
Boyet. Ay, my continent of beauty.
Ros. Why, she that bears the bow.
Finely put off!
Boyet. My lady goes to kill horns; but, if thou marry,
Hang me by the neck if horns that year miscarry.
Finely put on!
Ros. Well then, I am the shooter.
Boyet. And who is your deer?
Ros. If we choose by the horns, yourself: come not near.
Finely put on, indeed!
Mar. You still wrangle with her, Boyet, and she strikes at the brow.
Boyet. But she herself is hit lower. Have I hit her now?
Ros. Shall I come upon thee with an old saying, that was a man when King Pepin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it?
Boyet. So I may answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when Queen Guinever of Britain, was a little wench, as touching the hit it.
Ros. 'Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it,
Thou canst not hit it, my good man.
Boyet. 'An I cannot, cannot, cannot,
An I cannot, another can.'
Exit [Rosaline].
Cost. By my troth, most pleasant: how both did fit it!
Mar. A mark marvellous well shot, for they both did hit it.
Boyet. A mark! O mark but that mark; a mark, says my lady!

33 outward part: extraneous quality 37 curst: shrewish 42 commonwealth: i.e. common people 43 dig-you-den: give you good evening 48 The thickest, etc.: cf. n. 58 capon: love-letter; cf. n. 60 importeth: concerns 68 illustrate: illustrious 69 indubitate: indubitable Zenelophon: Penelophon (in the old ballad) 70 anatomize: analyze, explain 83 expecting: awaiting 86 Industry: gallantry

88 Nemean lion; cf. n. 91 from forage: abandoning rapacity 93 repasture: repast 94 plume of feathers: featherhead 96 but: unless 97 erewhile: just now 98 keeps: lives 99 phantasime: fantastic fellow Monarcho; cf. n. 110 sweet: i.e. Rosaline be thine: be of use to thee 113 continent: container, repository 114 bears the bow; cf. n. 115 put off: turned aside 116 horns; cf. n. 123 still: ever 127 King Pepin; cf. n. 133 fit it: make their points

Let the mark have a prick in 't, to mete at, if it may be.
Mar. Wide o' the bow hand! i' faith your hand is out.
Cost. Indeed a' must shoot nearer, or he'll ne'er hit the clout.
Boyet. An if my hand be out, then belike your hand is in.
Cost. Then will she get the upshoot by cleaving the pin.
Mar. Come, come, you talk greasily; your lips grow foul.
Cost. She's too hard for you at pricks; sir: challenge her to bowl.
Boyet. I fear too much rubbing. Good night, my good owl. [Exeunt Boyet and Maria.]
Cost. By my soul, a swain! a most simple clown!
Lord, lord, how the ladies and I have put him down!
O' my troth, most sweet jests! most incony vulgar wit!
When it comes so smoothly off, so obscenely, as it were, so fit.
Armado, o' the one side, O! a most dainty man.
To see him walk before a lady, and to bear her fan!
To see him kiss his hand! and how most sweetly a' will swear!
And his page o' t'other side, that handful of wit!
Ah! heavens, it is a most pathetical nit. Shout within.
Sola, sola! [Exit running.]

Scene Second

[The Same]
Enter Dull, Holofernes the Pedant, and Nathaniel.

Nath. Very reverend sport, truly: and done in the testimony of a good conscience.
Hol. The deer was, as you know, sanguis, in blood; ripe as the pomewater, who now hangeth like a jewel in the ear of cælo, the sky, the welkin, the heaven; and anon falleth like a crab on the face of terra, the soil, the land, the earth.
Nath. Truly, Master Holofernes, the epithets are sweetly varied, like a scholar at the least: but, sir, I assure ye, it was a buck of the first head.
Hol. Sir Nathaniel, haud credo;.
Dull. 'Twas not a haud credo; 'twas a pricket.
Hol. Most barbarous intimation! yet a kind of insinuation, as it were, in via, in way, of explication; facere, as it were, replication, or, rather, ostentare, to show, as it were, his inclination,—after his undressed, unpolished, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or, rather, unlettered, or, ratherest, unconfirmed fashion,—to insert again my haud credo for a deer.
Dull. I said the deer was not a haud credo; 'twas a pricket.
Hol. Twice sod simplicity, bis coctus!
O thou monster Ignorance, how deformed dost thou look!
Nath. Sir, he hath not fed of the dainties that are bred in a book.
He hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink: his intellect is not replenished; he is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts:
And such barren plants are set before us, that we thankful should be,
Which we [of] taste and feeling are, for those parts that do fructify in us more than he;
For as it would ill become me to be vain, indiscreet, or a fool:
So were there a patch set on learning, to see him in a school:
But, omne bene, say I; being of an old Father's mind,
Many can brook the weather that love not the wind.
Dull. You two are book-men: can you tell me by your wit,
What was a month old at Cain's birth, that's not five weeks old as yet?
Hol. Dictynna, goodman Dull: Dictynna, goodman Dull.
Dull. What is Dictynna?
Nath. A title to Phoebe, to Luna, to the moon.
Hol. The moon was a month old when Adam was no more;
And raught not to five weeks when he came to five-score.
The allusion holds in the exchange.
Dull. 'Tis true indeed: the collusion holds in the exchange.
Hol. God comfort thy capacity! I say, the allusion holds in the exchange.
Dull. And I say the pollusion holds in the exchange, for the moon is never but a month old; and I say beside that 'twas a pricket that the princess killed.
Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporal epitaph on the death of the deer? and, to humour the ignorant, [I have] call'd the deer the princess killed, a pricket.
Nath. Perge, good Master Holofernes, perge; so it shall please you to abrogate scurrility.
Hol. I will something affect the letter; for it argues facility.
'The preyful princess pierc'd and prick'd a pretty pleasing pricket;
Some say a sore; but not a sore, till now made sore with shooting.
The dogs did yell; put L to sore, then sorel jumps from thicket;
Or pricket, sore, or else sorel; the people fall a hooting.
If sore be sore, then L to sore makes fifty sores one sorel!
Of one sore, I a hundred make, by adding but one more L.'
Nath. A rare talent!
Dull. [Aside.] If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent.
Hol. This is a gift that I have, simple, simple; a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms, figures, shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions. These are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourished in the womb of pia mater, and delivered upon the mellowing of occasion. But the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankful for it.
Nath. Sir, I praise the Lord for you, and so may my parishioners; for their sons are well tutored by you, and their daughters profit very greatly under you: you are a good member of the commonwealth.
Hol. Mehercle! if their sons be ingenuous, they shall want no instruction; if their daughters be capable, I will put it to them. But, vir sapit qui pauca loquitur. A soul feminine saluteth us.

Enter Jaquenetta and the Clown [Costard].

137 prick: point in the center of the target mete: measure, aim 138 Wide . . . hand: too far to the left 140 clout: white mark of cloth in the center of the target 142 upshoot: upshot, leading shot in a competition pin: wooden pin holding up the clout 143 greasily: grossly 145 bowl: bowling 156 pathetical nit: pleasing little fellow 4 pomewater: a kind of apple 9 first head: fifth year 10 haud credo: I do not think so 11 pricket: buck of the second year 13 facere . . . replication: to make reply 16 unconfirmed: ignorant 19 sod: sodden bis coctus: twice cooked, insipid

28 Which we: we who 29 than he: i.e. than in him 31 patch: clown, fool; cf. n. 32 omne bene: all's well 33 Cf. n. 37 Dictynna: a name given to Diana; cf. n. 41 raught: reached 42 allusion: jest, riddle; cf. n. 49 extemporal: extemporary 52 Perge: proceed 54 affect the letter: make use of alliteration 57 sore: a deer of the fourth year 59 sorel: a deer of the third year 65 talent: talon 65 claws: scratches pleasantly, flatters 70 ventricle: a division of the brain here called pia mater 77 Mehercle: a small oath 79 vir sapit, etc.; cf. n.

Jaq. God give you good morrow, Master parson.'

Hol. Master parson, quasi pers-on? And if one should be pierced, which is the one?

Cost. Marry, Master schoolmaster, he that is likest to a hogshead.

Hol. Of piercing a hogshead! a good lustre of conceit in a turf of earth; fire enough for a flint, pearl enough for a swine: 'tis pretty; it is well.

Jaq. Good Master parson [giving a letter to Nathaniel], be so good as read me this letter: it was given me by Costard, and sent me from Don Armado: I beseech you, read it.

Hol. Fauste, precor gelida quando pecus omne sub umbra Ruminat, and so forth. Ah! good old Mantuan. I may speak of thee as the traveller doth of Venice:

—Venetia, Venetia,

Chi non te vede, non te pretia.

Old Mantuan! old Mantuan! Who understandeth thee not, loves thee not. Ut, re, sol, la, mi, fa. Under pardon, sir, what are the contents? or, rather, as Horace says in his— What, my soul, verses?

Nath. Ay, sir, and very learned.

Hol. Let me hear a staff, a stanze, a verse: lege, domine.

Nath. 'If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?
Ah! never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd;
Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll faithful prove;
Those thoughts to me were oaks, to thee like osiers bow'd.
Study his bias leaves and makes his book thine eyes,
Where all those pleasures live that art would comprehend:
If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice.
Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend;
All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder;
Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire.
Thy eye Jove's lightning bears, thy voice his dreadful thunder,
Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire.
Celestial as thou art, O pardon love this wrong,
That sings heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue!'

Hol. You find not the apostrophas, and so miss the accent: let me supervise the canzonet. Here are only numbers ratified; but, for the elegancy, facility, and golden cadence of poesy, caret. Ovidius Naso was the man: and why, indeed, Naso, but for smelling out the odoriferous flowers of fancy, the jerks of invention? Imitari is nothing; so doth the hound his master, the ape his keeper, the tired horse his rider. But, damosella virgin, was this directed to you?

Jaq. Ay, sir; from one Monsieur Berowne, one of the strange queen's lords.

Hol. I will overglance the superscript. 'To the snow-white hand of the most beauteous Lady Rosaline.' I will look again on the intellect of the letter, for the nomination of the party writing to the person written unto: 'Your ladyship's, in all desired employment, Berowne.'—Sir Nathaniel, this Berowne is one of the votaries with the king; and here he hath framed a letter to a sequent of the stranger queen's, which, accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath miscarried. Trip and go, my sweet; deliver this paper into the royal hand of the king; it may concern much. Stay not thy compliment; I forgive the duty: adieu.

Jaq. Good Costard, go with me. Sir, God save your life!

Cost. Have with thee, my girl. Exit [with Jaquenetta].

Nath. Sir, you have done this in the fear of God, very religiously; and, as a certain Father saith—

Hol. Sir, tell not me of the Father; I do fear colourable colours. But to return to the verses: did they please you, Sir Nathaniel?

Nath. Marvellous well for the pen.

Hol. I do dine to-day at the father's of a certain pupil of mine; where, if before repast it shall please you to gratify the table with a grace, I will, on my privilege I have with the parents of the foresaid child or pupil, undertake your ben venuto; where I will prove those verses to be very unlearned, neither savouring of poetry, wit, nor invention. I beseech your society.

Nath. And thank you too; for society—saith the text—is the happiness of life.

Hol. And, certes, the text most infallibly concludes it. —[To Dull.] Sir, I do invite you too: you shall not say me nay: pauca verba. Away! the gentles are at their game, and we will to our recreation. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[The Same]

Enter Berowne, with a paper in his hand, alone.

Ber. The king he is hunting the deer; I am coursing myself: they have pitched a toil; I am toiling in a pitch,—pitch that defiles: defile! a foul word! Well, sit thee down, sorrow! for so they say the fool said, and so say I, and I the fool: well proved, wit! By the Lord, this love is as mad as Ajax: it kills sheep: it kills me, I a sheep: well proved again o' my side! I will not love; if I do, hang me; i' faith, I will not. O but her eye!—by this light, but for her eye, I would not love her; yes, for her two eyes. Well, I do nothing in the world but lie, and lie in my throat. By heaven, I do love, and it hath taught me to rime, and to be melancholy; and here is part of my rime, and here my melancholy. Well, she hath one o' my sonnets already: the clown bore it, the fool sent it, and the lady hath it: sweet clown, sweeter fool, sweetest lady! By the world, I would not care a pin if the other three were in. Here comes one with a paper: God give him grace to groan!

He stands aside [or climbs into a tree].

The King entreth.

King. Ay me!

Ber. [Aside.] Shot, by heaven! Proceed, sweet Cupid: thou hast thumped him with thy bird-bolt under the left pap. In faith, secrets!

King. 'So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not
To those fresh morning drops upon the rose,
As thy eye-beams, when their fresh rays have smote
The night of dew that on my cheeks down flows.
Nor shines the silver moon one half so bright
Through the transparent bosom of the deep,

84 pierced: pronounced 'persed' 87 Of: in reference to 93, 94 Fauste ... Mantuan; cf. n. 96, 97 Venetia ... pretia; cf. n. 99 Ut ... fa; cf. n. 100 Horace; cf. n. 103 lege, domine: read, master 108 his bias: i.e. its natural tendency 118 apostrophas: apostrophes; cf. n. 119 numbers ratified; cf. n. 121 caret: it is wanting Naso: from 'nasus,' nose 123 Imitari: to imitate 127 queen's lords; cf. n. 128 superscript: superscription, address 130 intellect: i.e. signature 134 sequent: follower 135 Trip and go; cf. n.

137 Stay ... compliment: do not pause for ceremony 143 colourable colours: false pretexts 146 pen: technical skill 150 ben venuto: welcome 153 the text; cf. n. 157 pauca verba; few words 2 pitched a toil: set a net pitch: i.e. Rosaline's black eyes 5 Ajax; cf. n. 15 in: i.e. in love 19 bird-bolt: blunt arrow for killing birds

As doth thy face through tears of mine give light:
Thou shin'st in every tear that I do weep;
No drop but as a coach doth carry thee:
So ridest thou triumphing in my woe.
Do but behold the tears that swell in me,
And they thy glory through my grief will show:
But do not love thyself; then thou wilt keep
My tears for glasses, and still make me weep.
O queen of queens! how far dost thou excel,
No thought can think, nor tongue of mortal tell.'
How shall she know my griefs? I'll drop the paper.—
Sweet leaves, shade folly! Who is he comes here?

Enter Longaville. The King steps aside.

What, Longaville! and reading! listen, ear.
Ber. Now, in thy likeness, one more fool appear!
Long. Ay me! I am forsworn.
Ber. Why, he comes in like a perjure, wearing papers.
King. In love, I hope: sweet fellowship in shame!
Ber. One drunkard loves another of the name.
Long. Am I the first that have been perjur'd so?
Ber. I could put thee in comfort: not by two that I know:
Thou mak'st the triumviry, the corner-cap of society,
The shape of love's Tyburn, that hangs up simplicity.
Long. I fear these stubborn lines lack power to move.
O sweet Maria, empress of my love!
These numbers will I tear, and write in prose.
Ber. O! rimes are guards on wanton Cupid's hose:
Disfigure not his slop.
Long. This same shall go. He reads the Sonnet.
'Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world cannot hold argument,
Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;
Thy grace, being gain'd, cures all disgrace in me.
Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is:
Then thou, fair sun, which on my earth dost shine,
Exhal'st this vapour-vow; in thee it is:
If broken, then, it is no fault of mine:
If by me broke, what fool is not so wise
To lose an oath to win a paradise!'
Ber. This is the liver-vein, which makes flesh a deity,
A green goose a goddess; pure, pure idolatry.
God amend us, God amend! we are much out o' the way.
Long. By whom shall I send this?—Company! stay.
[Steps aside.]

Enter Dumaine.

Ber. All hid, all hid; an old infant play.
Like a demi-god here sit I in the sky,
And wretched fools' secrets heedfully o'er-eye.
More sacks to the mill! O heavens! I have my wish.

Dumaine transform'd: four woodcocks in a dish!
Dum. O most divine Kate!
Ber. O most profane coxcomb!
Dum. By heaven, the wonder of a mortal eye!
Ber. By earth, she is not, corporal; there you lie.
Dum. Her amber hairs for foul have amber quoted.
Ber. An amber-colour'd raven was well noted.
Dum. As upright as the cedar.
Ber. Stoop, I say;
Her shoulder is with child.
Dum. As fair as day.
Ber. Ay, as some days; but then no sun must shine.
Dum. O that I had my wish!
Long. And I had mine!
King. And [I] mine too, good Lord!
Ber. Amen, so I had mine. Is not that a good word?
Dum. I would forget her; but a fever she
Reigns in my blood, and will remember'd be.
Ber. A fever in your blood! why, then incision
Would let her out in saucers: sweet misprision!
Dum. Once more I'll read the ode that I have writ.
Ber. Once more I'll mark how love can vary wit.
Dumaine reads his Sonnet.

Dum. 'On a day, alack the day!
Love, whose month is ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, can passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.
Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But alack! my hand is sworn
Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack! for youth unmeet,
Youth so apt to pluck a sweet.
Do not call it sin in me,
That I am forsworn for thee;
Thou for whom e'en Jove would swear
Juno but an Ethiop were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.'

This will I send, and something else more plain,
That shall express my true love's fasting pain.
O would the King, Berowne, and Longaville
Were lovers too! Ill, to example ill,
Would from my forehead wipe a perjur'd note;
For none offend where all alike do dote.
Long. [Advancing.] Dumaine, thy love is far from charity,
That in love's grief desir'st society:
You may look pale, but I should blush, I know,
To be o'erheard and taken napping so.
King. [Advancing.] Come, sir, you blush: as his your case is such;
You chide at him, offending twice as much:

42 perjure: perjurer papers: papers on the breast describing a perjurer's offenses 47 triumviry: triumvirate corner-cap: biretta, three-cornered cap, of a Catholic priest 48 Tyburn: triangular gallows at Tyburn, London 52 guards: trimmings 53 slop: loose trousers 69 liver-vein: i.e. style of a man in love (the liver being the supposed seat of the affections) 73 All hid: i.e. as in the game of hide and seek

77 woodcocks: proverbially silly birds 82 quoted: set down, regarded 85 Stoop: cf. n. 95 incision: blood-letting 96 saucers: receptacles for the blood misprision: mistake 116 Ethiop: i.e. black as a negro 120 fasting: hungry, longing 122 example: furnish a precedent for

You do not love Maria; Longaville
Did never sonnet for her sake compile,
Nor never lay his wreathed arms athwart
His loving bosom to keep down his heart.
I have been closely shrouded in this bush,
And mark'd you both, and for you both did blush.
I heard your guilty rimes, observ'd your fashion,
Saw sighs reek from you, noted well your passion:
Ay me! says one; O Jove! the other cries;
One, her hairs were gold, crystal the other's eyes:
[To Longaville.] You would for paradise break faith and troth;
[To Dumaine.] And Jove, for your love, would infringe an oath.
What will Berowne say, when that he shall hear
Faith infringed, which such zeal did swear?
How will he scorn! how will he spend his wit!
How will he triumph, leap and laugh at it!
For all the wealth that ever I did see,
I would not have him know so much by me.
Ber. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy.
[Descends from the tree.]
Ah! good my liege, I pray thee, pardon me:
Good heart! what grace hast thou, thus to reprove
These worms for loving, that art most in love?
Your eyes do make no coaches; in your tears
There is no certain princess that appears:
You'll not be perjur'd, 'tis a hateful thing:
Tush! none but minstrels like of sonneting.
But are you not asham'd! nay, are you not,
All three of you, to be thus much o'ershot?
You found his mote; the king your mote did see;
But I a beam do find in each of three.
O what a scene of foolery have I seen,
Of sighs, of groans, of sorrow, and of teen!
O me! with what strict patience have I sat,
To see a king transformed to a gnat;
To see great Hercules whipping a gig,
And profound Solomon to tune a jig,
And Nestor play at push-pin with the boys,
And critic Timon laugh at idle toys!
Where lies thy grief? O! tell me, good Dumaine.
And, gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain?
And where my liege's? all about the breast:
A caudle, ho!
King. Too bitter is thy jest.
Are we betray'd thus to thy over-view?
Ber. Not you by me, but I betray'd to you:
I, that am honest; I, that hold it sin
To break the vow I engaged in;
I am betray'd, by keeping company
With men like [men,] men of inconstancy.
When shall you see me write a thing in rime?
Or groan for Joan? or spend a minute's time
In pruning me? When shall you hear that I
Will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye,
A gait, a state, a brow, a breast, a waist,
A leg, a limb?—

King. Soft! Whither away so fast?
A true man or a thief that gallops so?
Ber. I post from love; good lover, let me go.

Enter Jaquenetta and Clown [Costard].

Jaq. God bless the king!
King. What present hast thou there?
Cost. Some certain treason.
King. What makes treason here?
Cost. Nay, it makes nothing, sir.
King. If it mar nothing neither,
The treason and you go in peace away together.
Jaq. I beseech your Grace, let this letter be read:
Our parson misdoubts it; 'twas treason, he said.
King. Berowne, read it over.
He [i.e. Berowne] reads the letter [in dumbshow].
Where hadst thou it?
Jaw. Of Costard.
King. Where hadst thou it?
Cost. Of Dun Adramadio, Dun Adramadio.
[Berowne tears the letter.]
King. How now! what is in you? why dost thou tear it?
Ber. A toy, my liege, a toy: your Grace needs not fear it.
Long. It did move him to passion, and therefore let's hear it.
Dum. [Picking up the pieces.] It is Berowne's writing, and here is his name.
Ber. [To Costard.] Ah, you whoreson loggerhead, you were born to do me shame.
Guilty, my lord, guilty; I confess, I confess.
King. What?
Ber. That you three fools lack'd me fool to make up the mess;
He, he, and you, and you my liege, and I,
Are pick-purses in love, and we deserve to die.
O dismiss this audience, and I shall tell you more.
Dum. Now the number is even.
Ber. True, true; we are four.
Will these turtles be gone?
King. Hence, sirs; away!
Cost. Walk aside the true folk, and let the traitors stay.
[Exeunt Costard and Jaquenetta.]
Ber. Sweet lords, sweet lovers, O! let us embrace.
As true we are as flesh and blood can be:
The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his face;
Young blood doth not obey an old decree.
We cannot cross the cause why we were born;
Therefore, of all hands must we be forsworn.
King. What! did these rent lines show some love of thine?
Ber. 'Did they,' quoth you? Who sees the heavenly Rosaline,
That, like a rude and savage man of Inde,
At the first opening of the gorgeous east,
Bows not his vassal head, and, strooken blind,
Kisses the base ground with obedient breast?
What peremptory eagle-sighted eye
Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,
That is not blinded by her majesty?

149 by: about 158 like of: like 160 o'ershot: wide of the mark 161 You: i.e. Longaville his: i.e. Dumaine's 164 teen: grief, pain 166 gnat: a singing insect 167 gig: top 168 tune: play, or hum 169 push-pin: a child's game with pins 170 critic: cynic toys: trifles 174 caudle: a warm gruel, containing wine and spice, for the sick 181 Cf. n. 184 pruning: adorning 186 state: attitude, pose

192 present: paper to be presented 194 makes: does 199 misdoubts: suspects 216 mess: four persons at one table 222 turtles: turtle-doves, lovers 223 sirs; cf.n. 229 cross ... born: i.e. hold out against love 230 of all hands: on all hands, in any case 234 the first ... east: i.e. the rising of the sun 235 strooken: struck 237 peremptory: determined, bold

King. What zeal, what fury, hath inspir'd thee now?
My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon;
She, an attending star, scarce seen a light.
Ber. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Berowne.
O, but for my love, day would turn to night!
Of all complexions the cull'd sovereignty
Do meet, as at a fair, in her fair cheek;
Where several worthies make one dignity,
Where nothing wants that want itself doth seek.
Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues,—
Fie, painted rhetoric! O she needs it not:
To things of sale a seller's praise belongs;
She passes praise; then praise too short doth blot.
A wither'd hermit, five-score winters worn,
Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye:
Beauty doth varnish age, as if new-born,
And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy.
O 'tis the sun that maketh all things shine!
King. By heaven, thy love is black as ebony.
Ber. Is ebony like her? O wood divine!
A wife of such wood were felicity.
O who can give an oath? where is a book?
That I may swear beauty doth beauty lack,
If that she learn not of her eye to look:
No face is fair that is not full so black.
King. O paradox! Black is the badge of hell,
The hue of dungeons and the school of night;
And beauty's crest becomes the heavens well.
Ber. Devils soonest tempt, resembling spirits of light.
O, if in black my lady's brows be deck'd,
It mourns that painting [and] usurping hair
Should ravish doters with a false aspect;
And therefore is she born to make black fair.
Her favour turns the fashion of the days,
For native blood is counted painting now;
And therefore red, that would avoid dispraise,
Paints itself black, to imitate her brow.
Dum. To look like her are chimney-sweepers black.
Long. And since her time are colliers counted bright.
King. And Ethiops of their sweet complexion crack.
Dum. Dark needs no candles now, for dark is light.
Ber. Your mistresses dare never come in rain,
For fear their colours should be wash'd away.
King. 'Twere good yours did; for, sir, to tell you plain,
I'll find a fairer face not wash'd to-day.
Ber. I'll prove her fair, or talk till doomsday here.
King. No devil will fright thee then so much as she.
Dum. I never knew man hold vile stuff so dear.
Long. Look, here's thy love: [Showing his shoe.] my foot and her face see.
Ber. O, if the streets were paved with thine eyes,
Her feet were much too dainty for such tread.
Dum. O vile! then, as she goes, what upward lies
The street should see as she walk'd overhead.
King. But what of this? Are we not all in love?
Ber. Nothing so sure; and thereby all forsworn.
King. Then leave this chat; and good Berowne, now prove
Our loving lawful, and our faith not torn.
Dum. Ay, marry, there; some flattery for this evil.
Long. O some authority how to proceed;
Some tricks, some quillets, how to cheat the devil.
Dum. Some salve for perjury.
Ber. O, 'tis more than need.
Have at you, then, affection's men-at-arms!
Consider what you first did swear unto:
To fast, to study, and to see no woman;
Flat treason 'gainst the kingly state of youth.
Say, can you fast? your stomachs are too young,
And abstinence engenders maladies.
And where that you have vow'd to study, lords,
In that each of you hath forsworn his book,
Can you still dream and pore and thereon look?
For when would you, my lord, or you, or you,
Have found the ground of study's excellence
Without the beauty of a woman's face?
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They are the ground, the books, the academes,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.
Why, universal plodding poisons up
The nimble spirits in the arteries,
As motion and long-during action tires
The sinewy vigour of the traveller.
Now, for not looking on a woman's face,
You have in that forsworn the use of eyes,
And study too, the causer of your vow;
For where is any author in the world
Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?
Learning is but an adjunct to ourself,
And where we are our learning likewise is:
Then when ourselves we see in ladies' eyes,
Do we not likewise see our learning there?
O we have made a vow to study, lords,
And in that vow we have forsworn our books:
For when would you, my liege, or you, or you,
In leaden contemplation have found out
Such fiery numbers as the prompting eyes
Of beauty's tutors have enrich'd you with?
Other slow arts entirely keep the brain,
And therefore, finding barren practisers,
Scarce show a harvest of their heavy toil;
But love, first learned in a lady's eyes,
Lives not alone immured in the brain,
But, with the motion of all elements,
Courses as swift as thought in every power,
And gives to every power a double power,
Above their functions and their offices.
It adds a precious seeing to the eye:
A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind;
A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound,
When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd:
Love's feeling is more soft and sensible
Than are the tender horns of cockled snails:

247 I.e. several beauties make one surpassing beauty 249 flourish: enchancement 250 painted: showy, artificial 266 school of night; cf. n. 266 Cf. n. 268 resembling: taking the form of; cf. n. 271 usurping: false 274 favour: face 279 counted: accounted 280 crack: boast 287 then: i.e. at doomsday

301 quillets: quibbles 304 affection's: love's 311 In that: in as much as book: true book, i.e woman's face or eyes; cf. line 333 313–318 Cf. n. 318 Promethean: divine 319 poisons up; cf. n. 320 arteries; cf. n. 335 leaden: heavy, dull 336 numbers: verses, poems 338 keep: remain in 350 Cf. n. 352 cockled: inclosed in a shell

Love's tongue proves dainty Bacchus gross in taste.
For valour, is not Love a Hercules,
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?
Subtle as Sphinx; as sweet and musical
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair;
And when Love speaks, the voice of all the gods
Make heaven drowsy with the harmony.
Never durst poet touch a pen to write
Until his ink were temper'd with Love's sighs;
O! then his lines would ravish savage ears,
And plant in tyrants mild humility.
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They sparkle still the right Promethean fire;
They are the books, the arts, the academes,
That show, contain, and nourish all the world;
Else none at all in aught proves excellent.
Then fools you were these women to forswear,
Or, keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools.
For wisdom's sake, a word that all men love,
Or for love's sake, a word that loves all men,
Or for men's sake, the authors of these women;
Or women's sake, by whom we men are men,
Let us once lose our oaths to find ourselves,
Or else we lose ourselves to keep our oaths.
It is religion to be thus forsworn;
For charity itself fulfils the law;
And who can sever love from charity?

King. Saint Cupid, then! and, soldiers, to the field!

Ber. Advance your standards, and upon them, lords!
Pell-mell, down with them! but be first advis'd,
In conflict that you get the sun of them.

Long. Now to plain-dealing; lay these glozes by:
Shall we resolve to woo these girls of France?

King. And win them too: therefore let us devise
Some entertainment for them in their tents.

Ber. First, from the park let us conduct them thither;
Then homeward every man attach the hand
Of his fair mistress: in the afternoon
We will with some strange pastime solace them,
Such as the shortness of the time can shape;
For revels, dances, masks, and merry hours
Forerun fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.

King. Away, away! no time shall be omitted,
That will betime, and may by us be fitted.

Ber. Allons! allons! Sow'd cockle reap'd no corn;
And justice always whirls in equal measure:
Light wenches may prove plagues to men forsworn;
If so, our copper buys no better treasure. Exeunt.

Act Fifth ❧ Scene First

[The King of Navarre's Park]

Enter the Pedant [Holofernes], the Curate [Nathaniel], and Dull.

Hol. Satis quod sufficit.

Nath. I praise God for you, sir: your reasons at dinner have been sharp and sententious; pleasant without scurrility, witty without affection, audacious without impudency, learned without opinion, and strange without heresy. I did converse this quondam day with a companion of the king's, who is intituled, nominated, or called, Don Adriano de Armado.

Hol. Novi hominem tanquam te: his humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his tongue filed, his eye ambitious, his gait majestical, and his general behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thrasonical. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odd, as it were, too peregrinate, as I may call it.

Nath. A most singular and choice epithet.

Draw out his table-book.

Hol. He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument. I abhor such fanatical phantasimes, such insociable and point-devise companions; such rackers of orthography, as to speak 'dout,' fine, when he should say 'doubt'; 'det,' when he should pronounce 'debt,'—d, e, b, t, not d, e, t: he clepeth a calf, cauf; half, hauf; neighbour vocatur nebour, neigh abbreviated ne. This is abhominable, which he would call abominable,—it insinuateth me of insanie: ne intelligis, domine? To make frantic, lunatic.

Nath. Laus Deo bene intelligo.

Hol. Bon, bon, fort bon! Priscian a little scratched; 'twill serve.

Enter Braggart [Armado], Boy [Moth, and Costard].

Nath. Videsne quis venit?

Hol. Video, et gaudeo.

Arm. [To Moth.] Chirrah!

Hol. Quare chirrah, not sirrah?

Arm. Men of peace, well encountered.

Hol. Most military sir, salutation.

Moth. [Aside to Costard.] They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the scraps.

Cost. O! they have lived long on the alms-basket of words. I marvel thy master hath not eaten thee for a word; for thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus: thou art easier swallowed than a flap-dragon.

Moth. Peace! the peal begins.

Arm. [To Holofernes.] Monsieur, are you not lettered?

Moth. Yes, yes; he teaches boys the horn-book. What is a, b, spelt backward, with the horn on his head?

Hol. Ba, pueritia, with a horn added.

Moth. Ba! most silly sheep with a horn. You hear his learning.

Hol. Quis, quis, thou consonant?

Moth. The third of the five vowels, if you repeat them; or the fifth, if I.

Hol. I will repeat them,—a, e, i,—

Moth. The sheep; the other two concludes it,—o, u.

Arm. Now, by the salt wave of the Mediterraneum, a sweet touch, a quick venew of wit! snip, snap, quick and home! it rejoiceth my intellect: true wit!

355 Hesperides: i.e. the garden of the Hesperides 358 voice: i.e. responsive voice 372 loves: cherishes, benefits 378 Cf. n. 383 sun: advantage of position 384 glozes: sophistries 396 betime: betide, chance 397 Sow'd cockle; cf. n. 400 copper: base coin 1 Satis quod sufficit: Enough is as good as a feast 2 reasons: arguments, discourse 4 affection: affectation 5 opinion: self conceit strange: novel, original 8 Novi . . . te: I know the man as well as I know you 9 filed: polished 11 tharsonical: boastful picked: fastidious 12 peregrinate: traveled, foreign 15 staple: fiber 16 point-devise: precise 17 fine: mincingly; cf. n. 19 clepeth: calls 20 vocatur: is called, pronounced 22 insanie: insanity ne . . . domine: do you understand, sir? 23 Laus . . . intelligo: God be praised, I understand well 24 Priscian; cf. n. 26 Videsne . . . venit: Do you see who comes? 27 Video, et gaudeo: I see and am pleased 29 Quare: why 36 honorific-etc.; cf. n. 37 flap-dragon: a raisin set on fire in brandy 40 horn-book: primer; cf. n. 42 pueritia: childishness, child 49 o, u: i.e. oh, you 51 venew: venue, sally

Moth. Offered by a child to an old man; which is wit-old.

Hol. What is the figure? what is the figure?

Moth. Horns.

Hol. Thou disputest like an infant; go, whip thy gig.

Moth. Lend me your horn to make one, and I will whip about your infamy circum circa. A gig of a cuckold's horn.

Cost. An I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy gingerbread. Hold, there is the very remuneration I had of thy master, thou halfpenny purse of wit, thou pigeon-egg of discretion. O, an the heavens were so pleased that thou wert but my bastard, what a joyful father wouldst thou make me! Go to; thou hast it ad dunghill, at the fingers' ends, as they say.

Hol. O! I smell false Latin! dunghill for unguem.

Arm. Arts-man, præambula: we will be singled from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the charge-house on the top of the mountain?

Hol. Or mons, the hill.

Arm. At your sweet pleasure, for the mountain.

Hol. I do, sans question.

Arm. Sir, it is the king's most sweet pleasure and affection to congratulate the princess at her pavilion in the posteriors of this day, which the rude multitude call the afternoon.

Hol. The posterior of the day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the afternoon: the word is well culled, chose, sweet and apt, I do assure you, sir; I do assure.

Arm. Sir, the king is a noble gentleman, and my familiar, I do assure ye, very good friend. For what is inward between us, let it pass: I do beseech thee, remember thy courtesy; I beseech thee, apparel thy head: and among other importunate and most serious designs, and of great import indeed, too, but let that pass: for I must tell thee, it will please his Grace, by the world, sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder, and with his royal finger, thus dally with my excrement, with my mustachio: but, sweet heart, let that pass. By the world, I recount no fable: some certain special honours it pleaseth his greatness to impart to Armado, a soldier, a man of travel, that hath seen the world: but let that pass. The very all of all is, but, sweet heart, I do implore secrecy, that the king would have me present the princess, sweet chuck, with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antick, or fire-work. Now, understanding that the curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions and sudden breaking out of mirth, as it were, I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crave your assistance.

Hol. Sir, you shall present before her the Nine Worthies. Sir Nathaniel, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the posterior of this day, to be rendered by our assistants, the king's command, and this most gallant, illustrate, and learned gentleman, before the princess; I say, none so fit as to present the Nine Worthies.

Nath. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?

Hol. Joshua, yourself; myself, or this gallant gentleman, Judas Maccabæus; this swain, because of his great limb, or joint, shall pass Pompey the Great; the page, Hercules,—

Arm. Pardon, sir; error: he is not quantity enough for that Worthy's thumb: he is not so big as the end of his club.

Hol. Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strangling a snake; and I will have an apology for that purpose.

Moth. An excellent device! so, if any of the audience hiss, you may cry, 'Well, done, Hercules! now thou crushest the snake!' that is the way to make an offence gracious, though few have the grace to do it.

Arm. For the rest of the Worthies?—

Hol. I will play three myself.

Moth. Thrice-worthy gentleman!

Arm. Shall I tell you a thing?

Hol. We attend.

Arm. We will have, if this fadge not, an antick. I beseech you, follow.

Hol. Via, goodman Dull! thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull. Nor understood none neither, sir.

Hol. Allons! we will employ thee.

Dull. I'll make one in a dance, or so; or I will play on the tabor to the Worthies, and let them dance the hay.

Hol. Most dull, honest Dull, to our sport, away! Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The same. Before the Princess's Pavilion]
Enter the Ladies [i.e. Princess, Katharine, Rosaline, and Maria].

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart,
If fairings come thus plentifully in.
A lady wall'd about with diamonds!
Look you what I have from the loving king.

Ros. Madam, came nothing else along with that?

Prin. Nothing but this! yes, as much love in rime
As would be cramm'd up in a sheet of paper,
Writ o' both sides the leaf, margent and all,
That he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.

Ros. That was the way to make his godhead wax;
For he hath been five thousand year a boy.

Kath. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too.

Ros. You'll ne'er be friends with him: a' kill'd your sister.

Kath. He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy;
And so she died: had she been light, like you,
Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit,
She might ha' been a grandam ere she died;
And so may you, for a light heart lives long.

Ros. What's your dark meaning, mouse, of this light word?

Kath. A light condition in a beauty dark.

Ros. We need more light to find your meaning out.

Kath. You'll mar the light by taking it in snuff;
Therefore, I'll darkly end the argument.

Ros. Look, what you do, you do it still i' the dark.

Kath. So do not you, for you are a light wench.

Ros. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light.

Kath. You weigh me not. O! that's you care not for me.

53 wit-old: i.e. wittol, cuckold 58 circum circa: round and round; cf. n. 64 ad dunghill; cf. n. 67 Arts-man: professor of the liberal arts præmbula: come forward 68 charge-house: schoolhouse; cf. n. 76 generous: well-born liable: suitable 81 inward: private 82 remember . . . courtesy: put on your hat 87 excrement: excrescence, hair on lip 93 chuck: a pet name 103 Nine Worthies; cf. n. 108 pass: pass for (?), surpass (?)

111, 112 Hercules in miniority; cf. n. 123 fadge: succeed antick: grotesque entertainment 125 Via: On your way! 130 tabor: a small drum hay: country dance 2 fairings: presents, originally such as were bought at a fair 9 That: so that (there being no blank space left) 10 wax: grow (with quibble on sealing wax) 12 shrewd . . . gallows: cunning, roguish knave 13 Cf. n. 20 condition: temperament 22 in snuff: in anger, ill (with pun on the snuff of a candle) 26 weigh; cf. n.

Ros. Great reason; for, 'past cure is still past care.'
Prin. Well bandied both; a set of wit well play'd.
But Rosaline, you have a favour too:
Who sent it? and what is it?
Ros. I would you knew:
An if my face were but as fair as yours,
My favour were as great; be witness this.
Nay, I have verses too, I thank Berowne:
The numbers true; and, were the numb'ring too,
I were the fairest goddess on the ground:
I am compar'd to twenty thousand fairs.
Oh, he hath drawn my picture in his letter!
Prin. Anything like?
Ros. Much in the letters, nothing in the praise.
Prin. Beauteous as ink; a good conclusion.
Kath. Fair as a text B in a copy-book.
Ros. 'Ware pencils, ho! let me not die your debtor,
My red dominical, my golden letter:
O, that your face were not so full of O's!
Prin. A pox of that jest! and I beshrew all shrows!
But, Katharine, what was sent to you from fair
Dumaine?
Kath. Madam, this glove.
Prin. Did he not send you twain?
Kath. Yes, madam; and moreover,
Some thousand verses of a faithful lover:
A huge translation of hypocrisy,
Vilely compil'd, profound simplicity.
Mar. This, and these pearls to me sent Longaville:
The letter is too long by half a mile.
Prin. I think no less. Dost thou not wish in heart
The chain were longer and the letter short?
Mar. Ay, or I would these hands might never part.
Prin. We are wise girls to mock our lovers so.
Ros. They are worse fools to purchase mocking so.
That same Berowne I'll torture ere I go.
O that I knew he were but in by the week!
How I would make him fawn, and beg, and seek,
And wait the season, and observe the times,
And spend his prodigal wits in bootless rimes,
And shape his service wholly to my hests,
And make him proud to make me proud that jests!
So perttaunt-like would I o'ersway his state
That he should be my fool, and I his fate.
Prin. None are so surely caught, when they are catch'd,
As wit turn'd fool: folly, in wisdom hatch'd,
Hath wisdom's warrant and the help of school
And wit's own grace to grace a learned fool.
Ros. The blood of youth burns not with such excess
As gravity's revolt to wantonness.
Mar. Folly in fools bears not so strong a note
As foolery in the wise, when wit doth dote;
Since all the power thereof it doth apply
To prove, by wit, worth in simplicity.

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Here come Boyet, and mirth is in his face.
Boyet. O, I am stabb'd with laughter! Where's her Grace?
Prin. Thy news, Boyet?
Boyet. Prepare, madam, prepare!—
Arm, wenches, arm! encounters mounted are Against your peace: Love doth approach disguis'd,
Armed in arguments; you'll be surpris'd:
Muster your wits; stand in your own defence;
Or hide your heads like cowards, and fly hence.
Prin. Saint Denis to Saint Cupid! What are they
That charge their breath against us? say, scout, say.
Boyet. Under the cool shade of a sycamore
I thought to close mine eyes some half an hour,
When, lo! to interrupt my purpos'd rest,
Toward that shade I might behold addrest
The king and his companions: warily
I stole into a neighbour thicket by,
And overheard what you shall overhear;
That, by and by, disguis'd they will be here.
Their herald is a pretty knavish page,
That well by heart hath conn'd his embassage:
Action and accent did they teach him there;
'Thus must thou speak, and thus thy body bear.'
And ever and anon they made a doubt
Presence majestical would put him out;
'For,' quoth the king, 'an angel shalt thou see;
Yet fear not thou, but speak audaciously.'
The boy replied, 'An angel is not evil;
I should have fear'd her had she been a devil.'
With that all laugh'd and clapp'd him on the shoulder,
Making the bold wag by their praises bolder.
One rubb'd his elbow thus, and fleer'd, and swore
A better speech was never spoke before;
Another, with his finger and his thumb,
Cry'd 'Via! we will do 't, come what will come';
The third he caper'd and cried, 'All goes well';
The fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell.
With that, they all did tumble on the ground,
With such a zealous laughter, so profound,
That in this spleen ridiculous appears,
To check their folly, passion's solemn tears.
Prin. But what, but what? come they to visit us?
Boyet. They do, they do; and are apparell'd thus,
Like Muscovites or Russians, as I guess.
Their purpose is to parle, to court and dance;
And every one his love-feat will advance
Unto his several mistress, which they'll know
By favours several which they did bestow.
Prin. And will they so? the gallants shall be task'd:
For, ladies, we will every one be mask'd,
And not a man of them shall have the grace,
Despite of suit, to see a lady's face.
Hold, Rosaline, this favour thou shalt wear,
And then the king will court thee for his dear:
Hold, take thou this, my sweet, and give me thine,
So shall Berowne take me for Rosaline,

30 favour: gift; also face 36 numbers: rhythm numb'ring: estimate 41 letters; cf. n. 43 text B; cf. n. 44 'Ware pencils; cf. n. 45 red dominical; cf. n. 46 O's: marks left by the smallpox 47 shrows: shrews 54 translation of hypocrisy; cf. n. 64 in . . . week; cf. n. 68 hests: behests; cf. n. 70 perttaunt-like; cf. n.

87 encounters: assailants 92 Saint Denis: patron saint of France 97 addrest: coming straight 101 by and by: soon 106 made a doubt: expressed fear 109 audaciously: boldly 115 fleer'd: grinned 123 spleen ridiculous: ridiculous merriment 124 solemn: sober 127 Like Muscovites; cf. n. 132 task'd: given a task or problem

And change you favours too; so shall your loves
Woo contrary, deceiv'd by these removes.
Ros. Come on, then; wear the favours most in sight.
Kath. But in this changing what is your intent?
Prin. The effect of my intent is, to cross theirs:
They do it but in mockery merriment;
And mock for mock is only my intent.
Their several counsels they unbosom shall
To loves mistook and so be mock'd withal
Upon the next occasion that we meet,
With visages display'd, to talk and greet.
Ros. But shall we dance, if they desire us to 't?
Prin. No, to the death, we will not move a foot:
Nor to their penn'd speech render we no grace;
But while 'tis spoke each turn away her face.
Boyet. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart,
And quite divorce his memory from his part.
Prin. Therefore I do it; and I make no doubt,
The rest will ne'er come in, if he be out.
There's no such sport as sport by sport o'erthrown,
To make theirs ours and ours none but our own:
So shall we stay, mocking intended game,
And they, well mock'd, depart away with shame.
Sound Trumpets.
Boyet. The trumpet sounds: be mask'd; the maskers come.
[The Ladies mask.]

Enter Blackamoors with music; the Boy [Moth] with a speech, and the rest of the Lords disguised.

Moth. 'All hail, the richest beauties on the earth!'
Boyet. Beauties no richer than rich taffeta.
Moth. 'A holy parcel of the fairest dames,
The Ladies turn their backs to him.
That ever turn'd their—backs—to mortal views!'
Ber. 'Their eyes,' villain, 'their eyes.'
Moth. 'That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal views! Out—'
Boyet. True; 'out,' indeed.
Moth. 'Out of your favours, heavenly spirits, vouchsafe
Not to behold'—
Ber. 'Once to behold,' rogue.
Moth. 'Once to behold with your sun-beamed eyes,
—with your sun-beamed eyes'—
Boyet. They will not answer to that epithet;
You were best call it 'daughter-beamed eyes.'
Moth. They do not mark me, and that brings me out.
Ber. Is this your perfectness? be gone, you rogue!
[Exit Moth.]
Ros. What would these strangers? know their minds,
Boyet:
If they do speak our language, 'tis our will
That some plain man recount their purposes:
Know what they would.
Boyet. What would you with the princess?
Ber. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.
Ros. What would they, say they?
Boyet. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.
Ros. Why, that they have; and bid them so be gone.
Boyet. She says, you have it, and you may be gone.
King. Say to her, we have measur'd many miles,
To tread a measure with her on this grass.
Boyet. They say that they have measur'd many a mile,
To tread a measure with you on this grass.
Ros. It is not so. Ask them how many inches
Is in one mile: if they have measur'd many,
The measure then of one is easily told.
Boyet. If to come hither you have measur'd miles,
And many miles, the princess bids you tell
How many inches do fill up one mile.
Ber. Tell her we measure them by weary steps.
Boyet. She hears herself.
Ros. How many weary steps,
Of many weary miles you have o'ergone,
Are number'd in the travel of one mile?
Ber. We number nothing that we spend for you:
Our duty is so rich, so infinite,
That we may do it still without accompt.
Vouchsafe to show the sunshine of your face,
That we, like savages may worship it.
Ros. My face is but a moon, and clouded too.
King. Blessed are clouds, to do as such clouds do!
Vouchsafe, bright moon, and these thy stars, to shine,
These clouds remov'd, upon our wat'ry eyne.
Ros. O vain petitioner! beg a greater matter;
Thou now requests but moonshine in the water.
King. Then, in our measure vouchsafe but one change.
Thou bid'st me beg; this begging is not strange.
Ros. Play, music, then! Nay, you must do it soon.
[Music plays.]
Not yet! no dance! thus change I like the moon.
King. Will you not dance? How come you thus estrang'd?
Ros. You took the moon at full, but now she's chang'd.
King. Yet still she is the moon, and I the man.
The music plays; vouchsafe some motion to it.
Ros. Our ears vouchsafe it.
King. But your legs should do it.
Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here by chance,
We'll not be nice: take hands: we will not dance.
King. Why take we hands then?
Ros. Only to part friends.
Curtsy, sweet hearts; and so the measure ends.
King. More measure of this measure: be not nice.
Ros. We can afford no more at such a price.
King. Prize you yourselves. What buys your company?
Ros. Your absence only.
King. That can never be.
Ros. Then cannot we be bought: and so, adieu;
Twice to your visor, and half once to you!
King. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.
Ros. In private, then.
King. I am best pleas'd with that.
[They converse apart.]
Ber. White-handed mistress, one sweet word with thee.
Prin. Honey, and milk, and sugar; there are three.
Ber. Nay then, two treys, an if you grow so nice,

141 removes: exchanges 160 theirs: their sport 161 intended game: the jest they intend 166 taffeta: i.e. the taffeta, or silk, masks

195 measure: stately dance 211 accompt: reckoning 217 eyne: eyes 219 requests: requestest 220 change: round or 'figure' in dancing 226 man: i.e. man in the moon 237 Prize: set a price on 241 Twice: i.e. twice adieu 247 treys: threes

Metheglin, wort, and malmsey: well run, dice!
There's half a dozen sweets.
Prin. Seventh sweet, adieu:
Since you can cog, I'll play no more with you.
Ber. One word in secret.
Prin. Let it not be sweet.
Ber. Thou griev'st my gall.
Prin. Gall! bitter.
Ber. Therefore meet.
[They converse apart.]
Dum. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a word?
Mar. Name it.
Dum. Fair lady,—
Mar. Say you so? Fair lord!
Take that for your 'fair lady.'
Dum. Please it you,
As much in private, and I'll bid adieu.
[They converse apart.]
Kath. What! was your vizard made without a tongue?
Long. I know the reason, lady, why you ask.
Kath. O for your reason; quickly, sir; I long.
Long. You have a double tongue within your mask,
And would afford my speechless vizard half.
Kath. 'Veal,' quoth the Dutchman. Is not 'veal' a calf?
Long. A calf, fair lady!
Kath. No, a fair lord calf.
Long. Let's part the word.
Kath. No, I'll not be your half:
Take all, and wean it: it may prove an ox.
Long. Look, how you butt yourself in these sharp mocks.
Will you give horns, chaste lady? do not so.
Kath. Then die a calf, before your horns do grow.
Long. One word in private with you, ere I die.
Kath. Bleat softly then; the butcher hears you cry.
[They converse apart.]
Boyet. The tongues of mocking wenches are as keen
As is the razor's edge invisible,
Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen,
Above the sense of sense; so sensible
Seemeth their conference; their conceits have wings
Fleeter than arrows, bullets, wind, thought, swifter things.
Ros. Not one word more, my maids: break off, break off.
Ber. By heaven, all dry-beaten with pure scoff!
King. Farewell, mad wenches: you have simple wits.
Exeunt [King and Lords].
Prin. Twenty adieus, my frozen Muscovits.
Are these the breed of wits so wonder'd at?
Boyet. Tapers they are, with your sweet breaths puff'd out.
Ros. Well-liking wits they have; gross, gross; fat, fat.
Prin. O poverty in wit, kingly-poor flout!
Will they not, think you, hang themselves to-night?
Or ever, but in vizards, show their faces?
This pert Berowne was out of countenance quite.
Ros. They were all in lamentable cases.
The king was weeping-ripe for a good word.
Prin. Berowne did swear himself out of all suit.
Mar. Dumaine was at my service, and his sword:
'No point,' quoth I: my servant straight was mute.
Kath. Lord Longaville said, I came o'er his heart;
And trow you what he call'd me?
Prin. Qualm, perhaps.
Kath. Yes, in good faith.
Prin. Go, sickness as thou art!
Ros. Well, better wits have worn plain statute-caps.
But will you hear? the king is my love sworn.
Prin. And quick Berowne hath plighted faith to me.
Kath. And Longaville was for my service born.
Mar. Dumaine is mine, as sure as bark on tree.
Boyet. Madam, and pretty mistresses, give ear:
Immediately they will again be here
In their own shapes; for it can never be
They will digest this harsh indignity.
Prin. Will they return?
Boyet. They will, they will, God knows;
And leap for joy, though they are lame with blows:
Therefore change favours; and, when they repair,
Blow like sweet roses in this summer air.
Prin. How blow? how blow? speak to be understood.
Boyet. Fair ladies, mask'd, are roses in their bud:
Dismask'd, their damask sweet commixture shown,
Are angels vailing clouds, or roses blown.
Prin. Avaunt, perplexity! What shall we do,
If they return in their own shapes to woo?
Ros. Good madam, if by me you'll be advis'd,
Let's mock them still, as well known as disguis'd.
Let us complain to them what fools were here,
Disguis'd like Muscovites, in shapeless gear;
And wonder what they were, and to what end
Their shallow shows and prologue vilely penn'd,
And their rough carriage so ridiculous,
Should be presented at our tent to us.
Boyet. Ladies, withdraw: the gallants are at hand.
Prin. Whip to your tents, as roes runs o'er land.
Exeunt [Princess, Ros., Kath., and Maria].

Enter the King and the rest [of the Lords].

King. Fair sir, God save you! Where is the princess?
Boyet. Gone to her tent. Please it your majesty,
Command me any service to her thither?
King. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word.
Boyet. I will; and so will she, I know, my lord. Exit.
Ber. This fellow pecks up wit, as pigeons pease,
And utters it again when God doth please:
He is wit's pedlar, and retails his wares
At wakes and wassails, meetings, markets, fairs;
And we that sell by gross, the Lord doth know,
Have not the grace to grace it with such show.
This gallant pins the wenches on his sleeve;
Had he been Adam, he had tempted Eve:
He can carve too, and lisp: why, this is he
That kiss'd his hand away in courtesy.
This is the ape of form, monsieur the nice,

248 Metheglin: mead containing honey wort: sweet unfermented beer malmsey: a sweet wine 251 cog: cheat 256 meet: fitting 265 tongue; cf. n. 270 Veal: i.e. well; cf. n. 273 part: divide; cf. n. 284 sense of sense: i.e. perception sensible: sensitive 285 conference: conversation conceits: fancies 288 dry-beaten: cudgeled 294 Well-liking: plump 295 kingly-poor flout: a fling poor for a king 300 weeping-ripe for: ready to weep for want of

303 No point; cf. II. i. 195 306 Qualm: calm; cf. n. 309 statute-caps: woollen caps; cf. n. 317 digest: put up with, 'swallow' 325 commixture: complexion 326 vailing: letting fall blown: full blown 338 runs: run 347 wakes: night festivals wassails: drinking bouts 352 can carve: knows the art of amorous glance and gesture

That, when he plays at tables, chides the dice
In honourable terms: nay, he can sing
A mean most meanly, and in ushering
Mend him who can: the ladies call him sweet;
The stairs, as he treads on them, kiss his feet.
This is the flower that smiles on every one,
To show his teeth as white as whales-bone;
And consciences, that will not die in debt,
Pay him the due of honey-tongu'd Boyet.
King. A blister on his sweet tongue, with my heart,
That put Armado's page out of his part!

Enter the Ladies [with Boyet].

Ber. See where it comes! Behaviour, what wert thou,
Till this man show'd thee? and what art thou now?
King. All hail, sweet madam, and fair time of the day!
Prin. 'Fair,' in 'all hail,' is foul, as I conceive.
King. Construe my speeches better, if you may.
Prin. Then wish me better: I will give you leave.
King. We came to visit you, and purpose now
To lead you to our court: vouchsafe it then.
Prin. This field shall hold me, and so hold your vow:
Nor God, nor I, delights in perjur'd men.
King. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke:
The virtue of your eye must break my oath.
Prin. You nickname virtue; vice you should have spoke;
For virtue's office never breaks men's troth.
Now, by my maiden honour, yet as pure
As the unsullied lily, I protest,
A world of torments though I should endure,
I would not yield to be your house's guest;
So much I hate a breaking cause to be
Of heavenly oaths, vow'd with integrity.
King. O, you have liv'd in desolation here,
Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame.
Prin. Not so, my lord; it is not so, I swear;
We have had pastimes here and pleasant game.
A mess of Russians left us but of late.
King. How, madam! Russians?
Prin. Ay, in truth, my lord;
Trim gallants, full of courtship and of state.
Ros. Madam, speak true. It is not so, my lord:
My lady, to the manner of the days,
In courtesy gives undeserving praise.
We four, indeed, confronted were with four
In Russian habit: here they stay'd an hour,
And talk'd apace; and in that hour, my lord,
They did not bless us with one happy word.
I dare not call them fools; but this I think,
When they are thirsty, fools would fain have drink.
Ber. This jest is dry to me. Gentle sweet,
Your wit makes wise things foolish: when we greet,
With eyes best seeing, heaven's fiery eye,
By light we lose light: your capacity
Is of that nature that to your huge store
Wise things seem foolish and rich things but poor.
Ros. This proves you wise and rich, for in my eye—
Ber. I am a fool, and full of poverty.

Ros. But that you take what doth to you belong,
It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.
Ber. O, I am yours, and all that I possess.
Ros. All the fool mine?
Ber. I cannot give you less.
Ros. Which of the vizards was it that you wore?
Ber. Where? when? what vizard? why demand you this?
Ros. There, then, that vizard; that superfluous case
That hid the worse, and show'd the better face.
King. We were descried: they'll mock us now down-right.
Dum. Let us confess, and turn it to a jest.
Prin. Amaz'd, my lord? Why looks your highness sad?
Ros. Help! hold his brows! he'll sound. Why look you pale?
Sea-sick, I think, coming from Muscovy.
Ber. Thus pour the stars down plagues for perjury.
Can any face of brass hold longer out?—
Here stand I, lady; dart thy skill at me;
Bruise me with scorn, confound me with a flout;
Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my ignorance;
Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit;
And I will wish thee never more to dance,
Nor never more in Russian habit wait.
O, never will I trust to speeches penn'd,
Nor to the motion of a schoolboy's tongue,
Nor never come in vizard to my friend,
Nor woo in rime, like a blind harper's song.
Taffeta phrases, silken terms precise,
Three-pil'd hyperboles, spruce affectation,
Figures pedantical; these summer flies
Have blown me full of maggot ostentation:
I do forswear them; and I here protest,
By this white glove,—how white the hand, God knows,—
Henceforth my wooing mind shall be express'd
In russet yeas and honest kersey noes:
And, to begin, wench,—so God help me, la!—
My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw.
Ros. Sans 'sans,' I pray you.
Ber. Yet I have a trick
Of the old rage: bear with me, I am sick;
I'll leave it by degrees. Soft! let us see:
Write, 'Lord have mercy on us' on those three;
They are infected, in their hearts it lies;
They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes:
These lords are visited; you are not free,
For the Lord's tokens on you do I see.
Prin. No, they are free that gave these tokens to us.
Ber. Our states are forfeit: seek not to undo us.
Ros. It is not so. For how can this be true,
That you stand forfeit, being those that sue?
Ber. Peace! for I will not have to do with you.
Ros. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.
Ber. Speak for yourselves: my wit is at an end.
King. Teach us, sweet madam, for our rude transgression
Some fair excuse.
Prin. The fairest is confession.
Were you not here, but even now, disguis'd?

355 tables: backgammon 357 mean: tenor 361 whales-bone: whale's bone, walrus tusk 367 man: cf. n. 378 nickname: misname 390 mess: cf. IV. iii. 216 395 to the manner: after the fashion 403 dry: without savor (with pun on 'thirsty') 423 sound: swoon 431 wish: invite 435 friend: mistress 436 blind harper: cf. n. 438 Three-pil'd: having three piles, superfine 444 russet: homespun, homely kersey: coarse woollen, plain 451 'Lord have mercy': cf. n. 454 visited: plague-smitten 455 Lord's tokens: cf. n. 457 states: estates 459 sue: equivocally for prosecute and entreat

King. Madam, I was.
Prin. And were you well advis'd?
King. I was, fair madam.
Prin. When you then were here,
What did you whisper in your lady's ear?
King. That more than all the world I did respect her.
Prin. When she shall challenge this, you will reject her.
King. Upon mine honour, no.
Prin. Peace! peace! forbear;
Your oath once broke, you force not to forswear.
King. Despise me, when I break this oath of mine.
Prin. I will; and therefore keep it. Rosaline,
What did the Russian whisper in your ear?
Ros. Madam, he swore that he did hold me dear
As precious eyesight, and did value me
Above this world; adding thereto, moreover,
That he would wed me, or else die my lover.
Prin. God give thee joy of him! the noble lord
Most honourably doth uphold his word.
King. What mean you, madam? by my life, my troth,
I never swore this lady such an oath.
Ros. By heaven you did; and to confirm it plain,
You gave me this: but take it, sir, again.
King. My faith and this the princess I did give:
I knew her by this jewel on her sleeve.
Prin. Pardon me, sir, this jewel did she wear;
And Lord Berowne, I thank him, is my dear.
What, will you have me, or your pearl again?
Ber. Neither of either; I remit both twain.
I see the trick on 't: here was a consent,
Knowing aforehand of our merriment,
To dash it like a Christmas comedy.
Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight zany,
Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick,
That smiles his cheek in years, and knows the trick
To make my lady laugh when she's dispos'd,
Told our intents before; which once disclos'd,
The ladies did change favours, and then we,
Following the signs, woo'd but the sign of she.
Now, to our perjury to add more terror,
We are again forsworn, in will and error.
Much upon this it is: [To Boyet.] and might not you
Forestall our sport, to make us thus untrue?
Do not you know my lady's foot by the squire,
And laugh upon the apple of her eye?
And stand between her back, sir, and the fire,
Holding a trencher, jesting merrily?
You put our page out: go, you are allow'd;
Die when you will, a smock shall be your shroud.
You leer upon me, do you? there's an eye
Wounds like a leaden sword.
Boyet. Full merrily
Hath this brave manage, this career, been run.
Ber. Lo! he is tilting straight. Peace! I have done.

Enter Clown [i.e. Costard].

Welcome, pure wit! thou partest a fair fray.
Cost. O Lord, sir, they would know
Whether the three Worthies shall come in or no.
Ber. What, are there but three?
Cost. No, sir; but it is vara fine,
For every one pursents three.
Ber. And three times thrice is nine.
Cost. Not so, sir; under correction, sir, I hope, it is not so.
You cannot beg us, sir, I can assure you, sir; we know what we know:
I hope, sir, three times thrice, sir,—
Ber. Is not nine?
Cost. Under correction, sir, we know where-until it doth amount.
Ber. By Jove, I always took three threes for nine.
Cost. O Lord, sir! it were pity you should get your living by reckoning, sir.
Ber. How much is it?
Cost. O Lord, sir! the parties themselves, the actors, sir, will show whereuntil it doth amount: for mine own part, I am, as they say, but to parfect one man in one poor man, Pompion the Great, sir.
Ber. Art thou one of the Worthies?
Cost. It pleased them to think me worthy of Pompey the Great: for mine own part, I know not the degree of the Worthy, but I am to stand for him.
Ber. Go, bid them prepare.
Cost. We will turn it finely off, sir; we will take some care. Exit.
King. Berowne, they will shame us; let them not approach.
Ber. We are shame-proof, my lord; and 'tis some policy.
To have one show worse than the king's and his company.
King. I say they shall not come.
Prin. Nay, my good lord, let me o'errule you now.
That sport best pleases that doth least know how;
Where zeal strives to content, and the contents
Dies in the zeal of that which it presents;
Their form confounded makes most form in mirth,
When great things labouring perish in their birth.
Ber. A right description of our sport, my lord.

Enter Braggart [i.e. Armado].

Arm. Anointed, I implore so much expense of thy royal sweet breath as will utter a brace of words.
[Armado converses with the King, and delivers a paper to him]
Prin. Doth this man serve God?
Ber. Why ask you?
Prin. A' speaks not like a man of God his making.
Arm. That is all one, my fair, sweet, honey monarch; for, I protest, the schoolmaster is exceeding fantastical; too-too vain; too-too vain: but we will put it, as they say, to fortuna de la guerra. I wish you the peace of mind, most royal couplement! Exit.
King. Here is like to be a good presence of Worthies. He presents Hector of Troy; the swain, Pompey the Great; the parish curate, Alexander; Armado's page, Hercules; the pedant, Judas Maccabæus:
And if these four Worthies in their first show thrive,

468 well advis'd: in right mind 476 force not: i.e. find it easy 496 consent: conspiracy 498 Christmas comedy: absurd burlesque 499 please-man: flatterer zany: clown 500 trencher-knight: serving-man, parasite 501 years: i.e. wrinkles, such as belong to years 509 upon this: in this fashion 510 squire: square, rule 511 apple: pupil 514 allow'd: priviledged to jest 519 manage: horsemanship career: swift encounter of knights

529 beg us: prove us fools; cf. n. 542 Pompion: pumpkin 555, 556 Cf. n. 559 our sport: i.e. the diguise as Muscovites 564 God his: God's 567, 568 fortuna . . . guerra: the fortune of war 568 couplement: couple, pair

These four will change habits and present the other five.
Ber. There is five in the first show.
King. You are deceived, 'tis not so.
Ber. The pedant, the braggart, the hedge-priest, the fool, and the boy:—
Abate throw at novum, and the whole world again
Cannot pick out five such, take each one in his vein.
King. The ship is under sail, and here she comes amain.

Enter [Costard armed, for] Pompey.

Cost. 'I Pompey am,—'
Boyet. You lie, you are not he.
Cost. 'I Pompey am,—'
Boyet. With libbard's head on knee.
Ber. Well said, old mocker: I must needs be friends with thee.
Cost. 'I Pompey am, Pompey surnam'd the Big,—'
Dum. 'The Great.'
Cost. It is 'Great,' sir; 'Pompey surnam'd the Great;
That oft in field, with targe and shield, did make my foe to sweat:
And travelling along this coast, I here am come by chance,
And lay my arms before the legs of this sweet lass of France.'
If your ladyship would say, 'Thanks, Pompey,' I had done.
Prin. Great thanks, great Pompey.
Cost. 'Tis not so much worth; but I hope
I was perfect. I made a little fault in 'Great.'
Ber. My hat to a halfpenny, Pompey proves the best Worthy.

Enter Curate [Nathaniel] for Alexander.

Nath. 'When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;
By east, west, north, and south, I spread my conquering might:
My scutcheon plain declares that I am Alisander,—'
Boyet. Your nose says, no, you are not; for it stands too right.
Ber. Your nose smells 'no,' in this, most tender-smelling knight.
Prin. The conqueror is dismay'd. Proceed, good Alexander.
Nath. 'When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;—'
Boyet. Most true; 'tis right: you were so, Alisander.
Ber. Pompey the Great,—
Cost. Your servant, and Costard.
Ber. Take away the conqueror, take away Alisander.
Cost. [To Nathaniel.] O! sir, you have over-thrown Alisander the conqueror! You will be scraped out of the painted cloth for this: your lion, that holds his poll-axe sitting on a close-stool, will be given to Ajax: he will be the ninth Worthy. A conqueror, and afeard to speak! run away for shame, Alisander! [Nathaniel retires.] There, an 't shall please you: a foolish mild man; an honest man, look you, and soon dashed! He is a marvellous good neighbour, faith, and a very good bowler; but, for Alisander,—alas, you see how 'tis,—a little o'erparted. But there are Worthies a-coming will speak their mind in some other sort.
Prin. Stand aside, good Pompey.

577 hedge-priest: poor, illiterate priest 579 Abate . . . novum: except for a rare throw of the dice; cf. n. 585 libbard's: leopard's; cf. n. 611 right: straight; cf. n. 616 painted cloth; cf. n. 617 lion . . . poll-axe; cf. n. 623 o'erparted: i.e. given a part too difficult for him

Enter Pedant [Holofernes] for Judas, and the Boy [Moth] for Hercules.

Hol. 'Great Hercules is presented by this imp,
Whose club kill'd Cerberus, that three-headed canus;
And, when he was a babe, a child, a shrimp,
Thus did he strangle serpents in his manus.
Quoniam he seemeth in minority,
Ergo I come with this apology.'
Keep some state in thy exit, and vanish.— Exit Boy.
'Judas I am.—'
Dum. A Judas!
Hol. Not Iscariot, sir.
'Judas I am, yeleped Maccabæus.'
Dum. Judas Maccabæus clipt is plain Judas.
Ber. A kissing traitor. How art thou prov'd Judas?
Hol. 'Judas I am.—'
Dum. The more shame for you, Judas.
Hol. What mean you, sir?
Boyet. To make Judas hang himself.
Hol. Begin, sir; you are my elder.
Ber. Well follow'd: Judas was hanged on an elder.
Hol. I will not be put out of countenance.
Ber. Because thou hast no face.
Hol. What is this?
Boyet. A cittern-head.
Dum. The head of a bodkin.
Ber. A death's face in a ring.
Long. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce seen.
Boyet. The pommel of Cæsar's falchion.
Dum. The carved-bone face on a flask.
Ber. Saint George's half-cheek in a brooch.
Dum. Ay, and in a brooch of lead.
Ber. Ay, and worn in the cap of a toothdrawer.
And now forward; for we have put thee in countenance.
Hol. You have put me out of countenance.
Ber. False: we have given thee faces.
Hol. But you have outfaced them all.
Ber. An thou wert a lion, we would do so.
Boyet. Therefore, as he is an ass, let him go.
And so adieu, sweet Jude! nay, why dost thou stay?
Dum. For the later end of his name.
Ber. For the ass to the Jude? give it him:—Jud-as, away!
Hol. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.
Boyet. A light for Monsieur Judas! it grows dark, he may stumble. [Hol. retires.]
Prin. Alas! poor Maccabæus, how hath he been baited.

Enter Braggart [i.e. Armado, for Hector].

Ber. Hide thy head, Achilles: here comes Hector in arms.
Dum. Though my mocks come home by me,
I will now be merry.
King. Hector was but a Troyan in respect of this.
Boyet. But is this Hector?
King. I think Hector was not so clean-timbered.
Long. His calf is too big for Hector's.
Dum. More calf, certain.

629 canus: canis, dog 631 manus: hands 632 Quoniam: since 633 Ergo: therefore 640 A kissing traitor; cf. n. 645 elder; cf. n. 650 cittern: cithern, guitar 651 bodkin: small dagger 652 death's face: death's head 655 flask: powder flask 658 toothdrawer; cf. n. 673 by: about, near 675 Troyan: Trojan, contemptible fellow 677 clean-timbered: well-built

Boyet. No; he is best indued in the small.
Ber. This cannot be Hector.
Dum. He's a god or a painter; for he makes faces.
Arm. 'The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty,
Gave Hector a gift,—'
Dum. A gilt nutmeg.
Ber. A lemon.
Long. Stuck with cloves.
Dum. No, cloven.
Arm. Peace!
'The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty,
Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Ilion;
A man so breath'd, that certain he would fight ye
From morn till night, out of his pavilion.
I am that flower,—'
Dum. That mint.
Long. That columbine.
Arm. Sweet Lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.
Long. I must rather give it the rein, for it runs against Hector.
Dum. Ay, and Hector's a greyhound.
Arm. The sweet war-man is dead and rotten; sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried; when he breathed, he was a man. But I will forward with my device. [To the Princess.] Sweet royalty, bestow on me the sense of hearing.

Berowne steps forth.

Prin. Speak, brave Hector; we are much delighted.
Arm. I do adore thy sweet Grace's slipper.
Boyet. [Aside to Dumaine.] Loves her by the foot.
Dum. [Aside to Boyet.] He may not by the yard.
Arm. 'This Hector far surmounted Hannibal,—'

[Berowne returns with Costard.]

Cost. The party is gone; fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two months on her way.
Arm. What meanest thou?
Cost. Faith, unless you play the honest Troyan, the poor wench is cast away: she's quick; the child brags in her belly already: 'tis yours.
Arm. Dost thou infamonize me among potentates? Thou shalt die.
Cost. Then shall Hector be whipped for Jaquenetta that is quick by him, and hanged for Pompey that is dead by him.
Dum. Most rare Pompey!
Boyet. Renowned Pompey!
Ber. Greater than great, great, great, great Pompey! Pompey the Huge!
Dum. Hector trembles.
Ber. Pompey is moved. More Ates, more Ates! stir them on! stir them on!
Dum. Hector will challenge him.
Ber. Ay, if a' have no more man's blood in 's belly than will sup a flea.
Arm. By the north pole, I do challenge thee.
Cost. I will not fight with a pole, like a northern man: I'll slash; I'll do it by the sword. I bepray you, let me borrow my arms again.
Dum. Room for the incensed Worthies!
Cost. I'll do it in my shirt.
Dum. Most resolute Pompey!
Moth. Master, let me take you a button-hole lower. Do you not see, Pompey is uncasing for the combat? What mean you? you will lose your reputation.
Arm. Gentlemen and soldiers, pardon me; I will not combat in my shirt.
Dum. You may not deny it; Pompey hath made the challenge.
Arm. Sweet bloods, I both may and will.
Ber. What reason have you for 't?
Arm. The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt. I go woolward for penance.
Boyet. True, and it was enjoined him in Rome for want of linen; since when, I'll be sworn, he wore none but a dish-clout of Jaquenetta's, and that a' wears next his heart for a favour.

Enter a Messenger, Monsieur Marcade.

Mar. God save you, madam!
Prin. Welcome, Marcade; But that thou interrupt'st our merriment.
Mar. I am sorry, madam; for the news I bring Is heavy in my tongue. The king your father—
Prin. Dead, for my life!
Mar. Even so: my tale is told.
Ber. Worthies, away! The scene begins to cloud.
Arm. For mine own part, I breathe free breath. I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion, and I will right myself like a soldier. Exeunt Worthies.
King. How fares your majesty?
Prin. Boyet, prepare: I will away to-night.
King. Madam, not so: I do beseech you, stay.
Prin. Prepare, I say. I thank you, gracious lords,
For all your fair endeavours; and entreat,
Out of a new-sad soul, that you vouchsafe
In your rich wisdom to excuse or hide
The liberal opposition of our spirits,
If over-boldly we have borne ourselves
In the converse of breath; your gentleness
Was guilty of it. Farewell, worthy lord!
A heavy heart bears not a humble tongue,
Excuse me so, coming too short of thanks
For my great suit so easily obtain'd.
King. The extreme parts of time extremely forms
All causes to the purpose of his speed,
And often, at his very loose, decides
That which long process could not arbitrate:
And though the mourning brow of progeny
Forbid the smiling courtesy of love
The holy suit which fain it would convince;
Yet, since love's argument was first on foot,
Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it
From what it purpos'd; since, to wail friends lost
Is not by much so wholesome-profitable
As to rejoice at friends but newly found.
Prin. I understand you not: my griefs are double.
Ber. Honest plain words best pierce the ear of grief;

680 small: small of the leg 692 breath'd: endowed with breath, vigorous 709 party: i.e. Jacquenetta 715 infamonize: infamize 724 Ates: mischief; cf. n. 730 northern man: countryman from the north, boor

736 take ... lower: (1) help you to strip, (2) humiliate you 746 woolward: i.e. with wool, instead of linen, next to the skin 763, 764 hole of discretion: cf. n. 772 liberal: over-free 774 converse of breath: conversation 776 humble: suited to the offering of thanks and apologies 779, 780 Cf. n. 781 loose: loosing, parting 785 convince: give proof of 791 double: excessive (?)

And by these badges understand the king.
For your fair sakes have we neglected time,
Play'd foul play with our oaths. Your beauty, ladies,
Hath much deform'd us, fashioning our humours
Even to the opposed end of our intents;
And what in us hath seem'd ridiculous,—
As love is full of unbefitting strains;
All wanton as a child, skipping and vain;
Form'd by the eye, and, therefore, like the eye,
Full of straying shapes, of habits and of forms,
Varying in subjects, as the eye doth roll
To every varied object in his glance:—
Which parti-coated presence of loose love
Put on by us, if, in your heavenly eyes,
Have misbecom'd our oaths and gravities,
Those heavenly eyes, that look into these faults,
Suggested us to make. Therefore, ladies,
Our love being yours, the error that love makes
Is likewise yours: we to ourselves prove false,
By being once false for ever to be true
To those that make us both,—fair ladies, you:
And even that falsehood, in itself a sin,
Thus purifies itself and turns to grace.

Prin. We have receiv'd your letters full of love;
Your favours, the embassadors of love;
And, in our maiden council, rated them
At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy,
As bombast and as lining to the time.
But more devout than this in our respects
Have we not been; and therefore met your loves
In their own fashion, like a merriment.

Dum. Our letters, madam, show'd much more than jest.

Long. So did our looks.

Ros. We did not quote them so.

King. Now, at the latest minute of the hour,
Grant us your loves.

Prin. A time, methinks, too short
To make a world-without-end bargain in.
No, no, my lord, your Grace is perjur'd much,
Full of dear guiltiness; and therefore this:
If for my love,—as there is no such cause,—
You will do aught, this shall you do for me:
Your oath I will not trust; but go with speed
To some forlorn and naked hermitage,
Remote from all the pleasures of the world;
There stay, until the twelve celestial signs
Have brought about the annual reckoning.
If this austere insociable life
Change not your offer made in heat of blood;
If frosts and fasts, hard lodging and thin weeds,
Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your love,
But that it bear this trial and last love;
Then, at the expiration of the year,
Come challenge me, challenge me by these deserts,
And, by this virgin palm now kissing thine,
I will be thine; and, till that instant, shut
My woful self up in a mourning house,

793 badges; cf. n. 797 In a way quite opposite to our intentions 799 strains: impulses 805 parti-coated: motley-coated 809 Suggested: tempted 820 bombast: padding 821 devout: serious respects: reflections 826 quote; cf. IV. iii. 82 832 dear: amiable 839 Completed the twelve months of the year 842 weeds: clothing 844 last: remain

Raining the tears of lamentation
For the remembrance of my father's death.
If this thou do deny, let our hands part;
Neither intitled in the other's heart.

King. If this, or more than this, I would deny,
To flatter up these powers of mine with rest,
The sudden hand of death close up mine eye!
Hence ever then my heart is in thy breast.

Ber. And what to me, my love? and what to me?

Ros. You must be purged too, your sins are rack'd:
You are attaint with faults and perjury;
Therefore, if you my favour mean to get,
A twelvemonth shall you spend, and never rest,
But seek the weary beds of people sick.

Dum. But what to me, my love? but what to me?

Kath. A wife! A beard, fair health, and honesty;
With three-fold love I wish you all these three.

Dum. O! shall I say, I thank you, gentle wife?

Kath. Not so, my lord. A twelvemonth and a day
I'll mark no words that smooth-fac'd wooers say:
Come when the king doth to my lady come;
Then, if I have much love, I'll give you some.

Dum. I'll serve thee true and faithfully till then.

Kath. Yet swear not, lest ye be forsworn again.

Long. What says Maria?

Mar. At the twelvemonth's end
I'll change my black gown for a faithful friend.

Long. I'll stay with patience; but the time is long.

Mar. The liker you; few taller are so young.

Ber. Studies my lady? mistress, look on me.
Behold the window of my heart, mine eye,
What humble suit attends thy answer there;
Impose some service on me for thy love.

Ros. Oft have I heard of you, my Lord Berowne,
Before I saw you; and the world's large tongue
Proclaims you for a man replete with mocks,
Full of comparisons and wounding flouts,
Which you on all estates will execute
That lie within the mercy of your wit:
To weed this wormwood from your fruitful brain,
And therewithal to win me, if you please,—
Without the which I am not to be won,—
You shall this twelvemonth term, from day to day,
Visit the speechless sick, and still converse
With groaning wretches; and your task shall be
With all the fierce endeavour of your wit
To enforce the pained impotent to smile.

Ber. To move wild laughter in the throat of death?
It cannot be; it is impossible:
Mirth cannot move a soul in agony.

Ros. Why, that's the way to choke a gibing spirit,
Whose influence is begot of that loose grace
Which shallow laughing hearers give to fools.
A jest's prosperity lies in the ear
Of him that hears it, never in the tongue
Of him that makes it: then, if sickly ears,
Deaf'd with the clamours of their own dear groans,

853 intitled: having any right 857 Cf. n 858–865 Cf. n. 859 rack'd: i.e. unnaturally extended 877 stay: wait 878 liker; cf. n. 884 large: lavish 886 comparisons: personalities 887 estates: ranks 900 agony: i.e. of death 907 dear: intense

Will hear your idle scorns, continue then,
And I will have you and that fault withal;
But if they will not, throw away that spirit,
And I shall find you empty of that fault,
Right joyful of your reformation.

Ber. A twelvemonth! well, befall what will befall,
I'll jest a twelvemonth in an hospital.

Prin. [To the King.] Ay, sweet my lord; and so I take my leave.

King. No, madam; we will bring you on your way.

Ber. Our wooing doth not end like an old play;
Jack hath not Jill; these ladies' courtesy
Might well have made our sport a comedy.

King. Come, sir, it wants a twelvemonth and a day,
And then 'twill end.

Ber. That's too long for a play.

Enter Braggart [Armado].

Arm. Sweet majesty, vouchsafe me,—

Prin. Was not that Hector?

Dum. The worthy knight of Troy.

Arm. I will kiss thy royal finger, and take leave. I am a votary; I have vowed to Jaquenetta to hold the plough for her sweet love three year. But, most esteemed greatness, will you hear the dialogue that the two learned men have compiled in praise of the owl and the cuckoo? it should have followed in the end of our show.

King. Call them forth quickly; we will do so.

Arm. Holla! approach.

Enter all.

This side is Hiems, Winter; this Ver, the Spring; the one maintained by the owl, th' other by the cuckoo. Ver, begin.

The Song.

[Spring.]

'When daisies pied and violets blue
And lady-smocks all silver-white
And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue
Do paint the meadows with delight,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men; for thus sings he,
Cuckoo;
Cuckoo, cuckoo: O, word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

'When shepherds pipe on oaten straws,
And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks,
When turtles tread, and rooks, and daws,
And maidens bleach their summer smocks.
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men; for thus sings he,
Cuckoo;
Cuckoo, cuckoo: O, word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!'

Winter.

'When icicles hang by the wall,
And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,
And Tom bears logs into the hall,
And milk comes frozen home in pail,
When blood is nipp'd, and ways be foul,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
Tu-who;
Tu-whit, tu-who—a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

'When all aloud the wind doth blow,
And coughing drowns the parson's saw,
And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marian's nose looks red and raw,
When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
Tu-who;
Tu-whit, tu-who—a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.'

Arm. The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo. You, that way: we, this way. Exeunt Omnes.

FINIS

909 withal: also 917 bring: attend 937 Cf. n. 941 lady-smocks: cardamine pratensis, May-flower 942 cuckoo-buds: buttercups or cowslips 951 turtles: turtle-doves 967 keel: cool by stirring 969 saw: maxim or wise talk 972 crabs: wild, sour apples bowl: i.e. wassail-bowl

Notes

Dramatis Personæ. A list of characters for this play was first supplied by Rowe in 1709. Berowne (spelled 'Biron' in the second and later Folios and in most modern editions) is accented on the second syllable, and rimes with 'moon' (cf. IV.iii.241). Longaville rimes with 'ill' (IV.iii.122) but sometimes also with 'compile' (IV.iii.133) and with 'mile' (V.ii.57). Boyet rimes with 'debt' (V.ii.362); Rosaline with 'mine' (IV.i.56) and 'thine' (V.ii.138). Moth was probably pronounced as if spelled 'Mote' (cf. IV.iii.161, where the common noun, mote, is spelled 'Moth' in the early editions). Armado is often spelled 'Armatho,' which probably indicates the pronunciation (Spanish d = th).

Unusual irregularities are found in the quarto and folio editions of Love's Labour's Lost in the naming of the characters. The confusion is particularly striking in IV.ii, where the names of Holofernes and Nathaniel are transposed through most of the scene. Throughout the play the Princess is often called 'Queen'; and the names of Armado, Holofernes, Nathaniel, Costard, and Dull are erratically supplanted in stage directions and speech headings by the titles, Braggart, Pedant, Curate, Clown, and Constable, while Moth is often referred to as Page or Boy. Some recent editors have attempted to discriminate on the evidence of these phenomena between the original and the revised portions of the play. Thus Mr. Dover Wilson argues that passages using the designations 'Braggart,' 'Pedant,' etc., belong to the revision of 1597, whereas passages that give the proper names 'Armado,' Holofernes,' etc., are part of the original play. But this leads to risky conclusions.

Love's Labour's Lost. The spelling of the title is that of the third Folio. The earlier Folios have Loues Labour's Lost. The first Quarto has on the title-page Loues labors lost, but as running-title Loues Labor's lost. 'Labour's' was evidently intended as a contraction of 'Labour is.' Meres, however, referred to the play as Loue labors lost, clearly regarding 'labors' as the nominative plural. Likewise the play is known in France as Les Peines de l'Amour Perdues and in Germany as Verlorene Liebesmüh.

I.i.12. Navarre shall be the wonder of the world. The opening speech of the King shows the influence of Marlowe's versification in its special sonorousness, alliteration, and exhilaration. Compare with the present line Marlowe's Dido, l. 730: 'Lest I be made a wonder to the world.'

I.i.14. Still and contemplative in living art. Quietly contemplating the art of perfect living. The line alludes to the common mediæval distinction between the contemplative and the active life. Mr. J. S. Reid (Iowa Philological Quarterly, July, 1922) suggests that 'living art' refers particularly to the Stoic term, ars vivendi, ethical (as distinguished from physical and logical) philosophy.

I.i.62. feast. Theobald's emendation for the 'fast' of the early editions.

I.i.67, 68. If study's gain be thus, and this be so, Study knows that which yet it doth not know. If the benefit of study consists only in the development of casuistry, then there is no such thing as knowledge: instead of discovering the true, study merely merges the true and the false.

I.i.73. Which, with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain. In which the final result of painful striving is only further pain.

I.i.80–83. Study me how to please the eye indeed, By fixing it upon a fairer eye, Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his heed. And give him light that it was blinded by. 'Me.' (l. 80) is the 'ethical dative'; 'Who' (l. 82) refers to the eye mentioned in l. 80 or to its owner; and 'it' (l. 83) is the object of 'by.' The passage may be paraphrased: Rather study how really to please your eye by fixing it upon that of a sweetheart, whereupon your own eye will be dimmed; but the 'fairer eye' will be your sole attention and give light to you whom it has blinded.

I.i.88–93. These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights, That give a name to every fixed star, Have no more profit of their shining nights Than those that walk and wot not what they are. Too much to know is to know nought but fame; And every godfather can give a name. The learned astronomers who give names to the stars have no more real control of them than have the ignorant. Encyclopedic knowledge is but parrot-like, no more essential than the bestowal of a name at the baptism of an infant.

I.i.95. Proceeded. Almost certainly used in the technical sense of taking an academic degree. Berowne employs his own intellectual subtlety to discourage others from similarly training themselves.

I.i.101. In reason nothing. Ber. Something, then, in rime. Shakespeare is very fond of playing on the alliterative phrase, rime and reason. Compare I.ii.96.

I.i.108. May's new-fangled shows. Since the rest of the passage is in alternate rime, it is assumed that the poet intended this line to end with a word riming with 'birth' (l. 104). Many editors have therefore substituted 'earth' (Theobald) or 'mirth' (Walker) for 'shows'; but neither seems natural, and it is quite likely that Shakespeare himself made the slip through inadvertence.

I.i.111. Climb o'er the house to unlock the little gate. Take an absurdly impractical course. The line is printed as in the Quarto. The Folio has the inferior version: 'That were to clymbe ore the house to vnlocke the gate.'

I.i.116. Yet confident I'll keep what I have sworn. The second Folio reads 'swore,' which most modern editors introduce for the sake of rime.

I.ii.49. the dancing horse. A famous performing horse named Morocco, first definitely mentioned in 1591 but apparently known as early as 1589. He was particularly accomplished in arithmetic.

I.ii.70. Of what complexion? The four 'complexions' of the body were variously ascribed to the four elements (earth, air, water, fire) and to the four 'humours' (phlegm, choler, blood, melancholy).

I.ii.80. she had a green wit. Perhaps Moth implies a pun on the green withes with which Samson was bound (Judges 16. 7): 'And Samson said unto her, If they bind me with seven green withs that were never dried, then shall I be weak, and be as another man.'

I.ii.97. a ballet . . . of the King and the Beggar. The ballad of King Cophetua and the Beggar-maid is a favorite subject of allusion in Shakespeare and his contemporaries. Compare Armado's later mention of it in his letter (IV.i.68 ff.). The extant version, printed in Percy's Reliques, appears to be post-Elizabethan.

I.ii.141. the merry days of desolation. Perhaps Costard means 'dissipation.'

II.i.42. Lord Perigort. Of course, an invented name, Périgord, near Bordeaux, was an important district during the Hundred Years' War between France and England. Shakespeare would have found it mentioned repeatedly in Holinshed in connection with the French campaigns of Henry VI's reign. Falconbridge, in the next line, appears to have been a name the poet liked. It is not French, but is applied to important characters both in King John and in 3 Henry VI. See note on the latter play, I.i.243, in this edition.

II.i.64, 65. And much too little of that good I saw Is my report to his great worthiness. My testimony to his worthiness is summed up in saying that I had much too little opportunity to observe it.

II.i.76. That aged ears play truant at his tales. The aged are tempted away from business to listen to his tales.

II.i.134. Being but the one half of an entire sum. That is, the sum which Navarre's father had lent to France amounted to two hundred thousand crowns. See Sources of the Play, p. 91.

II.i.191. let it blood. Alluding to the nearly inevitable practice of blood-letting in sickness.

II.i.195. No point. A pun on the English word, 'point' (i.e. my eye is not sharp enough), and the French negative, ne . . . point. Maria makes the same poor joke in V.ii.303.

II.i.201. The heir of Alençon, Katharine her name. Both the Quarto and Folio texts here print 'Rosalin' instead of Katharine, and in line 217 'Katherin(e)' instead of Rosaline. This is one of the chief points used by Mr. Dover Wilson in an ingenious elaboration of a theory proposed by Mr. Charlton in 1917 (The Library, vol. viii, pp. 355–370); namely, that Shakespeare, in the first version of the play, intended the ladies to be masked and Boyet to mix their names when the lovers inquire of him, and that in the revised version he intended to omit this motive of confused identity because of its employment later in V.ii. Mr. Wilson thinks that an unintentional blending of the two versions can be seen in the text of the present scene. There are very strong reasons against these assumptions. The only basis for the idea that the three ladies (unlike the Princess) wear masks in this scene is Berowne's exclamation, 'Now fair befall your mask!' (l. 127), and the reply of Rosaline ('Katharine' in the Quarto). This is far from conclusive. On the other hand, the evident purpose of the scene is to allow each of the lords an opportunity of falling in love with a lady with whom, by hypothesis, he has previously had only the slightest acquaintance, but with whose peculiarities of face and coloring they are all shown to be perfectly familiar when they next appear (see Berowne's soliloquy, III.i.161 ff., and the whole of IV.iii). It is impossible to believe that any author, skilled or unskilled, could have had the idea of frustrating so essential a piece of dramatic business by having the ladies unrecognizably masked and making them converse at cross purposes with the wrong gallants.

II.i.210. God's blessing on your beard. Longaville means to imply that Boyet's flippant answers are inconsistent with his venerable beard. In pronunciation

'beard' and 'heard' rimed better than at present, the latter word still retaining the long vowel of its infinitive.

II.i.221. Farewell to me, sir, and welcome to you. Say 'farewell' to me, and I will say you are welcome (to depart).

II.i.227. Kath. Two hot sheeps, marry. The Quarto assigns this speech to 'Lady Ka.' and the Folio to 'La. Ma.' Nearly all editors follow the latter, which, however, is probably a compositor's error occasioned by the fact that Maria is the speaker just above (l. 222). The three following lady's speeches (ll. 230, 232, 235), assigned in both the early editions simply to 'La.' or 'Lad.,' evidently belong to the same lady who speaks in l. 227. The Quarto's introduction of Katharine into the conversation is a dramatic gain.

II.i.233. My lips are no common, though several they be. A quasi-legal pun. Several land, as opposed to common, was that in separate or private ownership. Katharine also calls her lips several as being more than one, or as being parted.

II.i.257. margent. Alluding to the habit of printing explanatory notes on the margin (rather than the foot) of the page.

III.i.2. Concolinel. Not satisfactorily explained. It has been interpreted as a corruption of the Irish words 'Can cailin gheal' (pronounced con colleen yal), i.e. 'sing, maiden fair.' Marshall suggests that it is French, 'Quand Colinelle,' which is at least as likely.

III.i.6. brawl. French branle. Defined as the oldest of figure dances.

III.i.9. canary. The canary was a very lively dance, allowing the improvisation of new steps.

III.i.24. The hobby-horse is forgot. The 'hobby-horse,' a dancer made up to look like a horse, was a favorite figure in morris dances, and a special subject of Puritan invective. The line, 'O, the hobby-horse is forgot,' which Shakespeare uses again in Hamlet, III.ii.129, 130, has been supposed to come from a ballad.

III.i.64. no salve in the mail, sir. That is, no quacksalver's remedy. Costard apprehends that Armado is calling for exotic (and hence suspect) remedies for the broken shin.

III.i.71. is not l'envoy a salve? A pun on the Latin salve, used in salutations. The envoi, or concluding section, of a mediæval ballade ordinarily contained an address to the person to whom the poem was written.

III.i.91. The boy hath sold him a bargain. This is usually explained as 'has got the better of him,'—a sense which the idiom, to sell one a bargain, undoubtedly had. But I think the context shows that Costard, in the innocence of his rustic heart, really conjectures that l'envoy means goose, and that the goose mentioned in the incomprehensible as speeches he has just listened to a veritable bird, over the price of which Armado and Moth have been haggling.

III.i.102. And he ended the market. There was a proverb: 'Three women and a goose make a market.'

III.i.164. A very beadle to a humorous sigh. The beadle was an inferior kind of constable who whipped small offenders. See 2 Henry VI II.i.148. 'Humorous' is here used in the sense of sentimental.

III.i.169. This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid. The early editions, both quarto and folio, read 'This signior Iunios giant-dwarf, dan Cupid.' It may be better, instead of Hanmer's emendation as given in the text, to print with Hart: 'This signior junior,' i.e. Mr. Youngster.

IV.i.23. O heresy in fair, fit for these days! The recent Cambridge editors, following a suggestion of Hart, see in this line and in lines 30–33 below 'a direct allusion to the conversion of Henry IV' to Romanism, July, 1593. The detached lines mentioned fit the historical situation well enough, but the Princess' speech as a whole does not. In his early plays Shakespeare is very fond of introducing passages of reflective moralizing such as this, generally without any suggestion of topical interest.

IV.i.48. The thickest, and the tallest. As Marshall remarks, Costard's otherwise dull and uncivil joke gains point if one remembers that the ladies' parts were performed by boys. The wit apparently lies in the fact that the Princess was represented by the oldest and stoutest of this group, whose figure was outgrowing its suitability to feminine rôles.

IV.i.58. Break up this capon. To break up a fowl was to carve it. Capon is used figuratively, like the French poulet, for a love-letter.

IV.i.88. the Nemean lion. The lion slain by Hercules in performances of his first labor. Here and in Hamlet. I.iv.91 Shakespeare erroneously accents the first syllable. Hart notes that Golding's Ovid gave him a precedent for the pronunciation.

IV.i.99. Monarcho. 'The monarch'; a crazy Italian who lived about the English court. He was subject to delusions of grandeur, and though he died about 1580, was still a familiar subject of allusion twenty years later.

IV.i.113. she that bears the bow. Rosaline is punning on 'shooter' and 'suitor,' which were pronounced alike, and often quibblingly confused. In Boyet's speech, line 111, the early editions all print 'shooter' for 'suitor.' In Shakespeare's time, it should be remembered, firearms had not replaced the bow in the fashionable sport of deer-slaying. Several writers see a special application in the deer-shooting allusions of this and the next scene to Queen Elizabeth's well-known fondness for the cross-bow. Cf. Sources of the Play.

IV.i.116. if horns that year miscarry. If the crop of horns is not good. Boyet succumbs to the inevitable jest about cuckolds' horns, produced by unfaithful wives.

IV.i.127. King Pepin of France. Charlemagne's father, a very ancient monarch.

IV.ii.32. So were there a patch set of learning, to see him in a school. The word 'patch' is used ambiguously. If Dull were seen in a school, (1) a patch (fool) would be put to study, and (2) a patch (disfigurement, disgrace) would be put on learning.

IV.ii.33. Many can brook the weather that love not the wind. Apparently a proverbial saying, similar to "There is no accounting for tastes,' or 'It takes many sorts of men to make a world.' To brook the weather means to put up with foul weather.

IV.ii.37. Dictynna. This rare epithet of Diana is found in Golding's Ovid and in Tottel's Miscellany. It made trouble for the early compositors, who spell it 'Dictisima' and 'Dictima.'

IV.ii.42. The allusion holds in the exchange. That is, the point of the jest is still seen when Holofernes recasts (in ll. 40, 41) the form in which Dull has given it (l. 35).

IV.ii.79. vir sapit qui pauca loquitur. That man is wise who speaks little. The sentence is borrowed directly from Lyly's Latin grammar.

IV.ii.93, 94. Fauste, precor gelida quando pecus omne sub umbra Ruminat . . . good old Mantuan. Holofernes quotes the opening words of the first eclogue of Mantuanus (Baptista Spagnuoli of Mantua, d. 1516), whose Latin poems were an elementary textbook in the schools of the day. The early editions read 'Facile' instead of 'Fauste,' which the recent Cambridge editors think an intentional misquotation. It is more probably a compositor's misreading of Shakespeare's manuscript.

IV.ii.96, 97. Venetia, Venetia, Chi non te vede, non te pretia. Archaic Italian: 'Venice, Venice, he who has not seen thee cannot value thee.' The words are gibberish as they appear in the early editions. Theobald first explained them.

IV.ii.99. Ut, re, sol, la, mi, fa. Notes of the old musical scale in incorrect order. They should run: 'ut (later replaced by "do"), re, mi, fa, sol, la.'

IV.ii.100. As Horace says in his—. What saying of Horace Holofernes has in mind the commentators have failed to discover.

IV.ii.118. You find not the apostrophas. You pronounce syllables which should be omitted. Or perhaps, as Gollancz suggests, Holofernes means the reverse (diereses): You omit syllables which should be pronounced.

IV.ii.119. numbers ratified. Metre sanctioned by convention.

IV.ii.127. from one Monsieur Berowne, one of the strange queen's lords. A very confusing and probably corrupt passage. What Jaquenetta here says is directly opposed to her assertion (ll. 91, 92) that the letter was sent to her from Don Armado; and the designation of Berowne as 'one of the strange queen's lords' is equally absurd. The recent Cambridge editors add another to a great list of implausible explanations by theorizing that 'Berowne' is a compositor's error for 'Boyet' (written 'Bo' or 'Boy'), and that Jaquenetta understands Holofernes to mean by 'directed' imparted. They assume, therefore, that Boyet juggled the two letters.

IV.ii.135. Trip and go. A common phrase, borrowed from the words of a popular morris dance song.

IV.ii.153, 154. society—saith the text—is the happiness of life. Nathaniel's source for the remark has not been found. Perhaps he is inventing the 'text' like the 'certain Father' of line 142. There is a much quoted Latin hexameter line, repeated by Marlowe in Doctor Faustus, which may have been in Shakespeare's mind: 'Solamen miseris socios habuisse doloris,' it is a comfort to the wretched to have companions in their pain.

IV.iii.5. as mad as Ajax: it kills sheep. Alluding to the story that Ajax, disappointed of the award of Achilles' armor, went mad and attacked a flock of sheep, which he took for a hostile army.

IV.iii.85. Stoop, I say. 'Stoop' is generally explained as equivalent to stooping, crooked; but there seems no justification for such a use. It is probably the verbal imperative, addressed sotto voce to Dumaine: Come off your stilts, abandon your exalted nonsense.

IV.iii.181. With men like men, men of inconstancy. There is little to choose between many of the emendations of this line, which is clearly imperfect both in metre and in sense as printed in the early editions: 'With men like men of inconstancie.' The reading here accepted, which appears to be original with Craig, makes the line mean 'with ordinary, inconstant men.'

IV.iii.222. sirs. Costard and Jaquenetta are addressed.

IV.iii.266. the school of night. Perhaps 'that which teaches night to be what it is: dark and sinister.' Most editors have preferred to adopt an emendation that originated with Theobald and Warburton: the scowl of night. The recent Cambridge editors lend their support to a fantastic notion of Mr. Acheson to the effect that 'the school of night' is a topical allusion to a society composed of Sir Walter Raleigh, the poet Chapman, Marlowe, etc., whom it is supposed Shakespeare was ridiculing in this play.

IV.iii.266. And beauty's crest becomes the heavens well. An obscure line. The most obvious meaning is rather flat: 'And beauty's distinguishing mark (or perfection) well becomes the regions of light.'

IV.iii.268. Devils soonest tempt, resembling spirits of light. Perhaps an allusion to 2 Corinthians 11. 14: 'And no marvel, for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light.' The idea recurs in Hamlet II.ii.586–588, and in Measure for Measure II.iv.16, 17.

IV.iii.313–338. The wording and argument of these lines are repeated in more extended form later in the speech. Compare especially lines 334-337 and 364–368. It is generally recognized that an earlier and a later, expanded and improved, version of the same speech have been accidentally amalgamated in the text which reached the printers. Mr. Dover Wilson argues that the opening lines of Berowne (303–309) were intended to begin both versions, and that they were followed in the earlier version by ll. 310–331 and in the later by ll. 332–379. See note on V.ii.861–867.

IV.iii.319. poisons up. Completely poisons. Theobald's emendation, 'prisons up,' is plausible and has been adopted by many editors.

IV.iii.320. The nimble spirits in the arteries. The arteries were supposed to contain, not blood simply, but 'vital spirits.'

IV.iii.350. When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd. The 'suspicious head of theft' may be interpreted either actively, i.e. the acutely watchful ears of a thief; or passively, i.e. the ears of one suspicious of being robbed. I think the former the more likely.

IV.iii.378. For charity itself fulfils the law. Cf. Romans 13. 8: 'for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.'

IV.iii.397. Sow'd cockle reap'd no corn. An elliptical and proverbial expression: if we plant weeds, we shall not reap corn; unless we make the proper preparations, we shall not gain the desired results.

V.i.17. to speak 'dout,' fine, when he should say, 'doubt.' Holofernes belongs to the pedantic group which sought during the Renaissance to bring the spelling and pronunciation of English words as close as possible to the real or fancied Latin original. Thus the earlier doute was written and sounded doubt on the authority of Latin dubitum, and the earlier dette made into debt on the analogy of Latin debitum. The new, unhistorical spellings managed to establish themselves, but not the pronunciations upon which Holofernes and his class insisted.

V.i.24. Prisian a little scratched. That is, your Latin is passable, but hackneyed. Priscian wrote, during the fifth century, A.D., works which were long the standard textbooks on Latin grammar. Previous editors have assumed that 'scratched Priscian' must be equivalent to 'breaking Priscian's head,' i.e. speaking ungrammatical Latin. Hence Theobald misingeniously invented an error by changing Sir Nathaniel's correct sentence to 'Laus deo, bone intelligo,' and altered Holofernes' French (misprinted 'Bome boon for boon' in the original editions) into 'Bone?—bone for bene.' But the schoolmaster's meaning is that the sentence is Priscian (correct Latin), but scratched by overuse. He would never admit that a positive error in grammar 'will serve.'

V.i.36. honorificabilitudinitatibus. Dative (or ablative) plural of a genuine mediæval Latin word used by Dante and other writers. It was famous as the longest of all words. It means something like 'the state of being capable of honors.'

V.i.40. horn-book. A rudimentary implement of education. It consisted in a paper containing the letters of the alphabet, Lord's Prayer, etc., fastened to a piece of board and protected by a covering of transparent horn.

V.i.58. circum circa. This is Theobald's rather over-ingenious emendation of 'vnum cita' in the early editions. Hart proposes 'unciatim,' inch by inch, and the late Cambridge editors nimis cito, all too quickly. Furness thinks unum cita a meaningless bit of schoolboy slang.

V.i.64. ad dunghill. This, as Holofernes suspects, is a perversion of ad unguem, probably current in the grammar-schools.

V.i.68, 69. the charge-house on the top of the mountain. Charge-house, defined as boarding-school in the Oxford Dictionary, is not otherwise exemplified. The mention of the top of the mountain has been suspected of containing some topical reference. Critics who wish to identify Holofernes with John Florio take mountain as suggesting Montaigne, whose essays Florio translated. The date of Florio's Montaigne, 1603, seems sufficient to discredit this theory.

V.i.103. the Nine Worthies. They were variously listed, the most common enumeration being:—Three pagans (Hector, Alexander, and Cæsar); three Jews (Joshua, David, and Judas Maccabæus); and three Christians (King Arthur, Charlemagne, and Godfrey of Bouillon). Hercules and Pompey seem to have been first included by Shakespeare.

V.i.111, 112. Hercules in minority. The myth related that the infant Hercules' first exploit was to strangle two serpents which Juno had sent to destroy him. Hart quotes a line from Golding's Ovid (Metamorphoses ix. 79, 80), which may have stuck in the poet's memory: 'It is my Cradle game To vanquish Snakes.'

V.ii.13. You'll ne'er be friends with him: a' kill'd your sister. M. Abel Lefranc (Sous le Masque de 'William Shakespeare,' 1919, ii. p. 73–80) identifies this sister of Katharine with Hélène de Tournon, an attendant of Marguerite de Valois, Queen of Navarre, who actually died of love in 1577. But the incident is so similar to Viola's famous story of her sister in Twelfth Night that it seems more likely to have come from something in the personal experience of the poet than from anything in the source material of Love's Labour's Lost.

V.ii.26. I weigh not you. A pun, as the next line shows, on two idioms: (1) 'I do not equal you in weight,' and (2) 'I don't care about you.'

V.ii.41. Much in the letters, nothing in the praise. Furness explains 'The resemblance was great in the dark colour of the letters, but not at all in the substance of the praise.'

V.ii.43. Fair as a text B in a copy-book. A large ornamental capital in the old 'Gothic' hand: a 'black-letter.'

V.ii.44. 'Ware pencils, ho! If we come to painting each other's portraits, take care.

V.ii.45. red dominical. The red letter in old almanacs to mark the Sundays of the year. The mediæval name for Sunday was 'dies dominica.'

V.ii.54. A huge translation of hypocrisy. Katharine affects to think Dumaine's verses imitated from foreign rimers.

V.ii.64. in by the week. Permanently caught.

V.ii.68. hests. The only argument for this word (which editors unanimously admit to be decisive) is the requirement of a rime for 'jests' in the next line. The First Quarto and First Folio read 'deuice,' for which the Second Folio substituted 'behests.' So in line 78 wantonness is a Second Folio emendation of 'wantons be.'

V.ii.70. So perttaunt-like would I o'ersway his state. Not very satisfactorily explained. The numerous conjectural emendations—pedant-like, portent-like, pendant-like, planet-like, etc.—are unconvincing. Marshall argues that perttaunt-like may be the term 'pur tant' (for so much) used in the card game of Post and Pair, quoting a line from John Davies' Wittes Pilgrimage (1610?): 'Then to Pur Tant hee's in subjection.' (Cf. Works of John Davies of Hereford, ed. Grosart, vol.ii.p. 38.)

V.ii.127. Like Muscovites or Russians. Russian costumes were not uncommon in English courtly masquerades. Sir Sidney Lee suggests a particular allusion to a visit of Russian nobles to Elizabeth's court in 1583.

V.ii.265. What! was your wizard made without a tongue? Mr. W. J. Lawrence explains (Times Lit. Suppl., June 7, 1923) that Elizabethan masks were kept in place by a tongue held between the wearer's teeth.

V.ii.270. 'Veal,' quoth the Dutchman. 'Veal' may be the Dutchman's pronunciation of 'well,' or the German viel (much), or a pun on 'veil' in the sense of mask. The editors' efforts to evolve wit and sense out of this dialogue are all far-fetched. Katharine is evidently punning on Longaville's name in the words 'long' (l. 267) and 'veal.'

V.ii.273. Let's part the word. The recent Cambridge editors explain: 'half the word "calf" is a "ca" which are the first two letters of Catharine, and "half" means "wife."'

V.ii.306. Qualm, perhaps. Pronounced 'calm'; hence the pun. The same jest occurs in 2 Henry IV II.iv.30, 31.

V.ii.309. statute-caps. An act of Parliament in 1571 required all ordinary citizens to wear woollen caps on Sundays and holidays. Hart quotes a still more apposite regulation for the apparel of London apprentices (in 1582), forbidding them at any time to wear within the city any head covering except a woollen cap. The object was to encourage the wool trade. It is worth noting that Shakespeare's uncle incurred a fine in 1583 for refusing to wear a cloth cap on Sundays and holidays.

V.ii.367. Till this man show'd thee. Theobald first read 'man' for the 'madman' of the early editions, which spoils the scansion of the line and certainly does not improve the sense. A plausible explanation of the intrusion of the superfluous 'mad—' is that the compositor's eye caught the first syllable of 'madman' in the next line.

V.ii.436. like a blind harper's song. Harping was proverbially the resource of the blind.

V.ii.451. 'Lord have mercy on us.' The words put up on plague-stricken houses.

V.ii.455. the Lord's tokens. Spots on the body, marking the plague. Berowne jestingly so calls the lords' tokens, i.e. the gifts of his three associates to the ladies who are wearing them. There is perhaps in these plague mentions a suggestion of the great London plague of 1592–1593, but Mr. Charlton argues that such jesting would not be natural while the actual plague was raging.

V.ii.529. You cannot beg us. This slangy way of saying, 'We are no idiots,' seems to have arisen from the practice of suing for the guardianship of wealthy incompetents.

V.ii.555, 556. Where zeal strives to content, and the contents Dies in the zeal of that which it presents. Where the unintelligent zeal of the actors strives to content the audience, and the gist (contents) of the entertainment is destroyed by this very zeal in performance.

V.ii.579. Abate throw at novum. Alluding to a game called novem quinque, in which the two principal throws were nine and five. The Cambridge editors explain the words as 'referring to the presentation of nine worthies by five players.'

V.ii.585. With libbard's head on knee. Theobald explained this by quoting Cotgrave's definition of the French word masquine: 'The representation of a lion's head, etc., upon the elbow or knee of some old-fashioned garments.'

V.ii.606. it stands too right. The point seems to be that Alexander's head sat crookedly on his shoulders. Shakespeare can have got this fact from North's Plutarch. Boyet may, however, simply mean that Nathaniel's nose is not aquiline enough for that of a worthy.

V.ii.616. You will be scraped out of the painted cloth for this. That is, you will lose your place as one of the worthies. Painted cloths were a more humble substitute for tapestry in wall-coverings, and the nine worthies were a common subject of their decoration.

V.ii.617. your lion, that holds his poll-axe sitting on a close-stool. Theobald illustrated this Rabelaisian witticism very neatly by quoting the description of Alexander's arms in Gerard Leigh's Accidence of Armory, 1591: 'a lion or [of gold color] seiante [sitting] in a chair, holding a battle-axe argent.'

V.ii.640. A kissing traitor. Alluding to the kiss of Judas Iscariot. Berowne gets the hint for this gibe from Dumaine's clipt in the line above. Dumaine uses the word in the sense of abbreviated, and Berowne seizes upon another sense, from 'clip,' to embrace.

V.ii.646. Judas was hanged on an elder. An old belief. Sir John Mandeville reported that the tree was still standing.

V.ii.658. worn in the cap of a toothdrawer. The brooch in the toothdrawer's cap appears to have been a distinguishing mark of his costume. Halliwell quoted a passage from the works of John Taylor, the Water-Poet (1630):—'In Queen Elizabeth's days there was a fellow that wore a brooch in his hat like a toothdrawer.' One of the costume sketches made by Inigo Jones for a mask at James I's court represents a toothdrawer wearing a very high hat with a brooch in the left side. (See publications of the (Old) Shakespeare Society, vol. 39, 1848.)

V.ii.724. More Ates. Ate was goddess of discord. She is introduced at the opening of Peele's Arraignment of Paris and again in the fourth book of the Fairy Queen.

V.ii.763. I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion. 'To see day at a little hole' was a proverbial saying.

V.ii.779, 780. The extreme parts of time extremely forms All causes to the purpose of his speed. The closing moments of a period force concentration upon the matter in hand, or subordinate everything else to the necessity of making the most of time. 'Forms' is the old northern English plural, frequent in Shakespeare. Cf. 'runs' in line 338.

V.ii.793. And by these badges understand the king. Badges are distinguishing marks. Berowne goes on to explain what they are; namely, the various evidences of the deep sincerity of the wooers' love.

V.ii.857. Hence ever then. The Folio reading. The Quarto has 'Hence herrite then,' which Professor Pollard ingeniously explains as 'Hence hermit then.'

V.ii.858–864. These six lines evidently come from the earlier version of the play. The expanded version is found in ll. 879–912. See note on IV.iii.313–317. Mr. Dover Wilson suggests that ll. 913, 914 originally followed 864, and that the whole passage 865–912 was interpolated in the revision, Dumaine being then given in l. 863 the line of Berowne (858) which the poet intended to delete along with Rosaline's original answer (859–864).

V.ii.878. The liker you; few taller are so young. Time in being long is the more like Longaville, who is 'long' both by name and by being tall for his age.

V.ii.935. This side is Hiems, Winter; this Ver, the Spring. The poetical argument between winter and spring was a famous subject of the mediæval debate. One version, entitled Conflictus Hiemis et Veris, is ascribed to the celebrated Alcuin (A.D. 735–804).

A Midsummer Night's Dream

Edited by
WILLARD HIGLEY DURHAM

Dramatis Personae

THESEUS, Duke of Athens
EGEUS, Father to Hermia
LYSANDER, DEMETRIUS } in love with Hermia
PHILOSTRATE, Master of the Revels to Theseus
QUINCE, a Carpenter
SNUG, a Joiner
BOTTOM, a Weaver
FLUTE, a Bellows-Mender
SNOUT, a Tinker
STARVELING, a Tailor
HIPPOLYTA, Queen of the Amazons, betrothed to Theseus
HERMIA, Daughter to Egeus, in love with Lysander
HELENA, in love with Demetrius

OBERON, King of the Fairies
TITANIA, Queen of the Fairies
PUCK, or Robin Goodfellow
PEASE-BLOSSOM
COBWEB, MOTH, MUSTARD-SEED } Fairies
OTHER FAIRIES ATTENDING THEIR KING AND QUEEN

ATTENDANTS ON THESEUS AND HIPPOLYTA

SCENE—Athens, and a Wood near it.

A Midsummer Night's Dream

Introduction

Sources of the Play

For A Midsummer Night's Dream, as for one other early play, Love's Labour's Lost, and another very late one, The Tempest, Shakespeare seems to have devised a plot with relative independence. At any rate, nothing has been found which may properly be called the 'source' of A Midsummer Night's Dream. The most that can be said is that there are resemblances of detail between this play and some earlier narratives.

None of these, however, are of any great importance. It is possible, for example, that in writing about Theseus and Hippolyta, Shakespeare had in mind Chaucer's Knight's Tale; for there too this 'Duke of Athens' and his bride 'do observance to a morn of May,' and there the name of Philostrate appears. Shakespeare knew also North's translation of Plutarch's Lives, which contains a 'Life of Theseus,' and he very probably borrowed some details from this. He could have read the story of Pyramus and Thisbe in several versions, such as that in Chaucer's Legend of Good Women, in Ovid's Metamorphoses, or in Golding's translation of Ovid (1565). It is barely possible that he derived the suggestion for Oberon's magic 'love-juice' from the Spanish Diana Enamorada by Jorge de Montemayor; but if he read an English translation, it must have been in manuscript, for none was published until 1598. He could have found accounts of Robin Goodfellow in several books, and he seems to have met the name Titania in Ovid, where it is applied to Diana; yet his conception of the fairies and of Bottom and the other 'hempen homespuns' is not derived from books, but from the traditions of the countryside, from his own observation of simple men, and from his own imagination.

The History of the Play

A Midsummer Night's Dream was first printed, in quarto, in 1600. A second quarto bears the same date on the title-page, but this was actually printed about 1619. The existence of the play some years before 1600 is proved by the fact that it is mentioned by Francis Meres in his Palladis Tamia, which was published in 1598. Those who seek to determine the date of composition more definitely than this are obliged to base their opinions upon internal evidence. Some critics see in Titania's speech about the confusion of the seasons (II. i. 90–116) a reference to the unusually cold, wet summer of 1594. Others, believing that the play was written to honor some great wedding, have attempted, without conspicuous success, to determine whose that wedding was. The result of these and other conjectures and of inferences drawn from the manner in which Shakespeare here handled his verse is that there is general agreement that the play was written not earlier than 1593 and not later than 1595.

In its original and complete form the play has been, until relatively recent years, among the less popular of Shakespeare's works, although in 1631 the Bishop of Lincoln got into trouble with the Puritans by allowing it to be performed—in whole or in part—at his house on a Sunday. An abridgment of the play with the title The Merry Conceited Humours of Bottom the Weaver was apparently acted in private during the period when the theaters were closed (1642–1660). Whether the performance which Pepys saw in 1662 and thought 'the most insipid ridiculous play that ever I saw in my life' was a representation of the play as Shakespeare wrote it is not certain, but in 1692 at any rate the original was displaced by an operatic version with music by Purcell, and from then until well on in the nineteenth century the records show only such perversions and adaptations as that produced by David Garrick in 1755, in which some very stupid songs replaced much of Shakespeare's text and in which the parts of Lysander and Hermia were given to Italian singers.

The credit for the restoration to the stage of something like the original play must be given to Tieck, a German translator of Shakespeare, who produced it at Berlin in 1827 with the incidental music by Mendelssohn which has since become famous. Some of the best performances of recent years have been given in Germany, notably the production by Max Reinhardt, which combined remarkable excellences with lapses of taste characteristically German.

In England and America productions reasonably faithful to the original text have been both frequent and popular since the performance by Mme. Vestris in 1840 at Covent Garden in London. The spectacular possibilities of the play and the popularity of Mendelssohn's music have so appealed to managers that the text has often been swamped in scenery and sound, but there must have been good acting in Augustin Daly's production (1888), when Theseus was played by Joseph Holland, Demetrius by John Drew, Lysander by Otis Skinner, and Helena by Ada Rehan. In 1903 the New Amsterdam Theater in New York was opened with a performance of the play characterized rather by lavish expenditure of money than by intelligence of acting or direction; at another revival in 1906, Miss Annie Russell attempted to play the part of Puck; and in 1915 Granville Barker offered to New York his London production, one which certainly displayed intelligence although its gilded fairies and its substitution of supposedly suggestive 'decorations' in place of realistic scenery aroused much hostile criticism.

Act First ❧ Scene First

[Athens. The Palace of Theseus]
Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, with [Philostrate and] others.

The. Now, fair Hippolyta, our nuptial hour
Draws on apace: four happy days bring in
Another moon; but O! methinks how slow
This old moon wanes; she lingers my desires,
Like to a step-dame, or a dowager
Long withering out a young man's revenue.
Hip. Four days will quickly steep themselves in night;
Four nights will quickly dream away the time;
And then the moon, like to a silver bow
New-bent in heaven, shall behold the night
Of our solemnities.
The. Go, Philostrate,
Stir up the Athenian youth to merriments;
Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth;
Turn melancholy forth to funerals;
The pale companion is not for our pomp. [Exit Philostrate.]
Hippolyta, I woo'd thee with my sword,
And won thy love doing thee injuries;
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pomp, with triumph, and with revelling.

Enter Egeus and his daughter Hermia, Lysander, and Demetrius.

Ege. Happy be Theseus, our renowned duke!
The. Thanks, good Egeus: what's the news with thee?
Ege. Full of vexation come I, with complaint
Against my child, my daughter Hermia.
Stand forth, Demetrius. My noble lord,
This man hath my consent to marry her.
Stand forth, Lysander: and, my gracious duke,
This man hath bewitch'd the bosom of my child:
Thou, thou, Lysander, thou hast given her rimes,
And interchang'd love-tokens with my child;
Thou hast by moonlight at her window sung,
With feigning voice, verses of feigning love;
And stol'n the impression of her fantasy
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gawds, conceits,
Knacks, trifles, nosegays, sweetmeats, messengers
Of strong prevailment in unharden'd youth;
With cunning hast thou filch'd my daughter's heart;
Turn'd her obedience, which is due to me,
To stubborn harshness. And, my gracious duke,
Be it so she will not here before your Grace
Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient privilege of Athens,
As she is mine, I may dispose of her;
Which shall be either to this gentleman,
Or to her death, according to our law
Immediately provided in that case.
The. What say you, Hermia? be advis'd, fair maid.
To you your father should be as a god;
One that compos'd your beauties, yea, and one
To whom you are but as a form in wax
By him imprinted, and within his power
To leave the figure or disfigure it.
Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.
Her. So is Lysander.
The. In himself he is;
But, in this kind, wanting your father's voice,
The other must be held the worthier.
Her. I would my father look'd but with my eyes.
The. Rather your eyes must with his judgment look.
Her. I do entreat your Grace to pardon me.
I know not by what power I am made bold,
Nor how it may concern my modesty
In such a presence here to plead my thoughts;
But I beseech your Grace that I may know
The worst that may befall me in this case,
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.
The. Either to die the death, or to abjure
For ever the society of men.
Therefore, fair Hermia, question your desires;
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether, if you yield not to your father's choice,
You can endure the livery of a nun,
For aye to be in shady cloister mew'd,
To live a barren sister all your life,
Chanting faint hymns to the cold fruitless moon.
Thrice blessed they that master so their blood,
To undergo such maiden pilgrimage;
But earthlier happy is the rose distill'd,
Than that which withering on the virgin thorn
Grows, lives, and dies, in single blessedness.
Her. So will I grow, so live, so die, my lord,
Ere I will yield my virgin patent up
Unto his lordship, whose unwished yoke
My soul consents not to give sovereignty.
The. Take time to pause; and, by the next new moon,—
The sealing-day betwixt my love and me
For everlasting bond of fellowship,—
Upon that day either prepare to die
For disobedience to your father's will,
Or else to wed Demetrius, as he would;
Or on Diana's altar to protest
For aye austerity and single life.
Dem. Relent, sweet Hermia; and Lysander, yield
Thy crazed title to my certain right.
Lys. You have her father's love, Demetrius;
Let me have Hermia's: do you marry him.
Ege. Scornful Lysander! true, he hath my love,
And what is mine my love shall render him;
And she is mine, and all my right of her
I do estate unto Demetrius.
Lys. I am, my lord, as well deriv'd as he,
As well possess'd; my love is more than his;
My fortunes every way as fairly rank'd,
If not with vantage, as Demetrius';
And, which is more than all these boasts can be,
I am belov'd of beauteous Hermia.
Why should not I then prosecute my right?
Demetrius, I'll avouch it to his head,

4 lingers: delays fulfillment of 5, 6 Cf. n. 14 pert: lively 16 pomp: ceremonial procession 20 triumph: festive entertainment 32 feigning: cf. n. 33 fantasy: imagination; cf. n. 34 gawds: gewgaws conceits: fancy articles 35 Knacks: knick-knacks 46 Immediately: expressly

52 disfigure: destroy 56 kind: respect, i.e., as husband 62 concern: befit 73 mew'd: shut up 77 pilgrimage: the journey of life 78 distill'd: reduced to essence 82 virgin patent: privilege of virginity 91 protest: vow 94 crazed: unsound 100 estate unto: bestow upon 102 possess'd: endowed

Made love to Nedar's daughter, Helena,
And won her soul; and she, sweet lady, dotes,
Devoutly dotes, dotes in idolatry,
Upon this spotted and inconstant man.
The. I must confess that I have heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought to have spoke thereof;
But, being over-full of self-affairs,
My mind did lose it. But, Demetrius, come;
And come, Egeus; you shall go with me,
I have some private schooling for you both.
For you, fair Hermia, look you arm yourself
To fit your fancies to your father's will,
Or else the law of Athens yields you up,
Which by no means we may extenuate,
To death, or to a vow of single life.
Come, my Hippolyta: what cheer, my love?
Demetrius and Egeus, go along:
I must employ you in some business
Against our nuptial, and confer with you
Of something nearly that concerns yourselves.
Ege. With duty and desire we follow you.

Exeunt. Manet Lysander and Hermia.

Lys. How now, my love! Why is your cheek so pale?
How chance the roses there do fade so fast?
Her. Belike for want of rain, which I could well
Beteem them from the tempest of mine eyes.
Lys. Ay me! for aught that ever I could read,
Could ever hear by tale or history,
The course of true love never did run smooth;
But, either it was different in blood,—
Her. O cross! too high to be enthrall'd to low.
Lys. Or else misgraffed in respect of years,—
Her. O spite! too old to be engag'd to young.
Lys. Or else it stood upon the choice of friends,—
Her. O hell! to choose love by another's eye.
Lys. Or, if there were a sympathy in choice,
War, death, or sickness did lay siege to it,
Making it momentany as a sound,
Swift as a shadow, short as any dream,
Brief as the lightning in the collied night,
That, in a spleen, unfolds both heaven and earth,
And ere a man hath power to say, 'Behold!'
The jaws of darkness do devour it up:
So quick bright things come to confusion.
Her. If then true lovers have been ever cross'd,
It stands as an edict in destiny:
Then let us teach our trial patience,
Because it is a customary cross,
As due to love as thoughts and dreams and sighs,
Wishes and tears, poor fancy's followers.
Lys. A good persuasion: therefore, hear me, Hermia.
I have a widow aunt, a dowager
Of great revenue, and she hath no child:
From Athens is her house remote seven leagues;
And she respects me as her only son.

115 self-affairs: my own concerns 127 Against: in preparation for 128 nearly that: that closely S. d. Manet: (i.e., manet) remain 133 Beteem: grant 139 misgraffed: badly matched 145 momentany: momentary 147 collied: blackened 148 spleen: sudden fit of passion 151 confusion: ruin 152 ever: always 157 fancy's: love's 162 respects: looks upon

There, gentle Hermia, may I marry thee,
And to that place the sharp Athenian law
Cannot pursue us. If thou lov'st me then,
Steal forth thy father's house to-morrow night,
And in the wood, a league without the town,
Where I did meet thee once with Helena,
To do observance to a morn of May,
There will I stay for thee.
Her. My good Lysander!
I swear to thee by Cupid's strongest bow,
By his best arrow with the golden head,
By the simplicity of Venus' doves,
By that which knitteth souls and prospers loves,
And by that fire which burn'd the Carthage queen,
When the false Troyan under sail was seen,
By all the vows that ever men have broke,—
In number more than ever women spoke,—
In that same place thou hast appointed me,
To-morrow truly will I meet with thee.
Lys. Keep promise, love. Look, here comes Helena.

Enter Helena.

Her. God speed fair Helena! Whither away?
Hel. Call you me fair? that fair again unsay.
Demetrius loves your fair: O happy fair!
Your eyes are lode-stars! and your tongue's sweet air
More tuneable than lark to shepherd's ear,
When wheat is green, when hawthorn buds appear.
Sickness is catching: O! were favour so,
Yours would I catch, fair Hermia, ere I go;
My ear should catch your voice, my eye your eye,
My tongue should catch your tongue's sweet melody.
Were the world mine, Demetrius being bated,
The rest I'll give to be to you translated.
O! teach me how you look, and with what art
You sway the motion of Demetrius' heart.
Her. I frown upon him, yet he loves me still.
Hel. O! that your frowns would teach my smiles such skill.
Her. I give him curses, yet he gives me love.
Hel. O! that my prayers could such affection move.
Her. The more I hate, the more he follows me.
Hel. The more I love, the more he hateth me.
Her. His folly, Helena, is no fault of mine.
Hel. None, but your beauty: would that fault were mine!
Her. Take comfort: he no more shall see my face;
Lysander and myself will fly this place.
Before the time I did Lysander see,
Seem'd Athens as a paradise to me:
O! then, what graces in my love do dwell,
That he hath turn'd a heaven unto a hell.
Lys. Helen, to you our minds we will unfold.
To-morrow night, when Phœbe doth behold
Her silver visage in the wat'ry glass,
Decking with liquid pearl the bladed grass,—
A time that lovers' flights doth still conceal,—
Through Athens' gates have we devis'd to steal.
Her. And in the wood, where often you and I

176 Carthage queen: Dido 177 Troyan: Æneas 183 fair: beauty 186 lode-stars: guiding-stars 187 tuneable: tuneful 189 favour: charm 193 bated: excepted 194 translated: transformed 209, 210 Cf. n. 212 Phœbe: the moon 215 still: always

Upon faint primrose-beds were wont to lie,
Emptying our bosoms of their counsel sweet,
There my Lysander and myself shall meet;
And thence from Athens turn away our eyes,
To seek new friends and stranger companies.
Farewell, sweet playfellow: pray thou for us;
And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius!
Keep word, Lysander: we must starve our sight
From lovers' food till morrow deep midnight.

Exit Hermia.

Lys. I will, my Hermia.—Helena, adieu:
As you on him, Demetrius dote on you! Exit Lysander.

Hel. How happy some o'er other some can be!
Through Athens I am thought as fair as she;
But what of that? Demetrius thinks not so;
He will not know what all but he do know;
And as he errs, doting on Hermia's eyes,
So I, admiring of his qualities.
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpose to form and dignity.
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind,
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind.
Nor hath Love's mind of any judgment taste;
Wings and no eyes figure unheedy haste:
And therefore is Love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguil'd.
As waggish boys in game themselves forswear,
So the boy Love is perjur'd everywhere;
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia's eyne,
He hail'd down oaths that he was only mine;
And when this hail some heat from Hermia felt,
So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths did melt.
I will go tell him of fair Hermia's flight:
Then to the wood will he to-morrow night
Pursue her; and for this intelligence
If I have thanks, it is a dear expense:
But herein mean I do enrich my pain,
To have his sight thither and back again. Exit.

Scene Second

[A Room in Quince's House]

Enter Quince the Carpenter, Snug the Joiner, Bottom the Weaver, Flute the Bellows-mender, Snout the Tinker, and Starveling the Tailor.

Quin. Is all our company here?

Bot. You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the scrip.

Quin. Here is the scroll of every man's name, which is thought fit, through all Athens, to play in our interlude before the duke and the duchess on his wedding-day at night.

Bot. First, good Peter Quince, say what the play treats on; then read the names of the actors, and so grow to a point.

Quin. Marry, our play is, The most lamentable comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisby.

Bot. A very good piece of work, I assure you, and a merry. Now, good Peter Quince, call forth your actors by the scroll. Masters, spread yourselves.

Quin. Answer as I call you. Nick Bottom, the weaver.

Bot. Ready. Name what part I am for, and proceed.

Quin. You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Pyramus.

Bot. What is Pyramus? a lover, or a tyrant?

Quin. A lover, that kills himself most gallantly for love.

Bot. That will ask some tears in the true performing of it: if I do it, let the audience look to their eyes; I will move storms, I will condole in some measure. To the rest: yet my chief humour is for a tyrant. I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to tear a cat in, to make all split.

'The raging rocks
And shivering shocks
Shall break the locks
Of prison gates:
And Phibbus' car
Shall shine from far
And make and mar
The foolish Fates.'

This was lofty! Now name the rest of the players. This is Ercles' vein, a tyrant's vein; a lover is more condoling.

Quin. Francis Flute, the bellows-mender.

Flu. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You must take Thisby on you.

Flu. What is Thisby? a wandering knight?

Quin. It is the lady that Pyramus must love.

Flu. Nay, faith, let not me play a woman; I have a beard coming.

Quin. That's all one: you shall play it in a mask, and you may speak as small as you will.

Bot. An I may hide my face, let me play Thisby too. I'll speak in a monstrous little voice, 'Thisne, Thisne!' 'Ah, Pyramus, my lover dear; thy Thisby dear, and lady dear!'

Quin. No, no; you must play Pyramus; and Flute, you Thisby.

Bot. Well, proceed.

Quin. Robin Starveling, the tailor.

Star. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. Robin Starveling, you must play Thisby's mother. Tom Snout, the tinker.

Snout. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You, Pyramus's father; myself, Thisby's father; Snug, the joiner, you the lion's part: and, I hope, here is a play fitted.

Snug. Have you the lion's part written? pray you, if it be, give it me, for I am slow of study.

Quin. You may do it extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let me play the lion too. I will roar, that I will do any man's heart good to hear me; I will roar, that I will make the duke say, 'Let him roar again, let him roar again.'

Quin. An you should do it too terribly, you would fright the duchess and the ladies, that they would shriek; and that were enough to hang us all.

All. That would hang us, every mother's son.

218 faint: pale (?), faintly perfumed (?) 219 counsel: inmost thought 235, 236 Cf. n. 243 game: jest 245 eyne: eyes 251 intelligence: information 252 dear expense: cf. n. 2 generally: cf. n. 3 scrip: written paper 9 Marry: an oath from the name of the Virgin Mary

22 Ercles: Hercules 23 tear a cat: rant 28 Phibbus': Phœbus', the sun-god's 43 An: if 44 Thisne: cf. n.

Bot. I grant you, friends, if that you should fright the ladies out of their wits, they would have no more discretion but to hang us; but I will aggravate my voice so that I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove; I will roar you an 'twere any nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus; for Pyramus is a sweet-faced man; a proper man, as one shall see in a summer's day; a most lovely, gentleman-like man; therefore, you must needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What beard were I best to play it in?

Quin. Why, what you will.

Bot. I will discharge it in either your straw-colour beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, or your French-crown colour beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French crowns have no hair at all, and then you will play bare-faced. But masters, here are your parts; and I am to entreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to-morrow night, and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the town, by moonlight: there will we rehearse; for if we meet in the city, we shall be dogged with company, and our devices known. In the meantime I will draw a bill of properties, such as our play wants. I pray you, fail me not.

Bot. We will meet; and there we may rehearse more obscenely and courageously. Take pains; be perfect; adieu.

Quin. At the duke's oak we meet.

Bot. Enough; hold, or cut bow-strings. Exeunt.

ACT SECOND ❧ SCENE FIRST

[A Wood near Athens]

Enter a Fairy at one door, and Robin Goodfellow at another.

Puck. How now, spirit! whither wander you?

Fai. Over hill, over dale,
Thorough bush, thorough brier,
Over park, over pale,
Thorough flood, thorough fire,
I do wander everywhere,
Swifter than the moon's sphere;
And I serve the fairy queen,
To dew her orbs upon the green:
The cowslips tall her pensioners be;
In their gold coats spots you see;
Those be rubies, fairy favours,
In their freckles live their savours:
I must go seek some dew-drops here,
And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.
Farewell, thou lob of spirits: I'll be gone;
Our queen and all her elves come here anon.

Puck. The king doth keep his revels here to-night.
Take heed the queen come not within his sight;
For Oberon is passing fell and wrath,
Because that she as her attendant hath
A lovely boy, stol'n from an Indian king;
She never had so sweet a changeling;
And jealous Oberon would have the child
Knight of his train, to trace the forests wild;
But she, perforce, withholds the loved boy,
Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her joy.
And now they never meet in grove, or green,
By fountain clear, or spangled starlight sheen,
But they do square; that all their elves, for fear,
Creep into acorn-cups and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mistake your shape and making quite,
Or else you are that shrewd and knavish sprite
Call'd Robin Goodfellow: are you not be
That frights the maidens of the villagery;
Skim milk, and sometimes labour in the quern,
And bootless make the breathless housewife churn;
And sometime make the drink to bear no barm;
Mislead night wanderers, laughing at their harm?
Those that Hobgoblin call you and sweet Puck,
You do their work, and they shall have good luck:
Are you not he?

Puck. Fairy, thou speak'st aright;
I am that merry wanderer of the night.
I jest to Oberon, and make him smile
When I a fat and bean-fed horse beguile,
Neighing in likeness of a filly foal:
And sometime lurk I in a gossip's bowl,
In very likeness of a roasted crab;
And, when she drinks, against her lips I bob
And on her wither'd dewlap pour the ale.
The wisest aunt, telling the saddest tale,
Sometime for three-foot stool mistaketh me;
Then slip I from her bum, down topples she,
And 'tailor' cries, and falls into a cough;
And then the whole quire hold their hips and laugh;
And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and swear
A merrier hour was never wasted there.
But, room, fairy! here comes Oberon.

Fai. And here my mistress. Would that he were gone!

Enter the King of Fairies [Oberon] at one door with his train; and the Queen [Titania] at another with hers.

Obe. Ill met by moonlight, proud Titania.

Tita. What! jealous Oberon. Fairies, skip hence:
I have forsworn his bed and company.

Obe. Tarry, rash wanton! am not I thy lord?

Tita. Then, I must be thy lady; but I know
When thou hast stol'n away from fairy land
And in the shape of Corin sat all day,
Playing on pipes of corn, and versing love
To amorous Phillida. Why art thou here,
Come from the furthest steep of India?

71 an 'twere: as if it were 74 proper: fine, handsome 80 discharge: perform 81 purple-in-grain: fast-dyed Purple 82 French-crown colour: color of a gold coin 86 con: learn by heart 90 bill: list 95 Cf. n. SCENE ONE S. d at one door; cf. n. Robin Goodfellow; cf. n. 3 Thorough: through 4 pale: fence 7 moon's sphere; cf. n. 9 orbs; cf. n. 10 pensioners; cf. n. 12 favours: love-tokens 16 lob: bumpkin 17 anon: presently

20 passing fell: exceedingly angry wrath: wroth 23 changeling; cf. n 25 trace: traverse 29 sheen: bright 30 square: quarrel that: so that 32 making: form 33 shrewd: malicious, mischievous 36 quern: hand-mill for grinding grain 37 bootless: fruitlessly 38 barm: froth 48 gossip's bowl; cf. n. 49 crab: crab-apple 52 saddest: soberest 55 tailor; cf. n. 56 quire: company 57 waxen: increase neeze: sneeze 68 Corin; cf. n. 69 versing love: making love-verses 71 steep: mountain range

But that, forsooth, the bouncing Amazon,
Your buskin'd mistress and your warrior love,
To Theseus must be wedded, and you come
To give their bed joy and prosperity.
Obe. How canst thou thus for shame, Titania,
Glance at my credit with Hippolyta,
Knowing I know thy love to Theseus?
Didst thou not lead him through the glimmering night
From Perigenia, whom he ravished?
And make him with fair Ægle break his faith,
With Ariadne, and Antiopa?
Tita. These are the forgeries of jealousy:
And never, since the middle summer's spring,
Met we on hill, in dale, forest, or mead,
By paved fountain, or by rushy brook,
Or in the beached margent of the sea,
To dance our ringlets to the whistling wind,
But with thy brawls thou hast disturb'd our sport.
Therefore the winds, piping to us in vain,
As in revenge, have suck'd up from the sea
Contagious fogs; which, falling in the land,
Hath every pelting river made so proud
That they have overborne their continents:
The ox hath therefore stretch'd his yoke in vain,
The ploughman lost his sweat, and the green corn
Hath rotted ere his youth attain'd a beard:
The fold stands empty in the drowned field,
And crows are fatted with the murrion flock;
The nine men's morris is fill'd up with mud,
And the quaint mazes in the wanton green
For lack of tread are undistinguishable:
The human mortals want their winter here:
No night is now with hymn or carol blest:
Therefore the moon, the governess of floods,
Pale in her anger, washes all the air,
That rheumatic diseases do abound:
And thorough this distemperature we see
The seasons alter: hoary-headed frosts
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose,
And on old Hiems' thin and icy crown
An odorous chaplet of sweet summer buds
Is, as in mockery, set. The spring, the summer,
The childing autumn, angry winter, change
Their wonted liveries, and the mazed world,
By their increase, now knows not which is which.
And this same progeny of evil comes
From our debate, from our dissension:
We are their parents and original.
Obe. Do you amend it then; it lies in you.
Why should Titania cross her Oberon?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my henchman.
Tita. Set your heart at rest;

73 buskin'd: wearing a buskin, a high-heeled hunter's boot 77 Glance: hint maliciously 80 Perigenia; cf. n. 81, 82 Ægle . . . Antiopa; cf. n. 83 forgeries: idle inventions 84 spring: beginning 86 paved fountain: spring with pebble-covered bottom 87 margent: margin 88 ringlets: circular dances 92 Contagious: noxious 93 pelting: petty 94 continents: boundaries 99 murrion: diseased 100 nine men's morris; cf. n. 101 wanton: luxuriant 103–105 Cf. n. 107 rheumatic diseased: colds, etc. 108 distemperature: disorder of the winds and moon (?), ill humor (?) 111 Hiems': winter's 114 chiding: fruitful 115 mazed: bewildered 116 increase: produce 123 henchman: page of honor

The fairy land buys not the child of me.
His mother was a votaress of my order:
And, in the spiced Indian air, by night,
Full often hath she gossip'd by my side,
And sat with me on Neptune's yellow sands,
Marking the embarked traders on the flood;
When we have laugh'd to see the sails conceive
And grow big-bellied with the wanton wind;
Which she, with pretty and with swimming gait
Following,—her womb then rich with my young squire,—
Would imitate, and sail upon the land,
To fetch me trifles, and return again,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandise.
But she, being mortal, of that boy did die;
And for her sake I do rear up her boy,
And for her sake I will not part with him.
Obe. How long within this wood intend you stay?
Tita. Perchance, till after Theseus' wedding-day.
If you will patiently dance in our round,
And see our moonlight revels, go with us;
If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.
Obe. Give me that boy, and I will go with thee.
Tita. Not for thy fairy kingdom. Fairies, away!
We shall chide downright, if I longer stay.
Exeunt [Titania and her train].
Obe. Well, go thy way: thou shalt not from this grove
Till I torment thee for this injury.
My gentle Puck, come hither. Thou remember'st
Since once I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid on a dolphin's back
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude sea grew civil at her song,
And certain stars shot madly from their spheres
To hear the sea-maid's music.
Puck. I remember.
Obe. That very time I saw, but thou couldst not,
Flying between the cold moon and the earth,
Cupid all arm'd: a certain aim he took
At a fair vestal throned by the west,
And loos'd his love-shaft smartly from his bow,
As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts;
But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft
Quench'd in the chaste beams of the wat'ry moon,
And the imperial votaress passed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free.
Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell:
It fell upon a little western flower,
Before milk-white, now purple with love's wound,
And maidens call it Love-in-idleness.
Fetch me that flower; the herb I show'd thee once:
The juice of it on sleeping eyelids laid
Will make or man or woman madly dote
Upon the next live creature that it sees.
Fetch me this herb; and be thou here again
Ere the leviathan can swim a league.
Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes. Exit.
Obe. Having once this juice,

126 votaress: woman under vows 148 chide: quarrel 150 injury: affront 151–173 Cf. n. 152 Since: when 172 Love-in-idleness: the pansy 175 or . . . or: either . . . or 178 leviathan: whale

I'll watch Titania when she is asleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes:
The next thing then she waking looks upon,
Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull,
On meddling monkey, or on busy ape,
She shall pursue it with the soul of love:
And ere I take this charm off from her sight,
As I can take it with another herb,
I'll make her render up her page to me.
But who comes here? I am invisible,
And I will overhear their conference.

Enter Demetrius, Helena following him.

Dem. I love thee not, therefore pursue me not.
Where is Lysander and fair Hermia?
The one I'll slay, the other slayeth me.
Thou told'st me they were stol'n into this wood;
And here am I, and wood within this wood,
Because I cannot meet my Hermia.
Hence! get thee gone, and follow me no more.
Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted adamant:
But yet you draw not iron, not my heart
Is true as steel: leave you your power to draw,
And I shall have no power to follow you.
Dem. Do I entice you? Do I speak you fair?
Or, rather, do I not in plainest truth
Tell you I do not nor I cannot love you?
Hel. And even for that do I love you the more.
I am your spaniel; and, Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawn on you:
Use me but as your spaniel, spurn me, strike me,
Neglect me, lose me; only give me leave,
Unworthy as I am, to follow you.
What worser place can I beg in your love,
And yet a place of high respect with me,
Than to be used as you use your dog?
Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit,
For I am sick when I do look on you.
Hel. And I am sick when I look not on you.
Dem. You do impeach your modesty too much,
To leave the city, and commit yourself
Into the hands of one that loves you not;
To trust the opportunity of night
And the ill counsel of a desert place
With the rich worth of your virginity.
Hel. Your virtue is my privilege: for that
It is not night when I do see your face,
Therefore I think I am not in the night;
Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company,
For you in my respect are all the world:
Then how can it be said I am alone,
When all the world is here to look on me?
Dem. I'll run from thee and hide me in the brakes,
And leave thee to the mercy of wild beasts.
Hel. The wildest hath not such a heart as you.
Run when you will, the story shall be chang'd;
Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase;
The dove pursues the griffin; the mild hind
Makes speed to catch the tiger: bootless speed,
When cowardice pursues and valour flies.
Dem. I will not stay thy questions: let me go;
Or, if thou follow me, do not believe
But I shall do thee mischief in the wood.
Hel. Ay, in the temple, in the town, the field,
You do me mischief. Fie, Demetrius!
Your wrongs do set a scandal on my sex.
We cannot fight for love, as men may do;
We should be woo'd and were not made to woo.
[Exit Demetrius.]
I'll follow thee and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon the hand I love so well. Exit.
Obe. Fare thee well, nymph: ere he do leave this grove,
Thou shalt fly him, and he shall seek thy love.

Enter Puck.

Hast thou the flower there? Welcome, wanderer.
Puck. Ay, there it is.
Obe. I pray thee, give it me.
I know a bank where the wild thyme blows,
Where oxlips and the nodding violet grows
Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine,
With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine:
There sleeps Titania some time of the night,
Lull'd in these flowers with dances and delight;
And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin,
Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in:
And with the juice of this I'll streak her eyes,
And make her full of hateful fantasies.
Take thou some of it, and seek through this grove:
A sweet Athenian lady is in love
With a disdainful youth: anoint his eyes;
But do it when the next thing he espies
May be the lady. Thou shalt know the man
By the Athenian garments he hath on.
Effect it with some care, that he may prove
More fond of her than she upon her love.
And look thou meet me ere the first cock crow.
Puck. Fear not, my lord, your servant shall do so. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Another Part of the Wood]
Enter Queen of Fairies, with her train.

Tita. Come, now a roundel and a fairy song;
Then, for the third part of a minute, hence;
Some to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds,
Some war with rere-mice for their leathern wings,
To make my small elves coats, and some keep back
The clamorous owl, that nightly hoots, and wonders
At our quaint spirits. Sing me now asleep;
Then to your offices, and let me rest.

197 wood ... wood: mad ... wood 200 adamant: hard stone with magnetic power 219 impeach: call in question 225 for that: because 229 respect: regard 232 brakes: thickets 236 Cf. n.

237 griffin: fabulous monster, half lion, half eagle 240 stay ... questions: listen to thy talk 255 blows: blooms 258 eglantine: sweetbriar 262 Weed: garment 263 streak: stroke 1 roundel: dance in a circle 4 rere-mice: bats 7 quaint: pretty, dainty 8 offices: duties

Fairies sing.

I.

'You spotted snakes with double tongue,
Thorny hedge-hogs, be not seen;
Newts, and blind-worms, do no wrong;
Come not near our fairy queen.'

'Philomel, with melody,
Sing in our sweet lullaby;
Lulla, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla, lullaby:
Never harm,
Nor spell, nor charm,
Come our lovely lady nigh;
So, good night, with lullaby.'

II.

'Weaving spiders come not here;
Hence, you long-legg'd spinners, hence!
Beetles black, approach not near;
Worm nor snail, do no offence.

Philomel, with melody, &c.'

Fai. Hence, away! now all is well.
One aloof stand sentinel. She sleeps. [Exeunt Fairies.]

Enter Oberon [and squeezes the flower on Titania's eyelids].

Obe. What thou seest when thou dost wake,
Do it for thy true-love take;
Love and languish for his sake:
Be it ounce, or cat, or bear,
Pard, or boar with bristled hair,
In thy eye that shall appear
When thou wak'st, it is thy dear.
Wake when some vile thing is near. [Exit.]

Enter Lysander and Hermia.

Lys. Fair love, you faint with wandering in the wood;
And to speak troth, I have forgot our way:
We'll rest us, Hermia, if you think it good,
And tarry for the comfort of the day.
Her. Be it so, Lysander: find you out a bed,
For I upon this bank will rest my head.
Lys. One turf shall serve as pillow for us both;
One heart, one bed, two bosoms, and one troth.
Her. Nay, good Lysander; for my sake, my dear,
Lie further off yet, do not lie so near.
Lys. O! take the sense, sweet, of my innocence,
Love takes the meaning in love's conference.
I mean that my heart unto yours is knit,
So that but one heart we can make of it;
Two bosoms interchained with an oath;
So then two bosoms and a single troth.
Then by your side no bed-room me deny,
For, lying so, Hermia, I do not lie.
Her. Lysander riddles very prettily:
Now much beshrew my manners and my pride,
If Hermia meant to say Lysander lied.
But, gentle friend, for love and courtesy
Lie further off; in human modesty,
Such separation as may well be said
Becomes a virtuous bachelor and a maid,
So far be distant; and, good night, sweet friend.
Thy love ne'er alter till thy sweet life end!
Lys. Amen, amen, to that fair prayer, say I;
And then end life when I end loyalty!
[Retires a little distance.]
Here is my bed: sleep give thee all his rest!
Her. With half that wish the wisher's eyes be press'd!
They sleep.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Through the forest have I gone,
But Athenian found I none,
On whose eyes I might approve
This flower's force in stirring love.
Night and silence! who is here?
Weeds of Athens he doth wear:
This is he, my master said,
Despised the Athenian maid:
And here the maiden, sleeping sound,
On the dank and dirty ground.
Pretty soul! she durst not lie
Near this lack-love, this kill-courtesy.
Churl, upon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charm doth owe.
When thou wak'st, let love forbid
Sleep his seat on thy eyelid:
So awake when I am gone;
For I must now to Oberon. Exit.

Enter Demetrius and Helena, running.

Hel. Stay, though thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.
Dem. I charge thee, hence, and do not haunt me thus.
Hel. O! wilt thou darkling leave me? do not so.
Dem. Stay, on thy peril: I alone will go.
Exit Demetrius.
Hel. O! I am out of breath in this fond chase.
The more my prayer, the lesser is my grace.
Happy is Hermia, wheresoe'er she lies;
For she hath blessed and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with salt tears:
If so, my eyes are oftener wash'd than hers.
No, no, I am as ugly as a bear;
For beasts that meet me run away for fear;
Therefore no marvel though Demetrius
Do, as a monster, fly my presence thus.
What wicked and dissembling glass of mine
Made me compare with Hermia's sphery eyne?
But who is here? Lysander! on the ground!
Dead? or asleep? I see no blood, no wound.
Lysander, if you live, good sir, awake.
Lys. [Awaking.] And run through fire I will for thy sweet sake.

15 Philomel: the nightingale 33 ounce: lynx cat: wildcat 34 Pard: leopard 39 troth: truth 57 beshrew: 'mischief on'

71 approve: test 82 owe: possess 89 darkling: in the dark 91 fond: foolish; also, loving 92 grace: good fortune 102 sphery: starry

Transparent Helena! Nature shows art,
That through thy bosom makes me see thy heart.
Where is Demetrius? O! how fit a word
Is that vile name to perish on my sword.
Hel. Do not say so, Lysander; say not so.
What though he love your Hermia? Lord! what though?
Yet Hermia still loves you: then be content.
Lys. Content with Hermia! No: I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her have spent.
Not Hermia, but Helena I love:
Who will not change a raven for a dove?
The will of man is by his reason sway'd,
And reason says you are the worthier maid.
Things growing are not ripe until their season;
So I, being young, till now ripe not to reason;
And touching now the point of human skill,
Reason becomes the marshal to my will,
And leads me to your eyes; where I o'erlook
Love's stories written in love's richest book.
Hel. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?
When at your hands did I deserve this scorn?
Is 't not enough, is 't not enough, young man,
That I did never, no, nor never can,
Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius' eye,
But you must flout my insufficiency?
Good troth, you do me wrong, good sooth, you do,
In such disdainful manner me to woo.
But fare you well: perforce I must confess
I thought you lord of more true gentleness.
O! that a lady of one man refus'd,
Should of another therefore be abus'd. Exit.
Lys. She sees not Hermia. Hermia, sleep thou there;
And never mayst thou come Lysander near.
For, as a surfeit of the sweetest things
The deepest loathing to the stomach brings;
Or, as the heresies that men do leave
Are hated most of those they did deceive:
So thou, my surfeit and my heresy,
Of all he hated, but the most of me!
And, all my powers, address your love and might
To honour Helen, and to be her knight. Exit.
Her. [Awaking.] Help me, Lysander, help me! do thy best
To pluck this crawling serpent from my breast.
Ay me, for pity! what a dream was here!
Lysander, look how I do quake with fear:
Methought a serpent eat my heart away,
And you sat smiling at his cruel prey.
Lysander! what! remov'd?—Lysander! lord!
What! out of hearing? gone? no sound, no word?
Alack! where are you? speak, an if you hear;
Speak, of all loves! I swound almost with fear.
No! then I well perceive you are not nigh:
Either death or you I'll find immediately. Exit.

123 point: summit 155 prey: preying 159 of: for the sake of swound: swoon

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

[The Wood. Titania lying asleep]
Enter the Clowns [Quince, Snug, Bottom, Flute, Snout, and Starveling].

Bot. Are we all met?
Quin. Pat, pat; and here's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal. This green plot shall be our stage, this hawthornbrake our tiring-house; and we will do it in action as we will do it before the duke.
Bot. Peter Quince,—
Quin. What sayst thou, bully Bottom?
Bot. There are things in this comedy of Pyramus and Thisby that will never please. First, Pyramus must draw a sword to kill himself, which the ladies cannot abide. How answer you that?
Snout. By 'r lakin, a parlous fear.
Star. I believe we must leave the killing out, when all is done.
Bot. Not a whit: I have a device to make all well. Write me a prologue; and let the prologue seem to say, we will do no harm with our swords, and that Pyramus is not killed indeed; and, for the more better assurance, tell them that I, Pyramus, am not Pyramus, but Bottom the weaver: this will put them out of fear.
Quin. Well, we will have such a prologue, and it shall be written in eight and six.
Bot. No, make it two more: let it be written in eight and eight.
Snout. Will not the ladies be afeard of the lion?
Star. I fear it, I promise you.
Bot. Masters, you ought to consider with yourselves: to bring in,—God shield us!—a lion among ladies, is a most dreadful thing; for there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lion living, and we ought to look to it.
Snout. Therefore, another prologue must tell he is not a lion.
Bot. Nay, you must name his name, and half his face must be seen through the lion's neck; and he himself must speak through, saying thus, or to the same defect, 'Ladies,' or 'Fair ladies,' 'I would wish you,' or, 'I would request you,' or, 'I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a lion, it were pity of my life: no, I am no such thing: I am a man as other men are'; and there indeed let him name his name, and tell them plainly he is Snug the joiner.
Quin. Well, it shall be so. But there is two hard things, that is, to bring the moonlight into a chamber; for you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by moonlight.
Snug. Doth the moon shine that night we play our play?
Bot. A calendar, a calendar! look in the almanac; find out moonshine, find out moonshine.
Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.
Bot. Why, then may you leave a casement of the great chamber-window, where we play, open; and the moon may shine in at the casement.

SCENE ONE S. d. Clowns: men of the lower class; also, comedians 4 tiring-house: dressing-room 7 bully: a friendly term equivalent to 'good old' 12 By 'r lakin By Our Lady parlous: perilous 22 eight and six: alternate verses of eight and six syllables

Quin. Ay; or else one must come in with a bush of thorns and a lantern, and say he comes to disfigure, or to present, the person of Moonshine. Then, there is another thing: we must have a wall in the great chamber; for Pyramus and Thisby, says the story, did talk through the chink of a wall.

Snug. You can never bring in a wall. What say you, Bottom?

Bot. Some man or other must present Wall; and let him have some plaster, or some loam, or some rough-cast about him, to signify wall; and let him hold his fingers thus, and through that cranny shall Pyramus and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit down, every mother's son, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus, you begin: when you have spoken your speech, enter into that brake; and so every one according to his cue.

Enter Robin [behind].

Puck. What hempen home-spuns have we swaggering here,
So near the cradle of the fairy queen?
What! a play toward; I'll be an auditor;
An actor too perhaps, if I see cause.

Quin. Speak, Pyramus.—Thisby, stand forth.

Bot. Thisby, the flowers of odious savours sweet,—

Quin. Odorous, odorous.

Bot. —odours savours sweet:
So hath thy breath, my dearest Thisby dear.
But hark, a voice! stay thou but here awhile,
And by and by I will to thee appear.— Exit.

Puck. —A stranger Pyramus than e'er play'd here! [Exit.]

Flu. Must I speak now?

Quin. Ay, marry, must you; for you must understand, he goes but to see a noise that he heard, and is to come again.

Flu. Most radiant Pyramus, most lily-white of hue,
Of colour like the red rose on triumphant brier,
Most brisky juvenal, and eke most lovely Jew,
As true as truest horse that yet would never tire,
I'll meet thee, Pyramus, at Ninny's tomb.

Quin. 'Ninus' tomb,' man. Why, you must not speak that yet; that you answer to Pyramus: you speak all your part at once, cues and all. Pyramus, enter: your cue is past; it is 'never tire.'

Flu. O!—As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire.

[Enter Puck, and Bottom with an ass's head.]

Bot. If I were fair, Thisby, I were only thine.

Quin. O monstrous! O strange! we are haunted.
Pray, masters! fly, masters!—Help!

The Clowns all exeunt.

Puck. I'll follow you, I'll lead you about a round,
Through bog, through bush, through brake, through brier:
Sometime a horse I'll be, sometime a hound,
A hog, a headless bear, sometime a fire;
And neigh, and bark, and grunt, and roar, and burn,
Like horse, hound, hog, bear, fire, at every turn. Exit.

Bot. Why do they run away? this is a knavery of them to make me afeard.

Enter Snout.

Snout. O Bottom, thou art changed! what do I see on thee?

Bot. What do you see? you see an ass-head of your own, do you? [Exit Snout.]

Enter Peter Quince.

Quin. Bless thee, Bottom! bless thee! thou are translated. Exit.

Bot. I see their knavery: this is to make an ass of me; to fright me, if they could. But I will not stir from this place, do what they can: I will walk up and down here, and I will sing, that they shall hear I am not afraid.

'The ousel-cock, so black of hue,
With orange-tawny bill,
The throstle with his note so true,
The wren with little quill.'

Tita. [Awakening.] What angel wakes me from my flowery bed?

Bot. 'The finch, the sparrow, and the lark,
The plain-song cuckoo gray,
Whose note full many a man doth mark,
And dares not answer, nay;'

for indeed, who would set this wit to so foolish a bird? who would give a bird the lie, though he cry 'cuckoo' never so?

Tita. I pray thee, gentle mortal, sing again:
Mine ear is much enamour'd of thy note;
So is mine eye enthralled to thy shape;
And thy fair virtue's force, perforce, doth move me,
On the first view, to say, to swear, I love thee.

Bot. Methinks, mistress, you should have little reason for that: and yet, to say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days. The more the pity, that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleek upon occasion.

Tita. Thou art as wise as thou art beautiful.

Bot. Not so, neither; but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to serve mine own turn.

Tita. Out of this wood do not desire to go:
Thou shalt remain here, whether thou wilt or no.
I am a spirit of no common rate;
The summer still doth tend upon my state;
And I do love thee: therefore, go with me;
I'll give thee fairies to attend on thee,
And they shall fetch thee jewels from the deep,
And sing, while thou on pressed flowers dost sleep:
And I will purge thy mortal grossness so
That thou shalt like an airy spirit go.
Pease-blossom! Cobweb! Moth! and Mustard-seed!

Enter four Fairies.

Peas. Ready.

Cob. And I.

Moth. And I.

Mus. And I.

All Four. Where shall we go?

Tita. Be kind and courteous to this gentleman;
Hop in his walks, and gambol in his eyes;

52 bush of thorns; cf. n. 67 hempen home-spuns: rude fellows 69 toward: in preparation 84 juvenal: an affected word for 'youth' eke: also 100 fire: will o' the wisp 104, 105 you . . . own; cf. n. 112 ousel-cock: male blackbird 115 quill: note 118 plain-song; cf. n. 132 gleek: jest 146 Moth; cf. n.

Feed him with apricocks and dewberries,
With purple grapes, green figs, and mulberries.
The honey-bags steal from the humble-bees,
And for night-tapers crop their waxen thighs,
And light them at the fiery glow-worm's eyes,
To have my love to bed, and to arise;
And pluck the wings from painted butterflies
To fan the moonbeams from his sleeping eyes:
Nod to him, elves, and do him courtesies.

Peas. Hail, mortal!

Cob. Hail!

Moth. Hail!

Mus. Hail!

Bot. I cry your worships mercy, heartily: I beseech your worship's name.

Cob. Cobweb.

Bot. I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good Master Cobweb: if I cut my finger, I shall make bold with you. Your name, honest gentleman?

Peas. Pease-blossom.

Bot. I pray you, commend me to Mistress Squash, your mother, and to Master Peascod, your father. Good Master Pease-blossom, I shall desire you of more acquaintance too. Your name, I beseech you, sir?

Mus. Mustard-seed.

Bot. Good Master Mustard-seed, I know your patience well: that same cowardly, giant-like ox-beef hath devoured many a gentleman of your house. I promise you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I desire you of more acquaintance, good Master Mustard-seed.

Tita. Come, wait upon him; lead him to my bower.
The moon, methinks, looks with a watery eye;
And when she weeps, weeps every little flower,
Lamenting some enforced chastity.
Tie up my love's tongue, bring him silently. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Another Part of the Wood]
Enter King of Fairies, solus.

Obe. I wonder if Titania be awak'd;
Then, what it was that next came in her eye,
Which she must dote on in extremity.

Enter Puck.

Here comes my messenger.
How now, mad spirit!
What night-rule now about this haunted grove?

Puck. My mistress with a monster is in love.
Near to her close and consecrated bower,
While she was in her dull and sleeping hour,
A crew of patches, rude mechanicals,
That work for bread upon Athenian stalls,
Were met together to rehearse a play
Intended for great Theseus' nuptial day.
The shallowest thick-skin of that barren sort,
Who Pyramus presented in their sport,
Forsook his scene, and enter'd in a brake:
When I did him at this advantage take,
An ass's nowl I fixed on his head:
Anon his Thisbe must be answered,
And forth my mimick comes. When they him spy,
As wild geese that the creeping fowler eye,
Or russet-pated choughs, many in sort,
Rising and cawing at the gun's report,
Sever themselves, and madly sweep the sky;
So, at his sight, away his fellows fly,
And, at our stamp, here o'er and o'er one falls;
He murder cries, and help from Athens calls.
Their sense thus weak, lost with their fears thus strong,
Made senseless things begin to do them wrong;
For briers and thorns at their apparel snatch;
Some sleeves, some hats, from yielders all things catch.
I led them on in this distracted fear,
And left sweet Pyramus translated there;
When in that moment, so it came to pass,
Titania wak'd and straightway lov'd an ass.

Obe. This falls out better than I could devise.
But hast thou yet latch'd the Athenian's eyes
With the love-juice, as I did bid thee do?

Puck. I took him sleeping,—that is finish'd too,—
And the Athenian woman by his side;
That, when he wak'd, of force she must be ey'd.

Enter Demetrius and Hermia.

Obe. Stand close: this is the same Athenian.

Puck. This is the woman; but not this the man.

Dem. O! why rebuke you him that loves you so?
Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.

Her. Now I but chide; but I should use thee worse,
For thou, I fear, hast given me cause to curse.
If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep,
Being o'er shoes in blood, plunge in the deep,
And kill me too.
The sun was not so true unto the day
As he to me. Would he have stol'n away
From sleeping Hermia? I'll believe as soon
This whole earth may be bor'd, and that the moon
May through the centre creep, and so displease
Her brother's noontide with the Antipodes.
It cannot be but thou hast murder'd him;
So should a murderer look, so dead, so grim.

Dem. So should the murder'd look, and so should I,
Pierc'd through the heart with your stern cruelty;
Yet you, the murderer, look as bright, as clear,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering sphere.

Her. What's this to my Lysander? where is he?
Ah! good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me?

Dem. I had rather give his carcass to my hounds.

Her. Out, dog! out, cur! thou driv'st me past the bounds
Of maiden's patience. Hast thou slain him then?

167 cry . . . mercy: beg . . . pardon 174 Squash: unripe peapod 175 Peascod: peapod 187 enforced: violated 6 night-rule: diversion of the nigh: haunted: much frequented 8 close: secret 10 patches: clowns, fools mechanicals: workingmen

14 barren sort: dull company 18 nowl: noddle, pate 22 russet-pated: grey-headed choughs: jackdaws 26 our stamp: cf. n. 37 latch'd: moistened (?). 41 force: necessity 56 with: among

Henceforth he never number'd among men!
O! once tell true, tell true, e'en for my sake;
Durst thou have look'd upon him being awake,
And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brave touch!
Could not a worm, an adder, do so much?
An adder did it; for with doubler tongue
Than thine, thou serpent, never adder stung.
Dem. You spend your passion on a mispris'd mood:
I am not guilty of Lysander's blood,
Nor is he dead, for aught that I can tell.
Her. I pray thee, tell me then that he is well.
Dem. An if I could, what should I get therefore?
Her. A privilege never to see me more.
And from thy hated presence part I so;
See me no more, whether he be dead or no. Exit.
Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vein:
Here therefore for awhile I will remain.
So sorrow's heaviness doth heavier grow
For debt that bankrupt sleep doth sorrow owe;
Which now in some slight measure it will pay,
If for this tender here I make some stay. Lie down.
Obe. What hast thou done? thou hast mistaken quite,
And laid the love-juice on some true-love's sight:
Of thy misprision must perforce ensue
Some true-love turn'd, and not a false turn'd true.
Puck. Then fate o'er-rules, that, one man holding troth,
A million fail, confounding oath on oath.
Obe. About the wood go swifter than the wind,
And Helena of Athens look thou find:
All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer
With sighs of love, that costs the fresh blood dear.
By some illusion see thou bring her here:
I'll charm his eyes against she do appear.
Puck. I go, I go; look how I go;
Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow. Exit.
Obe. Flower of this purple dye,
Hit with Cupid's archery,
Sink in apple of his eye.
When his love he doth espy,
Let her shine as gloriously
As the Venus of the sky.
When thou wak'st, if she be by,
Beg of her for remedy.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Captain of our fairy band,
Helena is here at hand,
And the youth, mistook by me,
Pleading for a lover's fee.
Shall we their fond pageant see?
Lord, what fools these mortals be!
Obe. Stand aside: the noise they make
Will cause Demetrius to awake.
Puck. Then will two at once woo one;
That must needs be sport alone;
And those things do best please me
That befall preposterously.

Enter Lysander and Helena.

Lys. Why should you think that I should woo in scorn?
Scorn and derision never come in tears:
Look, when I vow, I weep; and vows so born,
In their nativity all truth appears.
How can these things in me seem scorn to you,
Bearing the badge of faith to prove them true?
Hel. You do advance your cunning more and more.
When truth kills truth, O devilish-holy fray!
These vows are Hermia's: will you give her o'er?
Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh:
Your vows, to her and me, put in two scales,
Will even weigh, and both as light as tales.
Lys. I had no judgment when to her I swore.
Hel. Nor none, in my mind, now you give her o'er.
Lys. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not you.
Dem. [Awaking.] O Helen! goddess, nymph, perfect, divine!
To what, my love, shall I compare thine eyne?
Crystal is muddy. O! how ripe in show
Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow;
This pure congealed white, high Taurus' snow,
Fann'd with the eastern wind, turns to a crow
When thou hold'st up thy hand. O! let me kiss
This princess of pure white, this seal of bliss.
Hel. O spite! O hell! I see you all are bent
To set against me for your merriment:
If you were civil and knew courtesy,
You would not do me thus much injury.
Can you not hate me, as I know you do,
But you must join in souls to mock me too?
If you were men, as men you are in show,
You would not use a gentle lady so;
To vow, and swear, and superpraise my parts,
When I am sure you hate me with your hearts.
You both are rivals, and love Hermia,
And now both rivals, to mock Helena:
A trim exploit, a manly enterprise,
To conjure tears up in a poor maid's eyes
With your derision! none of noble sort
Would so offend a virgin, and extort
A poor soul's patience, all to make you sport.
Lys. You are unkind, Demetrius; be not so;
For you love Hermia; this you know I know:
And here, with all good will, with all my heart,
In Hermia's love I yield you up my part:
And yours of Helena to me bequeath,
Whom I do love, and will do to my death.
Hel. Never did mockers waste more idle breath.
Dem. Lysander, keep thy Hermia; I will none:
If e'er I lov'd her, all that love is gone.
My heart to her but as guest-wise sojourn'd,
And now to Helen it is home return'd,
There to remain.
Lys. Helen, it is not so.
Dem. Disparage not the faith thou dost not know,
Lest to thy peril thou aby it dear.
Look! where thy love comes: yonder is thy dear.

71 touch: exploit 72 worm: snake 75 on a mispris'd mood: in a mistaken anger (?) 88 tender: offer 91 misprision: mistake 97 cheer: face 98 costs . . . dear; cf. n. 100 against: in expectation of the time when 120 alone: having no equal

126 By their birth appear wholly true 130 Cf. n. 143 Taurus': lofty mountain range in Asiatic Turkey 159 trim: fine 162 extort: wrest away 178 aby: pay a penalty for

Enter Hermia.

Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes,
The ear more quick of apprehension makes;
Wherein it doth impair the seeing sense,
It pays the hearing double recompense.
Thou art not by mine eye, Lysander, found;
Mine ear, I thank it, brought me to thy sound.
But why unkindly didst thou leave me so?
Lys. Why should he stay, whom love doth press to go?
Her. What love could press Lysander from my side?
Lys. Lysander's love, that would not let him bide,
Fair Helena, who more engilds the night
Than all yon fiery oes and eyes of light.
Why seek'st thou me? could not this make thee know,
The hate I bare thee made me leave thee so?
Her. You speak not as you think: it cannot be.
Hel. Lo! she is one of this confederacy.
Now I perceive they have conjoin'd all three
To fashion this false sport in spite of me.
Injurious Hermia! most ungrateful maid!
Have you conspir'd, have you with these contriv'd
To bait me with this foul derision?
Is all the counsel that we two have shar'd,
The sisters' vows, the hours that we have spent,
When we have chid the hasty-footed time
For parting us, O! is all forgot?
All school-days' friendship, childhood innocence?
We, Hermia, like two artificial gods,
Have with our needles created both one flower,
Both on one sampler, sitting on one cushion,
Both warbling of one song, both in one key,
As if our hands, our sides, voices, and minds,
Had been incorporate. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted,
But yet an union in partition;
Two lovely berries moulded on one stem;
So, with two seeming bodies, but one heart;
Two of the first, like coats in heraldry,
Due but to one, and crowned with one crest.
And will you rent our ancient love asunder,
To join with men in scorning your poor friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly:
Our sex, as well as I, may chide you for it,
Though I alone do feel the injury.
Her. I am amazed at your passionate words.
I scorn you not: it seems that you scorn me.
Hel. Have you not set Lysander, as in scorn,
To follow me and praise my eyes and face,
And made your other love, Demetrius,—
Who even but now did spurn me with his foot,—
To call me goddess, nymph, divine and rare,
Precious, celestial? Wherefore speaks he this
To her he hates? and wherefore doth Lysander
Deny your love, so rich within his soul,
And tender me, forsooth, affection,
But by your setting on, by your consent?
What though I be not so in grace as you,
So hung upon with love, so fortunate,
But miserable most, to love unlov'd?
This you should pity rather than despise.
Her. I understand not what you mean by this.
Hel. Ay, do, persever, counterfeit sad looks,
Make mouths upon me when I turn my back;
Wink each at other; hold the sweet jest up:
This sport, well carried, shall be chronicled.
If you have any pity, grace, or manners,
You would not make me such an argument.
But, fare ye well: 'tis partly mine own fault,
Which death or absence soon shall remedy.
Lys. Stay, gentle Helena! hear my excuse:
My love, my life, my soul, fair Helena!
Hel. O excellent!
Her. Sweet, do not scorn her so.
Dem. If she cannot entreat, I can compel.
Lys. Thou canst compel no more than she entreat:
Thy threats have no more strength than her weak prayers.
Helen, I love thee; by my life, I do:
I swear by that which I will lose for thee,
To prove him false that says I love thee not.
Dem. I say I love thee more than he can do.
Lys. If thou say so, withdraw, and prove it too.
Dem. Quick, come!
Her. Lysander, whereto tends all this?
Lys. Away, you Ethiop!
Dem. No, no, he'll . . .
Seem to break loose; take on, as you would follow,
But yet come not: you are a tame man, go!
Lys. [To Hermia.] Hang off, thou cat, thou burr! vile thing, let loose,
Or I will shake thee from me like a serpent.
Her. Why are you grown so rude? what change is this?
Sweet love,—
Lys. Thy love! out, tawny Tartar, out!
Out, loathed medicine! hated potion, hence!
Her. Do you not jest?
Hel. Yes, sooth; and so do you.
Lys. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.
Dem. I would I had your bond, for I perceive
A weak bond holds you: I'll not trust your word.
Lys. What! should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead?
Although I hate her, I'll not harm her so.
Her. What! can you do me greater harm than hate?
Hate me! wherefore? O me! what news, my love?
Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lysander?
I am as fair now as I was erewhile.
Since night you lov'd me; yet, since night you left me:
Why, then you left me,—O, the gods forbid!—
In earnest, shall I say?
Lys. Ay, by my life;
And never did desire to see thee more.
Therefore be out of hope, of question, doubt;
Be certain, nothing truer: 'tis no jest,
That I do hate thee and love Helena.
Her. O me! you juggler! you canker-blossom!
You thief of love! what! have you come by night

191 oes: small circular spangles; also, o's 197 spite: contempt 198 Injurious: insulting 206 artificial: skilled in constructive art 214 lovely: loving 216, 217 Cf. n. 218 rent: rend

240 sad: serious 242 hold . . . up: carry . . . on 245 argument: subject (of merriment) 263 Cf. n. 292 canker-blossom: worm that destroys the blossom

And stol'n my love's heart from him?
Hel. Fine, i' faith!
Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,
No touch of bashfulness? What! will you tear
Impatient answers from my gentle tongue?
Fie, fie! you counterfeit, you puppet you!
Her. Puppet! why, so: ay, that way goes the game.
Now I perceive that she hath made compare
Between our statures: she hath urg'd her height;
And with her personage, her tall personage,
Her height, forsooth, she hath prevail'd with him.
And are you grown so high in his esteem,
Because I am so dwarfish and so low?
How low am I, thou painted maypole? speak;
How low am I? I am not yet so low
But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.
Hel. I pray you, though you mock me, gentlemen,
Let her not hurt me: I was never curst;
I have no gift at all in shrewishness;
I am a right maid for my cowardice:
Let her not strike me. You perhaps may think,
Because she is something lower than myself,
That I can match her.
Her. Lower! hark, again.
Hel. Good Hermia, do not be so bitter with me.
I evermore did love you, Hermia,
Did ever keep your counsels, never wrong'd you;
Save that, in love unto Demetrius,
I told him of your stealth unto this wood.
He follow'd you; for love I follow'd him;
But he hath chid me hence, and threaten'd me
To strike me, spurn me, nay, to kill me too:
And now, so you will let me quiet go,
To Athens will I bear my folly back,
And follow you no further: let me go:
You see how simple and how fond I am.
Her. Why, get you gone. Who is 't that hinders you?
Hel. A foolish heart, that I leave here behind.
Her. What! with Lysander?
Hel. With Demetrius.
Lys. Be not afraid: she shall not harm thee, Helena.
Dem. No, sir; she shall not, though you take her part.
Hel. O! when she's angry, she is keen and shrewd.
She was a vixen when she went to school:
And though she be but little, she is fierce.
Her. 'Little' again! nothing but 'low' and 'little'!
Why will you suffer her to flout me thus?
Let me come to her.
Lys. Get you gone, you dwarf;
You minimus, of hindering knot-grass made;
You bead, you acorn!
Dem. You are too officious
In her behalf that scorns your services.
Let her alone; speak not to Helena;
Take not her part, for, if thou dost intend
Never so little show of love to her,
Thou shalt aby it.
Lys. Now she holds me not;
Now follow, if thou dar'st, to try whose right,
Or thine or mine, is most in Helena.
Dem. Follow! nay, I'll go with thee, check by jole.
Exeunt Lysander and Demetrius.
Her. You, mistress, all this coil is long of you:
Nay, go not back.
Hel. I will not trust you, I,
Nor longer stay in your curst company.
Your hands than mine are quicker for a fray,
My legs are longer though, to run away. [Exit.]
Her. I am amaz'd, and know not what to say. [Exit.]
Obe. This is thy negligence: still thou mistak'st,
Or else commit'st thy knaveries wilfully.
Puck. Believe me, king of shadows, I mistook.
Did not you tell me I should know the man
By the Athenian garments he had on?
And so far blameless proves my enterprise,
That I have 'nointed an Athenian's eyes;
And so far am I glad it so did sort,
As this their jangling I esteem a sport.
Obe. Thou see'st these lovers seek a place to fight:
Hie therefore, Robin, overcast the night;
The starry welkin cover thou anon
With drooping fog as black as Acheron;
And lead these testy rivals so astray,
As one come not within another's way.
Like to Lysander sometime frame thy tongue,
Then stir Demetrius up with bitter wrong;
And sometime rail thou like Demetrius;
And from each other look thou lead them thus,
Till o'er their brows death-counterfeiting sleep
With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep:
Then crush this herb into Lysander's eye;
Whose liquor hath this virtuous property,
To take from thence all error with his might,
And make his eyeballs roll with wonted sight.
When they next wake, all this derision
Shall seem a dream and fruitless vision;
And back to Athens shall the lovers wend,
With league whose date till death shall never end.
Whiles I in this affair do thee employ,
I'll to my queen and beg her Indian boy;
And then I will her charmed eye release
From monster's view, and all things shall be peace.
Puck. My fairy lord, this must be done with haste,
For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast,
And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger;
At whose approach, ghosts, wandering here and there,
Troop home to churchyards: damned spirits all,
That in cross-ways and floods have burial,
Already to their wormy beds are gone;
For fear lest day should look their shames upon,
They wilfully themselves exile from light,
And must for aye consort with black-brow'd night.
Obe. But we are spirits of another sort.
I with the morning's love have oft made sport;
And, like a forester, the groves may tread,
Even till the eastern gate, all fiery-red,

303 personage: figure 311 curst: savage 313 right: real 315 something: somewhat 343 minimus: diminutive creature hindering knot-grass; cf. n. 348 intend: pretend

354 jole: jaw 355 coil: turmoil long of: because of 369 sort: turn out 374 Acheron: one of the rivers of Hades 378 wrong: insult 384 virtuous: powerful 385 with his might: by its efficacy 406 the morning's love; cf. n.

Opening on Neptune, with fair blessed beams
Turns into yellow gold his salt green streams.
But, notwithstanding, haste; make no delay:
We may effect this business yet ere day. [Exit Oberon.]
Puck. Up and down, up and down;
I will lead them up and down:
I am fear'd in field and town;
Goblin, lead them up and down.
Here comes one.

Enter Lysander.

Lys. Where art thou, proud Demetrius? speak thou now.
Puck. Here, villain! drawn and ready. Where art thou?
Lys. I will be with thee straight.
Puck. Follow me, then,
To plainer ground. [Exit Lysander as following the voice.]

Enter Demetrius.

Dem. Lysander! speak again.
Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled?
Speak! In some bush? Where dost thou hide thy head?
Puck. Thou coward! art thou bragging to the stars,
Telling the bushes that thou look'st for wars,
And wilt not come? Come, recreant; come, thou child;
I'll whip thee with a rod: he is defil'd
That draws a sword on thee.
Dem. Yea, art thou there?
Puck. Follow my voice: we'll try no manhood here.
Exeunt.

[Enter Lysander.]

Lys. He goes before me and still dares me on:
When I come where he calls, then he is gone.
The villain is much lighter-heel'd than I:
I follow'd fast, but faster he did fly;
That fallen am I in dark uneven way,
And here will rest me. Lie down.
Come, thou gentle day!
For if but once thou show me thy grey light,
I'll find Demetrius and revenge this spite. [Sleeps.]

Enter Robin and Demetrius.

Puck. Ho! ho! ho! Coward, why com'st thou not?
Dem. Abide me, if thou dar'st; for well I wot
Thou runn'st before me, shifting every place,
And dar'st not stand, nor look me in the face.
Where art thou now?
Puck. Come hither: I am here.
Dem. Nay then, thou mock'st me. Thou shalt buy this dear,
If ever I thy face by daylight see:
Now, go thy way. Faintness constraineth me
To measure out my length on this cold bed:
By day's approach look to be visited.
[Lies down and sleeps.]

Enter Helena.

Hel. O weary night! O long and tedious night,
Abate thy hours! shine, comforts, from the east!
That I may back to Athens by daylight,
From these that my poor company detest:
And sleep, that sometimes shuts up sorrow's eye,
Steal me awhile from mine own company. Sleep.
Puck. Yet but three? Come one more;
Two of both kinds make up four.
Here she comes, curst and sad:
Cupid is a knavish lad,
Thus to make poor females mad.

Enter Hermia.

Her. Never so weary, never so in woe,
Bedabbled with the dew and torn with briers,
I can no further crawl, no further go;
My legs can keep no pace with my desires.
Here will I rest me till the break of day.
Heavens shield Lysander, if they mean a fray!
[Lies down and sleeps.]
Puck. On the ground
Sleep sound:
I'll apply
To your eye,
Gentle lover, remedy.
[Squeezing the juice on Lysander's eyes.]
When thou wak'st,
Thou tak'st
True delight
In the sight
Of thy former lady's eye:
And the country proverb known,
That every man should take his own,
In your waking shall be shown:
Jack shall have Jill;
Nought shall go ill;
The man shall have his mare again,
And all shall be well. [Exit Puck.]
They sleep all the Act.

Act Fourth ❧ Scene First

[The Same]
Enter Queen of Fairies and Clown and Fairies, and the King behind them [unseen].

Tita. Come, sit thee down upon this flowery bed,
While I thy amiable cheeks do coy,
And stick musk-roses in thy sleek smooth head,
And kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy.
Bot. Where's Pease-blossom?
Peas. Ready.
Bot. Scratch my head, Pease-blossom. Where's Mounsieur Cobweb?
Cob. Ready.
Bot. Mounsieur Cobweb, good mounsieur, get your weapons in your hand, and kill me a red-hipped humble-bee on the top of a thistle; and, good mounsieur, bring me the honey-bag. Do not fret yourself too much in the action, mounsieur; and, good mounsieur, have a care the honey-bag break not; I would be loath to have you overflown with a honey-bag, signior. Where's Mounsieur Mustard-seed?

419 drawn: with drawn sword 454 Abate: shorten

S. d. Act: intermission 2 amiable: lovely coy: caress

Must. Ready.
Bot. Give me your neaf, Mounsieur Mustard-seed. Pray you, leave your courtesy, good mounsieur.
Must. What's your will?
Bot. Nothing, good mounsieur, but to help Cavalery Cobweb to scratch. I must to the barber's, mounsieur, for methinks I am marvelous hairy about the face; and I am such a tender ass, if my hair do but tickle me, I must scratch.
Tita. What, wilt thou hear some music, my sweet love?
Bot. I have a reasonable good ear in music: let us have the tongs and the bones.
Tita. Or say, sweet love, what thou desir'st to eat.
Bot. Truly, a peck of provender: I could munch your good dry oats. Methinks I have a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow.
Tita. I have a venturous fairy that shall seek
The squirrel's hoard, and fetch thee thence new nuts.
Bot. I had rather have a handful or two of dried pease. But, I pray you, let none of your people stir me. I have an exposition of sleep come upon me.
Tita. Sleep thou, and I will wind thee in my arms.
Fairies, be gone, and be all ways away. [Exeunt Fairies.]
So doth the woodbine the sweet honeysuckle
Gently entwist; the female ivy so
Enrings the barky fingers of the elm.
O! how I love thee; how I dote on thee! [They sleep.]

Enter Robin Goodfellow.

Obe. [Advancing.] Welcome, good Robin.
See'st thou this sweet sight?
Her dotage now I do begin to pity:
For, meeting her of late behind the wood,
Seeking sweet favours for this hateful fool,
I did upbraid her and fall out with her;
For she his hairy temples then had rounded
With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers;
And that same dew, which sometime on the buds
Was wont to swell like round and orient pearls,
Stood now within the pretty flowerets' eyes
Like tears that did their own disgrace bewail.
When I had at my pleasure taunted her,
And she in mild terms begg'd my patience,
I then did ask of her her changeling child;
Which straight she gave me, and her fairy sent
To bear him to my bower in fairy land.
And now I have the boy, I will undo
This hateful imperfection of her eyes:
And, gentle Puck, take this transformed scalp
From off the head of this Athenian swain,
That, he awaking when the other do,
May all to Athens back again repair,
And think no more of this night's accidents
But as the fierce vexation of a dream.
But first I will release the fairy queen.
[Touching her eyes with an herb.]
Be as thou wast wont to be;
See as thou wast wont to see:
Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower
Hath such force and blessed power.

Now, my Titania; wake you, my sweet queen.
Tita. My Oberon! what visions have I seen!
Methought I was enamour'd of an ass.
Obe. There lies your love.
Tita. How came these things to pass?
O! how mine eyes do loathe his visage now.
Obe. Silence a while. Robin, take off this head.
Titania, music call; and strike more dead
Than common sleep of all these five the sense.
Tita. Music, ho! music! such as charmeth sleep.
Music, still.
Puck. When thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes peep.
Obe. Sound, music! Come, my queen, take hands with me,
And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be.
Now thou and I are new in amity,
And will to-morrow midnight solemnly
Dance in Duke Theseus' house triumphantly,
And bless it to all fair prosperity.
There shall the pairs of faithful lovers be
Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.
Puck. Fairy king, attend, and mark:
I do hear the morning lark.
Obe. Then, my queen, in silence sad,
Trip we after the night's shade;
We the globe can compass soon,
Swifter than the wandering moon.
Tita. Come, my lord; and in our flight
Tell me how it came this night
That I sleeping here was found
With these mortals on the ground.
Sleepers lie still. Exeunt [Fairies]. Wind Horns.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus, and all his train.

The. Go, one of you, find out the forester;
For now our observation is perform'd;
And since we have the vaward of the day,
My love shall hear the music of my hounds.
Uncouple in the western valley; let them go:
Dispatch, I say, and find the forester.
We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top,
And mark the musical confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.
Hip. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
When in a word of Crete they bay'd the bear
With hounds of Sparta: never did I hear
Such gallant chiding; for, besides the groves,
The skies, the fountains, every region near
Seem'd all one mutual cry. I never heard
So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.
The. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind,
So flew'd, so sanded; and their heads are hung
With ears that sweep away the morning dew;

18 neaf: fist 19 leave your courtesy: omit formality 21 Cavalery: i.e., cavalier 28 the tongs and the bones: rude musical instruments 31 bottle: bundle 48 favours: flowers as gifts 53 orient: lustrous 65 other: others 66 repair: return 68 fierce: extravagant

S. d. cf. n. 89 triumphantly: festively S. d. Wind: blow 104 observation: observance of the rites of May Day 105 vaward: early part 107 Uncouple: unleash them 108 Dispatch: make haste 113 bay'd: brought to bay 115 chiding: noise (of hounds) 120 flew'd: having large chaps sanded: of a sandy color

Crook-knee'd, and dew-lapp'd like Thessalian bulls;
Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like bells,
Each under each. A cry more tuneable
Was never holla'd to, nor cheer'd with horn,
In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly:
Judge, when you hear. But, soft! what nymphs are these?
Ege. My lord, this is my daughter here asleep;
And this, Lysander; this Demetrius is;
This Helena, old Nedar's Helena:
I wonder of their being here together.
The. No doubt they rose up early to observe
The rite of May, and, hearing our intent,
Came here in grace of our solemnity.
But speak, Egeus, is not this the day
That Hermia should give answer of her choice?
Ege. It is, my lord.
The. Go, bid the huntsmen wake them with their horns.
Horns and they wake. Shout within. They all start up.
Good morrow, friends. Saint Valentine is past:
Begin these wood-birds but to couple now?
Lys. Pardon, my lord.
The. I pray you all, stand up.
I know you two are rival enemies:
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is so far from jealousy,
To sleep by hate, and fear no enmity?
Lys. My lord, I shall reply amazedly,
Half asleep, half waking: but as yet, I swear,
I cannot truly say how I came here;
But, as I think,—for truly would I speak,
And now I do bethink me, so it is,—
I came with Hermia hither: our intent
Was to be gone from Athens, where we might,
Without the peril of the Athenian law—
Ege. Enough, enough, my lord; you have enough:
I beg the law, the law, upon his head.
They would have stol'n away; they would, Demetrius,
Thereby to have defeated you and me;
You of your wife, and me of my consent,
Of my consent that she should be your wife.
Dem. My lord, fair Helen told me of their stealth,
Of this their purpose hither, to this wood;
And I in fury hither follow'd them,
Fair Helena in fancy following me.
But, my good lord, I wot not by what power,—
But by some power it is,—my love to Hermia,
Melted as the snow, seems to me now
As the remembrance of an idle gawd
Which in my childhood I did dote upon;
And all the faith, the virtue of my heart,
The object and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is only Helena. To her, my lord,
Was I betroth'd ere I saw Hermia:
But, like a sickness, did I loathe this food;
But, as in health, come to my natural taste,
Now do I wish it, love it, long for it,
And will for evermore be true to it.

The. Fair lovers, you are fortunately met:
Of this discourse we more will hear anon.
Egeus, I will overbear your will,
For in the temple, by and by, with us,
These couples shall eternally be knit:
And, for the morning now is something worn,
Our purpos'd hunting shall be set aside.
Away with us, to Athens: three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnity.
Come, Hippolyta. Exit Duke [with Hippolyta] and Lords.
Dem. These things seem small and undistinguishable,
Like far-off mountains turned into clouds.
Her. Methinks I see these things with parted eye,
When everything seems double.
Hel. So methinks:
And I have found Demetrius, like a jewel,
Mine own, and not mine own.
Dem. Are you sure
That we are awake? It seems to me
That yet we sleep, we dream. Do you not think
The duke was here, and bid us follow him?
Her. Yea: and my father.
Hel. And Hippolyta.
Lys. And he did bid us follow to the temple.
Dem. Why then, we are awake. Let's follow him;
And by the way let us recount our dreams. Exeunt Lovers.

Bottom wakes.

Bot. When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer: my next is, 'Most fair Pyramus.' Heigh-ho! Peter Quince! Flute, the bellows-mender! Snout, the tinker! Starveling! God's my life! stolen hence, and left me asleep! I have had a most rare vision. I have had a dream, past the wit of man to say what dream it was: man is but an ass, if he go about to expound this dream. Methought I was—there is no man can tell what. Methought I was,—and methought I had, —but man is but a patched fool, if he will offer to say what methought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not seen, man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report, what my dream was. I will get Peter Quince to write a ballad of this dream: it shall be called Bottom's Dream, because it hath no bottom; and I will sing it in the latter end of a play, before the duke: peradventure, to make it the more gracious, I shall sing it at her death. Exit.

Scene Second

[A Room in Quince's House]
Enter Quince, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.

Quin. Have you sent to Bottom's house? is he come home yet?
Star. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt he is transported.
Flu. If he come not, then the play is marred: it goes not forward, doth it?

123 mouth: voice bells: i.e., a chime of bells 127 soft: stop 134 in grace of: i.e., to grace 139 Saint Valentine: cf. n. 145 jealousy: suspicion 154 Without: beyond

190 parted eye: i.e., the two eyes not in focus 193, 194 Cf. n. 212 patched: motley 220 gracious: acceptable at her death: cf. n. 4 transported: transformed (?)

Quin. It is not possible: you have not a man in all Athens able to discharge Pyramus but he.

Flu. No; he hath simply the best wit of any handicraft man in Athens.

Quin. Yea, and the best person too; and he is a very paramour for a sweet voice.

Flu. You must say, 'paragon': a paramour is, God bless us! a thing of naught.

Enter Snug the Joiner.

Snug. Masters, the duke is coming from the temple, and there is two or three lords and ladies more married: if our sport had gone forward, we had all been made men.

Flu. O sweet bully Bottom! Thus hath he lost sixpence a day during his life; he could not have 'scaped sixpence a day: an the duke had not given him sixpence a day for playing Pyramus, I'll be hanged; he would have deserved it: sixpence a day in Pyramus, or nothing.

Enter Bottom.

Bot. Where are these lads? where are these hearts?

Quin. Bottom! O most courageous day! O most happy hour!

Bot. Masters, I am to discourse wonders: but ask me not what; for if I tell you, I am no true Athenian. I will tell you everything, right as it fell out.

Quin. Let us hear, sweet Bottom.

Bot. Not a word of me. All that I will tell you is, that the duke hath dined. Get your apparel together, good strings to your beards, new ribbons to your pumps; meet presently at the palace; every man look o'er his part; for the short and the long is, our play is preferred. In any case, let Thisby have clean linen; and let not him that plays the lion pare his nails, for they shall hang out for the lion's claws. And, most dear actors, eat no onions nor garlic, for we are to utter sweet breath, and I do not doubt but to hear them say, it is a sweet comedy. No more words: away! go; away! Exeunt.

ACT FIFTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

[The Palace of Theseus]
Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, [Philostrate,] and Lords.

Hip. 'Tis strange, my Theseus, that these lovers speak of.

The. More strange than true. I never may believe
These antic fables, nor these fairy toys.
Lovers and madmen have such seething brains,
Such shaping fantasies, that apprehend
More than cool reason ever comprehends.
The lunatic, the lover, and the poet,
Are of imagination all compact:
One sees more devils than vast hell can hold,
That is the madman; the lover, all as frantic,
Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt:
The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven;
And, as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen
Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing
A local habitation and a name.
Such tricks hath strong imagination,
That, if it would but apprehend some joy,
It comprehends some bringer of that joy;
Or in the night, imagining some fear,
How easy is a bush suppos'd a bear!

Hip. But all the story of the night told over,
And all their minds transfigur'd so together,
More witnesseth than fancy's images,
And grows to something of great constancy,
But, howsoever, strange and admirable.

Enter lovers, Lysander, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena.

The. Here come the lovers, full of joy and mirth.
Joy, gentle friends! joy, and fresh days of love
Accompany your hearts!

Lys. More than to us
Wait in your royal walks, your board, your bed!

The. Come now; what masques, what dances shall we have,
To wear away this long age of three hours
Between our after-supper and bed-time?
Where is our usual manager of mirth?
What revels are in hand? Is there no play,
To ease the anguish of a torturing hour?
Call Philostrate.

Philost. Here, mighty Theseus.

The. Say, what abridgment have you for this evening?
What masque? what music? How shall we beguile
The lazy time, if not with some delight?

Philost. There is a brief how many sports are ripe;
Make choice of which your highness will see first.

[Gives a paper.]

The. 'The battle with the Centaurs, to be sung
By an Athenian eunuch to the harp.'
We'll none of that: that have I told my love,
In glory of my kinsman Hercules.
'The riot of the tipsy Bacchanals,
Tearing the Thracian singer in their rage.'
That is an old device; and it was play'd
When I from Thebes came last a conqueror.
'The thrice three Muses mourning for the death
Of Learning, late deceas'd in beggary.'
That is some satire keen and critical,
Not sorting with a nuptial ceremony.
'A tedious brief scene of young Pyramus
And his love Thisbe; very tragical mirth.'
Merry and tragical! tedious and brief!
That is, hot ice and wondrous strange snow.
How shall we find the concord of this discord?

Philost. A play there is, my lord, some ten words long,
Which is as brief as I have known a play;

14 a thing of naught: something wicked 23 hearts: good fellows 33 preferred: accepted (?), offered for acceptance (by the duke) (?) 3 antic: fantastic toys: trifling tales 5 apprehend: perceive 8 compact: composed 11 Helen: Helen of Troy brow of Egypt: gypsy's face

19, 20 Cf. n. 25 More witnesseth: is evidence of more 26 constancy: consistency 27 admirable: to be wondered at 35 after-supper: dessert 41 abridgment: pastime 51 Thracian singer: Orpheus 52 device: something devised for dramatic representation 56 critical: censorious 57 sorting with: befitting

But by ten words, my lord, it is too long,
Which makes it tedious; for in all the play
There is not one word apt, one player fitted.
And tragical, my noble lord, it is;
For Pyramus therein doth kill himself.
Which when I saw rehears'd, I must confess,
Made mine eyes water; but more merry tears
The passion of loud laughter never shed.

The. What are they that do play it?

Philost. Hard-handed men, that work in Athens here,
Which never labour'd in their minds till now,
And now have toil'd their unbreath'd memories
With this same play, against your nuptial.

The. And we will hear it.

Philost. No, my noble lord;
It is not for you: I have heard it over,
And it is nothing, nothing in the world;
Unless you can find sport in their intents,
Extremely stretch'd and conn'd with cruel pain,
To do you service.

The. I will hear that play;
For never anything can be amiss,
When simpleness and duty tender it.
Go, bring them in: and take your places, ladies.

[Exit Philostrate.]

Hip. I love not to see wretchedness o'er-charg'd,
And duty in his service perishing.

The. Why, gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing.

Hip. He says they can do nothing in this kind.

The. The kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing.
Our sport shall be to take what they mistake:
And what poor duty cannot do, noble respect
Takes it in might, not merit.
Where I have come, great clerks have purposed
To greet me with premeditated welcomes;
Where I have seen them shiver and look pale,
Make periods in the midst of sentences,
Throttle their practis'd accent in their fears,
And, in conclusion, dumbly have broke off,
Not paying me a welcome. Trust me, sweet,
Out of this silence yet I pick'd a welcome;
And in the modesty of fearful duty
I read as much as from the rattling tongue
Of saucy and audacious eloquence.
Love, therefore, and tongue-tied simplicity
In least speak most, to my capacity.

[Enter Philostrate.]

Philost. So please your Grace, the Prologue is address'd.

The. Let him approach. Flour[ish of] Trum[pets].

Enter the Prologue (Quince).

Prol. If we offend, it is with our good will.
That you should think, we come not to offend,
But with good will. To show our simple skill,
That is the true beginning of our end.
Consider then we come but in despite.
We do not come as minding to content you,
Our true intent is. All for your delight,
We are not here. That you should here repent you,
The actors are at hand; and, by their show,
You shall know all that you are like to know.

The. This fellow doth not stand upon points.

Lys. He hath rid his prologue like a rough colt; he knows not the stop. A good moral, my lord: it is not enough to speak, but to speak true.

Hip. Indeed he hath played on his prologue like a child on a recorder; a sound, but not in government.

The. His speech was like a tangled chain; nothing impaired, but all disordered. Who is next?

Enter Pyramus and Thisbe, Wall, Moonshine, and Lion, Tawyer with a trumpet before them.

Prol. Gentles, perchance you wonder at this show;
But wonder on, till truth make all things plain.
This man is Pyramus, if you would know;
This beauteous lady Thisby is, certain.
This man, with lime and rough-cast, doth present
Wall, that vile Wall which did these lovers sunder;
And through Wall's chink, poor souls, they are content
To whisper, at the which let no man wonder.
This man, with lantern, dog, and bush of thorn,
Presenteth Moonshine; for, if you will know,
By moonshine did these lovers think no scorn
To meet a Ninus' tomb, there, there to woo.
This grisly beast, which Lion hight by name,
The trusty Thisby, coming first by night,
Did scare away, or rather did affright;
And, as she fled, her mantle she did fall,
Which Lion vile with bloody mouth did stain.
Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth and tall,
And finds his trusty Thisby's mantle slain:
Whereat, with blade, with bloody blameful blade,
He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody breast;
And Thisby, tarrying in mulberry shade,
His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest,
Let Lion, Moonshine, Wall, and lovers twain,
At large discourse, while here they do remain.

Exeunt all but Wall.

The. I wonder, if the lion be to speak.

Dem. No wonder, my lord: one lion may, when many asses do.

Wall. In this same interlude it doth befall
That I, one Snout by name, present a wall;
And such a wall, as I would have you think,
That had in it a crannied hole or chink,
Through which the lovers, Pyramus and Thisby,
Did whisper often very secretly.
This loam, this rough-cast, and this stone doth show
That I am that same wall; the truth is so;
And this the cranny is, right and sinister,
Through which the fearful lovers are to whisper.

The. Would you desire lime and hair to speak better?

Dem. It is the wittiest partition that ever I heard discourse, my lord.

76 unbreath'd: unpractised 82, 83 intents . . . conn'd; cf. n. 89 o'ercharg'd: overburdened 96 I.e., takes the will for the deed 97 clerks: scholars 109 capacity: understanding 110 address'd: ready S. d. Flourish: blast

122 stand upon points: pun on senses 'mind punctuation' and 'be over-careful' 124 stop: both 'period' and 'method of stopping a horse' 127 recorder: wind instrument of flute type S. d. Tawyer; cf. n. 143 hight: is called 146 fall: let fall 148 tall: goodly 167 sinister: left

The. Pyramus draws near the wall: silence!

Enter Pyramus.

Pyr. O grim-look'd night! O night with hue so black!
O night which ever art when day is not!
O night! O night alack, alack, alack!
I fear my Thisby's promise is forgot.
And thou, O wall! O sweet, O lovely wall!
That stand'st between her father's ground and mine;
Thou wall, O wall! O sweet, and lovely wall!
Show me thy chink to blink through with mine eyne.
[Wall holds up his fingers.]
Thanks, courteous wall: Jove shield thee well for this!
But what see I? No Thisby do I see.
O wicked wall! through whom I see no bliss;
Curs'd be thy stones for thus deceiving me!

The. The wall, methinks, being sensible, should curse again.

Pyr. No, in truth, sir, he should not. 'Deceiving me,' is Thisby's cue: she is to enter now, and I am to spy her through the wall. You shall see, it will fall pat as I told you. Yonder she comes.

Enter Thisbe.

This. O wall! full often hast thou heard my moans,
For parting my fair Pyramus and me:
My cherry lips have often kiss'd thy stones,
Thy stones with lime and hair knit up in thee.

Pyr. I see a voice: now will I to the chink,
To spy an I can hear my Thisby's face.
Thisby!

This. My love! thou art my love, I think.

Pyr. Think what thou wilt, I am thy lover's grace;
And, like Limander, am I trusty still.

This. And I like Helen, till the Fates me kill.

Pyr. Not Shafalus to Procrus was so true.

This. As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you.

Pyr. O! kiss me through the hole of this vile wall.

This. I kiss the wall's hole, not your lips at all.

Pyr. Wilt thou at Ninny's tomb meet me straightway?

This. 'Tide life, 'tide death, I come without delay.

Wall. Thus have I, Wall, my part discharged so;
And, being done, thus Wall away doth go. Exeunt Clowns.

The. Now is the mural down between the two neighbours.

Dem. No remedy, my lord, when walls are so wilful to hear without warning.

Hip. This is the silliest stuff that ever I heard.

The. The best in this kind are but shadows, and the worst are no worse, if imagination amend them.

Hip. It must be your imagination then, and not theirs.

The. If we imagine no worse of them than they of themselves, they may pass for excellent men. Here come two noble beasts in, a man and a lion.

Enter Lion and Moonshine.

Lion. You, ladies, you, whose gentle hearts do fear
The smallest monstrous mouse that creeps on floor,
May now perchance both quake and tremble here,
When lion rough in wildest range doth roar.
Then know that I, one Snug the joiner, am
A lion-fell, nor else no lion's dam:
For, if I should as lion come in strife
Into this place, 'twere pity on my life.

The. A very gentle beast, and of a good conscience.

Dem. The very best at a beast, my lord, that e'er I saw.

Lys. This lion is a very fox for his valour.

The. True; and a goose for his discretion.

Dem. Not so, my lord; for his valour cannot carry his discretion, and the fox carries the goose.

The. His discretion, I am sure, cannot carry his valour, for the goose carries not the fox. It is well: leave it to his discretion, and let us listen to the moon.

Moon. This lanthorn doth the horned moon present;—

Dem. He should have worn the horns on his head.

The. He is no crescent, and his horns are invisible within the circumference.

Moon. This lanthorn doth the horned moon present;
Myself the man i' the moon do seem to be.

The. This is the greatest error of all the rest.
The man should be put into the lantern: how is it else the man i' the moon?

Dem. He dares not come there for the candle, for, you see, it is already in snuff.

Hip. I am aweary of this moon: would he would change!

The. It appears, by his small light of discretion, that he is in the wane; but yet, in courtesy, in all reason, we must stay the time.

Lys. Proceed, Moon.

Moon. All that I have to say, is, to tell you that the lanthorn is the moon; I, the man in the moon; this thorn-bush, my thorn-bush; and this dog, my dog.

Dem. Why, all these should be in the lantern; for all these are in the moon. But, silence! here comes Thisbe.

Enter Thisbe.

This. This is old Ninny's tomb. Where is my love?

Lion. Oh—. The Lion roars; Thisbe runs off.

Dem. Well roared, Lion.

The. Well run, Thisbe.

Hip. Well shone, Moon. Truly, the moon shines with a good grace. [The Lion tears Thisbe's mantle, and exit.]

The. Well moused, Lion.

Dem. And then came Pyramus.

Lys. And so the lion vanished.

Enter Pyramus.

Pyr. Sweet moon, I thank thee for thy sunny beams;
I thank thee, moon, for shining now so bright,
For, by thy gracious, golden, glittering beams,
I trust to taste of truest Thisby's sight.
But stay, O spite!
But mark, poor knight,
What dreadful dole is here!
Eyes, do you see?
How can it be?
O dainty duck! O dear!

185 sensible: capable of perception 189 fall: happen 199 lover's grace: i.e., lover 200 Limander: cf. n. 207 'Tide: come 210 mural: wall; cf. n.

225 lion-fell: lion's skin 238 horns: cf. n. 246 for: because of 247 in snuff: with a pun on the sense 'in hasty anger' 250 stay: await 264 moused: torn (as a cat tears a mouse)

Thy mantle good,
What! stain'd with blood!
Approach, ye Furies fell!
O Fates, come, come,
Cut thread and thrum;
Quail, crush, conclude, and quell!
The. This passion, and the death of a dear friend, would go near to make a man look sad.
Hip. Beshrew my heart, but I pity the man.
Pyr. O! wherefore, Nature, didst thou lions frame?
Since lion vile hath here deflower'd my dear?
Which is—no, no—which was the fairest dame
That liv'd, that lov'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheer.
Come tears, confound;
Out, sword, and wound
The pap of Pyramus:
Ay, that left pap,
Where heart doth hop:
Thus die I, thus, thus, thus [Stabs himself.]
Now am I dead,
Now am I fled;
My soul is in the sky:
Tongue, lose thy light!
Moon, take thy flight! [Exit Moonshine.]
Now die, die, die, die, die.
Dem. No die, but an ace, for him; for he is but one.
Lys. Less than an ace, man, for he is dead; he is nothing.
The. With the help of a surgeon, he might yet recover, and prove an ass.
Hip. How chance Moonshine is gone before Thisbe comes back and finds her lover?
The. She will find him by starlight. Here she comes; and her passion ends the play.

Enter Thisbe.

Hip. Methinks she should not use a long one for such a Pyramus: I hope she will be brief.
Dem. A mote will turn the balance, which Pyramus, which Thisbe, is the better: he for a man, God warrant us; she for a woman, God bless us.
Lys. She hath spied him already with those sweet eyes.
Dem. And thus she moans, videlicet:—
This.
Asleep, my love?
What, dead, my dove?
O Pyramus, arise!
Speak, speak! Quite dumb?
Dead, Dead! A tomb
Must cover thy sweet eyes.
These lily lips,
This cherry nose,
These yellow cowslip cheeks,
Are gone, are gone:
Lovers, make moan!
His eyes were green as leeks.
O, Sisters Three,
Come, come to me,
With hands as pale as milk;
Lay them in gore,
Since you have shore
With shears his thread of silk.
Tongue, not a word:
Come, trusty sword:
Come, blade, my breast imbrue: [Stabs herself.]
And farewell, friends;
Thus Thisby ends:
Adieu, adieu, adieu.
The. Moonshine and Lion are left to bury the dead.
Dem. Ay, and Wall too.
Bot. No, I assure you; the wall is down that parted their fathers. Will it please you to see the epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask dance between two of our company?
The. No epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse; for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it had played Pyramus, and hanged himself in Thisbe's garter, it would have been a fine tragedy: and so it is, truly, and very notably discharged. But come, your Bergomask: let your epilogue alone. [Here a dance of clowns.]
The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve;
Lovers, to bed; 'tis almost fairy time.
I fear we shall out-sleep the coming morn,
As much as we this night have overwatch'd.
This palpable-gross play hath well beguil'd
The heavy gait of night. Sweet friends, to bed.
A fortnight hold we this solemnity,
In nightly revels, and new jollity. [Exeunt.]

Enter Puck.

Puck. Now the hungry lion roars,
And the wolf behowls the moon;
Whilst the heavy ploughman snores,
All with weary task fordone.
Now the wasted brands do glow,
Whilst the screech-owl, screeching loud,
Puts the wretch that lies in woe
In remembrance of a shroud.
Now it is the time of night
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his sprite,
In the church-way paths to glide:
And we fairies, that do run
By the triple Hecate's team,
From the presence of the sun,
Following darkness like a dream,
Now are frolic; not a mouse
Shall disturb this hallow'd house:
I am sent with broom before,
To sweep the dust behind the door.

Enter King and Queen of Fairies, with their train.

Obe. Through the house give glimmering light
By the dead and drowsy fire;
Every elf and fairy sprite
Hop as light as bird from brier;

281 thread and thrum: the warp and its fastening, i.e., everything 282 Quail: overpower quell: kill 283 passion: violent expression of sorrow 302 No ... ace: cf. n. 312 which ... which: whether ... or 313 warrant: defend 330 Sisters Three: the three Fates

338 imbrue: stain with blood 346 Bergomask dance: a rustic dance originating in Italy 356 overwatch'd: overwaked 357 palpable-gross: stupid 364 fordone: exhausted 374 Cf. n. 377 frolic: merry

And this ditty after me
Sing and dance it trippingly.
Tita. First, rehearse your song by rote,
To each word a warbling note:
Hand in hand, with fairy grace,
Will we sing, and bless this place. [Sing and dance.]
Obe. Now, until the break of day,
Through this house each fairy stray.
To the best bride-bed will we,
Which by us shall blessed be;
And the issue there create
Ever shall be fortunate.
So shall all the couples three
Ever true in loving be;
And the blots of Nature's hand
Shall not in their issue stand:
Never mole, hare-lip, nor scar,
Nor mark prodigious, such as are
Despised in nativity,
Shall upon their children be.
With this field-dew consecrate,
Every fairy take his gait,
And each several chamber bless,
Through this palace, with sweet peace;
Ever shall in safety rest,
And the owner of it blest.
Trip away;
Make no stay;
Meet me all by break of day.
[Exeunt King, Queen, and train.]
Puck. If we shadows have offended,
Think but this, and all is mended,
That you have but slumber'd here
While these visions did appear.
And this weak and idle theme,
No more yielding but a dream,
Gentles, do not reprehend:
If you pardon, we will mend.
And, as I'm an honest Puck,
If we have unearned luck
Now to 'scape the serpent's tongue,
We will make amends ere long;
Else the Puck a liar call:
So, good night unto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin shall restore amends. [Exit.]

FINIS

395 create: created 405 field-dew consecrate: i.e., fairy holy water 409 Ever shall: i.e., ever shall it; cf. n.

428 hands: applause

Notes

I.i.5, 6. The passage of time seems as slow to Theseus as to a young man under the guardianship of a stepmother or to one who is kept from the enjoyment of his estate by his father's widow who lingers on in possession of a life-interest therein.

I.i.32. feigning . . . feigning. The two words 'fain' and 'feign' were often spelled alike in the sixteenth century. Hence 'feigning' may have here its modern sense or it may mean 'love-sick,' 'yearning.' A third possibility, which I am inclined to accept, is that by 'feigning voice' Egeus means 'a repressed voice,' i.e., that Lysander sang softly so as to avoid unwelcome attention.

I.i.33. stol'n . . . fantasy. 'Secretly and without permission stamped your image upon her imagination.'

I.i.209, 210. 'How powerful must be the graces of my beloved one, seeing that they have made Athens a place of torture for me; i.e., since so long as she remained in it she could not marry Lysander.' (Deighton.)

I.i.235, 236. 'Love, forgetting proportionate values, can so transform things base and vile that they take on form and dignity.'

I.i.252. dear expense. Helena seems to mean that she will pay dearly for Demetrius' thanks—if indeed she receives them—because she will be assisting him to pursue her rival.

I.ii.2. generally. Bottom obviously means just the opposite of this, i.e., separately. His intended meaning is usually fairly clear, but it would be a foolhardy editor who should attempt to translate 'Bottomese' too precisely. Cf. 'obscenely' in line 92 of this scene.

I.ii.44. Thisne. This word may mean 'in this way' (in which case it should be written without a capital), or it may represent Bottom's first attempt to say Thisbe in a 'monstrous little voice.'

I.ii.95. hold, or cut bow-strings. 'This phrase is of the proverbial kind, and was born in the days of archery: when a party was made at butts [archery], assurance of meeting was given in the words of that phrase; the sense of the person using them being that he would "hold" or keep promise, or they might "cut his bowstrings," demolish him for an archer.' (Capell.) This explanation is not certain, but the phrase undoubtedly means, 'Be there without fail.'

II.i.S. d. at one door. This refers to one of the side doors on the Elizabethan stage, and not, of course, to the imagined locality.

Robin Goodfellow. This is the proper name of the character referred to indiscriminately in the old copies as Robin or Puck. The latter was often used in the sixteenth century as a generic name for a kind of sprite or goblin. Nash, in his Terrors of the Night (1594), says that such mischievous beings 'did most of their merry prankes in the Night. Then ground they malt, and had hempen shirts for their labours, daunst in greene meadowes, pincht maids in their sleep that swept not their houses cleane, and led poor Trauellers out of their way notoriously.'

II.i.7. moon's sphere. According to the Ptolemaic system of astronomy accepted in Shakespeare's day, the sun, moon, and stars revolved about the earth fixed in transparent spheres.

II.i.9. orbs. The circles of dark green grass often seen in old pastures, once supposed to be produced by the care of fairies in watering such spots.

II.i.10 pensioners. Queen Elizabeth had a bodyguard of tall and handsome gentlemen, many of them noble, who were called her pensioners.

II.i.23. changeling. Fairies were supposed sometimes to steal a mortal child and to leave a substitute, usually of inferior intelligence, in its place. This substituted being was called a changeling; but here the word is used in reference to the stolen child.

II.i.48. gossip's bowl. A drink, often called Lamb's-wool, made of ale, nutmeg, sugar, and roasted crab-apples. Originally served to the sponsors (gossips) at christenings, it was often used on other social occasions.

II.i.55. tailor. This exclamation has called forth much learned discussion, the most amusing result of which has been Furness's suggestion that there is here a pun upon a word the reverse of 'header.'

II i. 68. Corin. Corin and Phillida (Phyllis) were conventional names for a shepherd and shepherdess.

II.i.80. Perigenia. 'This Sinnis had a goodly fair daughter called Perigouna, which fled away when she saw her father slain. . . . But Theseus finding her, called her, and sware by his faith he would use her gently, and do her no hurt, nor displeasure at all.' (North's Plutarch, ed. Skeat, p. 279.)

II.i.81, 82. Ægle . . . Antiopa. 'For some say that Ariadne hung herself for sorrow, when she saw that Theseus had cast her off. Other . . . think that Theseus left her, because he was in love with another, as by these verses should appear: Ægles, the nymph, was loved of Theseus, Who was the daughter of Panopeus. . . . Philochorus, and some other hold opinion, that [Theseus] went thither with Hercules against the Amazons: and that to honour his valiantness, Hercules gave him Antiopa the Amazon. . . . Bion . . . saith, that he brought her away by deceit and stealth . . . and that Theseus enticed her to come into his ship . . . and so soon as she was aboard, he hoised his sail, and so carried her away.' (North's Plutarch, ed. Skeat, pp. 284–286.)

II.i.100. nine men's morris. A game played upon a sort of chessboard dug in the turf.

II.i.103–105. No interpretation of this puzzling passage is entirely satisfactory. E. K. Chambers paraphrases it thus: 'The summer is so bad that men wish it were winter. Not only have we offended the winds, but we have neglected the hymns and carols due from us to the moon. Therefore she too is wrathful, and does her part to spoil the weather.' Furness, on the other hand, explains it as follows: 'Here in Warwickshire, says Titania, in effect (for of course she and Oberon are in the Forest of Arden, with never a thought of Athens; who ever heard of the nine mens morris on the slopes of Pentelicus?), "here the poor human mortals have no summer with its sports, and now they have had no winter with its hymns and carols." ' If the latter be the meaning, 'therefore' is to be understood as 'because of our quarrel.'

II.i.151–173. There is general agreement that this passage contains some allegory; but as to the extent and interpretation of this there is great diversity of opinion. It is fairly certain that the 'fair vestal throned by the west' is Queen Elizabeth. The imagery of the whole passage was very likely suggested by the allegorical figures which appeared in the pageants and 'triumphs' of the day, and it is not impossible that there is specific reference to the 'Princely Pleasures' with which the Earl of Leicester entertained Queen Elizabeth at Kenilworth in 1575.

II.i.236. The story here 'changed,' i.e., reversed, is that of Apollo's pursuit of the nymph Daphne, who was transformed into a laurel tree and thus escaped.

III.i.52. bush of thorns. English peasants saw 'the man in the moon' as bearing a bundle of sticks on his back.

III.i.104, 105. you see an ass-head of your own. A popular retort which is flung out by Bottom with no consciousness of its special appropriateness.

III.i.118. plain-song. Just what characterization of the cuckoo's song is intended is not clear. Perhaps the comparison is between the simple musical interval of the cuckoo's song and that which often occurs at the end of a phrase in the chanting of the psalms. The bird's cry of 'Cuckoo' gives rise in the following lines to one of the common Elizabethan jokes about cuckolds.

III.i.146. Moth. The meaning of this name appears when it is given its Elizabethan pronunciation, 'mote,' i.e., a minute particle, as of dust in a sunbeam.

III.ii.26. our stamp. Those who are puzzled by the unexpected 'our' instead of 'my,' or who fail to see the alarming effect of the stamping of so diminutive a being, may escape the difficulty by adopting the emendation (first suggested by Allen) at one stamp, i.e., 'in one rush.' But cf. IV.i.84, 85.

III.ii.98. costs the fresh blood dear. An allusion to the once popular belief that sighing lowers vitality.

III.ii.130. 'If Lysander's present protestations are true, they destroy the truth of his former vows to Hermia, and the contest between these two truths, which in themselves are holy, must in the issue be devilish and end in the destruction of both.' (W. A. Wright.)

III.ii.216, 217. There is some doubt as to the extent to which Shakespeare here pushes his allusion to heraldry, but the following note is satisfactory enough: 'Helen exemplifies her position by a simile,—"we had two of the first, i.e., bodies, like the double coats [of arms] in heraldry that belong to man and wife as one person, but which, like our single heart, have but one crest." ' (Douce.)

III.ii.263. The punctuation adopted in the text is the result of an attempt to make sense out of the reading of the First Quarto: No, no; heele Seeme. As the speech stands Demetrius must be supposed to address Hermia, and then, breaking off, to taunt Lysander. There is almost certainly some corruption of the text, and it might be better to read with the First Folio: No, no, Sir, seeme to breake loose. Then the No, no, Sir! would have the force of the modern colloquialism, 'No you don't!'

III.ii.343. hindering knot-grass. The knot-grass, a low, tough weed, hinders growth in gardens, and was popularly supposed to be a means of stunting a child's growth.

III.ii.406. the morning's love. It is not certain whether this phrase refers to Cephalus, according to classical mythology a mighty hunter and the lover of Aurora, the dawn, or whether it is a figurative description of Aurora herself, or whether it means simply the sun. It is clear, however, that Oberon is contrasting his freedom to sport by day with the fate of those spirits which are exiled from the sunshine.

IV.i.S.D. Music, still. This stage direction of the Folio is puzzling. Since Oberon later directs the music to sound, this may be a direction to the musicians to be ready, but not to play. Another possibility is that the meaning is simply 'soft music.'

IV.i.139. Saint Valentine. An allusion to the old belief that the birds began to mate on St. Valentine's day. Cf. Chaucer, The Parlement of Foules:

'For this was on seynt Valentynys day,
Whan every bryd comyth there to chese his make . . .'

IV.i.193, 194. 'Helena, I think, means to say that having found Demetrius unexpectedly, she considered her property in him as insecure as that which a person has in a jewel that he has found by accident; which he knows not whether he shall retain, and which, therefore, may properly enough be called his own and not his own.' (Malone.)

IV.i.220. at her death. Does Bottom here mean Thisbe's death? But he is speaking, not of the play, but of a play. And why 'more gracious' after Thisbe's death? Theobald was very likely right in reading 'after death.' Were Bottom to rise, after dying a heroic death, and sing his 'ballad,' that would be gracious indeed.

V.i.19, 20. 'The mere idea of a joy is enough incentive to a strong imagination to conjure up and believe in the actual presence of a something which causes that joy.' (Chambers.)

V.i.82, 83. intents . . . conn'd. 'Intents' is here used in a double sense. Philostrate speaks of the clowns' endeavors to please as carried to the limit of their ability and of their having learned the play, the result of their endeavor, with painful toil.

V.i.S. d. Tawyer. This reference in the stage direction of the First Folio to one of the actors in the company to which Shakespeare belonged is an interesting evidence that the Folio was printed from a stage-copy.

V.i.200. Limander. Limander and Helen are blunders for Leander and Hero, just as Shafalus and Procrus are the closest the clowns can come to Cephalus and Procris. The two pairs of lovers thus referred to were typical instances of devotion.

V.i.210. Now is the mural down. In place of this the First Quarto, which is the most reliable authority for the text of this play, has, Now is the moon used. That this latter version is almost certainly corrupt is shown, however, not only by the difficulty of finding in it a satisfactory meaning, but also by the fact that the First Folio substitutes, Now is the morall downe. Although the reading of the Folio can be interpreted as a pun on the senses 'moral obstacle' and 'wall all' (i.e., mure all), it still seems unlikely to be what Shakespeare wrote. In despair most editors have taken refuge in the emendation of Pope here adopted, despite the fact that it is open to serious objection both on literary grounds and because the noun 'mural' does not elsewhere appear as part of Shakespeare's vocabulary. The true reading seems irretrievably lost.

V.i.238. horns. Moon's lantern had sides of horn instead of glass, so that there is a double significance in his reference to the horned, i.e., crescent, moon. Thereupon Demetrius makes the inevitable Elizabethan joke about the horns which were supposed to grow upon the head of the married man whose wife was unfaithful to him.

V.i.302. No . . . ace. Demetrius attempts to make a pun on a second sense of 'die,' i.e., one of a pair of dice. Some editors have attempted to help out Demetrius' wit by taking the word as related to 'duo,' i.e., two. The Elizabethan pronunciation of 'ace' gives Theseus a chance for another pun.

V.i.374. Hecate is called triple because she was as Luna a heavenly goddess, as Diana an earthly one, and as Hecate one of the lower world. When, as the moon-goddess, she disappears at the coming of the sun, the fairies accompany her car.

V.i.409, 410. It is not improbable that these lines were printed in the wrong order and should be transposed.

The Text of the Present Edition

The text of the present volume is, by permission of the Oxford University Press, that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig, except for the following deviations:

1. The stage directions are those of the First Folio or the First Quarto, any alterations or additions being enclosed in square brackets. The indication of a second scene in the fifth act has been omitted and the lines renumbered accordingly.

2. A few minor changes in punctuation and in spelling (such as almanac for almanack, gawd for gaud, laugh for loff, and antic for antique) have been made. The spelling lanthorn has been retained only in the speeches of Moon, where it adds clearness to a jest.

3. The following alterations, all revisions to the readings of the First Quarto (save where otherwise indicated), have been made in the text, the reading of the Quarto and the present text preceding the colon, and that of Craig following it:

I.i.71	Whether: Wh'r
194	I'll: I'd
ii. 71	an (Q. and): as
II.i.7	moon's: moone's
71	steep (F1): steppe
80	Perigenia: Perigouna
93	Hath: Have
255	where: whereon
ii. 2	third part: third (misprint ?)
III.i.72	of: have
137	whether: whe'r
ii. 49	the: knee
82	whether: whe'r
98	costs: cost
146	This: That (misprint ?)
173	to: with
193	bare: bear
202	sisters' vows (Q. sisters vowes): sister-vows
204	is all: is it all
207	needles: neelds
272	potion: poison
IV.i.19	courtesy (F1): curtsy
80	Silence a while: Silence, awhile
167	as: as doth
174	a: in
V.i.269	beams: streams

The Merchant of Venice

Edited by
WILLIAM LYON PHELPS

Dramatis Personae

THE DUKE OF VENICE
MOROCHUS, a Prince, and a Suitor to Portia
THE PRINCE OF ARRAGON, Suitor also to Portia
BASSANIO, an Italian Lord, Suitor likewise to Portia
ANTONIO, A Merchant of Venice
SALARINO, SALANIO, GRATIANO, LORENZO — Gentlemen of Venice, and Companions with Bassanio
SHYLOCK, the rich Jew, and Father to Jessica
TUBAL, a Jew, Shylock's Friend

PORTIA, the rich Italian Lady
NERISSA, her waiting-Gentlewoman
JESSICA, Daughter to Shylock

GOBBO, an old man, Father to Lancelot
LANCELOT GOBBO, the Clown
STEPHANO, a Messenger
LEONARDO, Servant to Bassanio
BALTHAZAR, Servant to Portia

GAOLER AND ATTENDANTS, MAGNIFICOES OF VENICE, OFFICERS OF THE COURT OF JUSTICE, SERVANTS TO PORTIA

SCENE—Alternately at Venice and at Portia's house, Belmont, on the mainland.

The Merchant of Venice

Introduction

Sources of the Play

It is usually said that there are two separate stories in this play: the Pound of Flesh story, and the story of the Three Caskets. But Professor R. G. Moulton in his admirable book, Shakespeare as a Dramatic Artist, emphasizes the fact that there are four strands in the plot, the Pound of Flesh, the Three Caskets, the Elopement of Jessica and Lorenzo and the Episode of the Rings. He points out cleverly and perhaps fancifully the exact moment when Shakespeare brings all four elements together.

There was an old ballad of Gernutus, printed in Percy's Reliques (1765), which gives the pound of flesh incident in detail. The difficulty is that no one can prove whether this ballad preceded Shakespeare's Merchant, and may thus be considered a source, or followed hard upon the appearance of the play, and is thus merely a tribute to its popularity. The chief source is probably an Italian work, Il Pecorone, written in 1378 by Giovanni Fiorentino, and published in 1565. No English translation of this is extant; but as Elizabethan England was familiar with a very large number of vernacular translations from the Italian, it is probable that Shakespeare had access to one in this instance. Il Pecorone is a collection of tales, and one of them has the story of a rich woman at Belmont, who is eventually married to a young gentleman, whose friend, in order to lend him money, had come within the danger of an avaricious Jew, who demanded as surety a pound of flesh. The situation is saved by the lady in the court room, who obtains her marriage ring with subsequent pleasantries. The Jew story, however, was a common one in all European literatures.

The Caskets story appears in the Gesta Romanorum, a collection of tales dating in England from the thirteenth century. Its editor, Herrtage, describes it as a 'collection of fictitious narratives in Latin, compiled from Oriental apologues, monkish legends, classical stories, tales of chroniclers, popular traditions, and other sources, which it would be now difficult and perhaps impossible to discover.' An English translation was well known in Shakespeare's day, and this book may have been the source of the Caskets plot in The Merchant of Venice.

Shakespeare may have invented the Lorenzo-Jessica love story; some think he obtained it from a tale by Massuccio di Salerno, cir. 1470, but I doubt it.

In addition to these probable and possible sources, Gosson, in his Schoole of Abuse (1579), mentions a play acted at the Bull Inn, called The Jew. From his brief description of it, many editors have been convinced that this drama is the prototype of Shakespeare's play, and the real source; but as no copy of it has yet been found, all statements concerning it are largely conjecture.

Shakespeare was undoubtedly influenced by Marlowe's tragedy of blood, The Jew of Malta, which was written sometime between 1589 and 1593, and was immensely popular, as it deserved to be. This Jew was a monster rather than a human being; but he was certainly the most famous Jew on the Elizabethan stage until the first matinée of The Merchant of Venice. His daughter similarly loves a Christian youth, throws down moneybags from a balcony at night, and ultimately flees from home; and her father's combination of parental and financial emotion infallibly suggests Shylock's ejaculations.

Dr. Johnson, as quoted by Furness, made an epitome of Il Pecorone, from which the following extracts are here given (Giannetto=Bassanio; Ansaldo=Antonio):

'Poor Giannetto's head was day and night full of the thoughts of his bad success. When Ansaldo inquired what was the matter, he confessed he could never be contented till he should be in a condition to regain all that he had lost. When Ansaldo found him resolved, he began to sell everything he had to furnish this other fine ship with merchandise; but as he wanted still ten thousand ducats, he applied himself to a Jew at Mestri, and borrowed them on condition that if they were not paid on the feast of St. John in the next month of June, the Jew might take a pound of flesh from any part of his body he pleased. . . .

'Giannetto governed excellently, and caused justice to be administered impartially. . . . But one day, as he stood at the window of the palace with his bride, he saw a number of people pass along the piazza, with lighted torches in their hands. What is the meaning of this? said he. The lady answered, They are artificers going to make their offerings at the Church of St. John, this day being his festival. Giannetto instantly recollected Ansaldo, gave a great sigh, and turned pale. . . . The lady told him to mount on horseback, and go by land the nearest way, to take some attendants, and an hundred thousand ducats; and not to stop until he arrived at Venice. . . .

'. . . The lady now arrives in Venice, in her lawyer's dress. . . . Giannetto proposed to the Jew to apply to this lawyer. With all my heart, says the Jew; but let who will come, I will stick to my bond. They came to this judge and saluted him. Giannetto did not remember him; for he had disguised his face with the juice of certain herbs. Giannetto and the Jew each told the merits of the cause to the judge; who, when he had taken the bond and read it, said to the Jew, I must have you take the hundred thousand ducats, and release this honest man, who will always have a grateful sense of the favour done to him. The Jew replied, I will do no such thing. The judge answered, it will be better for you. The Jew was positive to yield nothing. Upon this they go to the tribunal appointed for such judgments; and our judge says to the Jew, Do you cut a pound of this man's flesh where you choose. The Jew ordered him to be stripped naked; and takes in his hand a razor, which had been made on purpose. Giannetto seeing this, turning to the judge, This, says he, is not the favour I asked of you. Be quiet, says he, the pound of flesh is not yet cut off. As soon as the Jew was going to begin, Take care what you do, says the judge, if you take more or less than a pound, I will order your head to be struck off; and beside, if you shed one drop of blood you shall be put to death.' [Then follows the discomfiture of the Jew, who finding that he cannot get even the principal of the loan, tears up the bond in a rage, receiving no further punishment. The judge declines to accept any money from Giannetto, but succeeds in inducing him to give her the ring, whereupon follow the now familiar complications. Giannetto wept when his lady pretended that he had been unfaithful; reconciliation followed, and they lived happily forever after.]

For the original of the Caskets story, the following extracts are given from the Gesta Romanorum, as printed in Furness.

'Then was the emperour right glad of her safety and comming, and had great compassion on her, saying: Ah faire lady, for the love of my sonne thou hast suffered much woe, neverthelesse if thou be worthie to be his wife, soone shall I prove.

'And when he had thus said, he commanded to bring forth three vessels, the first was made of pure gold, beset with precious stones without, and within full of dead mens bones, and thereupon was ingraven this posey: Whoso chooseth me shall finde that he deserveth.

'The second vessel was made of fine silver, filled with earth and wormes, and the superscription was thus: Whoso chooseth me shall finde that his nature desireth.

'The third vessel was made of lead, full within of precious stones, and the superscription, Whoso chooseth me shall finde that God hath disposed to him.'

But whatever incidents Shakespeare may or may not have drawn from sources, the oftener one compares his play with these stories, the greater seems his genius. His characters are complex human beings; and the speech of Portia on mercy is only one of the evidences of the richness of the mind and character whence it came.

Shylock is a man as well as a Jew; and while Shakespeare took the national attitude toward Jews, and wished his readers and the spectators to rejoice in Shylock's discomfiture, he allowed Shylock to state his own case fairly, and in his comparison of himself with Christians, to reveal his human feelings. It is absurd to suppose that Shakespeare intended Shylock to be a hero, or to carry the sympathy of the audience; on the other hand, Shakespeare was not writing anti-Semitic propaganda, but a play for the theatre, in which the interest is immensely heightened by making every character a recognizable human being.

The History of the Play

It is generally believed that The Merchant of Venice was written between 1594 and 1598; but all we know is that it was written before 1598. In that year Francis Meres published his Palladis Tamia, where, in a comparison of English poets with the classics, he mentions Shakespeare as a leading contemporary dramatist, and in the list of his productions gives Merchant of Venice.

Henslowe's Diary, under date of 25 August, 1594, shows that a new play which he describes as 'the Venesyon comodey,' was performed. No one can prove that this is a reference to the Merchant of Venice. Inasmuch as most editors and critics delight in conjecture, it is surprising that no one has tried to prove that this is a play wherein Shakespeare dramatizes his adventures with the 'Venison' of Sir Thomas Lucy, of Charlecote Park.

A quarto edition was printed in 1600, and upon this the Folio text of 1623 was based. In 1619 a spurious edition, bearing the false date 1600, was foisted upon the world. Till 1906 it was generally regarded as the earliest edition and allowed vastly more authority than it in fact deserves.

No one knows when the play was first performed. A version by George Granville, Viscount Lansdowne, was played at London in 1701, and 'held the stage for exactly forty years.' It is printed in Furness as a literary curiosity.

Of the famous actors who have interpreted Shylock, Richard Burbage, the Elizabethan star, may have been the first. In 1741, Charles Macklin, an Irishman, restored the Shakespearean version to the stage, for which he should receive everlasting credit. When he was nearly a hundred years old, he made his last appearance in the rôle of Shylock. The next great actor to take the part was Edmund Kean, in 1814, whose original interpretation made a powerful impression.

In the latter part of the nineteenth century, the greatest impersonation was that by Edwin Booth, who displayed all the resources of his genius. In many ways, it was his finest rôle. Henry Irving attracted wide attention by making Shylock a sympathetic character, but he was neither Elizabethan nor particularly impressive. Richard Mansfield, with his uncanny intelligence, gave a memorable presentation, in which the fiendish character of Shylock was predominant, and yet his humanity not lost. Contemporary with him was the great German actor, Ernst von Possart, who made Der Kaufmann von Venedig a favorite play with Continental audiences. He was one of the best of all Shylocks. At the present writing (1922) the only important English-speaking actors of the Jew are Edward Sothern, who, with Julia Marlowe as Portia, gives an admirable production; Walter Hampden; and David Warfield.

ACT FIRST ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Venice. A Street]
Enter Antonio, Salarino, and Salanio.

Ant. In sooth, I know not why I am so sad:
It wearies me; you say it wearies you;
But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
What stuff 'tis made of, whereof it is born,
I am to learn;
And such a want-wit sadness makes of me,
That I have much ado to know myself.
Salar. Your mind is tossing on the ocean;
There, where your argosies with portly sail,—
Like signiors and rich burghers on the flood,
Or, as it were, the pageants of the sea,—
Do overpeer the petty traffickers,
That curtsy to them, do them reverence,
As they fly by them with their woven wings.
Salan. Believe me, sir, had I such venture forth,
The better part of my affections would
Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still
Plucking the grass to know where sits the wind;
Peering in maps for ports, and piers, and roads;
And every object that might make me fear
Misfortune to my ventures out of doubt
Would make me sad.
Salar. My wind, cooling my broth,
Would blow me to an ague, when I thought
What harm a wind too great might do at sea.
I should not see the sandy hour-glass run
But I should think of shallows and of flats,
And see my wealthy Andrew dock'd in sand
Vailing her high-top lower than her ribs
To kiss her burial. Should I go to church
And see the holy edifice of stone,
And not bethink me straight of dangerous rocks,
Which touching but my gentle vessel's side
Would scatter all her spices on the stream,
Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks;
And, in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing? Shall I have the thought
To think on this, and shall I lack the thought
That such a thing bechanc'd would make me sad?
But tell not me: I know Antonio
Is sad to think upon his merchandise.
Ant. Believe me, no: I thank my fortune for it,
My ventures are not in one bottom trusted,
Nor to one place; nor is my whole estate
Upon the fortune of this present year:
Therefore, my merchandise makes me not sad.
Salar. Why, then you are in love.
Ant. Fie, fie!
Salar. Not in love neither? Then let's say you are sad,
Because you are not merry: and 'twere as easy
For you to laugh and leap, and say you are merry,
Because you are not sad. Now, by two-headed Janus,
Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time:
Some that will evermore peep through their eyes
And laugh like parrots at a bag-piper,
And other of such vinegar aspect
That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile,
Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.

Enter Bassanio, Lorenzo, and Gratiano.

Salan. Here comes Bassanio, your most noble kinsman,
Gratiano, and Lorenzo. Fare ye well:
We leave you now with better company.
Salar. I would have stay'd till I had made you merry,
If worthier friends had not prevented me.
Ant. Your worth is very dear in my regard.
I take it, your own business calls on you,
And you embrace the occasion to depart.
Salar. Good morrow, my good lords.
Bass. Good signiors both, when shall we laugh? say when?
You grow exceeding strange: must it be so?
Salar. We'll make our leisures to attend on yours.

[Exeunt Salarino and Salanio.]

Lor. My Lord Bassanio, since you have found Antonio,
We too will leave you; but, at dinner-time,
I pray you, have in mind where we must meet.
Bass. I will not fail you.
Gra. You look not well, Signior Antonio;
You have too much respect upon the world:
They lose it that do buy it with much care:
Believe me, you are marvellously chang'd.
Ant. I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano;
A stage where every man must play a part,
And mine a sad one.
Gra. Let me play the fool:
With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come,
And let my liver rather heat with wine
Than my heart cool with mortifying groans.
Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,
Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster?
Sleep when he wakes, and creep into the jaundice
By being peevish? I tell thee what, Antonio—
I love thee, and it is my love that speaks—
There are a sort of men whose visages
Do cream and mantle like a standing pond,
And do a wilful stillness entertain,
With purpose to be dress'd in an opinion
Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit;
As who should say, 'I am Sir Oracle,
And when I ope my lips let no dog bark!'
O, my Antonio, I do know of these,
That therefore only are reputed wise
For saying nothing; when, I am very sure,
If they should speak, would almost damn those ears
Which, hearing them, would call their brothers fools.

1 sooth: truth 9 argosies: large merchant ships 11 pageants: festival cars or floats 12 overpeer: tower over 13 curtsy: bow with the swell 16 affections: emotions 17 still: always 21 out of doubt: undoubtedly 28 wealthy: richly laden 29 Vailing: letting down high-top: topmost 36, 37 but even . . . nothing: think how in a moment I may be deprived of all this wealth 37 thought: anxiety 39 bechanc'd: if it happened 52 Janus: images of the god Janus had two faces, one laughing, one sad 56 other: others 58 Nestor: the oldest and gravest of the Greek heroes at Troy 63 prevented: anticipated 64 I regard your worthiness very highly 76 respect . . . world: concern about business 81 sad: serious 85 mortifying: self-denying 92 cream and mantle: grow a scum standing: stagnant 94 opinion: reputation 95 conceit: thought 101 damn those ears; cf. n.

I'll tell thee more of this another time:
But fish not, with this melancholy bait,
For this fool-gudgeon, this opinion.
Come, good Lorenzo. Fare ye well awhile:
I'll end my exhortation after dinner.

Lor. Well, we will leave you then till dinner-time.
I must be one of these same dumb-wise men,
For Gratiano never lets me speak.

Gra. Well, keep me company but two years moe,
Thou shalt not know the sound of thine own tongue.

Ant. Farewell: I'll grow a talker for this gear.

Gra. Thanks, i' faith; for silence is only commendable
In a neat's tongue dried and a maid not vendible.

Exit [Gratiano with Lorenzo].

Ant. Is that anything now?

Bass. Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice. His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff: you shall seek all day ere you find them, and, when you have them, they are not worth the search.

Ant. Well, tell me now, what lady is the same
To whom you swore a secret pilgrimage,
That you to-day promis'd to tell me of?

Bass. 'Tis not unknown to you, Antonio,
How much I have disabled mine estate,
By something showing a more swelling port
Than my faint means would grant continuance:
Nor do I now make moan to be abridg'd
From such a noble rate; but my chief care
Is, to come fairly off from the great debts
Wherein my time, something too prodigal,
Hath left me gag'd. To you, Antonio,
I owe the most, in money and in love;
And from your love I have a warranty
To unburthen all my plots and purposes
How to get clear of all the debts I owe.

Ant. I pray you, good Bassanio, let me know it;
And if it stand, as you yourself still do,
Within the eye of honour, be assur'd,
My purse, my person, my extremest means,
Lie all unlock'd to your occasions.

Bass. In my school-days, when I had lost one shaft,
I shot his fellow of the self-same flight
The self-same way with more advised watch,
To find the other forth, and by adventuring both,
I oft found both. I urge this childhood proof,
Because what follows is pure innocence.
I owe you much, and, like a wilful youth,
That which I owe is lost; but if you please
To shoot another arrow that self way
Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt,
As I will watch the aim, or to find both,
Or bring your latter hazard back again,
And thankfully rest debtor for the first.

105 fool-gudgeon: an easily caught fish 111 moe: more 113 gear: indefinite word for business of any kind 115 In a neat's, etc.; cf. n. 118 reasons: sensible ideas 124 That; cf. n. 127 By living in a somewhat more lavish way 129 abridg'd: obliged to desist 130 rate: standard of life 132 time: time of life, youth 133 gag'd: entangled 140 eye: view, scope 144 flight: power of flight, range 146 forth: out 148 innocence; cf. n. 151 self: same 153 or: either

Ant. You know me well, and herein spend but time
To wind about my love with circumstance;
And out of doubt you do me now more wrong
In making question of my uttermost
Than if you had made waste of all I have:
Then do but say to me what I should do
That in your knowledge may by me be done,
And I am prest unto it: therefore speak.

Bass. In Belmont is a lady richly left,
And she is fair, and, fairer than that word,
Of wondrous virtues: sometimes from her eyes
I did receive fair speechless messages:
Her name is Portia; nothing undervalu'd
To Cato's daughter, Brutus' Portia:
Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth,
For the four winds blow in from every coast
Renowned suitors; and her sunny locks
Hang on her temples like a golden fleece;
Which makes her seat of Belmont Colchos' strond,
And many Jasons come in quest of her.
O my Antonio! had I but the means
To hold a rival place with one of them,
I have a mind presages me such thrift,
That I should questionless be fortunate.

Ant. Thou knowest that all my fortunes are at sea;
Neither have I money, nor commodity
To raise a present sum: therefore go forth;
Try what my credit can in Venice do:
That shall be rack'd, even to the uttermost,
To furnish thee to Belmont, to fair Portia.
Go, presently inquire, and so will I,
Where money is, and I no question make
To have it of my trust or for my sake.

Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Belmont. A Room in Portia's House]
Portia with her waiting woman Nerissa.

Por. By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is aweary of this great world.

Ner. You would be, sweet madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are: and yet, for aught I see, they are as sick that surfeit with too much as they that starve with nothing. It is no mean happiness therefore to be seated in the mean: superfluity comes sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer.

Por. Good sentences and well pronounced.

Ner. They would be better if well followed.

Por. If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instructions: I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching. The brain may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper leaps o'er a cold decree: such a hare is madness the youth, to skip o'er the meshes of good counsel the cripple. But this reasoning is not in the fashion to choose me a husband. O me, the word 'choose!' I may neither choose whom I would nor refuse whom I dislike; so is the will of a living daughter curbed by the will of a dead father. Is it not hard, Nerissa, that I cannot choose one nor refuse none?

156 spend but: only waste 159 question: doubt 163 prest: ready 164 richly left: a wealthy heiress 165, 166 fair . . . virtues: beautiful and accomplished 166 sometimes: formerly 168 nothing undervalu'd: in no way inferior 169 Portia; cf. n. 174 Colchos'; cf. n. 177 hold . . . with: make a show equal to 178 thrift: thriving 184 rack'd: strained 186 presently: instantly 187 of my trust, etc.: either on my credit or from some friend 7 seated . . . mean: moderately endowed comes . . . by: brings on 9 sentences: sentiments

Ner. Your father was ever virtuous, and holy men at their death have good inspirations; therefore, the lottery that he hath devised in these three chests of gold, silver, and lead, whereof who chooses his meaning chooses you, will, no doubt, never be chosen by any rightly but one who you shall rightly love. But what warmth is there in your affection towards any of these princely suitors that are already come?

Por. I pray thee, over-name them, and as thou namest them, I will describe them; and, according to my description, level at my affection.

Ner. First, there is the Neapolitan prince.

Por. Ay, that's a colt indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse; and he makes it a great appropriation to his own good parts that he can shoe him himself. I am much afeard my lady his mother played false with a smith.

Ner. Then is there the County Palatine.

Por. He doth nothing but frown, as who should say, 'An you will not have me, choose.' He hears merry tales, and smiles not: I fear he will prove the weeping philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmannerly sadness in his youth. I had rather be married to a death's-head with a bone in his mouth than to either of these. God defend me from these two!

Ner. How say you by the French lord, Monsieur Le Bon?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man. In truth, I know it is a sin to be a mocker; but, he! why, he hath a horse better than the Neapolitan's, a better bad habit of frowning than the Count Palatine; he is every man in no man; if a throstle sing, he falls straight a-capering; he will fence with his own shadow: if I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands. If he would despise me, I would forgive him, for if he love me to madness, I shall never requite him.

Ner. What say you, then, to Falconbridge, the young baron of England?

Por. You know I say nothing to him, for he understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian; and you will come into the court and swear that I have a poor pennyworth in the English. He is a proper man's picture, but, alas! who can converse with a dumb-show? How oddly he is suited! I think he bought his doublet in Italy, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour everywhere.

Ner. What think you of the Scottish lord, his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him, for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him again when he was able: I think the Frenchman became his surety and sealed under for another.

Ner. How like you the young German, the Duke of Saxony's nephew?

Por. Very vilely in the morning, when he is sober, and most vilely in the afternoon, when he is drunk: when he is best, he is a little worse than a man, and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast. An the worst fall that ever fell, I hope I shall make shift to go without him.

Ner. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right casket, you should refuse to perform your father's will, if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore, for fear of the worst, I pray thee, set a deep glass of Rhenish wine on the contrary casket, for, if the devil be within and that temptation without, I know he will choose it. I will do anything, Nerissa, ere I will be married to a sponge.

Ner. You need not fear, lady, the having any of these lords: they have acquainted me with their determinations; which is, indeed, to return to their home and to trouble you with no more suit, unless you may be won by some other sort than your father's imposition depending on the caskets.

Por. If I live to be as old as Sibylla, I will die as chaste as Diana, unless I be obtained by the manner of my father's will. I am glad this parcel of wooers are so reasonable, for there is not one among them but I dote on his very absence, and I pray God grant them a fair departure.

Ner. Do you not remember, lady, in your father's time, a Venetian, a scholar and a soldier, that came hither in the company of the Marquis of Montferrat?

Por. Yes, yes: it was Bassanio; as I think, he was so called.

Ner. True, madam: he, of all the men that ever my foolish eyes looked upon, was the best deserving a fair lady.

Por. I remember him well, and I remember him worthy of thy praise.

Enter a Servingman.

How now! what news?

Serv. The four strangers seek for you, madam, to take their leave; and there is a forerunner come from a fifth, the Prince of Morocco, who brings word the prince his master will be here to-night.

Por. If I could bid the fifth welcome with so good heart as I can bid the other four farewell, I should be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a saint and the complexion of a devil, I had rather he should shrive me than wive me. Come, Nerissa. Sirrah, go before.
Whiles we shut the gate upon one wooer, another knocks at the door. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[Venice. A public Place]
Enter Bassanio with Shylock the Jew.

Shy. Three thousand ducats; well?

Bass. Ay, sir, for three months.

Shy. For three months; well?

Bass. For the which, as I told you, Antonio shall be bound.

Shy. Antonio shall become bound; well?

Bass. May you stead me? Will you pleasure me? Shall I know your answer?

27 his meaning: the chest he meant 32 level: aim 35 colt: 'brainless youth' 36 appropriation: peculiar merit 39 County Palatine: a count possessing royal privileges 41 An: if choose; cf. n. 42 weeping philosopher: Heraclitus 47 by: concerning 52 throstle: thrush 59 Latin; cf. n. 61 proper: handsome 63 suited: dressed doublet: tight-fitting coat round hose: a variety of knee-breeches 68 Frenchman; cf. n. 69 sealed under: pledged himself

87 sort: lot 88 imposition: injunction 89 Sibylla; cf. n. 109 four; cf. n. 110 condition: disposition 6 stead: assist

Shy. Three thousand ducats, for three months, and Antonio bound.

Bass. Your answer to that.

Shy. Antonio is a good man.

Bass. Have you heard any imputation to the contrary?

Shy. Ho, no, no, no, no: my meaning in saying he is a good man is to have you understand me that he is sufficient. Yet his means are in supposition: he hath an argosy bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies; I understand moreover upon the Rialto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England, and other ventures he hath, squandered abroad. But ships are but boards, sailors but men: there be land-rats and water-rats, land-thieves, and water-thieves,—I mean pirates,—and then there is the peril of waters, winds, and rocks. The man is, notwithstanding, sufficient. Three thousand ducats; I think, I may take his bond.

Bass. Be assured you may.

Shy. I will be assured I may; and, that I may be assured, I will bethink me. May I speak with Antonio?

Bass. If it please you to dine with us.

Shy. Yes, to smell pork; to eat of the habitation which your prophet the Nazarite conjured the devil into. I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and so following; but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you. What news on the Rialto? Who is he comes here?

Enter Antonio.

Bass. This is Signior Antonio.

Shy. [Aside.] How like a fawning publican he looks!
I hate him for he is a Christian;
But more for that in low simplicity
He lends out money gratis, and brings down
The rate of usance here with us in Venice.
If I can catch him once upon the hip,
I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him.
He hates our sacred nation, and he rails,
Even there where merchants most do congregate,
On me, my bargains, and my well-won thrift,
Which he calls interest. Cursed be my tribe,
If I forgive him!

Bass. Shylock, do you hear?

Shy. I am debating of my present store,
And, by the near guess of my memory,
I cannot instantly raise up the gross
Of full three thousand ducats. What of that?
Tubal, a wealthy Hebrew of my tribe,
Will furnish me. But soft! how many months
Do you desire? [To Antonio.] Rest you fair, good signior;
Your worship was the last man in our mouths.

Ant. Shylock, albeit I neither lend nor borrow
By taking nor by giving of excess,
Yet, to supply the ripe wants of my friend,
I'll break a custom. [To Bassanio.] Is he yet possess'd
How much ye would?

Shy. Ay, ay, three thousand ducats.

Ant. And for three months.

Shy. I had forgot; three months; you told me so.
Well then, your bond; and let me see. But hear you;
Methought you said you neither lend nor borrow
Upon advantage.

Ant. I do never use it.

Shy. When Jacob graz'd his uncle Laban's sheep,—
This Jacob from our holy Abram was,
As his wise mother wrought in his behalf,
The third possessor: ay, he was the third,—

Ant. And what of him? did he take interest?

Shy. No; not take interest; not, as you would say,
Directly interest: mark what Jacob did.
When Laban and himself were compromis'd.
That all the eanlings which were streak'd and pied
Should fall as Jacob's hire, the ewes, being rank,
In end of autumn turned to the rams;
And, when the work of generation was
Between these woolly breeders in the act,
The skilful shepherd peel'd me certain wands,
And, in the doing of the deed of kind,
He stuck them up before the fulsome ewes,
Who, then conceiving, did in eaning time
Fall parti-colour'd lambs, and those were Jacob's.
This was a way to thrive, and he was blest:
And thrift is blessing, if men steal it not.

Ant. This was a venture, sir, that Jacob serv'd for;
A thing not in his power to bring to pass,
But sway'd and fashion'd by the hand of heaven.
Was this inserted to make interest good?
Or is your gold and silver ewes and rams?

Shy. I cannot tell; I make it breed as fast:
But note me, signior.

Ant. Mark you this, Bassanio,
The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose.
An evil soul, producing holy witness,
Is like a villain with a smiling cheek,
A goodly apple rotten at the heart.
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!

Shy. Three thousand ducats; 'tis a good round sum.
Three months from twelve, then let me see the rate.

Ant. Well, Shylock, shall we be beholding to you?

Shy. Signior Antonio, many a time and oft
In the Rialto you have rated me
About my moneys and my usances:
Still have I borne it with a patient shrug,
For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe.
You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And spit upon my Jewish gaberdine,
And all for use of that which is mine own.
Well then, it now appears you need my help:
Go to then; you come to me, and you say,
'Shylock, we would have moneys:' you say so;
You, that did void your rheum upon my beard,
And foot me as you spurn a stranger cur
Over your threshold: moneys is your suit.
What should I say to you? Should I not say,

15 supposition: not in cash or in the bank 17 Rialto: the Exchange for: bound for 18 squandered: scattered 29 Nazarite: cf. n. 35 fawning publican: see Luke 18. 10-14. 37 low simplicity: meek folly 39 usance: interest 40 upon the hip: a wrestling grip 50 gross: total sum 57 excess: interest 58 ripe: immediate 59 possess'd: informed

68 Jacob: see Gen. 30. 37. 75 compromis'd: agreed 76 eanlings: new lambs 81 peel'd me: cf. n. 82 kind: nature 83 fulsome: lustful 85 Fall: give birth to 103 beholding: indebted 110 gaberdine: cloak or long coat 115 void your rheum: clear your throat

'Hath a dog money? Is it possible
A cur can lend three thousand ducats?' or Shall I bend low, and in a bondman's key,
With bated breath, and whispering humbleness,
Say this:—
'Fair sir, you spet on me on Wednesday last;
You spurn'd me such a day; another time
You call'd me dog; and for these courtesies
I'll lend you thus much moneys?'
Ant. I am as like to call thee so again,
To spet on thee again, to spurn thee too.
If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not
As to thy friends,—for when did friendship take
A breed for barren metal of his friend?—
But lend it rather to thine enemy;
Who if he break, thou mayst with better face
Exact the penalty.
Shy. Why, look you, how you storm!
I would be friends with you, and have your love,
Forget the shames that you have stain'd me with,
Supply your present wants, and take no doit
Of usance for my moneys, and you'll not hear me:
This is kind I offer.
Bass. This were kindness.
Shy. This kindness will I show.
Go with me to a notary, seal me there
Your single bond; and, in a merry sport,
If you repay me not on such a day,
In such a place, such sum or sums as are
Express'd in the condition, let the forfeit
Be nominated for an equal pound
Of your fair flesh, to be cut off and taken
In what part of your body pleaseth me.
Ant. Content, i' faith: I'll seal to such a bond,
And say there is much kindness in the Jew.
Bass. You shall not seal to such a bond for me:
I'll rather dwell in my necessity.
Ant. Why, fear not, man; I will not forfeit it:
Within these two months, that's a month before
This bond expires, I do expect return
Of thrice three times the value of this bond.
Shy. O father Abram! what these Christians are,
Whose own hard dealings teaches them suspect
The thoughts of others. Pray you, tell me this;
If he should break his day, what should I gain
By the exaction of the forfeiture?
A pound of man's flesh, taken from a man,
Is not so estimable, profitable neither,
As flesh of muttons, beefs, or goats. I say,
To buy his favour, I extend this friendship:
If he will take it, so; if not, adieu;
And, for my love, I pray you wrong me not.
Ant. Yes, Shylock, I will seal unto this bond.
Shy. Then meet me forthwith at the notary's;
Give him direction for this merry bond,
And I will go and purse the ducats straight,
See to my house, left in the fearful guard
Of an unthrifty knave, and presently
I will be with you. Exit.
Ant. Hie thee, gentle Jew.
This Hebrew will turn Christian: he grows kind.
Bass. I like not fair terms and a villain's mind.
Ant. Come on: in this there can be no dismay;
My ships come home a month before the day. Exeunt.

124 spet: spat 139 doit: Dutch coin of small value 143 Bass.; cf. n. 145 Your single: merely your 149 equal: exact 175 fearful: fearfully insecure

ACT SECOND ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Belmont. A Room in Portia's House]
Enter Morochus, a tawny Moor, all in white, and three or four followers accordingly, with Portia, Nerissa and their train. Flo[urish of] Cornets.

Mor. Mislike me not for my complexion,
The shadow'd livery of the burnish'd sun,
To whom I am a neighbour and near bred.
Bring me the fairest creature northward born,
Where Phœbus' fire scarce thaws the icicles,
And let us make incision for your love,
To prove whose blood is reddest, his or mine.
I tell thee, lady, this aspect of mine
Hath fear'd the valiant: by my love, I swear
The best regarded virgins of our clime
Have lov'd it too: I would not change this hue,
Except to steal your thoughts, my gentle queen.
Por. In terms of choice I am not solely led
By nice direction of a maiden's eyes;
Besides, the lottery of my destiny
Bars me the right of voluntary choosing:
But if my father had not scanted me
And hedg'd me by his wit, to yield myself
His wife who wins me by that means I told you,
Yourself, renowned prince, then stood as fair
As any comer I have look'd on yet
For my affection.
Mor. Even for that I thank you:
Therefore, I pray you, lead me to the caskets
To try my fortune. By this scimitar,—
That slew the Sophy, and a Persian prince
That won three fields of Sultan Solyman,—
I would outstare the sternest eyes that look,
Outbrave the heart most daring on the earth,
Pluck the young sucking cubs from the she-bear,
Yea, mock the lion when he roars for prey,
To win thee, lady. But, alas the while!
If Hercules and Lichas play at dice
Which is the better man, the greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand:
So is Alcides beaten by his page;
And so may I, blind fortune leading me,
Miss that which one unworthier may attain,
And die with grieving.
Por. You must take your chance;

Scene One S. d. accordingly: in similar dress 2 shadow'd: dark 7 reddest: cf. n. 9 fear'd: frightened 11, 12 I would not, etc.: cf. n. 14 nice: captious 17 scanted: restricted 18 wit: intelligence 26 Sophy: Shah of Persia 27 Solyman: He fought the Persians in 1535 33 Lichas: the servant of Hercules 36 Alcides: Alcæus was the father of Hercules' stepfather

And either not attempt to choose at all,
Or swear before you choose, if you choose wrong,
Never to speak to lady afterward
In way of marriage: therefore be advis'd.
Mor. Nor will not: come, bring me unto my chance.
Por. First, forward to the temple: after dinner
Your hazard shall be made.
Mor. Good fortune then!
To make me blest or cursed'st among men! Cornets. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Venice. A Street]
Enter the Clown alone.

Laun. Certainly my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew my master. The fiend is at mine elbow, and tempts me, saying to me, 'Gobbo, Launcelot Gobbo, good Launcelot,' or 'good Gobbo,' or 'good Launcelot Gobbo, use your legs, take the start, run away.' My conscience says, 'No; take heed, honest Launcelot; take heed, honest Gobbo;' or, as aforesaid, 'honest Launcelot Gobbo; do not run; scorn running with thy heels.' Well, the most courageous fiend bids me pack: 'Via!' says the fiend; 'away!' says the fiend; 'for the heavens, rouse up a brave mind,' says the fiend, 'and run.' Well, my conscience, hanging about the neck of my heart, says very wisely to me, 'My honest friend Launcelot, being an honest man's son,'—or rather an honest woman's son;—for, indeed, my father did something smack, something grow to, he had a kind of taste;—well, my conscience says, 'Launcelot, budge not.' 'Budge,' says the fiend. 'Budge not,' says my conscience. 'Conscience,' say I, 'you counsel well;' 'fiend,' say I, 'you counsel well:' to be ruled by my conscience, I should stay with the Jew my master, who, God bless the mark! is a kind of devil; and, to run away from the Jew, I should be ruled by the fiend, who saving your reverence, is the devil himself. Certainly, the Jew is the very devil incarnation; and, in my conscience, my conscience is but a kind of hard conscience, to offer to counsel me to stay with the Jew. The fiend gives the more friendly counsel: I will run, fiend; my heels are at your commandment; I will run.

Enter Old Gobbo, with a basket.

Gob. Master young man, you; I pray you, which is the way to Master Jew's?

Laun. [Aside.] O heavens! this is my true-begotten father, who, being more than sand-blind, high-gravel blind, knows me not: I will try confusions with him.

Gob. Master young gentleman, I pray you, which is the way to Master Jew's?

Laun. Turn up on your right hand at the next turning, but, at the next turning of all, on your left; marry, at the very next turning, turn of no hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jew's house.

Gob. By God's sonties, 'twill be a hard way to hit. Can you tell me whether one Launcelot, that dwells with him, dwell with him or no?

Laun. Talk you of young Master Launcelot? [Aside.] Mark me now; now will I raise the waters. Talk you of young Master Launcelot?

Gob. No master, sir, but a poor man's son: his father, though I say it, is an honest, exceeding poor man, and, God be thanked, well to live.

Laun. Well, let his father be what a' will, we talk of young Master Launcelot.

Gob. Your worship's friend, and Launcelot, sir.

Laun. But I pray you, ergo, old man, ergo, I beseech you, talk you of young Master Launcelot?

Gob. Of Launcelot, an 't please your mastership.

Laun. Ergo, Master Launcelot. Talk not of Master Launcelot, father; for the young gentleman,—according to Fates and Destinies and such odd sayings, the Sisters Three and such branches of learning,—is, indeed, deceased; or, as you would say in plain terms, gone to heaven.

Gob. Marry, God forbid! the boy was the very staff of my age, my very prop.

Laun. [Aside.] Do I look like a cudgel or a hovel-post, a staff or a prop? Do you know me, father?

Gob. Alack the day! I know you not, young gentleman: but I pray you, tell me, is my boy,—God rest his soul!—alive or dead?

Laun. Do you not know me, father?

Gob. Alack, sir, I am sand-blind; I know you not.

Laun. Nay, indeed, if you had your eyes, you might fail of the knowing me: it is a wise father that knows his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your son. Give me your blessing; truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid long; a man's son may, but, in the end, truth will out.

Gob. Pray you, sir, stand up. I am sure you are not Launcelot, my boy.

Laun. Pray you, let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing: I am Launcelot, your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think you are my son.

Laun. I know not what I shall think of that; but I am Launcelot, the Jew's man, and I am sure Margery your wife is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery, indeed: I'll be sworn, if thou be Launcelot, thou art mine own flesh and blood. Lord worshipped might he be! what a beard hast thou got! thou hast got more hair on thy chin than Dobbin my phill-horse has on his tail.

Laun. It should seem then that Dobbin's tail grows backward: I am sure he had more hair on his tail than I have on my face, when I last saw him.

Gob. Lord! how art thou changed. How dost thou and thy master agree? I have brought him a present. How 'gree you now?

Laun. Well, well: but, for mine own part, as I have set up my rest to run away, so I will not rest till I have run some ground. My master's a very Jew: give him a present! give him a halter: I am famished in his service: you may tell every finger

44 advis'd: cautious 7, 8 with thy heels: indignantly 8 'Via!': Italian, meaning "get-ap" 9 for . . . heavens: for heaven's sake! 14 smack, etc.: cf. n. 15 budge: flinch, give ground 19 God bless the mark: cf. n. 21 saving your reverence: (no offence intended!) 22 incarnation: cf. n. 30 sand-blind: half-blind; cf. n. 38 sonties: cf. n.

46 well to live: well to do 51, 52 Cf. n. 60 hovel-post: a supporting stick 82, 83 Lord . . . be: Praise the Lord! 83 what a beard: cf. n. 84 phill-horse: shaft-horse 92, 93 set up my rest: staked all, resolved absolutely (card-game term) 95 tell: count; cf. n.

I have with my ribs. Father, I am glad you are come: give me your present to one Master Bassanio, who, indeed, gives rare new liveries. If I serve not him, I will run as far as God has any ground. O rare fortune! here comes the man: to him, father; for I am a Jew, if I serve the Jew any longer.

Enter Bassanio, with a follower [Leonardo] or two.

Bass. You may do so; but let it be so hasted that supper be ready at the farthest by five of the clock. See these letters delivered; put the liveries to making; and desire Gratiano to come anon to my lodging. [Exit a Servant.]

Laun. To him, father.

Gob. God bless your worship!

Bass. Gramercy! wouldst thou aught with me?

Gob. Here's my son, sir, a poor boy,—

Laun. Not a poor boy, sir, but the rich Jew's man; that would, sir,—as my father shall specify,—

Gob. He hath a great infection, sir, as one would say, to serve—

Laun. Indeed, the short and the long is, I serve the Jew, and have a desire, as my father shall specify,—

Gob. His master and he, saving your worship's reverence, are scarce cater-cousins,—

Laun. To be brief, the very truth is that the Jew having done me wrong, doth cause me,—as my father, being, I hope, an old man, shall frutify unto you,—

Gob. I have here a dish of doves that I would bestow upon your worship, and my suit is,—

Laun. In very brief, the suit is impertinent to myself, as your worship shall know by this honest old man; and, though I say it, though old man, yet poor man, my father.

Bass. One speak for both. What would you?

Laun. Serve you, sir.

Gob. That is the very defect of the matter, sir.

Bass. I know thee well; thou hast obtain'd thy suit:
Shylock thy master spoke with me this day,
And hath preferr'd thee, if it be preferment
To leave a rich Jew's service, to become
The follower of so poor a gentleman.

Laun. The old proverb is very well parted between my master Shylock and you, sir: you have the grace of God, sir, and he hath enough.

Bass. Thou speak'st it well. Go, father, with thy son.
Take leave of thy old master, and inquire
My lodging out. [To his followers.] Give him a livery
More guarded than his fellows': see it done.

Laun. Father, in. I cannot get a service, no; I have ne'er a tongue in my head. Well, [Looking on his palm] if any man in Italy have a fairer table which doth offer to swear upon a book, I shall have good fortune. Go to; here's a simple line of life: here's a small trifle of wives: alas! fifteen wives is nothing: a 'leven widows and nine maids is a simple coming-in for one man; and then to 'scape drowning thrice, and to be in peril of my life with the edge of a feather-bed; here are simple 'scapes. Well, if Fortune be a woman, she's a good wench for this gear. Father, come; I'll take my leave of the Jew in the twinkling of an eye. Exit Clown [with Old Gobbo].

Bass. I pray thee, good Leonardo, think on this:
These things being bought, and orderly bestow'd,
Return in haste, for I do feast to-night
My best-esteem'd acquaintance: hie thee, go.

Leon. My best endeavours shall be done herein.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Where is your master?

Leon. Yonder, sir, he walks. [Exit.]

Gra. Signior Bassanio!—

Bass. Gratiano!

Gra. I have a suit to you.

Bass. You have obtain'd it.

Gra. You must not deny me: I must go with you to Belmont.

Bass. Why, then you must. But hear thee, Gratiano;
Thou art too wild, too rude and bold of voice;
Parts that become thee happily enough,
And in such eyes as ours appear not faults;
But where thou art not known, why, there they show
Something too liberal. Pray thee, take pain
To allay with some cold drops of modesty
Thy skipping spirit, lest, through thy wild behaviour,
I be misconstru'd in the place I go to,
And lose my hopes.

Gra. Signior Bassanio, hear me:
If I do not put on a sober habit,
Talk with respect, and swear but now and then,
Wear prayer-books in my pocket, look demurely,
Nay more, while grace is saying, hood mine eyes
Thus with my hat, and sigh, and say 'amen;'
Use all the observance of civility,
Like one well studied in a sad ostent
To please his grandam, never trust me more.

Bass. Well, we shall see your bearing.

Gra. Nay, but I bar to-night; you shall not gauge me
By what we do to-night.

Bass. No, that were pity:
I would entreat you rather to put on
Your boldest suit of mirth, for we have friends
That purpose merriment. But fare you well:
I have some business.

Gra. And I must to Lorenzo and the rest;
But we will visit you at supper-time. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[The Same. A Room in Shylock's House]
Enter Jessica and the Clown.

Jes. I am sorry thou wilt leave my father so:
Our house is hell, and thou, a merry devil,
Didst rob it of some taste of tediousness.
But fare thee well; there is a ducat for thee:

98, 99 God has any ground: He had little in Venice 107 Gramercy: grand merci, many thanks 116 cater-cousins: speaking acquaintances 119 frutify: i.e., notify (?) 122 impertinent: i.e., pertinent, relating 130 preferr'd: recommended preferment: advancement 133 The old proverb; cf. n. 139 guarded: adorned with facings 142 table; cf. n. 145 simple coming-in: small inheritance

154 hie thee: hurry up 169 liberal: unrestrained 175 habit: behavior 178 hood: hats were worn at meals, but removed during grace 181 studied: rehearsed sad ostent: serious appearance 3 taste: small bit

And, Launcelot, soon at supper shalt thou see
Lorenzo, who is thy new master's guest:
Give him this letter; do it secretly;
And so farewell: I would not have my father
See me in talk with thee.

Laun. Adieu! tears exhibit my tongue. Most beautiful pagan, most sweet Jew! If a Christian did not play the knave and get thee, I am much deceived. But, adieu! these foolish drops do somewhat drown my manly spirit: adieu! Exit.

Jes. Farewell, good Launcelot.
Alack, what heinous sin is it in me
To be asham'd to be my father's child!
But though I am a daughter to his blood,
I am not to his manners. O Lorenzo!
If thou keep promise, I shall end this strife,
Become a Christian, and thy loving wife. Exit.

Scene Fourth

[The Same. A Street]
Enter Gratiano, Lorenzo, Salarino, and Salanio.

Lor. Nay, we will slink away in supper-time,
Disguise us at my lodging, and return
All in an hour.

Gra. We have not made good preparation.

Salar. We have not spoke us yet of torch-bearers.

Salan. 'Tis vile, unless it may be quaintly order'd,
And better, in my mind, not undertook.

Lor. 'Tis now but four o'clock: we have two hours
To furnish us.

Enter Launcelot, with a letter.

Friend Launcelot, what's the news?

Laun. An it shall please you to break up this, it shall seem to signify.

Lor. I know the hand: in faith, 'tis a fair hand;
And whiter than the paper it writ on
Is the fair hand that writ.

Gra. Love news, in faith.

Laun. By your leave, sir.

Lor. Whither goest thou?

Laun. Marry, sir, to bid my old master, the Jew, to sup tonight with my new master, the Christian.

Lor. Hold here, take this: tell gentle Jessica
I will not fail her; speak it privately.
Go, gentlemen, [Exit Clown.]
Will you prepare you for this masque to-night?
I am provided of a torch-bearer.

Salar. Ay, marry, I'll be gone about it straight.

Salan. And so will I.

Lor. Meet me and Gratiano
At Gratiano's lodging some hour hence.

Salar. 'Tis good we do so. Exit [with Salanio].

Gra. Was not that letter from fair Jessica?

Lor. I must needs tell thee all. She hath directed
How I shall take her from her father's house;
What gold and jewels she is furnish'd with;
What page's suit she hath in readiness.
If e'er the Jew her father come to heaven,
It will be for his gentle daughter's sake;
And never dare misfortune cross her foot,
Unless she do it under this excuse,
That she is issue to a faithless Jew.
Come, go with me: peruse this as thou goest.
Fair Jessica shall be my torch-bearer. Exit [with Gratiano].

10 exhibit, etc.: express what my tongue would say 5 spoke us of: ordered 6 quaintly: ingeniously 11 break up: break the seals of

Scene Fifth

[The Same. Before Shylock's House]
Enter Jew and his man that was the Clown.

Shy. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be thy judge,
The difference of old Shylock and Bassanio:—
What, Jessica!—thou shalt not gormandize,
As thou hast done with me;—What, Jessica!—
And sleep and snore, and rend apparel out—
Why, Jessica, I say!

Laun. Why, Jessica!

Shy. Who bids thee call? I do not bid thee call.

Laun. Your worship was wont to tell me that
I could do nothing without bidding.

Enter Jessica.

Jes. Call you? What is your will?

Shy. I am bid forth to supper, Jessica:
There are my keys. But wherefore should I go?
I am not bid for love; they flatter me:
But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon
The prodigal Christian. Jessica, my girl,
Look to my house. I am right loath to go:
There is some ill a-brewing towards my rest
For I did dream of money-bags to-night.

Laun. I beseech you, sir, go: my young master doth expect your reproach.

Shy. So do I his.

Laun. And they have conspired together: I will not say you shall see a masque; but if you do, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a-bleeding on Black-Monday last, at six o'clock i' the morning, falling out that year on Ash-Wednesday was four year in the afternoon.

Shy. What! are there masques? Hear you me, Jessica:
Lock up my doors; and when you hear the drum,
And the vile squealing of the wry-neck'd fife,
Clamber not you up to the casements then,
Nor thrust your head into the public street
To gaze on Christian fools with varnish'd faces,
But stop my house's ears, I mean my casements;
Let not the sound of shallow foppery enter
My sober house. By Jacob's staff I swear
I have no mind of feasting forth to-night;
But I will go. Go you before me, sirrah;
Say I will come.

40 faithless: without Christian faith 5 rend: wear 19 to-night: last night 25 nose, etc.: a sign of bad luck, universally believed Black-Monday: Easter Monday 26,27 falling out, etc.: mere nonsense 30 wry-neck'd: played with the head twisted 33 with varnish'd faces: wearing painted masks (or perhaps painted with cosmetics) 35 foppery: folly 36 Jacob's staff: cf. Gen. 32. 10; Heb. 11. 21 37 forth: out

Laun. I will go before, sir. Mistress, look out at window, for all this;
There will come a Christian by,
Will be worth a Jewess' eye. [Exit Launcelot.]
Shy. What says that fool of Hagar's offspring, ha?
Jes. His words were, 'Farewell, mistress;' nothing else.
Shy. The patch is kind enough, but a huge feeder;
Snail-slow in profit, and he sleeps by day
More than the wild cat: drones hive not with me;
Therefore I part with him, and part with him
To one that I would have him help to waste
His borrow'd purse. Well, Jessica, go in:
Perhaps I will return immediately:
Do as I bid you; shut doors after you:
'Fast bind, fast find,'
A proverb never stale in thrifty mind. Exit.
Jes. Farewell; and if my fortune be not crost,
I have a father, you a daughter, lost. Exit.

Scene Sixth

[The Same]
Enter the Maskers, Gratiano and Salarino.

Gra. This is the penthouse under which Lorenzo
Desir'd us to make stand.
Salar. His hour is almost past.
Gra. And it is marvel he out-dwells his hour,
For lovers ever run before the clock.
Salar. O! ten times faster Venus' pigeons fly
To seal love's bonds new-made, than they are wont
To keep obliged faith unforfeited!
Gra. That ever holds: who riseth from a feast
With that keen appetite that he sits down?
Where is the horse that doth untread again
His tedious measures with the unbated fire
That he did pace them first? All things that are,
Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd.
How like a younker or a prodigal
The scarfed bark puts from her native bay,
Hugg'd and embraced by the strumpet wind!
How like the prodigal doth she return,
With over-weather'd ribs and ragged sails,
Lean, rent, and beggar'd by the strumpet wind!
Salar. Here comes Lorenzo: more of this hereafter.

Enter Lorenzo.

Lor. Sweet friends, your patience for my long abode;
Not I, but my affairs, have made you wait:
When you shall please to play the thieves for wives,
I'll watch as long for you then. Approach;
Here dwells my father Jew. Ho! who's within?

[Enter] Jessica above [in boy's clothes].

Jes. Who are you? Tell me, for more certainty,
Albeit I'll swear that I do know your tongue.

43 Jewess' eye; cf. n. 44 Hagar's; cf. Gen. 16. 46 patch: the dress of fools, hence term of contempt; cf. cross-patch 47 profit: acquired proficiency, training 1 penthouse: an attached shed, lean-to 6 Venus' pigeons: doves drew her chariot 8 obliged: contracted 11 untread: retrace 15 younker: eager youth 16 scarfed; cf. n. 22 abode: delay

Lor. Lorenzo, and thy love.
Jes. Lorenzo, certain; and my love indeed,
For whom love I so much? And now who knows
But you, Lorenzo, whether I am yours?
Lor. Heaven and thy thoughts are witness that thou art.
Jes. Here, catch this casket; it is worth the pains.
I am glad 'tis night, you do not look on me,
For I am much asham'd of my exchange;
But love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit;
For if they could, Cupid himself would blush
To see me thus transformed to a boy.
Lor. Descend, for you must be my torch-bearer.
Jes. What! must I hold a candle to my shames?
They in themselves, good sooth, are too-too light.
Why, 'tis an office of discovery, love,
And I should be obscur'd.
Lor. So are you, sweet,
Even in the lovely garnish of a boy.
But come at once;
For the close night doth play the runaway,
And we are stay'd for at Bassanio's feast.
Jes. I will make fast the doors, and gild myself
With some more ducats, and be with you straight.
[Exit above.]
Gra. Now, by my hood, a Gentile and no Jew.
Lor. Beshrew me, but I love her heartily;
For she is wise, if I can judge of her,
And fair she is, if that mine eyes be true,
And true she is, as she hath prov'd herself;
And therefore, like herself, wise, fair, and true,
Shall she be placed in my constant soul.

Enter Jessica.

What art thou come? On, gentlemen; away!
Our masquing mates by this time for us stay.
Exit [with Jessica and Salarino].

Enter Antonio.

Ant. Who's there?
Gra. Signior Antonio!
Ant. Fie, fie, Gratiano! where are all the rest?
'Tis nine o'clock; our friends all stay for you.
No masque to-night: the wind is come about;
Bassanio presently will go aboard:
I have sent twenty out to seek for you.
Gra. I am glad on 't: I desire no more delight
Than to be under sail and gone to-night. Exeunt.

Scene Seventh

[Belmont. A Room in Portia's House]
Enter Portia, with Morocco, and both their Trains.

Por. Go, draw aside the curtains, and discover
The several caskets to this noble prince.
Now make your choice.

32 yours: i.e., whether you love me 36 exchange: transformation 44 discovery: revealing 47 garnish: dress 49 close: secret 54 Beshrew: curse, a mild oath 1 discover: reveal

Mor. The first, of gold, which this inscription bears:
Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire.
The second, silver, which this promise carries:
Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves.
This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt:
Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath.
How shall I know if I do choose the right?
Por. The one of them contains my picture, prince:
If you choose that, then I am yours withal.
Mor. Some god direct my judgment! Let me see:
I will survey the inscriptions back again:
What says this leaden casket?
Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath.
Must give: For what? for lead? hazard for lead?
This casket threatens. Men that hazard all
Do it in hope of fair advantages:
A golden mind stoops not to shows of dross;
I'll then nor give nor hazard aught for lead.
What says the silver with her virgin hue?
Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves.
As much as he deserves! Pause there, Morocco,
And weigh thy value with an even hand.
If thou be'st rated by thy estimation,
Thou dost deserve enough; and yet enough
May not extend so far as to the lady:
And yet to be afeard of my deserving
Were but a weak disabling of myself.
As much as I deserve! Why, that's the lady:
I do in birth deserve her, and in fortunes,
In graces, and in qualities of breeding;
But more than these, in love I do deserve.
What if I stray'd no further, but chose here?
Let's see once more this saying grav'd in gold:
Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire.
Why, that's the lady: all the world desires her;
From the four corners of the earth they come,
To kiss this shrine, this mortal-breathing saint:
The Hyrcanian deserts and the vasty wilds
Of wide Arabia are as throughfares now
For princes to come view fair Portia:
The watery kingdom, whose ambitious head
Spits in the face of heaven, is no bar
To stop the foreign spirits, but they come,
As o'er a brook, to see fair Portia.
One of these three contains her heavenly picture.
Is 't like that lead contains her? 'Twere damnation
To think so base a thought: it were too gross
To rib her cerecloth in the obscure grave.
Or shall I think in silver she's immur'd,
Being ten times undervalu'd to tried gold?
O sinful thought! Never so rich a gem
Was set in worse than gold. They have in England
A coin that bears the figure of an angel
Stamped in gold, but that's insculp'd upon;
But here an angel in a golden bed
Lies all within. Deliver me the key:

8 all as blunt: equally blunt 12 withal: therewith 25 with an even hand: impartially 26 rated . . . estimation: valued according to thy worth 30 disabling: disparagement 33 In natural and acquired advantages 36 grav'd: engraved 40 shrine: image 41 Hyrcanian: south of the Caspian Sea 42 throughfares: thoroughfares 51 rib: enclose cerecloth: winding sheet 53 undervalu'd: inferior in value 56 angel: gold coin worth 10s. 57 insculp'd upon: engraved on the outside

Here do I choose, and thrive I as I may!
Por. There, take it, prince; and if my form lie there
Then I am yours. [He unlocks the golden casket.]
Mor. O hell! what have we here?
A carrion Death, within whose empty eye
There is a written scroll. I'll read the writing.

'All that glisters is not gold;
Often have you heard that told:
Many a man his life hath sold
But my outside to behold:
Gilded tombs do worms infold.
Had you been as wise as bold,
Young in limbs, in judgment old,
Your answer had not been inscroll'd:
Fare you well; your suit is cold.'

Cold, indeed; and labour lost:
Then, farewell, heat, and welcome, frost!
Portia, adieu. I have too griev'd a heart
To take a tedious leave: thus losers part. Exit [with his Train].
Por. A gentle riddance. Draw the curtains: go.
Let all of his complexion choose me so.
Flo[urish of] Cornets. Exeunt.

Scene Eighth

[Venice. A Street]
Enter Salarino and Salanio.

Salar. Why, man, I saw Bassanio under sail:
With him is Gratiano gone along;
And in their ship I'm sure Lorenzo is not.
Salan. The villain Jew with outcries rais'd the duke,
Who went with him to search Bassanio's ship.
Salar. He came too late, the ship was under sail:
But there the duke was given to understand
That in a gondola were seen together
Lorenzo and his amorous Jessica.
Besides, Antonio certified the duke
They were not with Bassanio in his ship.
Salan. I never heard a passion so confus'd,
So strange, outrageous, and so variable,
As the dog Jew did utter in the streets:
'My daughter! O my ducats! O my daughter!
Fled with a Christian! O my Christian ducats!
Justice! the law! my ducats, and my daughter!
A sealed bag, two sealed bags of ducats,
Of double ducats, stol'n from me by my daughter!
And jewels! two stones, two rich and precious stones,
Stol'n by my daughter! Justice! find the girl!
She hath the stones upon her, and the ducats.'
Salar. Why, all the boys in Venice follow him,
Crying, his stones, his daughter, and his ducats.
Salan. Let good Antonio look he keep his day,
Or he shall pay for this.
Salar. Marry, well remember'd.
I reason'd with a Frenchman yesterday,
Who told me,—in the narrow seas that part

12 passion: sorrow 28 reason'd: talked

The French and English,—there miscarried
A vessel of our country richly fraught.
I thought upon Antonio when he told me,
And wish'd in silence that it were not his.
Salan. You were best to tell Antonio what you hear;
Yet do not suddenly, for it may grieve him.
Salar. A kinder gentleman treads not the earth.
I saw Bassanio and Antonio part:
Bassanio told him he would make some speed
Of his return: he answer'd 'Do not so;
Slubber not business for my sake, Bassanio,
But stay the very riping of the time;
And for the Jew's bond which he hath of me,
Let it not enter in your mind of love:
Be merry, and employ your chiefest thoughts
To courtship and such fair ostents of love
As shall conveniently become you there:'
And even there, his eye being big with tears,
Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,
And with affection wondrous sensible
He wrung Bassanio's hand; and so they parted.
Salan. I think he only loves the world for him.
I pray thee, let us go and find him out,
And quicken his embraced heaviness
With some delight or other.
Salar. Do we so. Exeunt.

Scene Ninth

[Belmont. A Room in Portia's House]
Enter Nerissa, and a Servitor.

Ner. Quick, quick, I pray thee; draw the curtain straight:
The Prince of Arragon hath ta'en his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Enter Arragon, his train, and Portia. Flor[ish of] Cornets.

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets, noble prince:
If you choose that wherein I am contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptial rites be solemniz'd;
But if you fail, without more speech, my lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.
Ar. I am enjoin'd by oath to observe three things:
First, never to unfold to any one
Which casket 'twas I chose; next, if I fail
Of the right casket, never in my life
To woo a maid in way of marriage;
Lastly,
If I do fail in fortune of my choice,
Immediately to leave you and be gone.
Por. To these injunctions every one doth swear
That comes to hazard for my worthless self.
Ar. And so have I address'd me. Fortune now
To my heart's hope! Gold, silver, and base lead.
Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath:
You shall look fairer, ere I give or hazard.

40 Slubber: spoil by scamping 43 mind of love: loving mind 45 ostents: displays 46 conveniently: properly 49 sensible: charged with feeling 53 embraced heaviness: the sorrow that he so clings to 3 election: choice 18 comes to hazard: incurs risk 19 address'd me: prepared myself

What says the golden chest? ha! let me see:
Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire.
What many men desire! that 'many' may be meant
By the fool multitude, that choose by show,
Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach,
Which pries not to the interior, but, like the martlet,
Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
Even in the force and road of casualty.
I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits
And rank me with the barbarous multitude.
Why, then to thee, thou silver treasure-house;
Tell me once more what title thou dost bear:
Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves.
And well said too; for who shall go about
To cozen fortune and be honourable
Without the stamp of merit? Let none presume
To wear an undeserved dignity.
O! that estates, degrees, and offices
Were not deriv'd corruptly, and that clear honour
Were purchas'd by the merit of the wearer.
How many then should cover that stand bare;
How many be commanded that command;
How much low peasantry would then be glean'd
From the true seed of honour; and how much honour
Pick'd from the chaff and ruin of the times
To be new varnish'd! Well, but to my choice:
Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves.
I will assume desert. Give me a key for this,
And instantly unlock my fortunes here.
[He opens the silver casket.]
Por. Too long a pause for that which you find there.
Ar. What's here? the portrait of a blinking idiot,
Presenting me a schedule! I will read it.
How much unlike art thou to Portia!
How much unlike my hopes and my deservings!
Who chooseth me shall have as much as he deserves.
Did I deserve no more than a fool's head?
Is that my prize? are my deserts no better?
Por. To offend, and judge, are distinct offices,
And of opposed natures.
Ar. What is here?

'The fire seven times tried this:
Seven times tried that judgment is
That did never choose amiss.
Some there be that shadows kiss;
Such have but a shadow's bliss:
There be fools alive, I wis,
Silver'd o'er; and so was this.
Take what wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:
So be gone, sir: you are sped.'

Still more fool I shall appear

26 By: for 27 fond: foolish 28 martlet: martin (see Macbeth I.vi.5). 30 force and road: 'in vi et via,' i.e., where accident occurs with the greatest violence and frequency 32 jump: agree 33 rank me: class myself 37 go about: undertake 38 cozen: cheat honourable: worshipful, honored 41 estates: status, position degrees: ranks 42 deriv'd: inherited 44 cover: wear their hats (in token of social dignity) 47 true ... honour: scions of the great 48 chaff and ruin: riff-raff 51 assume: claim 61 To offend, etc.: the criminal need not judge his own case 69 I wis: corruption of 'gewis,' certainly

By the time I linger here:
With one fool's head I came to woo,
But I go away with two.
Sweet, adieu. I'll keep my oath,
Patiently to bear my wroth. [Exit Arragon with his Train.]

Por. Thus hath the candle sing'd the moth.
O, these deliberate fools! when they do choose,
They have the wisdom by their wit to lose.

Ner. The ancient saying is no heresy:
'Hanging and wiving goes by destiny.'

Por. Come, draw the curtain, Nerissa.

Enter Messenger.

Mes. Where is my lady?

Por. Here; what would my lord?

Mes. Madam, there is alighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes before
To signify the approaching of his lord;
From whom he bringeth sensible regreets,
To wit,—besides commends and courteous breath,—
Gifts of rich value. Yet I have not seen
So likely an embassador of love.
A day in April never came so sweet,
To show how costly summer was at hand,
As this fore-spurrer comes before his lord.

Por. No more, I pray thee: I am half afeard
Thou wilt say anon he is some kin to thee,
Thou spend'st such high-day wit in praising him.
Come, come, Nerissa; for I long to see
Quick Cupid's post that comes so mannerly.

Ner. Bassanio, lord Love, if thy will it be! Exeunt.

Act Third ❧ Scene First

[Venice. A Street]
Enter Salanio and Salarino.

Salan. Now, what news on the Rialto?

Salar. Why, yet it lives there unchecked that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wracked on the narrow seas; the Goodwins, I think they call the place; a very dangerous flat, and fatal, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossip Report be an honest woman of her word.

Salan. I would she were as lying a gossip in that as ever knapped ginger, or made her neighbours believe she wept for the death of a third husband. But it is true,—without any slips of prolixity or crossing the plain highway of talk,—that the good Antonio, the honest Antonio,—O, that I had a title good enough to keep his name company!—

Salar. Come, the full stop.

Salan. Ha! what sayst thou? Why, the end is, he hath lost a ship.

Salar. I would it might prove the end of his losses.

Salan. Let me say 'amen' betimes, lest the devil cross my prayer, for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew.

Enter Shylock.

How now, Shylock! what news among the merchants?

Shy. You knew, none so well, none so well as you, of my daughter's flight.

Salar. That's certain: I, for my part, knew the tailor that made the wings she flew withal.

Salan. And Shylock, for his own part, knew the bird was fledged; and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the dam.

Shy. She is damned for it.

Salar. That's certain, if the devil may be her judge.

Shy. My own flesh and blood to rebel!

Salan. Out upon it, old carrion! rebels it at these years?

Shy. I say my daughter is my flesh and blood.

Salar. There is more difference between thy flesh and hers than between jet and ivory; more between your bloods than there is between red wine and Rhenish. But tell us, do you hear whether Antonio have had any loss at sea or no?

Shy. There I have another bad match: a bankrupt, a prodigal, who dare scarce show his head on the Rialto; a beggar, that was used to come so smug upon the mart; let him look to his bond: he was wont to call me usurer; let him look to his bond: he was wont to lend money for a Christian courtesy; let him look to his bond.

Salar. Why, I am sure, if he forfeit thou wilt not take his flesh: what's that good for?

Shy. To bait fish withal: if it feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge. He hath disgraced me, and hindered me half a million, laughed at my losses, mocked at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and what's his reason? I am a Jew. Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? if you tickle us, do we not laugh? if you poison us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? If we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that. If a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his humility? Revenge. If a Christian wrong a Jew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example? Why, revenge. The villainy you teach me I will execute, and it shall go hard but I will better the instruction.

Enter a man from Antonio.

Man. Gentlemen, my master Antonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both.

Salar. We have been up and down to seek him.

Enter Tubal.

Salan. Here comes another of the tribe: a third cannot be matched, unless the devil himself turn Jew.

Exeunt Gentlemen [i.e. Salanio, Salarino, and Antonio's man].

Shy. How now, Tubal! what news from Genoa? Hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did hear of her, but cannot find her.

Shy. Why there, there, there, there! a diamond gone, cost me two thousand ducats in Frankfort! The curse never fell

87 my lord: cf. n. 91 sensible: substantial, meaning his gifts regreets: greetings 94 likely: promising 100 high-day: holiday, meaning ornate, dressed for holiday 3 wracked: wrecked 3 narrow seas: English Channel 8 knapped: munched (pronounce the 'k')

23 withal: with; cf. n. 25 complexion: disposition 57 humility: sufferance

upon our nation till now; I never felt it till now: two thousand ducats in that; and other precious, precious jewels. I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the jewels in her ear! would she were hearsed at my foot, and the ducats in her coffin! No news of them? Why, so: and I know not what's spent in the search: Why thou—loss upon loss! the thief gone with so much, and so much to find the thief; and no satisfaction, no revenge: nor no ill luck stirring but what lights on my shoulders; no sighs but of my breathing; no tears but of my shedding.

Tub. Yes, other men have ill luck too. Antonio, as I heard in Genoa,—

Shy. What, what, what? ill luck, ill luck?

Tub. —hath an argosy cast away, coming from Tripolis.

Shy. I thank God! I thank God! Is it true? is it true?

Tub. I spoke with some of the sailors that escaped the wrack.

Shy. I thank thee, good Tubal. Good news, good news! ha, ha! Where? in Genoa?

Tub. Your daughter spent in Genoa, as I heard, one night, fourscore ducats.

Shy. Thou stick'st a dagger in me: I shall never see my gold again: fourscore ducats at a sitting! fourscore ducats!

Tub. There came divers of Antonio's creditors in my company to Venice, that swear he cannot choose but break.

Shy. I am very glad of it: I'll plague him; I'll torture him: I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them showed me a ring that he had of your daughter for a monkey.

Shy. Out upon her! Thou torturest me, Tubal: it was my turquoise; I had it of Leah when I was a bachelor: I would not have given it for a wilderness of monkeys.

Tub. But Antonio is certainly undone.

Shy. Nay, that's true, that's very true. Go, Tubal, fee me an officer; bespeak him a fortnight before. I will have the heart of him, if he forfeit; for, were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandise I will. Go, go, Tubal, and meet me at our synagogue; go, good Tubal; at our synagogue, Tubal.

Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Belmont. A Room in Portia's House]

Enter Bassanio, Portia, Gratiano, [Nerissa,] and all their Train.

Por. I pray you, tarry: pause a day or two
Before you hazard; for, in choosing wrong,
I lose your company: therefore, forbear awhile.
There's something tells me, but it is not love,
I would not lose you; and you know yourself,
Hate counsels not in such a quality.
But lest you should not understand me well,—
And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought,—
I would detain you here some month or two
Before you venture for me. I could teach you
How to choose right, but then I am forsworn;
So will I never be: so may you miss me;
But if you do, you'll make me wish a sin,
That I had been forsworn. Beshrew your eyes,
They have o'erlook'd me and divided me:
One half of me is yours, the other half yours,
Mine own, I would say; but if mine, then yours,
And so all yours. O! these naughty times
Put bars between the owners and their rights;
And so, though yours, not yours. Prove it so,
Let fortune go to hell for it, not I.
I speak too long; but 'tis to peise the time,
To eke it and to draw it out in length,
To stay you from election.

Bass. Let me choose;
For as I am, I live upon the rack.

Por. Upon the rack, Bassanio! then confess
What treason there is mingled with your love.

Bass. None but that ugly treason of mistrust,
Which makes me fear th' enjoying of my love:
There may as well be amity and life
'Tween snow and fire, as treason and my love.

Por. Ay, but I fear you speak upon the rack,
Where men enforced do speak anything.

Bass. Promise me life, and I'll confess the truth.

Por. Well then, confess, and live.

Bass. 'Confess' and 'love'
Had been the very sum of my confession:
O happy torment, when my torturer
Doth teach me answers for deliverance!
But let me to my fortune and the caskets.

Por. Away then! I am lock'd in one of them:
If you do love me, you will find me out.
Nerissa and the rest, stand all aloof.
Let music sound while he doth make his choice;
Then, if he lose, he makes a swan-like end,
Fading in music: that the comparison
May stand more proper, my eye shall be the stream
And watery death-bed for him. He may win;
And what is music then? then music is
Even as the flourish when true subjects bow
To a new-crowned monarch: such it is
As are those dulcet sounds in break of day
That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear,
And summon him to marriage. Now he goes,
With no less presence, but with much more love,
Than young Alcides, when he did redeem
The virgin tribute paid by howling Troy
To the sea-monster: I stand for sacrifice;
The rest aloof are the Dardanian wives,
With bleared visages, come forth to view
The issue of the exploit. Go, Hercules!
Live thou, I live: with much, much more dismay
I view the fight than thou that mak'st the fray.

Here Music. A Song the whilst Bassanio comments on the caskets to himself.

'Tell me where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart or in the head?
How begot, how nourished?

77 Why thou; cf. n. 90 Where? in Genoa?; cf. n. 105, 106 fee . . . officer: engage a sheriff's officer for me 108 merchandise: business 6 Hate prompts no such advice 15 o'erlook'd: looked over, i.e., bewitched 20,21 Prove it so, etc.; cf. n. 22 peise: weigh down, retard 23 eke: add to 29 mistrust: doubt, uncertainty 30 fear: feel apprehensive about 31 amity and life: affectionate intercourse 51 flourish: trumpets at coronations 56, 57 With . . . Alcides: cf. n. presence: dignity of person 60 Dardanian: Trojan 67 fancy: love

Reply, reply.
It is engender'd in the eyes,
With gazing fed; and fancy dies
In the cradle where it lies.
Let us all ring fancy's knell:
I'll begin it,—Ding, dong, bell.

All. Ding, dong, bell.

Bass. So may the outward shows be least themselves:
The world is still deceiv'd with ornament.
In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt
But, being season'd with a gracious voice,
Obscures the show of evil? In religion,
What damned error, but some sober brow
Will bless it and approve it with a text,
Hiding the grossness with fair ornament?
There is no vice so simple but assumes
Some mark of virtue on his outward parts.
How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false
As stairs of sand, wear yet upon their chins
The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars,
Who, inward search'd, have livers white as milk;
And these assume but valour's excrement
To render them redoubted! Look on beauty,
And you shall see 'tis purchas'd by the weight;
Which therein works a miracle in nature,
Making them lightest that wear most of it:
So are those crisped snaky golden locks
Which make such wanton gambols with the wind,
Upon supposed fairness, often known
To be the dowry of a second head,
The skull that bred them in the sepulchre.
Thus ornament is but the guiled shore
To a most dangerous sea; the beauteous scarf
Veiling an Indian beauty; in a word,
The seeming truth which cunning times put on
To entrap the wisest. Therefore, thou gaudy gold,
Hard food for Midas, I will none of thee;
Nor none of thee, thou pale and common drudge
'Tween man and man: but thou, thou meagre lead,
Which rather threat'nest than dost promise aught,
Thy plainness moves me more than eloquence,
And here choose I: joy be the consequence!

Por. [Aside.] How all the other passions fleet to air,
As doubtful thoughts, and rash-embrac'd despair,
And shuddering fear, and green-ey'd jealousy.
O love! be moderate; allay thy ecstasy;
In measure rain thy joy; scant this excess;
I feel too much thy blessing; make it less,
For fear I surfeit!

Bass. What find I here?
[Opening the leaden casket.]
Fair Portia's counterfeit! What demi-god
Hath come so near creation? Move these eyes?
Or whether, riding on the balls of mine,
Seem they in motion? Here are sever'd lips,
Parted with sugar breath; so sweet a bar
Should sunder such sweet friends. Here, in her hairs
The painter plays the spider, and hath woven
A golden mesh to entrap the hearts of men
Faster than gnats in cobwebs: but her eyes!—
How could he see to do them? having made one,
Methinks it should have power to steal both his
And leave itself unfurnish'd: yet look, how far
The substance of my praise doth wrong this shadow
In underprizing it, so far this shadow
Doth limp behind the substance. Here's the scroll,
The continent and summary of my fortune.

'You that choose not by the view,
Chance as fair and choose as true!
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content and seek no new.
If you be well pleas'd with this
And hold your fortune for your bliss,
Turn you where your lady is
And claim her with a loving kiss.'

A gentle scroll. Fair lady, by your leave; [Kissing her.]
I come by note, to give and to receive.
Like one of two contending in a prize,
That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes,
Hearing applause and universal shout,
Giddy in spirit, still gazing in a doubt
Whether those peals of praise be his or no;
So, thrice-fair lady, stand I, even so,
As doubtful whether what I see be true,
Until confirm'd, sign'd, ratified by you.

Por. You see me, Lord Bassanio, where I stand,
Such as I am: though for myself alone
I would not be ambitious in my wish,
To wish myself much better; yet for you
I would be trebled twenty times myself;
A thousand times more fair, ten thousand times
More rich;
That only to stand high in your account,
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Exceed account: but the full sum of me
Is sum of nothing; which, to term in gross,
Is an unlesson'd girl, unschool'd, unpractis'ed;
Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn; happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn;
Happiest of all is that her gentle spirit
Commits itself to yours to be directed,
As from her lord, her governor, her king.
Myself and what is mine to you and yours
Is now converted: but now I was the lord
Of this fair mansion, master of my servants,
Queen o'er myself; and even now, but now,
This house, these servants, and this same myself
Are yours, my lord. I give them with this ring;
Which when you part from, lose, or give away,
Let it presage the ruin of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

Bass. Madam, you have bereft me of all words,

83 approve: prove, ratify 85 simple: pure, unmixed 86 his: its 91 excrement: excrescence 95 lightest: i.e., most frivolous 96 crisped: curled 98 Upon supposed fairness; cf. n. 101 guiled: guileful 103 Veiling, etc.; cf. n. 106 Midas: all he touched, including food, turned to gold 113 As: such as 116 rain; cf. n.

131 unfurnish'd: unaccompanied by its mate 135 continent: that which contains 145 note: authorization in writing 163 account: calculation 164 term in gross: sum up 166 Happy: fortunate 180 vantage: opportunity, occasion

Only my blood speaks to you in my veins;
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As, after some oration fairly spoke
By a beloved prince, there doth appear
Among the buzzing pleased multitude;
Where every something, being blent together,
Turns to a wild of nothing, save of joy,
Express'd and not express'd. But when this ring
Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence:
O! then be bold to say Bassanio's dead.
Ner. My lord and lady, it is now our time,
That have stood by and seen our wishes prosper,
To cry, good joy. Good joy, my lord and lady!
Gra. My Lord Bassanio and my gentle lady,
I wish you all the joy that you can wish;
For I am sure you can wish none from me:
And when your honours mean to solemnize
The bargain of your faith, I do beseech you,
Even at that time I may be married too.
Bass. With all my heart, so thou canst get a wife.
Gra. I thank your lordship, you have got me one.
My eyes, my lord, can look as swift as yours:
You saw the mistress, I beheld the maid;
You lov'd, I lov'd; for intermission
No more pertains to me, my lord, than you.
Your fortune stood upon the caskets there,
And so did mine too, as the matter falls;
For wooing here until I sweat again,
And swearing till my very roof was dry
With oaths of love, at last, if promise last,
I got a promise of this fair one here
To have her love, provided that your fortune
Achiev'd her mistress.
Por. Is this true, Nerissa?
Ner. Madam, it is, so you stand pleas'd withal.
Bass. And do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?
Gra. Yes, faith, my lord.
Bass. Our feast shall be much honour'd in your marriage.
Gra. We'll play with them the first boy for a thousand ducats.
Ner. What! and stake down?
Gra. No; we shall ne'er win at that sport, and stake down.
But who comes here? Lorenzo and his infidel?
What! and my old Venetian friend, Salanio?

Enter Lorenzo, Jessica, and Salanio.

Bass. Lorenzo, and Salanio, welcome hither,
If that the youth of my new interest here
Have power to bid you welcome. By your leave,
I bid my very friends and countrymen,
Sweet Portia, welcome.
Por. So do I, my lord:
They are entirely welcome.
Lor. I thank your honour. For my part, my lord,
My purpose was not to have seen you here;
But meeting with Salanio by the way,
He did entreat me, past all saying nay,
To come with him along.
Salan. I did, my lord,
And I have reason for it. Signior Antonio
Commends him to you. [Gives Bassanio a letter.]
Bass. Ere I ope his letter,
I pray you, tell me how my good friend doth.
Salan. Not sick, my lord, unless it be in mind;
Nor well, unless in mind: his letter there
Will show you his estate. [Bassanio] Opens the Letter.
Gra. Nerissa, cheer yon stranger; bid her welcome.
Your hand, Salanio. What's the news from Venice?
How doth that royal merchant, good Antonio?
I know he will be glad of our success;
We are the Jasons, we have won the fleece.
Salan. I would you had won the fleece that he hath lost.
Por. There are some shrewd contents in yon same paper,
That steals the colour from Bassanio's cheek:
Some dear friend dead, else nothing in the world
Could turn so much the constitution
Of any constant man. What, worse and worse!
With leave, Bassanio; I am half yourself,
And I must freely have the half of anything
That this same paper brings you.
Bass. O sweet Portia!
Here are a few of the unpleasant'st words
That ever blotted paper. Gentle lady,
When I did first impart my love to you,
I freely told you all the wealth I had
Ran in my veins, I was a gentleman:
And then I told you true; and yet, dear lady,
Rating myself at nothing, you shall see
How much I was a braggart. When I told you
My state was nothing, I should then have told you
That I was worse than nothing; for, indeed,
I have engag'd myself to a dear friend,
Engag'd my friend to his mere enemy,
To feed my means. Here is a letter, lady;
The paper as the body of my friend,
And every word in it a gaping wound,
Issuing life-blood. But is it true, Salanio?
Hath all his ventures fail'd? What, not one hit?
From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England,
From Lisbon, Barbary, and India?
And not one vessel 'scape the dreadful touch
Of merchant-marring rocks?
Salan. Not one, my lord.
Besides, it should appear, that if he had
The present money to discharge the Jew,
He would not take it. Never did I know
A creature, that did bear the shape of man,
So keen and greedy to confound a man.
He plies the duke at morning and at night,
And doth impeach the freedom of the state,
If they deny him justice: twenty merchants,
The duke himself, and the magnificoes
Of greatest port, have all persuaded with him;
But none can drive him from the envious plea
Of forfeiture, of justice, and his bond.

182 Only: an adjective, my blood only 197 from me: at my expense 205 intermission; cf. n. 209 until . . . again: with all my power 210 roof: roof of my mouth 225 Salanio; cf. n. 229 very: true

245 estate: state, condition 252 shrewd: evil 255 constitution: frame of mind, equanimity 256 constant: steadfast 272 mere: absolute 277 hit: successful venture 287 confound: destroy 289 freedom: equal rights 291 magnificoes: magnates 292 port: station 293 envious: hateful

Jes. When I was with him, I have heard him swear
To Tubal and to Chus, his countrymen,
That he would rather have Antonio's flesh
Than twenty times the value of the sum
That he did owe him; and I know, my lord,
If law, authority, and power deny not,
It will go hard with poor Antonio.
Por. Is it your dear friend that is thus in trouble?
Bass. The dearest friend to me, the kindest man,
The best-condition'd and unwearied spirit
In doing courtesies, and one in whom
The ancient Roman honour more appears
Than any that draws breath in Italy.
Por. What sum owes he the Jew?
Bass. For me, three thousand ducats.
Por. What, no more?
Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond;
Double six thousand, and then treble that,
Before a friend of this description
Shall lose a hair thorough Bassanio's fault.
First go with me to church and call me wife,
And then away to Venice to your friend;
For never shall you lie by Portia's side
With an unquiet soul. You shall have gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times over:
When it is paid, bring your true friend along.
My maid Nerissa and myself meantime,
Will live as maids and widows. Come, away!
For you shall hence upon your wedding-day.
Bid your friends welcome, show a merry cheer;
Since you are dear bought, I will love you dear.
But let me hear the letter of your friend.

Bass. 'Sweet Bassanio, my ships have all miscarried, my creditors grow cruel, my estate is very low, my bond to the Jew is forfeit; and since, in paying it, it is impossible I should live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might but see you at my death. Notwithstanding, use your pleasure: if your love do not persuade you to come, let not my letter.'

Por. O love, dispatch all business, and be gone!
Bass. Since I have your good leave to go away,
I will make haste; but, till I come again,
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my stay,
Nor rest be interposer 'twixt us twain. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[Venice. A Street]
Enter the Jew, and Salarino, and Antonio, and the Gaoler.

Shy. Gaoler, look to him: tell not me of mercy;
This is the fool that lent out money gratis:
Gaoler, look to him.
Ant. Hear me yet, good Shylock.
Shy. I'll have my bond; speak not against my bond:
I have sworn an oath that I will have my bond.
Thou call'dst me dog before thou hadst a cause,
But, since I am a dog, beware my fangs:
The duke shall grant me justice. I do wonder,
Thou naughty gaoler, that thou art so fond
To come abroad with him at his request.
Ant. I pray thee, hear me speak.
Shy. I'll have my bond; I will not hear thee speak:
I'll have my bond, and therefore speak no more.
I'll not be made a soft and dull-eyed fool,
To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessors. Follow not;
I'll have no speaking; I will have my bond. Exit Jew.
Salar. It is the most impenetrable cur
That ever kept with men.
Ant. Let him alone:
I'll follow him no more with bootless prayers.
He seeks my life; his reason well I know.
I oft deliver'd from his forfeitures
Many that have at times made moan to me;
Therefore he hates me.
Salar. I am sure the duke
Will never grant this forfeiture to hold.
Ant. The duke cannot deny the course of law:
For the commodity that strangers have
With us in Venice, if it be denied,
'Twill much impeach the justice of the state;
Since that the trade and profit of the city
Consisteth of all nations. Therefore, go:
These griefs and losses have so bated me,
That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh
To-morrow to my bloody creditor.
Well, gaoler, on. Pray God, Bassanio come
To see me pay his debt, and then I care not! Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[Belmont. A Room in Portia's House]
Enter Portia, Nerissa, Lorenzo, Jessica, and a man of Portia's [Balthazar].

Lor. Madam, although I speak it in your presence,
You have a noble and a true conceit
Of godlike amity; which appears most strongly
In bearing thus the absence of your lord.
But if you knew to whom you show this honour,
How true a gentleman you send relief,
How dear a lover of my lord your husband,
I know you would be prouder of the work
Than customary bounty can enforce you.
Por. I never did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now: for in companions
That do converse and waste the time together,
Whose souls do bear an equal yoke of love,
There must be needs a like proportion
Of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit;
Which makes me think that this Antonio,
Being the bosom lover of my lord,
Must needs be like my lord. If it be so,
How little is the cost I have bestow'd

304 unwearied: most unwearied 311 deface: cancel by writing across 314 thorough: through 324 cheer: face 1 Gaoler: jailor

10 naughty: good-for-nought 20 kept: dwelt 29 deny: refuse 30 commodity: trading facilities 33 trade and profit: profitable trade 35 bated: thinned 2 conceit: conception 9 customary bounty: ordinary benevolence enforce: cause to be

In purchasing the semblance of my soul
From out the state of hellish cruelty!
This comes too near the praising of myself;
Therefore, no more of it: hear other things.
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands
The husbandry and manage of my house
Until my lord's return: for mine own part,
I have toward heaven breath'd a secret vow
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Only attended by Nerissa here,
Until her husband and my lord's return.
There is a monastery two miles off,
And there will we abide. I do desire you
Not to deny this imposition,
The which my love and some necessity
Now lays upon you.
Lor. Madam, with all my heart:
I shall obey you in all fair commands.
Por. My people do already know my mind,
And will acknowledge you and Jessica
In place of Lord Bassanio and myself.
So fare you well till we shall meet again.
Lor. Fair thoughts and happy hours attend on you!
Jes. I wish your ladyship all heart's content.
Por. I thank you for your wish, and am well pleas'd
To wish it back on you: fare you well, Jessica.
Exeunt [Jessica and Lorenzo].
Now, Balthazar,
As I have ever found thee honest-true,
So let me find thee still. Take this same letter,
And use thou all the endeavour of a man
In speed to Padua: see thou render this
Into my cousin's hand, Doctor Bellario;
And, look, what notes and garments he doth give thee,
Bring them, I pray thee, with imagin'd speed
Unto the tranect, to the common ferry
Which trades to Venice. Waste no time in words,
But get thee gone: I shall be there before thee.
Balth. Madam, I go with all convenient speed. [Exit.]
Por. Come on, Nerissa: I have work in hand
That you yet know not of: we'll see our husbands
Before they think of us.
Ner. Shall they see us?
Por. They shall, Nerissa; but in such a habit
That they shall think we are accomplished
With that we lack. I'll hold thee any wager,
When we are both accoutred like young men,
I'll prove the prettier fellow of the two,
And wear my dagger with the braver grace,
And speak between the change of man and boy
With a reed voice, and turn two mincing steps
Into a manly stride, and speak of frays
Like a fine bragging youth, and tell quaint lies,
How honourable ladies sought my love,
Which I denying, they fell sick and died:
I could not do withal; then I'll repent,
And wish, for all that, that I had not kill'd them:
And twenty of these puny lies I'll tell,
That men shall swear I have discontinu'd school
Above a twelvemonth. I have within my mind
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Jacks,
Which I will practise.
Ner. Why, shall we turn to men?
Por. Fie, what a question's that,
If thou wert near a lewd interpreter!
But come: I'll tell thee all my whole device
When I am in my coach, which stays for us
At the park gate; and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twenty miles to-day. Exeunt.

20 semblance . . . soul; cf. n. 25 husbandry and manage: care and management 33 deny this imposition: decline this charge 51 cousin's: any collateral kin 53 imagin'd speed: speed of thought 54 tranect; cf. n. 57 convenient: becoming 63 accomplished: equipped 74 could not do withal: could not help it

Scene Fifth

[The Same. A Garden]
Enter Clown and Jessica.

Laun. Yes, truly; for, look you, the sins of the father are to be laid upon the children; therefore, I promise you, I fear you. I was always plain with you, and so now I speak my agitation of the matter: therefore be of good cheer; for, truly, I think you are damned. There is but one hope in it that can do you any good, and that is but a kind of bastard hope neither.

Jes. And what hope is that, I pray thee?

Laun. Marry, you may partly hope that your father got you not, that you are not the Jew's daughter.

Jes. That were a kind of bastard hope, indeed: so the sins of my mother should be visited upon me.

Laun. Truly then I fear you are damned both by father and mother: thus when I shun Scylla, your father, I fall into Charybdis, your mother: well, you are gone both ways.

Jes. I shall be saved by my husband; he hath made me a Christian.

Laun. Truly the more to blame he: we were Christians enow before; e'en as many as could well live one by another. This making of Christians will raise the price of hogs: if we grow all to be pork-eaters, we shall not shortly have a rasher on the coals for money.

Jes. I'll tell my husband, Launcelot, what you say: here he comes.

Enter Lorenzo.

Lor. I shall grow jealous of you shortly, Launcelot, if you thus get my wife into corners.

Jes. Nay, you need not fear us, Lorenzo: Launcelot and I are out. He tells me flatly, there is no mercy for me in heaven, because I am a Jew's daughter: and he says you are no good member of the commonwealth, for, in converting Jews to Christians, you raise the price of pork.

Lor. I shall answer that better to the commonwealth than you can the getting up of the negro's belly: the Moor is with child by you, Launcelot.

Laun. It is much that the Moor should be more than reason; but if she be less than an honest woman, she is indeed more than I took her for.

Lor. How every fool can play upon the word! I think the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence, and discourse grow commendable in none only but parrots. Go in, sirrah: bid them prepare for dinner.

2 fear: fear for 3 agitation: i.e., cogitation 7 neither: too 14, 15 Scylla . . . Charybdis: dangers confronting Ulysses 16 husband; cf. n.

Laun. That is done, sir; they have all stomachs.

Lor. Goodly Lord, what a wit-snapper are you! then bid them prepare dinner.

Laun. That is done too, sir; only, 'cover' is the word.

Lor. Will you cover, then, sir?

Laun. Not so, sir, neither; I know my duty.

Lor. Yet more quarrelling with occasion! Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant? I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning: go to thy fellows; bid them cover the table, serve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

Laun. For the table, sir, it shall be served in; for the meat, sir, it shall be covered; for your coming in to dinner, sir, why, let it be as humours and conceits shall govern. Exit Clown.

Lor. O dear discretion, how his words are suited!
The fool hath planted in his memory
An army of good words: and I do know
A many fools, that stand in better place,
Garnish'd like him, that for a tricksy word
Defy the matter. How cheer'st thou, Jessica?
And now, good sweet, say thy opinion;
How dost thou like the Lord Bassanio's wife?

Jes. Past all expressing. It is very meet,
The Lord Bassanio live an upright life,
For, having such a blessing in his lady,
He finds the joys of heaven here on earth;
And if on earth he do not mean it, then
In reason he should never come to heaven.
Why, if two gods should play some heavenly match,
And on the wager lay two earthly women,
And Portia one, there must be something else
Pawn'd with the other, for the poor rude world
Hath not her fellow.

Lor. Even such a husband
Hast thou of me as she is for a wife.

Jes. Nay, but ask my opinion too of that.

Lor. I will anon; first, let us go to dinner.

Jes. Nay, let me praise you while I have a stomach.

Lor. No, pray thee, let it serve for table-talk;
Then howsoe'er thou speak'st, 'mong other things
I shall digest it.

Jes. Well, I'll set you forth. Exeunt.

ACT FOURTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Venice. A Court of Justice]

Enter the Duke, the Magnificoes, Antonio, Bassanio, and Gratiano [with Salarino, Salanio, and Others].

Duke. What, is Antonio here?

Ant. Ready, so please your Grace.

Duke. I am sorry for thee: thou art come to answer
A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch
Uncapable of pity, void and empty
From any dram of mercy.

Ant. I have heard
Your Grace hath ta'en great pains to qualify
His rigorous course; but since he stands obdurate,
And that no lawful means can carry me
Out of his envy's reach, I do oppose
My patience to his fury, and am arm'd
To suffer with a quietness of spirit
The very tyranny and rage of his.

Duke. Go one, and call the Jew into the court.

Salar. He's ready at the door: he comes, my lord.

Enter Shylock.

Duke. Make room, and let him stand before our face.
Shylock, the world thinks, and I think so too,
That thou but lead'st this fashion of thy malice
To the last hour of act; and then 'tis thought
Thou'lt show thy mercy and remorse more strange
Than is thy strange apparent cruelty;
And where thou now exact'st the penalty,—
Which is a pound of this poor merchant's flesh,—
Thou wilt not only loose the forfeiture,
But, touch'd with human gentleness and love,
Forgive a moiety of the principal;
Glancing an eye of pity on his losses,
That have of late so huddled on his back,
Enow to press a royal merchant down,
And pluck commiseration of his state
From brassy bosoms and rough hearts of flint,
From stubborn Turks and Tartars, never train'd
To offices of tender courtesy.
We all expect a gentle answer, Jew.

Shy. I have possess'd your Grace of what I purpose;
And by our holy Sabbath have I sworn
To have the due and forfeit of my bond:
If you deny it, let the danger light
Upon your charter and your city's freedom.
You'll ask me why I rather choose to have
A weight of carrion flesh than to receive
Three thousand ducats: I'll not answer that:
But say it is my humour: is it answer'd?
What if my house be troubled with a rat,
And I be pleas'd to give ten thousand ducats
To have it ban'd? What, are you answer'd yet?
Some men there are love not a gaping pig;
Some, that are mad if they behold a cat;
And others, when the bagpipe sings i' the nose,
Cannot contain their urine: for affection
Masters our passion, sways it to the mood
Of what it likes, or loathes. Now, for your answer:
As there is no firm reason to be render'd,
Why he cannot abide a gaping pig;
Why he, a harmless necessary cat;
Why he, a woollen bagpipe; but of force
Must yield to such inevitable shame

45 cover: cf. n. 48 quarrelling with occasion: splitting hairs at every opportunity 55 humours: whims 56 suited: elaborately dressed 61 Defy the matter: spoil the thought How cheer'st thou: what cheer? 68 mean it; cf. n. 73 Pawn'd: staked 3 answer: satisfy

6 dram: drop 8 qualify: moderate 14 tyranny and rage: violent dominance 19 fashion: pretence 20 act: performance 21 remorse: pity 25 loose: release 27 moiety: portion (two syllables only). 29 huddled: crowded 38 due and forfeit: forfeit that is due 39 danger: damage 47 ban'd: poisoned 48 gaping pig: pig roasted with the mouth open 51 affection: natural bent of mind 57 woollen; cf. n.

As to offend, himself being offended;
so can i give no reason, nor i will not,
More than a lodg'd hate and a certain loathing
I bear Antonio, that I follow thus
A losing suit against him. Are you answer'd?
Bass. This is no answer, thou unfeeling man,
To excuse the current of thy cruelty.
Shy. I am not bound to please thee with my answer.
Bass. Do all men kill the things they do not love?
Shy. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?
Bass. Every offence is not a hate at first.
Shy. What! wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice?
Ant. I pray you, think you question with the Jew:
You may as well go stand upon the beach,
And bid the main flood bate his usual height;
You may as well use question with the wolf,
Why he hath made the ewe bleat for the lamb;
You may as well forbid the mountain pines
To wag their high tops, and to make no noise
When they are fretted with the gusts of heaven;
You may as well do anything most hard,
As seek to soften that—than which what's harder?—
His Jewish heart: therefore, I do beseech you,
Make no more offers, use no further means;
But with all brief and plain conveniency,
Let me have judgment, and the Jew his will.
Bass. For thy three thousand ducats here is six.
Shy. If every ducat in six thousand ducats
Were in six parts and every part a ducat,
I would not draw them; I would have my bond.
Duke. How shalt thou hope for mercy, rendering none?
Shy. What judgment shall I dread, doing no wrong?
You have among you many a purchas'd slave,
Which, like your asses and your dogs and mules,
You use in abject and in slavish parts,
Because you bought them: shall I say to you,
Let them be free, marry them to your heirs?
Why sweat they under burdens? let their beds
Be made as soft as yours, and let their palates
Be season'd with such viands? You will answer:
'The slaves are ours:' so do I answer you:
The pound of flesh which I demand of him,
Is dearly bought; 'tis mine and I will have it.
If you deny me, fie upon your law!
There is no force in the decrees of Venice.
I stand for judgment: answer; shall I have it?
Duke. Upon my power I may dismiss this court,
Unless Bellario, a learned doctor,
Whom I have sent for to determine this,
Come here to-day.
Salar. My lord, here stays without
A messenger with letters from the doctor,
New come from Padua.
Duke. Bring us the letters: call the messenger.
Bass. Good cheer, Antonio! What, man, courage yet!
The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and all,
Ere thou shalt lose for me one drop of blood.

63 losing: moneyless, unprofitable 65 current: steady flow 69 offence: resentment 71 question: converse 73 bate: reduce 74, 75 Cf. n. 77 and: and bid them 88 draw: receive 93 parts: actions 98 season'd: gratified 105 Upon . . . power: by authority vested in me

Ant. I am a tainted wether of the flock,
Meetest for death: the weakest kind of fruit
Drops earliest to the ground; and so let me:
You cannot better be employ'd, Bassanio,
Than to live still, and write mine epitaph.

Enter Nerissa [dressed like a lawyer's clerk].

Duke. Came you from Padua, from Bellario?
Ner. From both, my lord. Bellario greets your Grace.
[Presents a letter.]
Bass. Why dost thou whet thy knife so earnestly?
Shy. To cut the forfeiture from that bankrupt there.
Gra. Not on thy sole, but on thy soul, harsh Jew,
Thou mak'st thy knife keen; but no metal can,
No, not the hangman's axe, bear half the keenness
Of thy sharp envy. Can no prayers pierce thee?
Shy. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.
Gra. O, be thou damn'd, inexecrable dog!
And for thy life let justice be accus'd.
Thou almost mak'st me waver in my faith
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That souls of animals infuse themselves
Into the trunks of men: thy currish spirit
Govern'd a wolf, who, hang'd for human slaughter,
Even from the gallows did his fell soul fleet,
And whilst thou lay'st in thy unhallow'd dam,
Infus'd itself in thee; for thy desires
Are wolfish, bloody, starv'd, and ravenous.
Shy. Till thou canst rail the seal from off my bond,
Thou but offend'st thy lungs to speak so loud:
Repair thy wit, good youth, or it will fall
To cureless ruin. I stand here for law.
Duke. This letter from Bellario doth commend
A young and learned doctor to our court.
Where is he?
Ner. He attendeth here hard by,
To know your answer, whether you'll admit him.
Duke. With all my heart: some three or four of you
Go give him courteous conduct to this place.
Meantime, the court shall hear Bellario's letter.

[Clerk]. 'Your Grace shall understand that at the receipt of your letter I am very sick; but in the instant that your messenger came, in loving visitation was with me a young doctor of Rome; his name is Balthazar. I acquainted him with the cause in controversy between the Jew and Antonio the merchant: we turned o'er many books together: he is furnished nwith my opinion; which, bettered with his own learning,—the greatness whereof I cannot enough commend,—comes with him, at my importunity, to fill up your Grace's request in my stead. I beseech you, let his lack of years be no impediment to let him lack a reverend estimation, for I never knew so young a body with so old a head. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall better publish his commendation.'

Duke. You hear the learn'd Bellario, what he writes:
And here, I take it, is the doctor come.

Enter Portia for Balthazar [dressed like a doctor of laws].

120 Cf. n. 131 inexecrable: who cannot be execrated enough 132 justice; cf. n. 145 cureless: incurable 152 conduct: escort 153 letter; cf. n. 164 reverend estimation: respectful esteem 166 publish . . . commendation: make known his merit

Give me your hand. Came you from old Bellario?
Por. I did, my lord.
Duke. You are welcome: take your place.
Are you acquainted with the difference
That holds this present question in the court?
Por. I am informed throughly of the cause.
Which is the merchant here, and which the Jew?
Duke. Antonio and old Shylock, both stand forth.
Por. Is your name Shylock?
Shy. Shylock is my name.
Por. Of a strange nature is the suit you follow;
Yet in such rule that the Venetian law
Cannot impugn you as you do proceed.
[To Antonio.] You stand within his danger, do you not?
Ant. Ay, so he says.
Por. Do you confess the bond?
Ant. I do.
Por. Then must the Jew be merciful.
Shy. On what compulsion must I? tell me that.
Por. The quality of mercy is not strain'd,
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath: it is twice bless'd;
It blesseth him that gives and him that takes:
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown;
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
But mercy is above this sceptred sway,
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself,
And earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice. Therefore, Jew,
Though justice be thy plea, consider this,
That in the course of justice none of us
Should see salvation: we do pray for mercy,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy. I have spoke thus much
To mitigate the justice of thy plea,
Which if thou follow, this strict court of Venice
Must needs give sentence 'gainst the merchant there.
Shy. My deeds upon my head! I crave the law,
The penalty and forfeit of my bond.
Por. Is he not able to discharge the money?
Bass. Yes, here I tender it for him in the court;
Yea, twice the sum: if that will not suffice,
I will be bound to pay it ten times o'er,
On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart.
If this will not suffice, it must appear
That malice bears down truth. And, I beseech you,
Wrest once the law to your authority:
To do a great right, do a little wrong,
And curb this cruel devil of his will.
Por. It must not be. There is no power in Venice
Can alter a decree established:
'Twill be recorded for a precedent,
And many an error by the same example
Will rush into the state. It cannot be.
Shy. A Daniel come to judgment! yea, a Daniel!
O wise young judge, how I do honour thee!
Por. I pray you, let me look upon the bond.
Shy. Here 'tis, most reverend doctor; here it is.
Por. Shylock, there's thrice thy money offer'd thee.
Shy. An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven:
Shall I lay perjury upon my soul?
No, not for Venice.
Por. Why, this bond is forfeit;
And lawfully by this the Jew may claim
A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off
Nearest the merchant's heart. Be merciful:
Take thrice thy money; bid me tear the bond.
Shy. When it is paid according to the tenour.
It doth appear you are a worthy judge;
You know the law, your exposition
Hath been most sound: I charge you by the law,
Whereof you are a well-deserving pillar,
Proceed to judgment: by my soul I swear
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me. I stay here on my bond.
Ant. Most heartily I do beseech the court
To give the judgment.
Por. Why then, thus it is:
You must prepare your bosom for his knife.
Shy. O noble judge! O excellent young man!
Por. For the intent and purpose of the law
Hath full relation to the penalty,
Which here appeareth due upon the bond.
Shy. 'Tis very true! O wise and upright judge!
How much more elder art thou than thy looks!
Por. Therefore lay bare your bosom.
Shy. Ay, 'his breast:'
So says the bond:—doth it not, noble judge?—
'Nearest his heart:' those are the very words.
Por. It is so. Are there balance here to weigh
The flesh?
Shy. I have them ready.
Por. Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on your charge,
To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death.
Shy. Is it so nominated in the bond?
Por. It is not so express'd; but what of that?
'Twere good you do so much for charity.
Shy. I cannot find it: 'tis not in the bond.
Por. You, merchant, have you anything to say?
Ant. But little: I am arm'd and well prepar'd.
Give me your hand, Bassanio: fare you well!
Grieve not that I am fallen to this for you;
For herein Fortune shows herself more kind
Than is her custom: it is still her use
To let the wretched man outlive his wealth,
To view with hollow eye and wrinkled brow
An age of poverty; from which lingering penance
Of such a misery doth she cut me off.
Commend me to your honourable wife:
Tell her the process of Antonio's end;
Say how I lov'd you, speak me fair in death;

172 difference: dispute 174 throughly: thoroughly 180 rule: correct mode of procedure 181 impugn: oppose 182 danger: power to hurt 188 strain'd: constrained, forced 195 The attribute: what belongs awe and majesty: awful majesty 201 seasons: flavors 218 truth: equity 219 Wrest: strain to: to the advantage of

227 Daniel; cf. n. 247 stay . . . on: await the fulfilment of 262 balance: scales 265 on . . . charge: at your expense 276 use: habit 282 process: story 283 speak . . . fair: speak well of me

And, when the tale is told, bid her be judge
Whether Bassanio had not once a love.
Repent but you that you shall lose your friend,
And he repents not that he pays your debt;
For if the Jew do cut but deep enough,
I'll pay it instantly with all my heart.
Bass. Antonio, I am married to a wife
Which is as dear to me as life itself;
But life itself, my wife, and all the world,
Are not with me esteem'd above thy life:
I would lose all, ay, sacrifice them all,
Here to this devil, to deliver you.
Por. Your wife would give you little thanks for that,
If she were by to hear you make the offer.
Gra. I have a wife, whom, I protest, I love:
I would she were in heaven, so she could
Entreat some power to change this currish Jew.
Ner. 'Tis well you offer it behind her back;
The wish would make else an unquiet house.
Shy. These be the Christian husbands! I have a daughter;
Would any of the stock of Barabbas
Had been her husband rather than a Christian!
We trifle time; I pray thee, pursue sentence.
Por. A pound of that same merchant's flesh is thine:
The court awards it, and the law doth give it.
Shy. Most rightful judge!
Por. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast:
The law allows it, and the court awards it.
Shy. Most learned judge! A sentence! come, prepare!
Por. Tarry a little: there is something else.
This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood;
The words expressly are 'a pound of flesh:'
Then take thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh;
But, in the cutting it, if thou dost shed
One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods
Are, by the laws of Venice, confiscate
Unto the state of Venice.
Gra. O upright judge! Mark, Jew: O learned judge!
Shy. Is that the law?
Por. Thyself shalt see the act;
For, as thou urgest justice, be assur'd
Thou shalt have justice, more than thou desir'st.
Gra. O learned judge! Mark, Jew: a learned judge!
Shy. I take this offer then: pay the bond thrice,
And let the Christian go.
Bass. Here is the money.
Por. Soft!
The Jew shall have all justice; soft! no haste:—
He shall have nothing but the penalty.
Gra. O Jew! an upright judge, a learned judge!
Por. Therefore prepare thee to cut off the flesh.
Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor more,
But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more,
Or less, than a just pound, be it but so much
As makes it light or heavy in the substance,
Or the division of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple, nay, if the scale do turn
But in the estimation of a hair,
Thou diest and all thy goods are confiscate.
Gra. A second Daniel, a Daniel, Jew!
Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip.
Por. Why doth the Jew pause? take thy forfeiture.
Shy. Give me my principal, and let me go.
Bass. I have it ready for thee; here it is.
Por. He hath refus'd it in the open court:
He shall have merely justice, and his bond.
Gra. A Daniel, still say I; a second Daniel!
I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word.
Shy. Shall I not have barely my principal?
Por. Thou shalt have nothing but the forfeiture,
To be so taken at thy peril, Jew.
Shy. Why, then the devil give him good of it!
I'll stay no longer question.
Por. Tarry, Jew:
The law hath yet another hold on you.
It is enacted in the laws of Venice,
If it be prov'd against an alien
That by direct or indirect attempts
He seek the life of any citizen,
The party 'gainst the which he doth contrive
Shall seize one half his goods; the other half
Comes to the privy coffer of the state;
And the offender's life lies in the mercy
Of the duke only, 'gainst all other voice.
In which predicament, I say, thou stand'st;
For it appears by manifest proceeding,
That indirectly and directly too
Thou hast contriv'd against the very life
Of the defendant; and thou hast incurr'd
The danger formerly by me rehears'd.
Down therefore and beg mercy of the duke.
Gra. Beg that thou mayst have leave to hang thyself:
And yet, thy wealth being forfeit to the state,
Thou hast not left the value of a cord;
Therefore thou must be hang'd at the state's charge.
Duke. That thou shalt see the difference of our spirits,
I pardon thee thy life before thou ask it.
For half thy wealth, it is Antonio's;
The other half comes to the general state,
Which humbleness may drive unto a fine.
Por. Ay, for the state; not for Antonio.
Shy. Nay, take my life and all; pardon not that:
You take my house when you do take the prop
That doth sustain my house; you take my life
When you do take the means whereby I live.
Por. What mercy can you render him, Antonio?
Gra. A halter gratis; nothing else, for God's sake!
Ant. So please my lord the duke, and all the court,
To quit the fine for one half of his goods,
I am content; so he will let me have
The other half in use, to render it,
Upon his death, unto the gentleman
That lately stole his daughter:
Two things provided more, that, for this favour,
He presently become a Christian;
The other, that he do record a gift,

285 love: devoted friend 286 Repent: repine, grieve 291 Which: who 306 pursue: proceed with 336 just: precise 338 substance: amount 340 scruple: one-third of a dram, twenty grains 341 estimation: calculation

363 contrive: plot 365 privy coffer: treasury 367 'gainst . . . voice: in spite of what other persons may judge 373 formerly: above 383 drive: reduce

Here in the court, of all he dies possess'd,
Unto his son Lorenzo, and his daughter.
Duke. He shall do this, or else I do recant
The pardon that I late pronounced here.
Por. Art thou contented, Jew? what dost thou say?
Shy. I am content.
Por. Clerk, draw a deed of gift.
Shy. I pray you give me leave to go from hence:
I am not well. Send the deed after me,
And I will sign it.
Duke. Get thee gone, but do it.
Gra. In christening thou shalt have two godfathers;
Had I been judge, thou shouldst have had ten more,
To bring thee to the gallows, not the font. Exit [Shylock].
Duke. Sir, I entreat you home with me to dinner.
Por. I humbly do desire your Grace of pardon:
I must away this night toward Padua,
And it is meet I presently set forth.
Duke. I am sorry that your leisure serves you not.
Antonio, gratify this gentleman,
For, in my mind, you are much bound to him.
Exit Duke [with Magnificoes] and his train.
Bass. Most worthy gentleman, I and my friend
Have by your wisdom been this day acquitted
Of grievous penalties; in lieu whereof,
Three thousand ducats, due unto the Jew,
We freely cope your courteous pains withal.
Ant. And stand indebted, over and above,
In love and service to you evermore.
Por. He is well paid that is well satisfied;
And I, delivering you, am satisfied,
And therein do account myself well paid:
My mind was never yet more mercenary.
I pray you, know me when we meet again:
I wish you well, and so I take my leave.
Bass. Dear sir, of force I must attempt you further:
Take some remembrance of us, as a tribute,
Not as a fee. Grant me two things, I pray you,
Not to deny me, and to pardon me.
Por. You press me far, and therefore I will yield.
[To Antonio.] Give me your gloves, I'll wear them for your sake;
[To Bassanio.] And, for your love, I'll take this ring from you.
Do not draw back your hand; I'll take no more;
And you in love shall not deny me this.
Bass. This ring, good sir? alas! it is a trifle;
I will not shame myself to give you this.
Por. I will have nothing else but only this;
And now methinks I have a mind to it.
Bass. There's more depends on this than on the value.
The dearest ring in Venice will I give you,
And find it out by proclamation:
Only for this, I pray you, pardon me.
Por. I see, sir, you are liberal in offers:
You taught me first to beg, and now methinks
You teach me how a beggar should be answer'd.
Bass. Good sir, this ring was given me by my wife;
And when she put it on, she made me vow
That I should never sell nor give nor lose it.
Por. That 'scuse serves many men to save their gifts.
And if your wife be not a mad-woman,
And know how well I have deserv'd the ring,
She would not hold out enemy for ever,
For giving it to me. Well, peace be with you.
Exeunt [Portia and Nerissa].
Ant. My Lord Bassanio, let him have the ring:
Let his deservings and my love withal
Be valu'd 'gainst your wife's commandment.
Bass. Go, Gratiano; run and overtake him;
Give him the ring, and bring him, if thou canst,
Unto Antonio's house. Away! make haste. Exit Gratiano.
Come, you and I will thither presently,
And in the morning early will we both
Fly toward Belmont. Come, Antonio. Exeunt.

400 of all: of all of which 412 ten more: i.e., a jury of twelve 419 gratify: reward 425 cope: match, requite 434 force: necessity attempt: tempt, urge 450 proclamation: advertisement (through the street crier)

Scene Second

[The Same. A Street]
Enter Portia and Nerissa.

Por. Inquire the Jew's house out, give him this deed,
And let him sign it. We'll away to-night,
And be a day before our husbands home:
This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Fair sir, you are well o'erta'en.
My Lord Bassanio upon more advice
Hath sent you here this ring, and doth entreat
Your company at dinner.
Por. That cannot be:
His ring I do accept most thankfully;
And so, I pray you, tell him: furthermore,
I pray you, show my youth old Shylock's house.
Gra. That will I do.
Ner. Sir, I would speak with you.
[Aside to Portia.] I'll see if I can get my husband's ring,
Which I did make him swear to keep for ever.
Por. Thou mayst, I warrant. We shall have old swearing
That they did give the rings away to men;
But we'll outface them, and outswear them too.
Away! make haste: thou know'st where I will tarry.
Ner. Come, good sir, will you show me to this house?
Exeunt.

Act Fifth

Scene First

[Belmont. The Avenue to Portia's House]
Enter Lorenzo and Jessica.

Lor. The moon shines bright: in such a night as this,
When the sweet wind did gently kiss the trees
And they did make no noise, in such a night
Troilus methinks mounted the Troyan walls,
And sigh'd his soul toward the Grecian tents,
Where Cressid lay that night.

6 advice: consideration 12 old: much 4 Troilus: cf. Shakespeare's play on the theme

Jes. In such a night
Did Thisbe fearfully o'ertrip the dew,
And saw the lion's shadow ere himself,
And ran dismay'd away.
Lor. In such a night
Stood Dido with a willow in her hand
Upon the wild sea-banks, and waft her love
To come again to Carthage.
Jes. In such a night
Medea gather'd the enchanted herbs
That did renew old Æson.
Lor. In such a night
Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew,
And with an unthrift love did run from Venice,
As far as Belmont.
Jes. In such a night
Did young Lorenzo swear he lov'd her well,
Stealing her soul with many vows of faith,
And ne'er a true one.
Lor. In such a night
Did pretty Jessica, like a little shrew,
Slander her love, and he forgave it her.
Jes. I would out-night you, did nobody come;
But, hark! I hear the footing of a man.

Enter Messenger [Stephano].

Lor. Who comes so fast in silence of the night?
Mes. A friend.
Lor. A friend! what friend? your name, I pray you, friend.
Mes. Stephano is my name; and I bring word
My mistress will before the break of day
Be here at Belmont: she doth stray about
By holy crosses, where she kneels and prays
For happy wedlock hours.
Lor. Who comes with her?
Mes. None, but a holy hermit and her maid.
I pray you, is my master yet return'd?
Lor. He is not, nor we have not heard from him.
But go we in, I pray thee, Jessica,
And ceremoniously let us prepare
Some welcome for the mistress of the house.

Enter Clown.

Clo. Sola, sola! wo ha, ho! sola, sola!
Lor. Who calls?
Clo. Sola! did you see Master Lorenzo?
Master Lorenzo! sola, sola!
Lor. Leave hollaing, man; here.
Clo. Sola! where? where?
Lor. Here.
Clo. Tell him there's a post come from my master, with his horn full of good news: my master will be here ere morning. [Exit.]
Lor. Sweet soul, let's in, and there expect their coming.
And yet no matter; why should we go in?
My friend Stephano, signify, I pray you,
Within the house, your mistress is at hand;
And bring your music forth into the air. [Exit Stephano.]
How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!
Here will we sit, and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears; soft stillness and the night
Become the touches of sweet harmony.
Sit, Jessica: look, how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold:
There's not the smallest orb which thou behold'st
But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins;
Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But, whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.

[Enter Musicians.]

Come, ho! and wake Diana with a hymn:
With sweetest touches pierce your mistress' ear,
And draw her home with music.
Jes. I am never merry when I hear sweet music.

Play music.

Lor. The reason is, your spirits are attentive:
For do but note a wild and wanton herd,
Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,
Fetching mad bounds, bellowing and neighing loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blood;
If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound,
Or any air of music touch their ears,
You shall perceive them make a mutual stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze
By the sweet power of music: therefore the poet
Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and floods;
Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his nature.
The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not mov'd with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils;
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus:
Let no such man be trusted. Mark the music.

Enter Portia and Nerissa [at a distance].

Por. That light we see is burning in my hall.
How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.
Ner. When the moon shone, we did not see the candle.
Por. So doth the greater glory dim the less:
A substitute shines brightly as a king
Until a king be by, and then his state
Empties itself, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters. Music! hark! Muise.
Ner. It is your music, madam, of the house.
Por. Nothing is good, I see, without respect:
Methinks it sounds much sweeter than by day.
Ner. Silence bestows that virtue on it, madam.
Por. The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark
When neither is attended, and I think
The nightingale, if she should sing by day,

8 Thisbe: cf. Midsummer Night's Dream 12 willow: emblem of slighted love 13 waft: beckoned 17 renew: rejuvenate Æson: father of Jason 37 crosses: those along the roadside 46 Sola: imitating the post horn 48, 49 Cf. n. 56 expect: await 58 signify: make it known

65, 66 the floor of heaven, etc.; cf. n. 66 patines: thin plates, used in celebration of the Eucharist 69 quiring: singing in harmony 78 attentive: absorbed, concentrated 95 Erebus: mythological dark place under Earth 107 respect: regard to circumstances 111 attended: given attention

When every goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a musician than the wren.
How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise and true perfection!
Peace, ho! the moon sleeps with Endymion,
And would not be awak'd! Music ceases.
Lor. That is the voice,
Or I am much deceiv'd, of Portia.
Por. He knows me, as the blind man knows the cuckoo,
By the bad voice.
Lor. Dear lady, welcome home.
Por. We have been praying for our husbands' welfare,
Which speed, we hope, the better for our words.
Are they return'd?
Lor. Madam, they are not yet;
But there is come a messenger before,
To signify their coming.
Por. Go in, Nerissa:
Give order to my servants that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence;
Nor you, Lorenzo; Jessica, nor you. A tucket sounds.
Lor. Your husband is at hand; I hear his trumpet:
We are no tell-tales, madam; fear you not.
Por. This night methinks is but the daylight sick;
It looks a little paler: 'tis a day,
Such as the day is when the sun is hid.

Enter Bassanio, Antonio, Gratiano, and their Followers.

Bass. We should hold day with the Antipodes,
If you would walk in absence of the sun.
Por. Let me give light, but let me not be light;
For a light wife doth make a heavy husband,
And never be Bassanio so for me:
But God sort all! You are welcome home, my lord.
Bass. I thank you, madam. Give welcome to my friend:
This is the man, this is Antonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.
Por. You should in all sense be much bound to him,
For, as I hear, he was much bound for you.
Ant. No more than I am well acquitted of.
Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house:
It must appear in other ways than words,
Therefore I scant this breathing courtesy.
Gra. [To Nerissa.] By yonder moon I swear you do me wrong;
In faith, I gave it to the judge's clerk:
Would he were gelt that had it, for my part,
Since you do take it, love, so much at heart.
Por. A quarrel, ho, already! what's the matter?
Gra. About a hoop of gold, a paltry ring
That she did give me, whose poesy was
For all the world like cutlers' poetry
Upon a knife, 'Love me, and leave me not.'
Ner. What talk you of the posy, or the value?
You swore to me, when I did give it you,
That you would wear it till your hour of death,
And that it should lie with you in your grave:
Though not for me, yet for your vehement oaths,
You should have been respective and have kept it.
Gave it a judge's clerk! no, God's my judge,
The clerk will ne'er wear hair on's face that had it.
Gra. He will, an if he live to be a man.
Ner. Ay, if a woman live to be a man.
Gra. Now, by this hand, I gave it to a youth,
A kind of boy, a little scrubbed boy,
No higher than thyself, the judge's clerk.
A prating boy, that begg'd it as a fee:
I could not for my heart deny it him.
Por. You were to blame,—I must be plain with you,—
To part so slightly with your wife's first gift;
A thing stuck on with oaths upon your finger,
And riveted so with faith unto your flesh.
I gave my love a ring and made him swear
Never to part with it; and here he stands.
I dare be sworn for him he would not leave it
Nor pluck it from his finger for the wealth
That the world masters. Now, in faith, Gratiano,
You give your wife too unkind a cause of grief:
An 'twere to me, I should be mad at it.
Bass. [Aside.] Why, I were best to cut my left hand off,
And swear I lost the ring defending it.
Gra. My Lord Bassanio gave his ring away
Unto the judge that begg'd it, and indeed
Deserv'd it too; and then the boy, his clerk,
That took some pains in writing, he begg'd mine;
And neither man nor master would take aught
But the two rings.
Por. What ring gave you, my lord?
Not that, I hope, which you receiv'd of me.
Bass. If I could add a lie unto a fault,
I would deny it; but you see my finger
Hath not the ring upon it; it is gone.
Por. Even so void is your false heart of truth.
By heaven, I will ne'er come in your bed
Until I see the ring.
Ner. Nor I in yours,
Till I again see mine.
Bass. Sweet Portia,
If you did know to whom I gave the ring,
If you did know for whom I gave the ring,
And would conceive for what I gave the ring,
And how unwillingly I left the ring,
When naught would be accepted but the ring,
You would abate the strength of your displeasure.
Por. If you had known the virtue of the ring,
Or half her worthiness that gave the ring,
Or your own honour to contain the ring,
You would not then have parted with the ring.
What man is there so much unreasonable,
If you had pleas'd to have defended it
With any terms of zeal, wanted the modesty
To urge the thing held as a ceremony?
Nerissa teaches me what to believe:
I'll die for 't but some woman had the ring.

115 by . . . season'd: by proper time matured 117 Endymion: Selene, the Moon, saw him asleep and loved him S. d. tucket: toccata, a flourish on trumpets 140, 141 Cf. n. 145 sort: dispose 154 breathing courtesy: words of welcome 162 poesy: posy on inside of ring 164 Upon a knife: they put mottoes on knives 165 What: why

170 respective: considerate, careful 176 scrubbed: stunted 186 leave: give up 188 masters: owns 190 be mad: run mad 218 contain: retain 222 wanted the: who would have so wanted 223 To: as to ceremony: anything held sacred

Bass. No, by my honour, madam, by my soul,
No woman had it; but a civil doctor,
Which did refuse three thousand ducats of me,
And begg'd the ring, the which I did deny him,
And suffer'd him to go displeas'd away;
Even he that did uphold the very life
Of my dear friend. What should I say, sweet lady?
I was enforc'd to send it after him;
I was beset with shame and courtesy;
My honour would not let ingratitude
So much besmear it. Pardon me, good lady,
For, by these blessed candles of the night,
Had you been there, I think you would have begg'd
The ring of me to give the worthy doctor.
Por. Let not that doctor e'er come near my house.
Since he hath got the jewel that I lov'd,
And that which you did swear to keep for me,
I will become as liberal as you;
I'll not deny him anything I have;
No, not my body, nor my husband's bed.
Know him I shall, I am well sure of it:
Lie not a night from home; watch me like Argus:
If you do not, if I be left alone,
Now by mine honour, which is yet mine own,
I'll have that doctor for my bedfellow.
Ner. And I his clerk; therefore be well advis'd
How you do leave me to mine own protection.
Gra. Well, do you so: let not me take him, then;
For if I do, I'll mar the young clerk's pen.
Ant. I am the unhappy subject of these quarrels.
Por. Sir, grieve not you; you are welcome notwithstanding.
Bass. Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong;
And in the hearing of these many friends,
I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes,
Wherein I see myself,—
Por. Mark you but that!
In both my eyes he doubly sees himself;
In each eye, one: swear by your double self,
And there's an oath of credit.
Bass. Nay, but hear me:
Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear
I never more will break an oath with thee.
Ant. I once did lend my body for his wealth,
Which, but for him that had your husband's ring,
Had quite miscarried: I dare be bound again,
My soul upon the forfeit, that your lord
Will never more break faith advisedly.
Por. Then you shall be his surety. Give him this,
And bid him keep it better than the other.
Ant. Here, Lord Bassanio; swear to keep this ring.
Bass. By heaven! it is the same I gave the doctor!
Por. I had it of him: pardon me, Bassanio,
For, by this ring, the doctor lay with me.
Ner. And pardon me, my gentle Gratiano;
For that same scrubbed boy, the doctor's clerk,
In lieu of this last night did lie with me.
Gra. Why, this is like the mending of highways
In summer, where the ways are fair enough.
What! are we cuckolds ere we have deserv'd it?
Por. Speak not so grossly. You are all amaz'd:
Here is a letter; read it at your leisure;
It comes from Padua, from Bellario:
There you shall find that Portia was the doctor,
Nerissa, there, her clerk: Lorenzo here
Shall witness I set forth as soon as you
And even but now return'd; I have not yet
Enter'd my house. Antonio, you are welcome;
And I have better news in store for you
Than you expect: unseal this letter soon;
There you shall find three of your argosies
Are richly come to harbour suddenly.
You shall not know by what strange accident
I chanced on this letter.
Ant. I am dumb.
Bass. Were you the doctor and I knew you not?
Gra. Were you the clerk that is to make me cuckold?
Ner. Ay; but the clerk that never means to do it,
Unless he live until he be a man.
Bass. Sweet doctor, you shall be my bedfellow:
When I am absent, then lie with my wife.
Ant. Sweet lady, you have given me life and living;
For here I read for certain that my ships
Are safely come to road.
Por. How now, Lorenzo!
My clerk hath some good comforts too for you.
Ner. Ay, and I'll give them him without a fee.
There do I give to you and Jessica,
From the rich Jew, a special deed of gift,
After his death, of all he dies possess'd of.
Lor. Fair ladies, you drop manna in the way
Of starved people.
Por. It is almost morning,
And yet I am sure you are not satisfied
Of these events at full. Let us go in;
And charge us there upon inter'gatories,
And we will answer all things faithfully.
Gra. Let it be so: the first inter'gatory
That my Nerissa shall be sworn on is,
Whether till the next night she had rather stay,
Or go to bed now, being two hours to day:
But were the day come, I should wish it dark,
That I were couching with the doctor's clerk.
Well, while I live I'll fear no other thing
So sore as keeping safe Nerissa's ring. Exeunt.

FINIS

227 civil doctor: doctor of civil law 234 shame . . . courtesy: shame at trespassing against good manners 236 besmear: soil 246 well: very 247 Argus: he had a hundred eyes 263 double: full of duplicity 268 wealth: welfare 272 advisedly: deliberately

306 living: means of life 308 road: harbor 318, 319 satisfied . . . at full: fully informed 320 charge . . . upon inter'gatories: question us on oath 328 fear: concern myself over

Notes

Dramatis Personæ. These were first given, under the heading of 'The Actors Names,' in the third Quarto (1637). Words in brackets have been added by later editors.

I.i.101 damn those ears, etc. If they did speak, the people hearing them would immediately call them fools, and thus be in danger of damnation. An allusion to Matthew 5. 22: 'whosoever shall say to his brother . . . Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire.'

I.i.115. In a neat's tongue dried, etc. A neat is a bovine animal. The meaning of the whole passage is that everybody ought to talk except prudes. Possibly it is a fragment of some popular saying or song.

I.i.124. That. The word may refer to either the lady or the pilgrimage; it is impossible to say which, but both are probably implied.

I.i.148. innocence. Furness is probably right in thinking innocence here to mean foolishness. Compare the words in the preceding line, 'childhood proof.' Bassanio knew that he had no good reason for asking for more money, when he had not paid what he already owed.

I.i.169. Cato's daughter, Brutus' Portia. The Portia of Brutus appears in Shakespeare's Julius Caesar, a play which seems not to have been written till half a dozen years after The Merchant of Venice.

I.i.174. Colchos' strond. Colchis was a legendary country in Asia, on the eastern shore (strond) of the Black Sea. Jason went thither in search of the golden fleece, and with the aid of Medea (whom he later deserted) found and brought away the prize.

I.ii.41. choose. This much discussed passage seems to me to mean simply, 'if you don't like me, choose somebody else; choose for yourself.'

I.ii.59. he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian. Englishmen being, then as now, notorious for their ignorance of other languages. Many believe that Shakespeare would not have written this passage if he had been himself thus ignorant; but the criticism is playful, as that about the Englishman's clothes a few lines below.

I.ii.68. the Frenchman became his surety. A characteristic English gibe at the consistent but half-hearted way in which the French sided with the Scots in their frequent quarrels with the English. In the Folio (1623) the 'Scottish lord' of line 65 is called simply the 'other lord,' to avoid irritating the Scotch King James, who had become King of England in the interval since the play was first produced.

I.ii.89. Sibylla. The Cumaean Sibyl. Apollo promised her that her years should equal the number of grains of sand she held in her hand.

I.ii.109. The four strangers. Six have been definitely mentioned, but Shakespeare was careless of minor consistencies.

I.iii.29. the Nazarite. Commentators have charged Shakespeare with error in applying this word to Christ, since Nazarene is the ordinary term for 'man of Nazareth.' Nazarite is properly the name of an Old Testament Jewish sect who vowed 'to separate themselves unto the Lord' (Numbers 6. 2); but the distinction between Nazarite and Nazarene was not always observed. The allusion in the word 'habitation' is of course to the transfer of the devils from two men into a herd of swine (Matthew 8. 28 ff.).

I.iii.81. peel'd me. 'Me' is here the 'ethical dative,' which is frequent in Shakespeare, but nearly impossible to render in modern English. It slightly stresses the speaker's interest in the action of the verb, but does not otherwise affect the meaning of the sentence and would be omitted in a paraphrase.

I.iii.143. Bass. The Folios and first two Quartos give this speech to Bassanio, and are followed by most editors. The third Quarto (an authority of little importance) gives it to Antonio, which seems inherently better. Antonio is carrying on the dialogue with Shylock; furthermore, Bassanio would not be quite a gentleman if he showed any eagerness here to have the loan made. Shakespeare seldom makes a mistake in delicacy of feeling.

II.i.7. whose blood is reddest. Even then 'red-blooded' was used as it is now.

II.i.11, 12. I would not change this hue, Except to steal your thoughts. The only thing that would induce me to change my bronze skin for white would be the chance of winning you if I were fair.

II.ii.14. my father did something smack, something grow to, he had a kind of taste. This means that his father had sensual tastes. Editors explain 'grow to' as a household phrase applied to burnt milk. Launcelot, however, is speaking with relish.

II.ii.19. God bless the mark! A deprecatory expression, usually 'God save the mark!' It may have had its origin in Ezekiel 9. 6, where the Lord says: 'Slay utterly old and young, both maids, and little children, and women; but come not near any man upon whom is the mark.' Or it may refer to the mark of Cain, Genesis 4. 15: 'And the Lord said unto him, Therefore whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him sevenfold. And the Lord set a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him.'

II.ii.22. the very devil incarnation. The spurious Quarto of 1619 (falsely dated 1600) substitutes 'incarnall' for 'incarnation,' a change very generally adopted by editors who assumed that quarto to be the genuine first edition of the play. Launcelot's 'devil incarnation' blunderingly confuses three different phrases: devil incarnate, devil's incarnation, and devil in carnation (i.e., pink).

II.ii.30. being more than sand-blind, high-gravel blind. Launcelot humorously makes sand-blind a kind of positive to the comparative gravel-blind and superlative stone-blind. 'High-gravel blind' is of course his own invention.

II.ii.38. By God's sonties. A corrupted oath: God's saints, or sanctities (or possibly from the French santé).

II.ii.51, 52. But I pray you, ergo, old man, ergo, I beseech you, talk you of young Master Launcelot? Since you address me respectfully as 'your worship,' and Launcelot is my friend and equal, therefore (ergo) is it not Master Launcelot that you talk of?

II.ii.83. what a beard hast thou got! 'Stage tradition, not improbably from the time of Shakespeare himself, makes Launcelot, at this point, kneel with his back to the sand-blind old Father, who, of course, mistakes his long back hair for a beard, of which his face is perfectly innocent.' (Staunton.)

II.ii.95. you may tell every finger I have with my ribs. Topsy-turvy nonsense for 'you may count every rib with your finger.'

II.ii.133. The old proverb is very well parted. The proverb was: 'God's grace is gear enough.' Parted means distributed, divided.

II.ii.142. table, etc. Palmistry. Table was the technical term for the palm of the hand. As Launcelot opens his hand to inspect the palm, the action suggests to him the idea of laying the hand on the book (Bible) to swear an oath. 'A simple (moderate) line of life' (l. 143) is used humorously for the reverse. Compare 'a small trifle of wives,' 'a simple coming-in for one man' (l. 145). The number of wives was supposed to be indicated by the number of lines running from the ball of the thumb towards the line of life.

II.v.43. worth a Jewess' eye. Alluding to a common proverb, 'worth a Jew's eye.' The early editions spell the word 'Iewes' and modern editors find it difficult to decide whether Jewess' or Jew's is intended.

II.vi.16. scarfed. Most editors think this refers to flag-decorations. I believe it alludes simply to the spread of sails, which are fresh and strong at the beginning of the voyage, and at the return home are 'ragged . . . Lean, rent, and beggar'd.'

II.ix.87. what would my lord? It is generally explained that Portia says this playfully to the servant-messenger. Possibly she supposes, however, from the servant's excited manner that Arragon has returned for some reason, and so makes this impatient query.

III.i.23. the wings she flew withal. That is, the boy's dress that was the means of her escape.

III.i.77. Why thou— Furness and many other editors believe 'thou' to be a misprint for 'then' (which is actually the reading of the second Folio). But surely Shylock is going to call Jessica a bad name, and either checks himself or can't think of one bad enough.

III.i.90. Where? in Genoa? The early editions all have 'here in Genoa,' though Shylock is speaking in Venice. Rowe introduced the emendation, which has been accepted in most modern editions. Furness, however, justifies the original reading by the reasoning that in contrast with rumors of far-off losses on the Goodwins, etc., a loss confirmed in Genoa seems very near and definite.

III.ii.20, 21. Prove it so, Let fortune go to hell for it, not I. Should it prove, by the lottery of the caskets, that I am not yours, let chance bear the blame (which could not be adequately punished short of hell), not me.

III.ii.56, 57. With no less presence, but with much more love, Than young Alcides. Because Alcides (Hercules) rescued Hesione from the sea-monster, not for love but for the horses promised him by her father Laomedon, King of Troy. Portia compares herself to Hesione in the words, 'I stand for sacrifice' (l. 59). The 'Dardanian wives' (l. 60) are the Trojan matrons.

III.ii.98. Upon supposed fairness. This may mean 'on the strength of their fictitious beauty,' as some believe; but the beauty of the hair is real, not fictitious. The phrase probably refers rather to the 'supposed fairness' of the head that the locks adorn, which is really not fair at all.

III.ii.103. Veiling an Indian beauty. This is regarded as a very difficult passage, but why? Bassanio has been talking about lovely golden false hair adorning an ugly head, hence concealing it too. Thus the 'beauteous scarf Veiling an Indian beauty' means the fair veil concealing a black, that is loathsome, beauty. The emphasis is on the word 'Indian,' not 'beauty.'

III.ii.116. In measure rain thy joy. The verb is certainly rain, not rein, as some critics have taken it. The meaning is: Pour thy joy moderately.

III.ii.205, 206. You lov'd, I lov'd; for intermission No more pertains to me, my lord, than you. There has been much dispute over the meaning of these lines, all due to the punctuation of the early editions, which unanimously omit the semicolon after 'I lov'd' and insert a comma (or period) after 'intermission.' If the old punctuation is retained and understood to mark the logical relations of the parts of the sentence, the best explanation of line 200 would be to interpret 'intermission' as meaning comedy, like 'interlude.' You loved in the style of high drama, I match you with love less dignified perhaps, but real: I am to you as farce to drama. This, however, would leave line 201 far from clear; and it is much more likely that the pointing of the old editions is a striking instance of the tendency in Shakespeare's time to punctuate rhetorically instead of logically. The comma after 'intermission' would thus mark the drop of the actor's voice, not the close of a clause in the sentence.

III.ii.225. Salanio. The original editions give the name as Salerio here and throughout the rest of the scene, and several of the most important modern editors, on the strength of this, include Salerio, as well as Salanio and Salarino, among the characters in the play. It is highly unlikely that Shakespeare intended to add this third unnecessary character for the purposes of a single scene: Salerio may be either a slip of the author's pen or a blunder of the compositor.

III.iv.20. the semblance of my soul. Antonio, whose likeness to Bassanio makes him also like the very soul of Portia.

III.iv.54. Unto the tranect, to the common ferry. The meaning of tranect, evidently an uncommon word, is purposely explained in the words that follow. Since no other example of 'tranect' has been found, Rowe, followed by most modern editors, substitutes 'traject,' which is taken to be an anglicized version of 'traghetto,' the contemporary name of the Venetian ferries.

III.v.15. I shall be saved by my husband. See 1 Corinthians 7. 14: 'For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband.'

III.v.44. 'cover' is the word. Launcelot here means by cover 'bring the meal to the table.' In his next speech (l. 46) he quibbles on another meaning, 'put on one's hat,' which it would be undutiful for him, a servant, to do in the presence of Lorenzo.

III.v.67. mean it. Either, 'do not mean to lead an upright life,' or 'do not observe a mean (temperance, moderation).'

IV.i.57. a woollen bagpipe. Covered with woollen cloth. Among the many unnecessary emendations for 'woollen' which have been suggested are swollen, wooden, and wauling (cf. caterwauling). The last is the most plausible.

IV.i.74, 75. You may as well use question with the wolf, Why he hath made the ewe bleat for the lamb. An accident in the preparation of the First Quarto caused the omission of the first three words in line 74 and the first four in line 75 in certain copies of that edition. The Folio text was set up from one of the defective copies.

IV.i.120. Than to live still, and write mine epitaph. Compare Hamlet to Horatio (Hamlet, V.ii.370, 371):

'Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story.'

IV.i.132. And for thy life let justice be accus'd. Possibly meaning that justice is wrong for allowing him to live at all; but I think it means that justice should be condemned for allowing him to live in his present purpose, which though horrible is quite legal.

IV.i.153. Bellario's letter. Many say that Bellario had told Portia how to circumvent Shylock; but this is not only an unnecessary supposition, it spoils the scene. If Portia did not use her mother-wit here, why not let Bellario go himself and thus have Portia run no risk? Doubtless she had persuaded him to be 'very sick.' The subsequent citation of the law proving Shylock guilty of intent to murder may very well have come from Bellario.

IV.i.227. A Daniel come to judgment. I.e., a just young judge has arisen. The allusion is to the History of Susanna in the Apocrypha: 'the Lord raised up the holy spirit of a young youth, whose name was Daniel,' and who proceeded to give righteous judgment where his elders had blundered.

V.i.48, 49. Master Lorenzo? Master Lorenzo! The only two authoritative texts, those of the First Quarto (1600) and First Folio, both print these words, 'M. Lorenzo & M. Lorenzo,' which may be intended for 'Master Lorenzo and Mistress Lorenzo' (i.e., Jessica).

V.i.65, 66. the floor of heaven Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold. Shakespeare may have forgotten that on a bright, moonlight night one cannot see many stars. Furness, however, suggests that the 'patines' are not stars, but bits of illuminated cloud.

V.i.140, 141. We should hold day with the Antipodes, If you would walk in absence of the sun. With you to replace the sun in the night we should think that our day, as it is on the other side of the globe; i.e., you would turn night to day and outshine the sun.

The Text of the Present Edition

The text of the present volume is, by permission, based upon that of the Oxford Shakespeare, compared with the First Folio and Quarto texts. The following changes from the Oxford text have been made:

1. The stage directions are those of the First Folio, necessary additional words being inserted in square brackets.

2. The punctuation has been occasionally altered, and the spelling of a few words normalized; e.g., villainy (villany), nobody (no body), everywhere (every where).

3. The following alterations of text have been introduced, usually in deference to the authority of the genuine (Heyes) Quarto of 1600 (Q) and the First Folio (F). Readings of the present edition precede and those of Craig (Oxford) follow the colon:

I.iii.76	eanlings which (QF): eanlings that
110	spit: spet (QF). Cf. II.vii.45
143	Bass. (QF): Ant.
161	dealings (QF): dealing (later Folios)
II.ii.22	incarnation (QF): incarnal (spurious quarto)
84	phill-horse (QF): thill-horse (Theobald)
102	farthest (QF): very furthest
II.ix.4	stand (QF): stands (misprint?)
III.i.38	was used (QF): used (Rowe)
70	there, there, there, there! (QF): there there, there!
III.ii.253	steals (QF): steal (Pope)
III.iv.54	tranect (QF): traject (Rowe)
IV.i.22	strange apparent (QF): strange-apparent (Walker)
57	woollen (QF): wauling (Capell)
286	but (Q): not (F)
383	unto (QF): into (misprint?)
V.i.200	hope, which (QF): hope, that
253	let not me (QF): let me not
324	Whether (QF): Whe'r

As You Like It

Edited by
S. C. Burchell

Dramatis Personae

Duke Senior, living in exile in the Forest of Arden
Duke Frederick, his Brother and Usurper of the Dukedom
Amiens, Jaques } Lords attending on the banished Duke
Le Beau, a Courtier attending on Duke Frederick
Charles, Wrestler to Duke Frederick
Oliver, Jaques de Boys, Orlando } Sons of Sir Rowland de Boys
Adam, Dennis } Servants to Oliver
Touchstone, a Clown
Sir Oliver Martext, a Vicar
Corin, Silvius } Shepherds
William, a country Fellow in love with Audrey
Hymen

Rosalind, Daughter to the banished Duke
Celia, Daughter to Duke Frederick
Phebe, a Shepherdess
Audrey, a country Wench

Lords, Pages, Foresters, Attendants

As You Like It

Introduction

Text and Date

As You Like It was not printed until the First Folio of 1623. As this is the only authoritative text, it has been the concern of the present edition to depart from the Folio reading only when absolutely necessary. Essential stage directions not found in the Folio have been placed in square brackets, while words added to the text have been noted at the foot of the page. Obvious errors have been silently corrected and the spelling has been modernized (as has the punctuation) except in the case of a spelling indicative of Elizabethan pronunciation.

However, the question of the date of the play's composition presents significant difficulties. The play was entered on the Stationer's Register as a book to be stayed (that is, not printed, in order to prevent unauthorized use of the text) on August 4 of an unspecified year. But the order of entries in the Register and the inclusion of Henry V, Much Ado about Nothing, and Jonson's Every Man in his Humour on the same list make it almost certain that it was the year 1600. This information, however, tells us little about the time of actual composition.

John Dover Wilson, in The New Shakespeare (Cambridge, 1926), advances the hypothesis that a first version of the play was written in the summer of 1593 and drastically revised to its present form sometime around 1600. His argument is based upon a number of interesting points of internal evidence: the existence of many blank-verse lines in prose passages of the text as we now have it, the presence of obvious inconsistencies (Celia being 'taller' than Rosalind), certain references to the Martin Marprelate controversy, the publication of Lodge's Rosalynde in 1590, and most significant of all, the overt references to Christopher Marlowe.

At one point in the play Touchstone mentions a man being struck more dead than 'a great reckoning in a little room.' Dover Wilson feels that this is a direct reference to Marlowe's death in a tavern brawl on May 30, 1593, with the additional echo of a line from the Jew of Malta (see note to As You Like It, III.3.11, 12). Marlowe is again referred to in III.5.82, where his Hero and Leander, published in 1598, is quoted. A topical allusion of this sort would suggest that Shakespeare wrote the play some time after the year 1598. But Touchstone's remark must be taken as particularly inconclusive evidence that the play was first written in 1593. At best it can be interpreted only as an unconscious reference on Shakespeare's part and, if conscious, talk about Marlowe's death must have been common for many years after 1593. Even as late as 1600 a London audience could be assumed to have understood the allusion. However, it is most significant that Francis Meres in his discussion of Shakespeare's plays, published in 1598, makes no mention of As You Like It.

Though Dover Wilson's theory is of great interest and ingeniously conceived, internal and external evidence seem to point most clearly to a date of composition sometime between 1598 and 1600. Until further evidence is disclosed it is impossible to be more definite. Certainly the first mention of the play occurs in 1600.

Sources of the Play

For As You Like It Shakespeare characteristically derived his basic plot from another author. In this case all essential material comes from Thomas Lodge's novel, Rosalynde: Euphues Golden Legacie, published in 1590. In a note to his 'gentlemen readers' Lodge remarks, 'If you like it, so'—and it is generally assumed that this gave rise to Shakespeare's title. Shakespeare has abandoned the mannered euphuistic style of his source but has retained many of the pastoral elements which can be seen in his idyllic Forest of Arden, far away from the artificiality of court life. This popular Elizabethan theme can be found in a multitude of other works, among them Spenser's Shepheardes Calender (1579) and Sidney's Arcadia (1590).

Lodge's novel (in turn based on a Middle English poem, The Coke's Tale of Gamelyn) is a traditional pastoral romance. Shakespeare, while changing some names, has followed the essential pattern of Lodge's narrative. Rosalynde is the daughter of the banished king of France who falls in love with Rosader (Orlando) when she sees him in a wrestling match. She and her cousin Alinda (Celia) are banished by the usurping king and go in the disguises of Ganymede and Aliena to the Forest of the Ardennes. Here they meet Rosader who has fled from the wrath of his wicked brother Saladyne (Oliver). There is a romance between Rosalynde and Rosader, as in Shakespeare's play; and Saladyne, himself exiled by the evil king, reforms and falls in love with Alinda. News is finally brought to the forest that the peers of France have risen against the usurper, who is defeated, and Rosader is made heir to the throne.

It is obvious that As You Like It owes much to Lodge's novel, but Shakespeare has made some significant changes and additions. He has focused the action most clearly on the Forest of Arden passages, cutting out a great deal of the introductory matter, particularly the long section on Rosader's quarrel with his wicked brother, which he compressed to one brief interview. He also concentrated upon the romance of Rosalynde and Rosader and, unlike Lodge, gave merely a brief account of Saladyne's love for Alinda. But changes of this sort are obviously necessitated by the transition from a narrative to a dramatic form and reflect little of Shakespeare's originality.

The significant difference between As You Like It and Rosalynde lies in the approach to the pastoral tradition. The characters that Shakespeare has added—Touchstone, Jaques, and Audrey—create a tone of realism and form an ironic double image commenting upon the stilted world of pastoral romance.

Perhaps more important even than the treatment of these three characters is Shakespeare's treatment of Rosalind: she is no longer the stock figure that Lodge's Rosalynde was, and the whole action of the play is centered sharply on her, thus eliminating the diffusion characteristic of the novel. She has become a witty, paradoxical young lady, a blend of realism and of romance—fit company for Orlando and fit company too for Touchstone and Jaques.

Act First ❧ Scene First

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orl. As I remember, Adam, it was upon this fashion: he bequeathed me by will but poor a thousand crowns and, as thou say'st, charged my brother on his blessing to breed me well; and there begins my sadness. My brother Jaques he keeps at school, and report speaks goldenly of his profit. For my part, he keeps me rustically at home, or—to speak more properly—stays me here at home unkept, for call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth that differs not from the stalling of an ox? His horses are bred better; for, besides that they are fair with their feeding, they are taught their manage, and to that end riders dearly hir'd. But I, his brother, gain nothing under him but growth, for the which his animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I. Besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gave me, his countenance seems to take from me. He lets me feed with his hinds, bars me the place of a brother and, as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it, Adam, that grieves me and the spirit of my father, which I think is within me, begins to mutiny against this servitude. I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to avoid it.

Enter Oliver.

Adam. Yonder comes my master, your brother.

Orl. Go apart, Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up.

Oli. Now, sir, what make you here?

Orl. Nothing. I am not taught to make anything.

Oli. What mar you then, sir?

Orl. Marry, sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours, with idleness.

Oli. Marry, sir, be better employed, and be naught a while.

Orl. Shall I keep your hogs and eat husks with them? What prodigal portion have I spent that I should come to such penury?

Oli. Know you where you are, sir?

Orl. O, sir, very well. Here in your orchard.

Oli. Know you before whom, sir?

Orl. Ay, better than him I am before knows me. I know you are my eldest brother, and in the gentle condition of blood you should so know me. The courtesy of nations allows you my better, in that you are the first born, but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt us. I have as much of my father in me as you, albeit I confess your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

Oli. What, boy!

Orl. Come, come, elder brother, you are too young in this.

Oli. Wilt thou lay hands on me, villain?

Orl. I am no villain; I am the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Boys. He was my father, and he is thrice a villain that says such a father begot villains. Wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat till this other had pull'd out thy tongue for saying so. Thou hast rail'd on thyself.

Adam. Sweet masters, be patient. For your father's remembrance, be at accord.

Oli. Let me go, I say!

Orl. I will not till I please; you shall hear me. My father charg'd you in his will to give me good education. You have train'd me like a peasant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities. The spirit of my father grows strong in me, and I will no longer endure it. Therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor allottery my father left me by testament. With that I will go buy my fortunes.

Oli. And what wilt thou do? Beg when that is spent? Well, sir, get you in. I will not long be troubled with you; you shall have some part of your will. I pray you, leave me.

Orl. I will no further offend you than becomes me for my good.

Oli. Get you with him, you old dog.

Adam. Is 'old dog' my reward? Most true, I have lost my teeth in your service. God be with my old master. He would not have spoke such a word. Exeunt Orlando, Adam.

Oli. Is it even so? Begin you to grow upon me? I will physic your rankness, and yet give no thousand crowns neither. Holla, Dennis!

Enter Dennis.

Den. Calls your worship?

Oli. Was not Charles, the Duke's wrastler, here to speak with me?

Den. So please you, he is here at the door and importunes access to you.

Oli. Call him in. [Exit Dennis.] 'Twill be a good way, and tomorrow the wrastling is.

Enter Charles.

Cha. Good morrow to your worship.

Oli. Good Monsieur Charles, what's the new news at the new court?

Cha. There's no news at the court, sir, but the old news: that is, the old Duke is banished by his younger brother, the new Duke, and three or four loving lords have put themselves into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and revenues enrich the new Duke. Therefore he gives them good leave to wander.

Oli. Can you tell if Rosalind, the Duke's daughter, be banished with her father?

Cha. O, no. For the Duke's daughter, her cousin, so loves her, being ever from their cradles bred together, that she would have followed her exile, or have died to stay behind her. She is at the court and no less beloved of her uncle than his own daughter, and never two ladies loved as they do.

Oli. Where will the old Duke live?

Cha. They say he is already in the Forest of Arden, and a

1 he; cf. n. 3 poor a: a miserable breed: raise 5 school: college goldenly: glowingly 6 rustically: like a peasant 7 stays: keeps unkept: uncared for 10 manage: training paces 11 dearly: expensively 15 countenance: behavior 16 hinds: field servants 17 mines: undermines 25 make you: are you doing 27 mar; cf. n. 30 Marry: contraction of 'by the Virgin Mary' be naught: keep quiet 32 prodigal portion; cf. n. 34 where: in whose presence (Orlando takes the literal meaning) 37 Ay: F I (F is the First Folio of 1623) 38 gentle condition of blood: natural kindness of our relationship 39 courtesy of nations: conventions of civilized society 44 reverence; cf. n. 46 young: brash

48 villain; cf. n. 63 exercises: occupations 64 allottery: share 75 grow: presume 76 physic: purge rankness: insolence, foulness 79 wrastler; cf. n. 86 Monsieur; cf. n. 101 Forest of Arden; cf. n.

many merry men with him. And there they live like the old Robin Hood of England. They say many young gentlemen flock to him every day and fleet the time carelessly as they did in the golden world.

Oli. What, you wrastle tomorrow before the new Duke?

Cha. Marry, do I, sir. And I came to acquaint you with a matter: I am given, sir, secretly to understand that your younger brother Orlando hath a disposition to come in disguis'd against me to try a fall. Tomorrow, sir, I wrastle for my credit, and he that escapes me without some broken limb shall acquit him well. Your brother is but young and tender, and for your love I would be loath to foil him, as I must for my own honor if he come in. Therefore, out of my love to you, I came hither to acquaint you withal, that either you might stay him from his intendment or brook such disgrace well as he shall run into; in that it is a thing of his own search, and altogether against my will.

Oli. Charles, I thank thee for thy love to me, which thou shalt find I will most kindly requite. I had myself notice of my brother's purpose herein, and have by underhand means labored to dissuade him from it; but he is resolute. I'll tell thee, Charles, it is the stubbornest young fellow of France—full of ambition, an envious emulator of every man's good parts, a secret and villainous contriver against me, his natural brother. Therefore use thy discretion; I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger. And thou wert best look to 't; for if thou dost him any slight disgrace, or if he do not mightily grace himself on thee, he will practise against thee by poison, entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath tane thy life by some indirect means or other. For I assure thee—and almost with tears I speak it—there is not one so young and so villainous this day living. I speak but brotherly of him; but should I anatomize him to thee as he is, I must blush and weep, and thou must look pale and wonder.

Cha. I am heartily glad I came hither to you. If he come tomorrow, I'll give him his payment. If ever he go alone again, I'll never wrastle for prize more. And so God keep your worship. Exit.

[Oli.] Farewell, good Charles. Now will I stir this gamester. I hope I shall see an end of him, for my soul—yet I know not why—hates nothing more than he. Yet he's gentle, never school'd and yet learned, full of noble device, of all sorts enchantingly beloved, and indeed so much in the heart of the world and especially of my own people who best know him, that I am altogether misprised. But it shall not be so long; this wrastler shall clear all. Nothing remains but that I kindle the boy thither, which now I'll go about. Exit.

Scene Second

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Cel. I pray thee, Rosalind, sweet my coz, be merry.

Ros. Dear Celia, I show more mirth than I am mistress of, and would you yet I were merrier? Unless you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learn me how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

Cel. Herein I see thou lov'st me not with the full weight that I love thee. If my uncle, thy banished father, had banished thy uncle, the Duke my father, so thou hadst been still with me, I could have taught my love to take thy father for mine; so wouldst thou, if the truth of thy love to me were so righteously temper'd as mine is to thee.

Ros. Well, I will forget the condition of my estate to rejoice in yours.

Cel. You know my father hath no child but I, nor none is like to have. And truly, when he dies, thou shalt be his heir; for what he hath taken away from thy father perforce I will render thee again in affection. By mine honor, I will. And when I break that oath, let me turn monster. Therefore, my sweet Rose, my dear Rose, be merry.

Ros. From henceforth I will, coz, and devise sports. Let me see. What think you of falling in love?

Cel. Marry, I prithee do, to make sport withal. But love no man in good earnest, nor no further in sport neither than with safety of a pure blush thou mayst in honor come off again.

Ros. What shall be our sport then?

Cel. Let us sit and mock the good housewife Fortune from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be bestowed equally.

Ros. I would we could do so, for her benefits are mightily misplaced and the bountiful blind woman doth most mistake in her gifts to women.

Cel. 'Tis true. For those that she makes fair she scarce makes honest, and those that she makes honest she makes very ill-favoredly.

Ros. Nay, now thou goest from Fortune's office to Nature's. Fortune reigns in gifts of the world, not in the lineaments of Nature.

Enter Clown [Touchstone].

Cel. No? When Nature hath made a fair creature, may she not by Fortune fall into the fire? Though Nature hath given us wit to flout at Fortune, hath not Fortune sent in this fool to cut off the argument?

Ros. Indeed there is Fortune too hard for Nature, when Fortune makes Nature's natural the cutter-off of Nature's wit.

Cel. Peradventure this is not Fortune's work neither but Nature's, who perceiveth our natural wits too dull to reason of such goddesses and hath sent this natural for our whetstone. For always the dullness of the fool is the whetstone of the wits. How now, wit? Whether wander you?

Touch. Mistress, you must come away to your father.

Cel. Were you made the messenger?

Touch. No, by mine honor, but I was bid to come for you.

Ros. Where learned you that oath, fool?

Touch. Of a certain knight, that swore by his honor they were good pancakes and swore by his honor the mustard was naught. Now I'll stand to it, the pancakes were naught and the mustard was good. And yet was not the knight forsworn.

104 fleet: pass 105 golden world; cf. n. 113 loath: unwilling foil: throw 115 withal: with this 116 intendment: intent 116, 117 brook ... well: endure 121 underhand: unobtrusive 125, 126 natural brother: blood brother had as lief: had as soon 127 wert best: had better look to 't: take care 129 grace: do credit to practise: scheme 131 tane: taken 134 anatomize: analyze 137 go alone: walk without aid 140 stir: incite gamester: athlete 143 device: purpose sorts: types of people 144 enchantingly: as if by enchantment 146 misprised: despised 147 clear all: settle everything 147 kindle ... thither: incite him to challenge the wrestler 1 coz: cousin

3 I: F omits 4 learn me: instruct me 8 so: provided that 11 righteously temper'd: thoroughly consistent 12 estate: fortune 16 perforce: by force 20 sports: amusements 22 prithee: pray you; F prethee 23, 24 with ... blush: with modesty come off: escape 26 housewife Fortune; cf. n. 32 honest: virtuous 33 ill-favoredly: ugly looking 34 office: function 36 Nature; cf. n. 42 natural: idiot 44 reason of: discuss 45 and: F omits whetstone; cf. n. 47 Whether: whither 54 naught: worthless stand to it: maintain 55 was ... forsworn: did not swear falsely

Cel. How prove you that in the great heap of your knowledge?

Ros. Ay, marry, now unmuzzle your wisdom.

Touch. Stand you both forth now. Stroke your chins and swear by your beards that I am a knave.

Cel. By our beards—if we had them—thou art.

Touch. By my knavery—if I had it—then I were. But if you swear by that that is not, you are not forsworn. No more was this knight swearing by his honor, for he never had any; or, if he had, he had sworn it away before ever he saw those pancakes or that mustard.

Cel. Prithee, who is't that thou mean'st?

Touch. One that old Frederick, your father, loves.

Cel. My father's love is enough to honor him enough. Speak no more of him. You'll be whipt for taxation one of these days.

Touch. The more pity that fools may not speak wisely what wise men do foolishly.

Cel. By my troth, thou sayest true; for, since the little wit that fools have was silenced, the little foolery that wise men have makes a great show. Here comes Monsieur Le Beau.

Enter Le Beau.

Ros. With his mouth full of news.

Cel. Which he will put on us as pigeons feed their young.

Ros. Then shall we be news-cramm'd.

Cel. All the better; we shall be the more marketable. Bon jour, Monsieur Le Beau, what's the news?

Le Beau. Fair Princess, you have lost much good sport.

Cel. Sport? Of what color?

Le Beau. What color, madam? How shall I answer you?

Ros. As wit and fortune will.

Touch. Or as the Destinies decree.

Cel. Well said. That was laid on with a trowel.

Touch. Nay, if I keep not my rank.

Ros. Thou losest thy old smell.

Le Beau. You amaze me, ladies. I would have told you of good wrastling, which you have lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell us the manner of the wrastling.

Le Beau. I will tell you the beginning, and if it please your ladyships, you may see the end; for the best is yet to do. And here where you are they are coming to perform it.

Cel. Well, the beginning that is dead and buried.

Le Beau. There comes an old man and his three sons.

Cel. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beau. Three proper young men of excellent growth and presence.

Ros. With bills on their necks: 'Be it known unto all men by these presents.'

Le Beau. The eldest of the three wrastled with Charles, the Duke's wrastler; which Charles in a moment threw him and broke three of his ribs, that there is little hope of life in him. So he serv'd the second, and so the third. Yonder they lie, the poor old man their father making such pitiful dole over them that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

69 Celia; cf. n. enough; cf. n. 70 taxation: insolent criticism, slander 74 troth: faith 78 put on: force on 80 marketable: plumper and therefore more valuable 81 Bon jour; cf. n. 83 color: sort 89 smell; cf. n. 90 amaze: perplex 94 to do: to be done 98 old tale; cf. n. 99 proper: admirable 100 presence: carriage 101 bills: signs 102 presents; cf. n. 104 which; cf. n. 105 that: so that 107 dole: lamentation

Ros. Alas!

Touch. But what is the sport, Monsieur, that the ladies have lost?

Le Beau. Why, this that I speak of.

Touch. Thus men may grow wiser every day. It is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribs was sport for ladies.

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else longs to see this broken music in his sides? Is there yet another dotes upon rib-breaking? Shall we see this wrastling, cousin?

Le Beau. You must if you stay here; for here is the place appointed for the wrastling, and they are ready to perform it.

Cel. Yonder sure they are coming. Let us now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter Duke [Frederick], Lords, Orlando, Charles, and Attendants.

Duke. Come on. Since the youth will not be entreated, his own peril on his forwardness.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le Beau. Even he, madam.

Cel. Alas, he is too young; yet he looks successfully.

Duke. How now, daughter and cousin, are you crept hither to see the wrastling?

Ros. Ay, my liege, so please you give us leave.

Duke. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you. There is such odds in the man. In pity of the challenger's youth I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated. Speak to him, ladies; see if you can move him.

Cel. Call him hether, good Monsieur Le Beau.

Duke. Do so. I'll not be by.

Le Beau. Monsieur the Challenger, the princess calls for you.

Orl. I attend them with all respect and duty.

Ros. Young man, have you challeng'd Charles the Wrastler?

Orl. No, fair princess, he is the general challenger. I come but in as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years. You have seen cruel proof of this man's strength. If you saw yourself with your eyes or knew yourself with your judgment, the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. We pray you for your own sake to embrace your own safety and give over this attempt.

Ros. Do, young sir. Your reputation shall not therefore be misprised. We will make it our suit to the Duke that the wrastling might not go forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts, wherein I confess me much guilty to deny so fair and excellent ladies anything. But let your fair eyes and gentle wishes go with me to my trial; wherein if I be foil'd, there is but one sham'd that was never gracious; if kill'd, but one dead that is willing to be so. I shall do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me; the world no injury, for in it I have nothing. Only in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied when I have made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.

116 any: anyone longs: who longs broken music; cf. n. 124 entreated: persuaded 125 forwardness: foolhardiness 128 looks successfully: seems able to succeed 133 such . . . man; cf. n. 134 fain: be glad to 136 hether; cf. n. 139 them; cf. n. 151 misprised: despised suit: petition 157 gracious: in good favor

Cel. And mine to eke out hers.
Ros. Fare you well. Pray heaven I be deceiv'd in you.
Cel. Your heart's desires be with you.
Cha. Come, where is this young gallant that is so desirous to lie with his mother earth?
Orl. Ready, sir; but his will hath in it a more modest working.
Duke. You shall try but one fall.
Cha. No, I warrant your grace you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily persuaded him from a first.
Orl. You mean to mock me after; you should not have mock'd me before. But come your ways.
Ros. Now Hercules be thy speed, young man.
Cel. I would I were invisible, to catch the strong fellow by the leg. [Charles and Orlando] Wrastle.
Ros. O excellent young man!
Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye, I can tell who should down. [Charles is thrown.] Shout.
Duke. No more, no more.
Orl. Yes, I beseech your grace; I am not yet well breath'd.
Duke. How dost thou, Charles?
Le Beau. He cannot speak, my lord.
Duke. Bear him away. What is thy name, young man?
Orl. Orlando, my liege, the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Boys.
Duke. I would thou hadst been son to some man else.
The world esteem'd thy father honorable,
But I did find him still mine enemy.
Thou should'st have better pleas'd me with this deed,
Hadst thou descended from another house.
But fare thee well; thou art a gallant youth.
I would thou hadst told me of another father.
Exeunt Duke, [Le Beau, and Lords].
Cel. Were I my father, coz, would I do this?
Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Rowland's son,
His youngest son, and would not change that calling
To be adopted heir to Frederick.
Ros. My father lov'd Sir Rowland as his soul,
And all the world was of my father's mind.
Had I before known this young man his son,
I should have given him tears unto entreaties,
Ere he should thus have ventur'd.
Cel. Gentle cousin,
Let us go thank him and encourage him.
My father's rough and envious disposition
Sticks me at heart. Sir, you have well deserv'd.
If you do keep your promises in love
But justly as you have exceeded all promise,
Your mistress shall be happy.
Ros. [presenting a locket]. Gentleman,
Wear this for me, one out of suits with fortune
That could give more, but that her hand lacks means.
Shall we go, coz?
Cel. Ay; fare you well, fair gentleman.

Orl. Can I not say 'I thank you'? My better parts
Are all thrown down, and that which here stands up
Is but a quintain, a mere lifeless block.
Ros. He calls us back. My pride fell with my fortunes.
I'll ask him what he would. Did you call, sir?
Sir, you have wrastled well and overthrown
More than your enemies.
Cel. Will you go, coz?
Ros. Have with you. Fare you well. Exeunt.
Orl. What passion hangs these weights upon my tongue?
I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference.

Enter Le Beau.

O poor Orlando, thou art overthrown;
Or Charles or something weaker masters thee.
Le Beau. Good sir, I do in friendship counsel you
To leave this place. Albeit you have deserv'd
High commendation, true applause, and love,
Yet such is now the Duke's condition
That he misconsters all that you have done.
The Duke is humorous. What he is indeed
More suits you to conceive than I to speak of.
Orl. I thank you, sir. And pray you, tell me this:
Which of the two was daughter of the Duke,
That here was at the wrastling?
Le Beau. Neither his daughter, if we judge by manners.
But yet indeed the taller is his daughter.
The other is daughter to the banish'd Duke
And here detain'd by her usurping uncle
To keep his daughter company, whose loves
Are dearer than the natural bond of sisters.
But I can tell you that of late this Duke
Hath tane displeasure 'gainst his gentle niece,
Grounded upon no other argument
But that the people praise her for her virtues,
And pity her for her good father's sake.
And, on my life, his malice 'gainst the lady
Will suddenly break forth. Sir, fare you well.
Hereafter, in a better world than this,
I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.
Orl. I rest much bounden to you. Fare you well.
[Exit Le Beau.]
Thus must I from the smoke into the smother,
From tyrant Duke unto a tyrant brother.
But heavenly Rosalind!

Scene Three

Enter Celia and Rosalind.

Cel. Why, cousin, why, Rosalind! Cupid have mercy, not a word?
Ros. Not one to throw at a dog.
Cel. No, thy words are too precious to be cast away upon

165 deceiv'd in: mistaken about (i.e. his strength) 169, 170 modest working: moderate intention 177 Hercules be thy speed: May Hercules give you good fortune 184 well breath'd: fully exercised 190 some man else: some other man 192 still: always 193 thou hadst: to be read 'thou'dst' 199 calling: name 204 unto: in addition to 209 Sticks me at heart: stabs me in the heart 211 But justly: as exactly 214 out of suits: out of favor; cf. n

218 parts: qualities 220 quintain; cf. n. 226 Have with you: I'm coming with you 227 passion: a strong emotion 228 urg'd conference: invited conversation 234 condition: mood 235 misconsters: misconstrues 236 humorous: temperamental; cf. n. 242 taller; cf. n. 243 other is: to be read 'other's' 248 tane: taken 249 argument: cause 256 bounden: obligated 257 from . . . smother: 'out of the frying pan into the fire' SD Rosalind; cf. n. (SD is used throughout to indicate stage direction.)

curs; throw some of them at me. Come, lame me with reasons.

Ros. Then there were two cousins laid up, when the one should be lam'd with reasons and the other mad without any.

Cel. But is all this for your father?

Ros. No, some of it is for my child's father. O, how full of briers is this working-day world.

Cel. They are but burs, cousin, thrown upon thee in holiday foolery. If we walk not in the trodden paths, our very petticoats will catch them.

Ros. I could shake them off my coat. These burs are in my heart.

Cel. Hem them away.

Ros. I would try, if I could cry 'hem' and have him.

Cel. Come, come, wrastle with thy affections.

Ros. O, they take the part of a better wrastler than myself.

Cel. O, a good wish upon you! You will try in time, in despite of a fall. But, turning these jests out of service, let us talk in good earnest. Is it possible on such a sudden you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland's youngest son?

Ros. The Duke my father lov'd his father dearly.

Cel. Doth it therefore ensue that you should love his son dearly? By this kind of chase I should hate him, for my father hated his father dearly. Yet I hate not Orlando.

Ros. No, faith. Hate him not, for my sake.

Cel. Why should I not? Doth he not deserve well?

Enter Duke with Lords.

Ros. Let me love him for that, and you do love him because I do. Look, here comes the Duke.

Cel. With his eyes full of anger.

Duke. Mistress, dispatch you with your safest haste
And get you from our court.

Ros. Me, uncle?

Duke. You, cousin.
Within these ten days if that thou beest found
So near our public court as twenty miles,
Thou diest for it.

Ros. I do beseech your Grace,
Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with me.
If with myself I hold intelligence,
Or have acquaintance with mine own desires;
If that I do not dream, or be not frantic—
As I do trust I am not—then, dear uncle,
Never so much as in a thought unborn
Did I offend your highness.

Duke. Thus do all traitors.
If their purgation did consist in words,
They are as innocent as grace itself.
Let it suffice thee that I trust thee not.

Ros. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a traitor.
Tell me whereon the likelihood depends.

Duke. Thou art thy father's daughter; there's enough.

Ros. So was I when your highness took his dukedom;
So was I when your highness banish'd him.
Treason is not inherited, my lord;
Or if we did derive it from our friends,
What's that to me? My father was no traitor.
Then, good my liege, mistake me not so much
To think my poverty is treacherous.

Cel. Dear sovereign, hear me speak.

Duke. Ay, Celia, we stay'd her for your sake,
Else had she with her father rang'd along.

Cel. I did not then entreat to have her stay;
It was your pleasure, and your own remorse.
I was too young that time to value her,
But now I know her. If she be a traitor,
Why so am I. We still have slept together,
Rose at an instant, learn'd, play'd, eat together,
And wheresoe'er we went, like Juno's swans,
Still we went coupled and inseparable.

Duke. She is too subtile for thee. And her smoothness,
Her very silence and her patience,
Speak to the people, and they pity her.
Thou art a fool. She robs thee of thy name,
And thou wilt show more bright and seem more virtuous
When she is gone. Then open not thy lips.
Firm and irrevocable is my doom
Which I have pass'd upon her: she is banish'd.

Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me, my liege.
I cannot live out of her company.

Duke. You are a fool. You, niece, provide yourself.
If you outstay the time, upon mine honor
And in the greatness of my word, you die.

Exeunt Duke, etc.

Cel. O my poor Rosalind, whether wilt thou go?
Wilt thou change fathers? I will give thee mine.
I charge thee be not thou more griev'd than I am.

Ros. I have more cause.

Cel. Thou hast not, cousin.
Prithee, be cheerful. Know'st thou not the Duke
Hath banish'd me, his daughter?

Ros. That he hath not.

Cel. No? Hath not? Rosalind lacks then the love
Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one.
Shall we be sund'red? Shall we part, sweet girl?
No! Let my father seek another heir.
Therefore devise with me how we may fly,
Whether to go, and what to bear with us.
And do not seek to take your change upon you,
To bear your griefs yourself and leave me out.
For by this heaven, now at our sorrows pale,
Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee.

Ros. Why, whether shall we go?

Cel. To seek my uncle in the Forest of Arden.

Ros. Alas, what danger will it be to us—
Maids as we are—to travel forth so far?
Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.

Cel. I'll put myself in poor and mean attire

8 reasons; cf. n. 17 Hem: clear away with a cough 18 'hem' . . . him; cf. n. 19 affections: feelings 22 in despite of: notwithstanding turning . . . service: putting aside 28 chase: pursuit of an argument 31 deserve well; cf. n. 35 dispatch you: remove yourself 44 hold intelligence: communicate 46 If that: if 51 purgation: absolution from guilt 52 grace: virtue 55 likelihood: possibility

60 friends: relatives 63 To: as to 66 rang'd: wandered 68 remorse: compassion 71 still: always 72 Rose: risen at an instant: at the same time eat: eaten (pronounced 'et') 73 Juno's swans; cf. n. 75 subtile: subtle, acute 79 show: appear virtuous: full of good qualities 81 doom: sentence 87 in . . . word: by my word as ruler 101 Whether: whither 102 change; cf. n. 111 mean: lowly

And with a kind of umber smirch my face;
The like do you. So shall we pass along
And never stir assailants.
Ros. Were it not better,
Because that I am more than common tall,
That I did suit me all points like a man:
A gallant curtelaxe upon my thigh,
A boar spear in my hand, and—in my heart
Lie there what hidden woman's fear there will—
We'll have a swashing and a martial outside,
As many other mannish cowards have
That do outface it with their semblances.
Cel. What shall I call thee when thou art a man?
Ros. I'll have no worse a name than Jove's own page,
And therefore look you call me Ganymede.
But what will you be call'd?
Cel. Something that hath a reference to my state:
No longer Celia but Aliena.
Ros. But, cousin, what if we assay'd to steal
The clownish Fool out of your father's court?
Would he not be a comfort to our travel?
Cel. He'll go along o'er the wide world with me.
Leave me alone to woo him. Let's away
And get our jewels and our wealth together,
Devise the fittest time and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be made
After my flight. Now go we in content
To liberty, and not to banishment. Exeunt.

Act Second ❧ Scene First

Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, and two or three Lords like Foresters.

Duke S. Now, my co-mates and brothers in exile,
Hath not old custom made this life more sweet
Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods
More free from peril than the envious court?
Here feel we not the penalty of Adam,
The seasons' difference?—as, the icy fang
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind
Which when it bites and blows upon my body
E'en till I shrink with cold, I smile and say:
'This is no flattery; these are counselors
That feelingly persuade me what I am.'
Sweet are the uses of adversity,
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head.
And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in everything.
Ami. I would not change it. Happy is your grace
That can translate the stubborness of Fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a style.

112 umber: brown pigment 114 stir: incite 116 than common: than usually 117 all points: in all respects 118 curtelaxe: broad sword 121 swashing: swaggering 123 outface it: brazen it out semblances: appearances 126 Ganymede; cf. n. 129 Aliena: the cast off (Latin) 130 assay'd: attempted 134 woo: persuade 138 in content: satisfied 1 exile: stressed — ⏑ 3 painted: artificial, cf. n. 5 the penalty of Adam; cf. n. 6 as: for example 7 churlish: rough 9 E'en: F Even 12 uses: benefits 13 toad; cf. n. 15 public haunt: resorts of men 18 Amiens; cf. n. 20 style: i.e. of life

Duke S. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me the poor dappled fools,
Being native burghers of this desert city,
Should in their own confines with forked heads
Have their round hanches gor'd.
1 Lord. Indeed, my lord,
The melancholy Jaques grieves at that,
And in that kind swears you do more usurp
Than doth your brother that hath banish'd you.
Today my Lord of Amiens and myself
Did steal behind him as he lay along
Under an oak whose anticke root peeps out
Upon the brook that brawls along this wood.
To the which place a poor sequest'red stag,
That from the hunter's aim had tane a hurt,
Did come to languish. And indeed, my lord,
The wretched animal heav'd forth such groans
That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat
Almost to bursting, and the big round tears
Cours'd one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase. And thus the hairy fool,
Much marked of the melancholy Jaques,
Stood on th' extremest verge of the swift brook,
Augmenting it with tears.
Duke S. But what said Jaques?
Did he not moralize this spectacle?
1 Lord. O yes, into a thousand similes.
First, for his weeping into the needless stream:
'Poor deer,' quoth he, 'thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings do, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much.' Then, being there alone,
Left and abandoned of his velvet friends:
' 'Tis right,' quoth he, 'thus misery doth part
The flux of company.' Anon a careless herd,
Full of the pasture, jumps along by him
And never stays to greet him. 'Ay,' quoth Jaques,
'Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens;
'Tis just the fashion. Wherefore do you look
Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?'
Thus most invectively he pierceth through
The body of the country, city, court,
Yea, and of this our life, swearing that we
Are mere usurpers, tyrants, and what's worse,
To fright the animals and to kill them up
In their assign'd and native dwelling place.
Duke S. And did you leave him in this contemplation?
2 Lord. We did, my Lord, weeping and commenting Upon the sobbing deer.
Duke S. Show me the place.
I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.
1 Lord. I'll bring you to him straight. Exeunt.

23 desert: uninhabited 24 confines: territory forked heads: hunting arrows 25 hanches: haunches 27 Jaques; cf. n. 28 in that kind: in that respect 31 along: stretched out 32 anticke: old (stressed — ⏑ —) 33 brawls: courses 34 sequest'red: separated from the herd 42 of: by 43 verge: bank 46 moralize: make a sermon on 48 needless: i.e. not needing any more water 50 worldlings: people of the world 51 there; cf. n. 52 of: by velvet; cf. n. 53 part: part from 54 flux: stream Anon: presently 60 invectively: with denunciation 61 the: (before country) F omits 64 kill . . . up: kill off 70 cope: meet 71 matter: substance 72 straight: immediately

Scene Second

Enter Duke [Frederick], with Lords.

Duke. Can it be possible that no man saw them?
It cannot be; some villains of my court
Are of consent and sufferance in this.
1 Lord. I cannot hear of any that did see her.
The ladies, her attendants of her chamber,
Saw her abed, and in the morning early
They found the bed untreasur'd of their mistress.
2 Lord. My lord, the roynish Clown at whom so oft
Your Grace was wont to laugh is also missing.
Hisperia, the princess' gentlewoman,
Confesses that she secretly o'erheard
Your daughter and her cousin much commend
The parts and graces of the wrastler
That did but lately foil the sinewy Charles.
And she believes, wherever they are gone,
That youth is surely in their company.
Duke. Send to his brother; fetch that gallant hither.
If he be absent, bring his brother to me.
I'll make him find him. Do this suddenly,
And let not search and inquisition quail
To bring again these foolish runaways. Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orl. Who's there?
Adam. What, my young master! O my gentle master,
O my sweet master, O you memory
Of old Sir Rowland. Why, what make you here?
Why are you virtuous? Why do people love you?
And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?
Why would you be so fond to overcome
The bonny prizer of the humorous Duke?
Your praise is come too swiftly home before you.
Know you not, master, to some kind of men
Their graces serve them but as enemies?
No more do yours: your virtues, gentle master,
Are sanctified and holy traitors to you.
O what a world is this, when what is comely
Envenoms him that bears it.
Orl. Why, what's the matter?
Adam. O unhappy youth,
Come not within these doors. Within this roof
The enemy of all your graces lives.
Your brother—no, no brother, yet the son
(Yet not the son, I will not call him son)
Of him I was about to call his father—
Hath heard your praises and this night he means
To burn the lodging where you use to lie,
And you within it. If he fail of that,
He will have other means to cut you off.
I overheard him and his practices.
This is no place: this house is but a butchery.
Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it.
Orl. Why, whether, Adam, would'st thou have me go?
Adam. No matter whether, so you come not here.
Orl. What, would'st thou have me go and beg my food?
Or with a base and boist'rous sword enforce
A thievish living on the common road?
This I must do, or know not what to do;
Yet this I will not do, do how I can.
I rather will subject me to the malice
Of a diverted blood and bloody brother.
Adam. But do not so. I have five hundred crowns,
The thrifty hire I saved under your father,
Which I did store to be my foster nurse
When service should in my old limbs lie lame
And unregarded age in corners thrown.
Take that; and He that doth the ravens feed,
Yea, providently caters for the sparrow,
Be comfort to my age. Here is the gold;
All this I give you. Let me be your servant.
Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood,
Nor did not with unbashful forehead woo
The means of weakness and debility.
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty but kindly. Let me go with you;
I'll do the service of a younger man
In all your business and necessities.
Orl. O good old man, how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antique world,
When service sweat for duty, not for meed.
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweat but for promotion,
And having that, do choke their service up
Even with the having; it is not so with thee.
But, poor old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree
That cannot so much as a blossom yield,
In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry.
But come thy ways; we'll go along together,
And ere we have thy youthful wages spent,
We'll light upon some settled low content.
Adam. Master, go on and I will follow thee
To the last gasp with truth and loyalty.
From seventeen years till now almost fourscore
Here lived I; but now live here no more.
At seventeen years many their fortunes seek,
But at fourscore it is too late a week.
Yet Fortune cannot recompense me better
Than to die well, and not my master's debtor. Exeunt.

3 Are . . . sufference: have agreed and contrived 8 roynish: mangy 13 wrastler: here three syllables, 'wrasteler.' 19 suddenly: immediately 20 inquisition: investigation quail: falter SD Enter . . . Adam; cf. n. 3 memory: reminder 4 make you: are you doing 5 virtuous: full of good qualities 7 fond: foolish 8 bonny prizer: sturdy prize fighter 15 envenoms: poisons 19 graces: virtues 24 use: are accustomed

27 practices: plots 28 place: i.e. for Orlando butchery: slaughterhouse 30 whether: whither 35 boist'rous: violent 40 diverted blood: unnatural relationship 42 thrifty hire: wages economically saved 60 constant: faithful antique: ancient (stressed –'– —). 62 sweat: sweated meed: reward 68 In lieu of: in return for 69 come thy ways: come along 71 low: lowly content: peace 77 too late a week: far too late

Scene Fourth

Enter Rosalind for Ganymede, Celia for Aliena, and Clown, alias Touchstone.

Ros. O Jupiter, how weary are my spirits!
Touch. I care not for my spirits, if my legs were not weary.
Ros. I could find in my heart to disgrace my man's apparel and to cry like a woman. But I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doublet and hose ought to show itself courageous to petticoat. Therefore courage, good Aliena.
Cel. I pray you, bear with me. I cannot go no further.
Touch. For my part, I had rather bear with you than bear you. Yet I should bear no cross if I did bear you, for I think you have no money in your purse.
Ros. Well, this is the Forest of Arden.
Touch. Ay, now am I in Arden, the more fool I. When I was at home I was in a better place, but travelers must be content.

Enter Corin and Silvius.

Ros. Ay, be so, good Touchstone. Look you, who comes here—a young man and an old in solemn talk.
Cor. That is the way to make her scorn you still.
Sil. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her.
Cor. I partly guess, for I have lov'd ere now.
Sil. No, Corin. Being old, thou canst not guess,
Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover
As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow.
But if thy love were ever like to mine—
As sure I think did never man love so—
How many actions most ridiculous
Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasy?
Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.
Sil. O thou didst then ne'er love so heartily.
If thou remember'rest not the slightest folly
That ever love did make thee run into,
Thou hast not lov'd.
Or if thou hast not sat as I do now,
Wearing thy hearer in thy mistress' praise,
Thou hast not lov'd.
Or if thou hast not broke from company
Abruptly as my passion now makes me,
Thou hast not lov'd.
O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe! Exit.
Ros. Alas, poor shepherd! Searching of thy wound,
I have by hard adventure found mine own.
Touch. And I mine. I remember when I was in love, I broke my sword upon a stone and bid him take that for coming a-night to Jane Smile. And I remember the kissing of her batler and the cow's dugs that her pretty chopt hands had milk'd. And I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her, from whom I took two cods, and giving them her again, said with weeping tears: 'Wear these for my sake.' We that are true lovers run into strange capers. But as all is mortal in nature, so is all nature in love mortal in folly.
Ros. Thou speak'st wiser than thou art ware of.
Touch. Nay, I shall ne'er be ware of mine own wit till I break my shins against it.
Ros. Jove, Jove, this shepherd's passion
Is much upon my fashion.
Touch. And mine. But it grows something stale with me.
Cel. I pray you, one of you question yond man,
If he for gold will give us any food.
I faint almost to death.
Touch. Holla, you clown!
Ros. Peace, fool! He's not thy kinsman.
Cor. Who calls?
Touch. Your betters, sir.
Cor. Else are they very wretched.
Ros. Peace, I say! Good even to you, friend.
Cor. And to you, gentle sir, and to you all.
Ros. I prithee, shepherd, if that love or gold
Can in this desert place buy entertainment,
Bring us where we may rest ourselves and feed.
Here's a young maid with travel much oppress'd,
And faints for succor.
Cor. Fair sir, I pity her,
And wish for her sake more than for mine own
My fortunes were more able to relieve her.
But I am shepherd to another man,
And do not shear the fleeces that I graze.
My master is of churlish disposition,
And little recks to find the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitality.
Besides, his cote, his flocks, and bounds of feed
Are now on sale; and at our sheepcote now,
By reason of his absence, there is nothing
That you will feed on. But what is, come see,
And in my voice most welcome shall you be.
Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?
Cor. That young swain that you saw here but erewhile,
That little cares for buying anything.
Ros. I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,
Buy thou the cottage, pasture, and the flock,
And thou shalt have to pay for it of us.
Cel. And we will mend thy wages. I like this place
And willingly could waste my time in it.
Cor. Assuredly the thing is to be sold.
Go with me. If you like, upon report,
The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,
I will your very faithful feeder be
And buy it with your gold right suddenly. Exeunt.

1 weary: cf. n. 6 weaker vessel: woman doublet and hose: Elizabethan male costume of jacket and tights 11 cross: cf. n. 13 Arden: cf. n. 28 fantasy: love 30 ne'er: F never 35 Wearing: wearying 41 Searching of: probing 42 hard adventure: misfortune 45 a-night: at night 46 batler: a stick for beating clothes chopt: chapped 47 peascod: peapod

50 capers: pranks mortal: cf. n. 53 ware: aware 58 something: somewhat 60 yond: yonder 63 clown: peasant 64 kinsman: cf. n. 71 entertainment: hospitality 74 succor: aid 80 churlish: niggardly 81 recks: cares 83 cote: cottage bounds of feed: extent of pasturage 87 in my voice: for my part 88 What: who 89 but erewhile: just now 91 stand: be consistent 93 have to pay: have money to pay 94 mend: raise 95 waste: pass 99 feeder: servant

Scene Five

Enter Amiens, Jaques, and others.

Song

Ami. Under the greenwood tree
Who loves to lie with me,
And turn his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat,
Come hither, come hither, come hither!
Here shall he see
No enemy
But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. More, more, I prithee, more.

Ami. It will make you melancholy, Monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. I thank it. More, I prithee, more. I can suck melancholy out of a song as a weasel sucks eggs. More, I prithee, more.

Ami. My voice is ragged; I know I cannot please you.

Jaq. I do not desire you to please me; I do desire you to sing. Come, more: another stanzo. Call you 'em stanzos?

Ami. What you will, Monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing. Will you sing?

Ami. More at your request than to please myself.

Jaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I'll thank you. But that they call compliment is like th' encounter of two dog-apes. And when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I have given him a penny, and he renders me the beggarly thanks. Come, sing. And you that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song. Sirs, cover the while; the Duke will drink under this tree. He hath been all this day to look you.

Jaq. And I have been all this day to avoid him. He is too disputable for my company. I think of as many matters as he, but I give heaven thanks and make no boast of them. Come, warble, come.

Song

All together here.

Who doth ambition shun
And loves to lie i' th' sun,
Seeking the food he eats
And pleas'd with what he gets,
Come hither, come hither, come hither!
Here shall he see
No enemy
But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. I'll give you a verse to this note that I made yesterday in despite of my invention.

Ami. And I'll sing it.

Jaq. Thus it goes:

If it do come to pass
That any man turn ass,
Leaving his wealth and ease,
A stubborn will to please,
Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame!
Here shall he see
Gross fools as he,
And if he will come to me.

Ami. What's that 'ducdame'?

Jaq. 'Tis a Greek invocation to call fools into a circle. I'll go sleep if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first born of Egypt.

Ami. And I'll go seek the Duke. His banket is prepar'd

Exeunt.

3 turn: adapt 13 ragged: uneven 15 stanzo: stanza 17 names: i.e. signatures on a bond of debt 21 that: what compliment: courtesy 22 dog-apes: dog-faced baboons 25 cover the while: set the table now 26 look: look for 28 disputable: prone to argue 39 note: tune 40 in ... invention: without using my imagination 47 Ducdame; cf. n. 50 And if: an if, if only 52 circle; cf. n. 53, 54 first born of Egypt; cf. n. 55 banket: banquet, a light meal of fruit and wine

Scene Sixth

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no further. O, I die for food! Here lie I down and measure out my grave. Farewell, kind master.

Orl. Why, how now, Adam? No greater heart in thee? Live a little, comfort a little, cheer thyself a little. If this uncouth forest yield anything savage, I will either be food for it or bring it for food to thee. Thy conceit is nearer death than thy powers. For my sake, be comfortable; hold death awhile at the arm's end. I will here be with thee presently, and if I bring thee not something to eat, I will give thee leave to die; but if thou diest before I come, thou art a mocker of my labor. Well said. Thou look'st cheerly, and I'll be with thee quickly. Yet thou liest in the bleak air. Come, I will bear thee to some shelter, and thou shalt not die for lack of a dinner, if there live anything in this desert. Cheerly, good Adam.

Exeunt.

5 comfort a little: take comfort 6 uncouth: unknown 7 conceit: imagination 9 presently: immediately 12 Well said: well done cheerly: cheerful 1 be: is (the subjunctive form) 5 compact of jars: made up of discord 6 discord ... spheres; cf. n. 11 merrily: cheerful 13 motley; cf. n. 17 good set terms: precise terms

Scene Seventh

Enter Duke Senior, [Amiens,] and Lord, like Outlaws.

Duke S. I think he be transform'd into a beast,
For I can nowhere find him like a man.

1 Lord. My lord, he is but even now gone hence.
Here was he merry, hearing of a song.

Duke S. If he, compact of jars, grow musical,
We shall have shortly discord in the spheres.
Go seek him; tell him I would speak with him.

Enter Jaques.

1 Lord. He saves my labor by his own approach.

Duke S. Why, how now, monsieur! What a life is this
That your poor friends must woo your company.
What, you look merrily.

Jaq. A fool, a fool. I met a fool i' th' forest,
A motley fool—a miserable world.
As I do live by food I met a fool,
Who laid him down and bask'd him in the sun,
And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good terms,
In good set terms; and yet a motley fool.

'Good morrow, fool,' quoth I. 'No, sir,' quoth he,
'Call me not fool till heaven hath sent me fortune.'
And then he drew a dial from his poke,
And looking on it with lackluster eye,
Says, very wisely: 'It is ten o'clock.'
'Thus we may see,' quoth he, 'how the world wags.
'Tis but an hour ago since it was nine,
And after one hour more 'twill be eleven.
And so from hour to hour we ripe and ripe,
And then from hour to hour we rot and rot.
And thereby hangs a tale.' When I did hear
The motley fool thus moral on the time,
My lungs began to crow like Chanticleer
That fools should be so deep contemplative.
And I did laugh sans intermission,
An hour by his dial. O noble fool,
A worthy fool! Motley's the only wear.
Duke S. What fool is this?
Jaq. O worthy fool—one that hath been a courtier
And says, if ladies be but young and fair,
They have the gift to know it. And in his brain,
Which is as dry as the remainder biscuit
After a voyage, he hath strange places cramm'd
With observation, the which he vents
In mangled forms. O that I were a fool!
I am ambitious for a motley coat.
Duke S. Thou shalt have one.
Jaq. It is my only suit.
Provided that you weed your better judgments
Of all opinion that grows rank in them,
That I am wise. I must have liberty
Withal, as large a charter as the wind
To blow on whom I please, for so fools have.
And they that are most galled with my folly,
They most must laugh. And why, sir, must they so?
The 'why' is plain as way to parish church:
He that a fool doth very wisely hit
Doth very foolishly, although he smart,
Not to seem senseless of the bob. If not,
The wise man's folly is anatomiz'd
E'en by the squand'ring glances of the fool.
Invest me in my motley. Give me leave
To speak my mind, and I will through and through
Cleanse the foul body of th' infected world,
If they will patiently receive my medicine.
Duke S. Fie on thee. I can tell what thou would'st do.
Jaq. What, for a counter, would I do but good?
Duke S. Most mischievous foul sin in chiding sin;
For thou thyself hath been a libertine
As sensual as the brutish sting itself.
And all th' embossed sores and headed evils
That thou with license of free foot hast caught,
Would'st thou disgorge into the general world.
Jaq. Why, who cries out on pride

20 dial: sundial poke: pocket 23 wags: moves along 26 hour; cf. n. ripe: grow ripe, cf. n. 29 moral: moralize 30 Chanticleer; cf. n. 31 deep: deeply 32 sans: without 39 remainder biscuit: stale hardtack 41 vents: utters 45 suit; cf. n. 47 rank: luxuriant 49 Withal: too charter: license 51 galled: irritated 55 Doth very foolishly: acts very foolishly 56 Not to: F omits senseless: insensible bob: taunt 57 anatomiz'd: analyzed 58 E'en: F Even squand'ring: random 59 Invest: clothe 64 counter: coin of little value, i.e. a wager 67 sting: lust 68 embossed: swollen 70 general: whole (to be read 'gen'ral')

That can therein tax any private party?
Doth it not flow as hugely as the sea,
Till that the weary very means do ebb?
What woman in the city do I name,
When that I say the city woman bears
The cost of princes on unworthy shoulders?
Who can come in and say that I mean her,
When such a one as thee, such is her neighbor?
Or what is he of basest function
That says his bravery is not on my cost,
Thinking that I mean him, but therein suits
His folly to the mettle of my speech?
There then. How then? What then? Let me see wherein
My tongue hath wrong'd him. If it do him right,
Then he hath wrong'd himself; if he be free,
Why then my taxing, like a wild goose, flies
Unclaim'd of any man. But who comes here?

Enter Orlando [with sword drawn].

Orl. Forbear, and eat no more.
Jaq. Why, I have eat none yet.
Orl. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serv'd.
Jaq. Of what kind should this cock come of?
Duke S. Art thou thus bolden'd, man, by thy distress,
Or else a rude despiser of good manners,
That in civility thou seem'st so empty?
Orl. You touch'd my vein at first. The thorny point
Of bare distress hath tane from me the show
Of smooth civility; yet am I inland bred
And know some nurture. But forbear, I say.
He dies that touches any of this fruit
Till I and my affairs are answered.
Jaq. And you will not be answer'd with reason,
I must die.
Duke S. What would you have? Your gentleness shall force
More than your force move us to gentleness.
Orl. I almost die for food, and let me have it.
Duke S. Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table.
Orl. Speak you so gently? Pardon me, I pray you.
I thought that all things had been savage here,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of stern commandment. But—whate'er you are
That in this desert inaccessible
Under the shade of melancholy boughs
Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time—
If ever you have look'd on better days,
If ever been where bells have knoll'd to church,
If ever sat at any good man's feast,
If ever from your eyelids wip'd a tear
And know what 'tis to pity and be pitied,
Let gentleness my strong enforcement be.
In the which hope I blush and hide my sword.
Duke S. True it is that we have seen better days,
And have with holy bell been knoll'd to church,
And sat at good men's feasts, and wip'd our eyes

72 tax: criticize 74 weary very means; cf. n. 81 bravery: elaborate dress (to be read 'brav'ry') on my cost: at my expense 83 mettle: substance 86 free: not guilty 89 Forbear: abstain 93 bolden'd: emboldened 95 civility: courtesy 96 touch'd my vein: hit my feelings 98 inland bred: civilized 99 nurture: good breeding 101 answered: provided for 102 And: an (if) reason; cf. n. 111 commandment: authority 116 knoll'd: tolled 120 enforcement: support

Of drops that sacred pity hath engend'red.
And therefore sit you down in gentleness,
And take upon command what help we have
That to your wanting may be minist'red.
Orl. Then but forbear your food a little while,
Whiles like a doe I go to find my fawn
And give it food. There is an old poor man,
Who after me hath many a weary step
Limp'd in pure love. Till he be first suffic'd,
Oppress'd with two weak evils, age and hunger,
I will not touch a bit.
Duke S. Go find him out,
And we will nothing waste till you return.
Orl. I thank ye, and be blest for your good comfort.
Exit.

Duke S. Thou seest we are not all alone unhappy.
This wide and universal theater
Presents more woeful pageants than the scene
Wherein we play in.
Jaq. All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players.
They have their exits and their entrances,
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
Then the whining schoolboy with his satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honor, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble Reputation
E'en in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lin'd,
With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixt age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose and pouch on side;
His youthful hose well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank, and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness and mere oblivion—
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

Enter Orlando with Adam.

Duke S. Welcome. Set down your venerable burthen,
And let him feed.
Orl. I thank you most for him.
Adam. So had you need;
I scarce can speak to thank you for myself.
Duke S. Welcome; fall to. I will not trouble you
As yet to question you about your fortunes.
Give us some music and, good cousin, sing.

Song

Ami. Blow, blow, thou winter wind
Thou art not so unkind
As man's ingratitude.
Thy tooth is not so keen
Because thou art not seen,
Although thy breath be rude.
Heigh ho, sing heigh ho, unto the green holly!
Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly:
Then heigh ho, the holly,
This life is most jolly.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
That dost not bite so nigh
As benefits forgot.
Though thou the waters warp,
Thy sting is not so sharp
As friend rememb'red not.
Heigh ho, sing, etc.

Duke S. If that you were the good Sir Rowland's son,
As you have whisper'd faithfully you were,
And as mine eye doth his effigies witness
Most truly limn'd and living in your face,
Be truly welcome hither. I am the Duke
That lov'd your father. The residue of your fortune,
Go to my cave and tell me. Good old man,
Thou art right welcome, as thy master is.
Support him by the arm. Give me your hand,
And let me all your fortunes understand. Exeunt.

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

Enter Duke [Frederick], Lords, and Oliver.

Duke. Not see him since? Sir, sir, that cannot be.
But were I not the better part made mercy,
I should not seek an absent argument
Of my revenge, thou present. But look to it:
Find out thy brother, wheresoe'er he is;
Seek him with candle; bring him dead or living
Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more
To seek a living in our territory.
Thy lands and all things that thou dost call thine,
Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands,
Till thou canst quit thee by thy brother's mouth
Of what we think against thee.
Oli. O that your highness knew my heart in this.
I never lov'd my brother in my life.
Duke. More villain thou. Well, push him out of doors,
And let my officers of such a nature

127 upon command: at your pleasure 128 wanting: need 134 weak: causing weakness 138 comfort: help 148 Mewling: crying, mewing like a cat 154 pard: leopard 155 Jealous in: suspiciously careful of 157 E'en: F Even 160 saws: maxims modern instances: everyday illustrations 161 sixt: sixth 162 pantaloon: old dotard, cf. n. 167 his: its 169 mere: total 170 Sans: without 171 burthen: burden

192 warp: i.e. by turning into ice 198 effigies: likeness (stressed — ⏑ —) 199 limn'd: portrayed 2 made mercy: made of mercy 3 argument: object, i.e. Orlando 6 candle; cf. n. 7 turn: return 11 quit: absolve 16 of such a nature: whose business it is

Make an extent upon his house and lands.
Do this expediently, and turn him going. Exeunt.

Scene Second

Enter Orlando.

Orl. Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love.
And thou, thrice crowned Queen of Night, survey
With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above,
Thy huntress' name that my full life doth sway.
O Rosalind, these trees shall be my books
And in their barks my thoughts I'll character,
That every eye which in this forest looks
Shall see thy virtue witness'd everywhere.
Run, run, Orlando! Carve on every tree
The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she. Exit.

Enter Corin and Clown [Touchstone].

Cor. And how like you this shepherd's life, Master Touchstone?

Touch. Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well; but in respect that it is private, it is a very vild life. Now, in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well; but in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humor well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

Cor. No more but that I know the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is; and that he that wants money, means, and content is without three good friends; that the property of rain is to wet, and fire to burn; that good pasture makes fat sheep; and that a great cause of the night is lack of the sun; that he that hath learned no wit by nature nor art may complain of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred.

Touch. Such a one is a natural philosopher. Wast ever in court, shepherd?

Cor. No, truly.

Touch. Then thou art damn'd.

Cor. Nay, I hope.

Touch. Truly thou art damn'd like an ill-roasted egg, all on one side.

Cor. For not being at court? Your reason.

Touch. Why, if thou never wast at court, thou never saw'st good manners. If thou never saw'st good manners, then thy manners must be wicked; and wickedness is sin, and sin is damnation. Thou art in a parlous state, shepherd.

Cor. Not a whit, Touchstone. Those that are good manners at the court are as ridiculous in the country as the behavior of the country is most mockable at the court. You told me you salute not at the court, but you kiss your hands. That courtesy would be uncleanly if courtiers were shepherds.

Touch. Instance briefly. Come, instance.

Cor. Why, we are still handling our ewes, and their fells you know are greasy.

Touch. Why, do not your courtier's hands sweat? And is not the grease of a mutton as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow. A better instance, I say. Come.

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard.

Touch. Your lips will feel them the sooner. Shallow again. A more sounder instance, come.

Cor. And they are often tarr'd over with the surgery of our sheep. And would you have us kiss tar? The courtier's hands are perfum'd with civet.

Touch. Most shallow man, thou worm's meat in respect of a good piece of flesh indeed, learn of the wise and perpend: civet is of baser birth than tar, the very uncleanly flux of a cat. Mend the instance, shepherd.

Cor. You have too courtly a wit for me. I'll rest.

Touch. Wilt thou rest damn'd? God help thee, shallow man. God make incision in thee; thou art raw.

Cor. Sir, I am a true laborer. I earn that I eat, get that I wear; owe no man hate, envy no man's happiness; glad of other men's good, content with my harm; and the greatest of my pride is to see my ewes graze and my lambs suck.

Touch. That is another simple sin in you—to bring the ewes and the rams together and to offer to get your living by the copulation of cattle; to be bawd to a bellwether and to betray a she-lamb of a twelvemonth to a crooked-pated old cuckoldly ram, out of all reasonable match. If thou beest not damn'd for this, the divell himself will have no shepherds. I cannot see else how thou shouldst scape.

Cor. Here comes young Master Ganymede, my new mistress' brother.

Enter Rosalind [reading from a paper].

Ros. From the east to western Ind,
No jewel is like Rosalind.
Her worth being mounted on the wind,
Through all the world bears Rosalind.
All the pictures fairest lin'd
Are but black to Rosalind.
Let no face be kept in mind
But the fair of Rosalind.

Touch. I'll rhyme you so eight years together, dinners and suppers and sleeping hours excepted. It is the right butter-women's rank to market.

Ros. Out, fool!

Touch. For a taste:

If a hart do lack a hind,
Let him seek out Rosalind.
If the cat will after kind,

17 extent: seizure 18 expediently: expeditiously 2 Queen of Night: the moon; cf. n. 4 huntress' names; cf. n. full: entire sway: rule 6 character: inscribe 7 That: so that 10 unexpressive: indescribable 14 naught: worthless 16 private: lonely vild: vile 18 spare: frugal 20 philosophy: science, general knowledge 27 wit: knowledge 28 complain . . . breeding: complain of the lack of good breeding 38 manners; cf. n.

44 but: unless 46 Instance: give an example 47 still: always fells: fleeces 55 tarr'd; cf. n. 57 civet: perfume derived from the civet cat 58 worm's meat: food for worms in respect of: in comparison with 59 perpend: consider 60 flux: discharge 61 Mend: improve 64 incision: an operation (to cure his folly) raw: inexperienced, simple (with a pun on 'sore') 65 that: what 69 simple: foolish 70 offer: undertake 71 bellwether: the leading sheep in a flock carries a bell 73 cuckoldly; cf. n. out . . . match: a quite unsuitable match 74 divell: devil 78 Ind; cf. n. 82 lin'd: drawn 84 fair: i.e. fair face 87 right: precise 88 butter-women's rank; cf. n. 89 Out: away with you 90 taste: sample 93 after kind: follow nature

So be sure will Rosalind.
Winter garments must be lin'd;
So must slender Rosalind.
They that reap must sheaf and bind,
Then to cart with Rosalind.
Sweetest nut hath sourest rind:
Such a nut is Rosalind.
He that sweetest rose will find,
Must find love's prick and Rosalind.

This is the very false gallop of verses. Why do you infect yourself with them?

Ros. Peace, you dull fool. I found them on a tree.

Touch. Truly the tree yields bad fruit.

Ros. I'll graff it with you, and then I shall graff it with a medlar. Then it will be the earliest fruit i' th' country: for you'll be rotten ere you be half ripe, and that's the right virtue of the medlar.

Touch. You have said; but whether wisely or no, let the forest judge.

Enter Celia with a writing.

Ros. Peace! Here comes my sister reading; stand aside.

Cel. Why should this a desert be?
For it is unpeopled? No.
Tongues I'll hang on every tree
That shall civil sayings show:
Some, how brief the life of man
Runs his erring pilgrimage,
That the stretching of a span
Buckles in his sum of age;
Some, of violated vows
'Twixt the souls of friend and friend.
But upon the fairest boughs,
Or at every sentence end,
Will I 'Rosalinda' write,
Teaching all that read to know
The quintessence of every sprite
Heaven would in little show.
Therefore heaven nature charg'd
That one body should be fill'd
With all graces wide enlarg'd.
Nature presently distill'd
Helen's cheek but not her heart,
Cleopatra's majesty,
Atalanta's better part,
Sad Lucretia's modesty.
Thus Rosalind of many parts
By heavenly synod was devis'd,
Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
To have the touches dearest priz'd.
Heaven would that she these gifts should have,
And I to live and die her slave.

Ros. O most gentle Jupiter, what tedious homily of love have you wearied your parishioners withal and never cried: 'Have patience, good people.'

Cel. How now? Back, friends. Shepherd, go off a little; go with him, sirrah.

Touch. Come, shepherd. Let us make an honorable retreat, though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage. Exeunt.

Cel. Didst thou hear these verses?

Ros. O yes, I heard them all, and more too; for some of them had in them more feet than the verses would bear.

Cel. That's no matter. The feet might bear the verses.

Ros. Ay, but the feet were lame and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou hear without wondering how thy name should be hang'd and carved upon these trees?

Ros. I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder before you came; for look here what I found on a palm tree. I was never so berhym'd since Pythagoras' time that I was an Irish rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Trow you who hath done this?

Ros. Is it a man?

Cel. And a chain that you once wore—about his neck. Change you color?

Ros. I prithee, who?

Cel. O Lord, Lord, it is a hard matter for friends to meet. But mountains may be remov'd with earthquakes, and so encounter.

Ros. Nay, but who is it?

Cel. Is it possible?

Ros. Nay, I prithee now with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful! And yet again wonderful and after that, out of all hooping.

Ros. Good my complexion! Dost thou think, though I am caparison'd like a man, I have a doublet and hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more is a South Sea of discovery. I prithee, tell me who is it quickly and speak apace. I would thou couldst stammer, that thou mightst pour this conceal'd man out of thy mouth as wine comes out of a narrow-mouth'd bottle, either too much at once or none at all. I prithee, take the cork out of thy mouth that I may drink thy tidings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly?

Ros. Is he of God's making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat? Or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Ros. Why, God will send more, if the man will be thankful. Let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando, that tripp'd up the wrastler's heels and your heart, both in an instant.

Ros. Nay, but the divell take mocking. Speak sad brow and true maid.

98 to cart; cf. n. 107 graff: graft you: a pun on 'yew' 108 medlar; cf. n. 109 right virtue: proper characteristic 114 a: F omits 115 For: because 117 civil: polite 119 erring: wandering 121 Buckles in: limits 128 quintessence: the most highly refined essence (stressed ⏑ — — ⏑) 129 in little: in miniature 132 wide enlarg'd: in fullest manifestation 134 Helen's: Helen of Troy, the immediate cause of the Trojan War 135 Cleopatra's: queen of Egypt, mistress of Caesar and Antony 136 Atalanta's: Grecian huntress famed for fleetness of foot 137 Lucretia's: Roman woman dishonored by Tarquin 139 synod: council

144 Jupiter; cf. n. 150 bag and baggage: equipment (a military term) 150, 151 scrip and scrippage: a wallet and its contents 163 Pythagoras' time; cf. n. that: when 164 Irish rat; cf. n. 165 Trow: know 175 petitionary vehemence: vehement petition 178 out of all hooping: beyond all shouting 179 Good my complexion; cf. n. 180 caparison'd: outfitted 181, 182 South Sea of discovery; cf. n. apace: with haste 197, 198 Speak . . . maid: speak solemnly and truly

Cel. I'faith, coz, 'tis he.

Ros. Orlando?

Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the day! What shall I do with my doublet and hose? What did he when thou saw'st him? What said he? How look'd he? Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? And when shalt thou see him again? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Gargantua's mouth first; 'tis a word too great for any mouth of this age's size. To say 'ay' and 'no' to these particulars is more than to answer in a catechism.

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this forest and in man's apparel? Looks he as freshly as he did the day he wrastled?

Cel. It is as easy to count atomies as to resolve the propositions of a lover. But take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with good observance: I found him under a tree, like a dropp'd acorn.

Ros. It may well be call'd Jove's tree, when it drops forth such fruit.

Cel. Give me audience, good madam.

Ros. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he stretch'd along like a wounded knight.

Ros. Though it be pity to see such a sight, it well becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry 'holla' to the tongue, I prithee; it curvets unseasonably. He was furnish'd like a hunter.

Ros. O ominous: he comes to kill my heart.

Cel. I would sing my song without a burthen; thou bring'st me out of tune.

Ros. Do you not know I am a woman? When I think, I must speak. Sweet, say on.

Enter Orlando and Jaques.

Cel. You bring me out. Soft, comes he not here?

Ros. 'Tis he. Slink by and note him.

Jaq. I thank you for your company; but, good faith, I had as lief have been myself alone.

Orl. And so had I; but yet for fashion sake I thank you too for your society.

Jaq. God buy you. Let's meet as little as we can.

Orl. I do desire we may be better strangers.

Jaq. I pray you mar no more trees with writing love songs in their barks.

Orl. I pray you mar no moe of my verses with reading them ill-favoredly.

Jaq. Rosalind is your love's name?

Orl. Yes, just.

Jaq. I do not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleasing you when she was christen'd.

Jaq. What stature is she of?

Orl. Just as high as my heart.

Jaq. You are full of pretty answers. Have you not been acquainted with goldsmiths' wives and conn'd them out of rings?

Orl. Not so. But I answer your right painted cloth, from whence you have studied your questions.

Jaq. You have a nimble wit; I think 'twas made of Atalanta's heels. Will you sit down with me? And we two will rail against our mistress, the World, and all our misery.

Orl. I will chide no breather in the world but myself, against whom I know most faults.

Jaq. The worst fault you have is to be in love.

Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not change for your best virtue. I am weary of you.

Jaq. By my troth, I was seeking for a fool when I found you.

Orl. He is drown'd in the brook. Look but in and you shall see him.

Jaq. There I shall see mine own figure.

Orl. Which I take to be either a fool or a cipher.

Jaq. I'll tarry no longer with you. Farewell, good Signior Love.

Orl. I am glad of your departure. Adieu, good Monsieur Melancholy. [Exit Jaques.]

Ros. I will speak to him like a saucy lacky and under that habit play the knave with him. Do you hear, forester?

Orl. Very well. What would you?

Ros. I pray you, what is't o'clock?

Orl. You should ask me what time o' day. There's no clock in the forest.

Ros. Then there is no true lover in the forest, else sighing every minute and groaning every hour would detect the lazy foot of Time as well as a clock.

Orl. And why not the swift foot of Time? Had not that been as proper?

Ros. By no means, sir. Time travels in divers paces with divers persons. I'll tell you who Time ambles withal, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal.

Orl. I prithee, who does he trot withal?

Ros. Marry, he trots hard with a young maid between the contract of her marriage and the day it is solemniz'd. If the interim be but a sennight, Time's pace is so hard that it seems the length of seven year.

Orl. Who ambles Time withal?

Ros. With a priest that lacks Latin and a rich man that hath not the gout; for the one sleeps easily because he cannot study, and the other lives merrily because he feels no pain: the one lacking the burthen of lean and wasteful learning, the other knowing no burthen of heavy tedious penury. These Time ambles withal.

Orl. Who doth he gallop withal?

Ros. With a thief to the gallows. For though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Orl. Who stays it still withal?

Ros. With lawyers in the vacation; for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how Time moves.

204 Wherein went he?: how was he dressed? 207 Gargantua's mouth; cf. n. 212 freshly: vigorous 214 atomies: motes resolve: answer propositions: questions 216 good observance: careful attention 218 Jove's tree; cf. n. 219 such: F omits 220 audience: attention 225 'holla': stop curvets: prances 226 furnish'd: dressed 227 heart: with a pun on 'hart' 228 burthen: refrain 228, 229 bring'st me out: confuse, bring out of tune 233 note: observe 235 myself alone: by myself 238 buy: F contraction of 'be with' 242 moe: more 243 ill-favoredly: incorrectly 245 just: *exactly

252 goldsmiths' wives . . . rings; cf. n. 254 right: regular painted cloth; cf. n. 256, 257 Atalanta's heels; cf. n. 259 breather: living person 269 cipher: zero 274, 275 under that habit: in that guise 281 detect: show 285 divers: different 286 withal: with 292 sennight: a week (seven nights) 298 wasteful: causing bodily waste 306 term: period of court session

Orl. Where dwell you, pretty youth?

Ros. With this shepherdess, my sister, here in the skirts of the forest, like fringe upon a petticoat.

Orl. Are you native of this place?

Ros. As the cony that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

Ros. I have been told so of many. But, indeed, an old religious uncle of mine taught me to speak, who was in his youth an inland man—one that knew courtship too well, for there he fell in love. I have heard him read many lectors against it, and I thank God I am not a woman, to be touch'd with so many giddy offences as he hath generally tax'd their whole sex withal.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal evils that he laid to the charge of women?

Ros. There were none principal. They were all like one another as halfpence are, every one fault seeming monstrous till his fellow fault came to match it.

Orl. I prithee, recount some of them.

Ros. No, I will not cast away my physic but on those that are sick. There is a man haunts the forest that abuses our young plants with carving 'Rosalind' on their barks, hangs odes upon hawthornes and elegies on brambles—all, forsooth, deifying the name of Rosalind. If I could meet that fancy-monger, I would give him some good counsel, for he seems to have the quotidian of love upon him.

Orl. I am he that is so love-shak'd. I pray you, tell me your remedy.

Ros. There is none of my uncle's marks upon you. He taught me how to know a man in love; in which cage of rushes I am sure you are not prisoner.

Orl. What were his marks?

Ros. A lean cheek, which you have not; a blue eye and sunken, which you have not; an unquestionable spirit, which you have not; a beard neglected, which you have not. But I pardon you for that for, simply, your having in beard is a younger brother's revenue. Then your hose should be ungarter'd, your bonnet unbanded, your sleeve unbutton'd, your shoe untied, and every thing about you demonstrating a careless desolation. But you are no such man: you are rather point device in your accoustrements, as loving yourself, than seeming the lover of any other.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I love.

Ros. Me believe it? You may as soon make her that you love believe it, which I warrant she is apter to do than to confess she does. That is one of the points in the which women still give the lie to their consciences. But, in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verses on the trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee, youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he.

Ros. But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

Orl. Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much.

Ros. Love is merely a madness and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark house and a whip as madmen do. And the reason why they are not so punish'd and cured is that the lunacy is so ordinary that the whippers are in love too. Yet I profess curing it by counsel.

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?

Ros. Yes, one, and in this manner: he was to imagine me his love, his mistress, and I set him every day to woo me. At which time would I—being but a moonish youth—grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing and liking, proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, full of smiles; for every passion something, and for no passion truly anything, as boys and women are for the most part cattle of this color. Would now like him, now loathe him; then entertain him, then forswear him; now weep for him, then spit at him; that I drave my suitor from his mad humor of love to a living humor of madness, which was to forswear the full stream of the world and to live in a nook merely monastic. And thus I cur'd him, and this way will I takeupon me to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in't.

Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Ros. I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalind, and come every day to my cote and woo me.

Orl. Now, by the faith of my love, I will. Tell me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it, and I'll show it you. And by the way you shall tell me where in the forest you live. Will you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Ros. Nay, you must call me Rosalind. Come, sister. Will you go? Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter Clown [Touchstone], Audrey, and Jaques.

Touch. Come apace, good Audrey. I will fetch up your goats, Audrey. And how, Audrey, am I the man yet? Doth my simple feature content you?

Aud. Your features! Lord warrant us, what features?

Touch. I am here with thee and thy goats as the most capricious poet, honest Ovid, was among the Goths.

Jaq. [aside]. O knowledge ill-inhabited, worse than Jove in a thatch'd house.

Touch. When a man's verses cannot be understood, nor a man's good wit seconded with the forward child, Understanding, it strikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room. Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Aud. I do not know what poetical is. Is it honest in deed and word? Is it a true thing?

Touch. No, truly, for the truest poetry is the most

311 cony: rabbit kindled: born (used only of rabbits) 313 purchase: acquire removed: remote 314 of: by 315 religious: i.e. member of a religious order 316 inland man: cultivated person from the city courtship: manners of court life (with a pun on 'wooing') 318 lectors: lectures 319 touch'd: tainted 332 fancy-monger: dealer in love 333 quotidian: an ague, a daily fever 338 cage of rushes: unsubstantial prison 340 blue eye: i.e. with dark circles under it 341 unquestionable: unwilling to talk 343 simply: to tell the truth having in beard: the extent of your beard 344 revenue: inheritance 347 careless desolation: depression making one unconcerned with personal appearance 348 point device: extremely precise accoustrements: accouterments, clothes 352 apter: readier 355 sooth: truth

361 merely: absolutely 362 dark house; cf. n. 365 profess: claim 369 moonish: changeable 370 fantastical: capricious 371 apish: frivolous 376 that: so that humor: condition 380 liver; cf. n. 1 Come apace: hurry along 3 feature: face and figure; cf. n. 4 warrant: protect 6 capricious; cf. n. Goths; cf. n. 7 ill-inhabited: poorly housed Jove: Jupiter or Zeus, ruler of the gods 11, 12 reckoning . . . room; cf. n. 13 honest: respectable

feigning, and lovers are given to poetry. And what they swear in poetry may be said, as lovers, they do feign.

Aud. Do you wish then that the gods had made me poetical?

Touch. I do truly, for thou swear'st to me thou art honest. Now if thou wert a poet, I might have some hope thou didst feign.

Aud. Would you not have me honest?

Touch. No, truly, unless thou wert hard favor'd. For honesty coupled to beauty is to have honey a sauce to sugar.

Jaq. [aside]. A material fool.

Aud. Well, I am not fair, and therefore I pray the gods make me honest.

Touch. Truly, and to cast away honesty upon a foul slut were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

Aud. I am not a slut, though I thank the gods I am foul.

Touch. Well, praised be the gods for thy foulness; sluttishness may come hereafter. But be it as it may be, I will marry thee, and to that end I have been with Sir Oliver Martext, the vicar of the next village, who hath promis'd to meet me in this place of the forest and to couple us.

Jaq. [aside]. I would fain see this meeting.

Aud. Well, the gods give us joy.

Touch. Amen. A man may, if he were of fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no temple but the wood, no assembly but horn-beasts. But what though? Courage. As horns are odious, they are necessary. It is said many a man knows no end of his goods. Right. Many a man has good horns and knows no end of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife; 'tis none of his own getting. Horns? Even so. Poor men alone? No, no. The noblest deer hath them as huge as the rascal. Is the single man therefore blessed? No. As a wall'd town is more worthier than a village, so is the forehead of a married man more honorable than the bare brow of a bachelor. And by how much defense is better than no skill, by so much is a horn more precious than to want.

Enter Sir Oliver Martext.

Here comes Sir Oliver. Sir Oliver Martext, you are well met. Will you dispatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your chapel?

Sir Oliver. Is there none here to give the woman?

Touch. I will not take her on gift of any man.

Sir Oliver. Truly, she must be given or the marriage is not lawful.

Jaq. Proceed, proceed. I'll give her.

Touch. Good even, good Master What-ye-call't. How do you, sir? You are very well met. Goddild you for your last company. I am very glad to see you. Even a toy in hand here, sir. Nay, pray be cover'd.

Jaq. Will you be married, motley?

Touch. As the ox hath his bow, sir, the horse his curb, and the falcon her bells, so man hath his desires; and as pigeons bill, so wedlock would be nibbling.

Jaq. And will you, being a man of your breeding, be married under a bush like a beggar? Get you to church and have a good priest that can tell you what marriage is. This fellow will but join you together as they join wainscote; then one of you will prove a shrunk panel and, like green timber, warp, warp.

Touch. I am not in the mind but I were better to be married of him than of another, for he is not like to marry me well. And not being well married, it will be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave my wife.

Jaq. Go thou with me and let me counsel thee.

Touch. Come, sweet Audrey.
We must be married, or we must live in bawdry.
Farewell, good Master Oliver: not

O sweet Oliver,
O brave Oliver,
Leave me not behind thèe.

but

Wind away,
Be gone, I say!
I will not to wedding with thee.

Sir Oliver. 'Tis no matter. Ne'er a fantastical knave of them all shall flout me out of my calling. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. Never talk to me; I will weep.

Cel. Do, I prithee. But yet have the grace to consider that tears do not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep?

Cel. As good cause as one would desire. Therefore weep.

Ros. His very hair is of the dissembling color.

Cel. Something browner than Judas'. Marry, his kisses are Judas' own children.

Ros. I' faith, his hair is of a good color.

Cel. An excellent color. Your chestnut was ever the only color.

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread.

Cel. He hath bought a pair of cast lips of Diana. A nun of winter's sisterhood kisses not more religiously; the very ice of chastity is in them.

Ros. But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not?

Cel. Nay, certainly there is no truth in him.

Ros. Do you think so?

Cel. Yes. I think he is not a pickpurse nor a horse-stealer, but for his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a covered goblet or a worm-eaten nut.

Ros. Not true in love?

Cel. Yes, when he is in. But I think he is not in.

Ros. You have heard him swear downright he was.

Cel. 'Was' is not 'is.' Besides, the oath of a lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster; they are both the confirmer of false reckonings. He attends here in the forest on the Duke your father.

20 honest: chaste 23 hard favor'd: ugly 25 material: full of ideas 28 foul: ugly 33 Sir; cf. n. 35 couple: join, marry 38 heart; cf. n. 40 horn-beasts; cf. n. But what though?: but what of that? 46 rascal: a young or inferior deer 50 want: lack 52 dispatch: i.e. marry 58 Master What-ye-call't; cf. n. 59 Goddild: God reward you 60 toy: trifling matter 61 be cover'd: put on your hat 62 motley: fool 63 bow: yoke

77 bawdry: sin 79 O sweet Oliver; cf. n. 83 Wind away: go away 87 flout: jeer 6 dissembling color; cf. n. 14 cast: cast off lips of Diana: Diana was the goddess of chastity 15 winter's sisterhood: i.e. the bond of chastity 22 verity: truth concave: hollow, insincere 27 a: F omits 28 tapster: tavern waiter 29 reckonings: accounts, charges

Ros. I met the Duke yesterday and had much question with him. He ask'd me of what parentage I was; I told him of as good as he. So he laugh'd and let me go. But what talk we of fathers when there is such a man as Orlando?

Cel. O, that's a brave man! He writes brave verses, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely—quite traverse athwart the heart of his lover, as a puisny tilter that spurs his horse but on one side breaks his staff like a noble goose. But all's brave that youth mounts and folly guides. Who comes here?

Enter Corin.

Cor. Mistress and master, you have oft inquired
After the shepherd that complain'd of love,
Who you saw sitting by me on the turf
Praising the proud disdainful shepherdess
That was his mistress.

Cel. Well, and what of him?

Cor. If you will see a pageant truly play'd
Between the pale complexion of true love
And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain,
Go hence a little and I shall conduct you,
If you will mark it.

Ros. O, come, let us remove.
The sight of lovers, feedeth those in love.
Bring us to this sight, and you shall say
I'll prove a busy actor in their play. Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Sil. Sweet Phebe, do not scorn me. Do not, Phebe.
Say that you love me not, but say not so
In bitterness. The common executioner,
Whose heart th' accustom'd sight of death makes hard,
Falls not the ax upon the humbled neck
But first begs pardon. Will you sterner be
Than he that dies and lives by bloody drops?

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Corin.

Phebe. I would not be thy executioner.
I fly thee, for I would not injure thee.
Thou tell'st me there is murder in mine eye.
'Tis pretty, sure, and very probable
That eyes, that are the frail'st and softest things,
Who shut their coward gates on atomies,
Should be called tyrants, butchers, murtherers.
Now I do frown on thee with all my heart,
And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee.
Now counterfeit to swound. Why, now fall down!
Or if thou canst not, O for shame, for shame.
Lie not, to say mine eyes are murtherers.
Now show the wound mine eye hath made in thee.
Scratch thee but with a pin and there remains
Some scar of it; lean but upon a rush,
The cicatrice and capable impressure
Thy palm some moment keeps. But now mine eyes,
Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not;
Nor I am sure there is no force in eyes
That can do hurt.

Sil. O dear Phebe,
If ever, as that ever may be near,
You meet in some fresh cheek the power of fancy,
Then shall you know the wounds invisible
That Love's keen arrows make.

Phebe But till that time
Come not thou near me. And when that time comes,
Afflict me with thy mocks; pity me not,
As till that time I shall not pity thee.

Ros. And why, I pray you? Who might be your mother
That you insult, exult, and all at once,
Over the wretched? What, though you have no beauty—
As, by my faith, I see no more in you
Than without candle may go dark to bed—
Must you be therefore proud and pitiless?
Why, what means this? Why do you look on me?
I see no more in you than in the ordinary
Of Nature's sale-work. 'Od's my little life,
I think she means to tangle my eyes too.
No, faith, proud mistress, hope not after it;
'Tis not your inky brows, your black silk hair,
Your bugle eyeballs, nor your cheek of cream
That can entame my spirits to your worship.
You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follow her
Like foggy south, puffing with wind and rain?
You are a thousand times a properer man
Than she a woman. 'Tis such fools as you
That makes the world full of ill-favor'd children.
'Tis not her glass but you that flatters her,
And out of you she sees herself more proper
Than any of her lineaments can show her.
But, mistress, know yourself. Down on your knees
And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's love.
For I must tell you friendly in your ear:
Sell when you can; you are not for all markets.
Cry the man mercy, love him, take his offer.
Foul is most foul, being foul to be a scoffer.
So take her to thee, shepherd. Fare you well.

Phebe. Sweet youth, I pray you, chide a year together.
I had rather hear you chide than this man woo.

Ros. He's falne in love with your foulness, and she'll fall in love with my anger. If it be so, as fast as she answers thee with frowning looks, I'll sauce her with bitter words. Why look you so upon me?

Phebe. For no ill will I bear you.

Ros. I pray you, do not fall in love with me,
For I am falser than vows made in wine.
Besides, I like you not. If you will know my house,
'Tis at the tuft of olives here hard by.
Will you go, sister? Shepherd, ply her hard.

31 question: conversation 35 brave: fine 37 traverse athwart; cf. n. 38 puisny: insignificant, incompetent (pronounced 'puny') 48 pale complexion; cf. n. 51 mark: observe 52 remove: depart 5 Falls: lets fall 7 dies and lives: makes his living 14 murtherers: murderers 17 counterfeit: pretend swound: swoon 22 but; F omits

23 cicatrice: impression capable impressure: firm imprint 30 fancy: love 41 candle . . . bed; cf. n. 45 sale-work: product of poor quality 'Od's: God save 49 bugle: a black glass bead, here meaning 'black' 50 entame: subdue to your worship: to worship you 52 south: south wind, cf. n. 53 properer: handsomer 56 glass: mirror 63 Cry . . . mercy: beg for mercy 64 Foul . . . scoffer; cf. n. 66 together: on end 67 I had: to be read 'I'd' 68 falne: fall'n 70 sauce: rebuke

Come, sister. Shepherdess, look on him better
And be not proud, though all the world could see
None could be so abus'd in sight as he.
Come, to our flock. Exeunt [Rosalind, Celia, Corin].
Phebe. Dead shepherd, now I find thy saw of might:
'Whoever lov'd that lov'd not at first sight?'
Sil. Sweet Phebe.
Phebe. Hah! What say'st thou, Silvius?
Sil. Sweet Phebe, pity me.
Phebe. Why, I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius.
Sil. Wherever sorrow is, relief would be.
If you do sorrow at my grief in love,
By giving love your sorrow and my grief
Were both extermin'd.
Phebe. Thou hast my love. Is not that neighborly?
Sil. I would have you.
Phebe. Why, that were covetousness.
Silvius, the time was that I hated thee,
And yet it is not that I bear thee love.
But since that thou canst talk of love so well,
Thy company, which erst was irksome to me,
I will endure; and I'll employ thee too.
But do not look for further recompense
Than thine own gladness that thou art employ'd.
Sil. So holy and so perfect is my love,
And I in such a poverty of grace,
That I shall think it a most plenteous crop
To glean the broken ears after the man
That the main harvest reaps. Loose now and then
A scatt'red smile, and that I'll live upon.
Phebe. Know'st thou the youth that spoke to me erewhile?
Sil. Not very well. But I have met him oft,
And he hath bought the cottage and the bounds
That the old Carlot once was master of.
Phebe. Think not I love him, though I ask for him.
'Tis but a peevish boy, yet he talks well.
But what care I for words? Yet words do well
When he that speaks them pleases those that hear.
It is a pretty youth—not very pretty.
But sure he's proud, and yet his pride becomes him.
He'll make a proper man: the best thing in him
Is his complexion. And faster than his tongue
Did make offense his eyes did heal it up.
He is not very tall, yet for his years he's tall.
His leg is but so-so, and yet 'tis well.
There was a pretty redness in his lip,
A little riper and more lusty red
Than that mix'd in his cheek. 'Twas just the difference
Betwixt the constant red and mingled damask.
There be some women, Silvius, had they mark'd him
In parcels as I did, would have gone near
To fall in love with him. But for my part,
I love him not nor hate him not; and yet
I have more cause to hate him than to love him,
For what had he to do to chide at me?
He said mine eyes were black and my hair black,
And, now I am rememb'red, scorn'd at me.
I marvel why I answer'd not again.
But that's all one: omittance is no quittance.
I'll write to him a very tanting letter,
And thou shalt bear it. Wilt thou, Silvius?
Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.
Phebe. I'll write it straight.
The matter's in my head and in my heart:
I will be bitter with him and passing short.
Go with me, Silvius. Exeunt.

78 better: more kindly 80 abus'd in sight: deceived by eyesight 82 Dead shepherd; cf. n. 91 extermin'd: banished 92 neighborly; cf. n. 98 erst: at first 103 poverty of grace: lack of favor 107 scatt'red: stray 108 erewhile: a little while ago; F yerewhile. 110 bounds: acreage 111 Carlot; cf. n. 126 constant: uniform mingled damask: a mixture of red and white, like the damask rose 127 be: are 128 In parcels: bit by bit 131 I: F omits

Act Fourth ❧ Scene First

Enter Rosalind, and Celia, and Jaques.

Jaq. I prithee, pretty youth, let me be better acquainted with thee.
Ros. They say you are a melancholy fellow.
Jaq. I am so. I do love it better than laughing.
Ros. Those that are in extremity of either are abominable fellows, and betray themselves to every modern censure worse than drunkards.
Jaq. Why, 'tis good to be sad and say nothing.
Ros. Why, then 'tis good to be a post.
Jaq. I have neither the scholar's melancholy, which is emulation; nor the musician's, which is fantastical; nor the courtier's, which is proud; nor the soldier's, which is ambitious; nor the lawyer's, which is politic; nor the lady's, which is nice; nor the lover's, which is all these. But it is a melancholy of mine own, compounded of many simples, extracted from many objects, and indeed the sundry contemplation of my travels, in which my often rumination wraps me in a most humorous sadness.
Ros. A traveler! By my faith, you have great reason to be sad. I fear you have sold your own lands to see other men's. Then to have seen much and to have nothing is to have rich eyes and poor hands.
Jaq. Yes, I have gain'd my experience.

Enter Orlando.

Ros. And your experience makes you sad. I had rather have a fool to make me merry than experience to make me sad, and to travel for it too.
Orl. Good day and happiness, dear Rosalind.
Jaq. Nay, then, God buy you, and you talk in blank verse.
Ros. Farewell, Monsieur Traveler. Look you lisp and wear strange suits, disable all the benefits of your own country, be out of love with your nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will scarce think you have swam in a gundello. [Exit Jaques.] Why, how now, Orlando? Where have you been all this while? You a

134 I am rememb'red: I recall 136 omittance . . . quittance; cf. n. 137 tanting: taunting 142 passing short: exceedingly curt 1 be: F omits 8 sad: here with two meanings: 'melancholy' and 'heavy' 11 emulation: envy 13 politic: crafty nice: delicate 15 simples: herbs, ingredients 28 buy: be with and: an (if) 29 lisp: talk in an affected manner 30 disable: disparage 31 nativity: birthplace 33 swam . . . gundello: ridden in a gondola, i.e. been to Venice lover? And you serve me such another trick, never come in my sight more.

Orl. My fair Rosalind, I come within an hour of my promise.

Ros. Break an hour's promise in love? He that will divide a minute into a thousand parts and break but a part of the thousand part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him that Cupid hath clapp'd him o' th' shoulder. But I'll warrant him heart-whole.

Orl. Pardon me, dear Rosalind.

Ros. Nay. And you be so tardy, come no more in my sight; I had as lief be woo'd of a snail.

Orl. Of a snail?

Ros. Ay, of a snail. For though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head—a better jointure, I think, than you make a woman. Besides, he brings his destiny with him.

Orl. What's that?

Ros. Why, horns; which such as you are fain to be beholding to your wives for. But he comes armed in his fortune, and prevents the slander of his wife.

Orl. Virtue is no horn-maker, and my Rosalind is virtuous.

Ros. And I am your Rosalind.

Cel. It pleases him to call you so. But he hath a Rosalind of a better leer than you.

Ros. Come, woo me, woo me; for now I am in a holiday humor and like enough to consent. What would you say to me now, and I were your very very Rosalind?

Orl. I would kiss before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speak first; and when you were gravel'd for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kiss. Very good orators, when they are out, they will spit; and for lovers lacking—God warn us—matter, the cleanliest shift is to kiss.

Orl. How if the kiss be denied?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreaty, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloved mistress?

Ros. Marry, that should you if I were your mistress, or I should think my honesty ranker than my wit.

Orl. What of my suit?

Ros. Not out of your apparel, and yet out of your suit. Am I not your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Ros. Well, in her person, I say I will not have you.

Orl. Then, in mine own person, I die.

Ros. No, faith, die by attorney. The poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his own person, videlicet, in a love cause. Troilus had his brains dash'd out with a Grecian club, yet he did what he could to die before; and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have liv'd many a fair year though Hero had turn'd nun, if it had not been for a hot midsummer night; for, good youth, he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont, and being taken with the cramp, was drown'd; and the foolish chroniclers of that age found it was 'Hero of Cestos.' But these are all lies. Men have died from time to time and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind, for I protest her frown might kill me.

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a fly. But come. Now I will be your Rosalind in a more coming-on disposition; and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalind.

Ros. Yes, faith, will I—Fridays and Saturdays and all.

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Ros. Ay, and twenty such.

Orl. What sayest thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so.

Ros. Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing? Come, sister, you shall be the priest and marry us. Give me your hand, Orlando. What do you say, sister?

Orl. Pray thee, marry us.

Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin, 'Will you, Orlando . . .'

Cel. Go to. Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?

Orl. I will.

Ros. Ay, but when?

Orl. Why, now. As fast as she can marry us.

Ros. Then you must say, 'I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.'

Orl. I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Ros. I might ask you for your commission, but I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband. There's a girl goes before the priest, and certainly a woman's thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts; they are wing'd.

Ros. Now tell me how long you would have her after you have possess'd her?

Orl. For ever and a day.

Ros. Say 'a day' without the 'ever.' No, no, Orlando. Men are April when they woo, December when they wed; maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives. I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen, more clamorous than a parrot against rain, more new-fangled than an ape, more giddy in my desires than a monkey. I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are dispos'd to be merry. I will laugh like a hyen, and that when thou art inclin'd to sleep.

Orl. But will my Rosalind do so?

Ros. By my life, she will do as I do.

Orl. O, but she is wise.

Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to do this. The wiser, the waywarder. Make the doors upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the casement; shut that, and 'twill out at the keyhole; stop that, 'twill fly with the smoke out at the chimney.

Orl. A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say, 'Wit, whether wilt?'

35 And: an (if). 42 clapp'd: seized on the shoulder as if to arrest 45 And: an (if) 46 of: by 49 jointure: marriage portion 52 horns; cf. n. 53 beholding: beholden armed: i.e. with horns 55 horn-maker: cuckold-maker 58 leer: appearance 61 and: an (if) 64 gravel'd: nonplussed 65 out: out of material 66 God warn us: God warrant (protect) us cleanliest shift: cleverest device 73 ranker: more flourishing 74 suit; cf. n. 81 by attorney: by proxy 83 videlicet: namely Troilus; cf. n. 85 patterns: models 86 Leander; cf. n.

90 found: gave the verdict (in a legal sense) 93 right: true 118 commission: authority 119 goes before: anticipates 130 Barbary: Oriental 131 against: in expectation of new-fangled: fond of novelty 132 giddy: capricious 133 Diana; cf. n. 134 hyen: hyena 140 Make: shut 145 'Wit . . . wilt?'; cf. n.

Ros. Nay, you might keep that check for it till you met your wive's wit going to your neighbor's bed.

Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuse that?

Ros. Marry, to say she came to seek you there. You shall never take her without her answer unless you take her without her tongue. O, that woman that cannot make her fault her husband's occasion, let her never nurse her child herself, for she will breed it like a fool.

Orl. For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee.

Ros. Alas, dear love, I cannot lack thee two hours.

Orl. I must attend the Duke at dinner. By two o'clock I will be with thee again.

Ros. Ay, go your ways, go your ways. I knew what you would prove; my friends told me as much, and I thought no less. That flattering tongue of yours won me. 'Tis but one cast away, and so come death. Two o'clock is your hour.

Orl. Ay, sweet Rosalind.

Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oaths that are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise or come one minute behind your hour, I will think you the most pathetical break-promise and the most hollow lover and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind that may be chosen out of the gross band of the unfaithful. Therefore beware my censure and keep your promise.

Orl. With no less religion than if thou wert indeed my Rosalind. So adieu.

Ros. Well, Time is the old justice that examines all such offenders, and let Time try. Adieu. Exit [Orlando].

Cel. You have simply misus'd our sex in your love prate. We must have your doublet and hose pluck'd over your head and show the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.

Ros. O coz, coz, coz, my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sounded; my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the Bay of Portugal.

Cel. Or rather bottomless—that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out.

Ros. No; that same wicked bastard of Venus that was begot of thought, conceiv'd of spleen, and born of madness, that blind rascally boy that abuses everyone's eyes because his own are out—let him be judge how deep I am in love. I'll tell thee, Aliena, I cannot be out of sight of Orlando. I'll go find a shadow and sigh till he come.

Cel. And I'll sleep. Exeunt.

Scene Second

Enter Jaques and Lords, Foresters.

Jaq. Which is he that killed the deer?

Lord. Sir, it was I.

Jaq. Let's present him to the Duke like a Roman conqueror, and it would do well to set the deer's horns upon his head for a branch of victory. Have you no song, forester, for this purpose?

146 check: rebuke 147 wive's: wife's, an old genitive 152 occasion; cf. n. 155 lack: do without 164, 165 mend me: change my fortune 167 pathetical: pitiable 169 gross: whole 170 censure: condemnation 172 religion: fidelity 176 simply: completely misus'd: abused 178 bird . . . nest; cf. n. 185 bastard of Venus; cf. n. 186 thought: melancholy spleen: impulse

Lord. Yes, sir.

Jaq. Sing it. 'Tis no matter how it be in tune, so it make noise enough. Music.

Song

What shall he have that kill'd the deer?
His leathern skin and horns to wear.
Then sing him home. The rest shall bear
This burthen:

Take thou no scorn to wear the horn.
It was a crest ere thou wast born.
Thy father's father wore it,
And thy father bore it.
The horn, the horn, the lusty horn
Is not a thing to laugh to scorn. Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock? And here much Orlando.

Cel. I warrant you, with pure love and troubled brain

Enter Silvius

he hath tane his bow and arrows and is gone forth to sleep. Look who comes here.

Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth.
My gentle Phebe did bid me give you this.
[Presenting a letter.]
I know not the contents but, as I guess
By the stern brow and waspish action
Which she did use as she was writing of it,
It bears an angry tenure. Pardon me,
I am but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter
And play the swaggerer. Bear this, bear all.
She says I am not fair, that I lack manners;
She calls me proud, and that she could not love me
Were man as rare as Phoenix. 'Od's my will,
Her love is not the hare that I do hunt.
Why writes she so to me? Well, shepherd, well?
This is a letter of your own device.

Sil. No, I protest. I know not the contents;
Phebe did write it.

Ros. Come, come, you are a fool,
And turn'd into the extremity of love.
I saw her hand: she has a leathern hand,
A freestone colored hand. I verily did think
That her old gloves were on, but 'twas her hands.
She has a housewive's hand; but that's no matter.
I say she never did invent this letter.
This is a man's invention and his hand.

Sil. Sure it is hers.

Ros. Why, 'tis a boisterous and a cruel style,
A style for challengers. Why, she defies me,

12, 13 The rest . . . burthen; cf. n. 19 laugh to scorn: ridicule 2 here much Orlando: i.e. spoken with irony 11 tenure: tenor, purport (to be read 'tenor') 17 Phoenix; cf. n. 24 turn'd: brought the extremity: to be read 'th' extremity.' 26 freestone colored: the color of brown stone 32 boisterous: to be read 'boist'rous.'

Like Turk to Christian. Women's gentle brain
Could not drop forth such giant rude invention,
Such Ethiop words, blacker in their effect
Than in their countenance. Will you hear the letter?
Sil. So please you, for I never heard it yet;
Yet heard too much of Phebe's cruelty.
Ros. She Phebes me! Mark how the tyrant writes. Read.

Art thou God to shepherd turn'd
That a maiden's heart hath burn'd?

Can a woman rail thus?
Sil. Call you this railing? Read.

Ros. Why, thy Godhead laid apart,
Warr'st thou with a woman's heart?

Did you ever hear such railing?

Whiles the eyes of man did woo me
That could do no vengeance to me.

Meaning me a beast.

If the scorn of your bright eyne
Have power to raise such love in mine,
Alack, in me what strange effect
Would they work in mild aspect?
Whiles you chid me, I did love;
How then might your prayers move!
He that brings this love to thee
Little knows this love in me.
And by him seal up thy mind
Whether that thy youth and kind
Will the faithful offer take
Of me and all that I can make;
Or else by him my love deny,
And then I'll study how to die.

Sil. Call you this chiding?
Cel. Alas, poor shepherd.
Ros. Do you pity him? No, he deserves no pity. Wilt thou love such a woman? What, to make thee an instrument and play false strains upon thee? Not to be endur'd. Well, go your way to her—for I see love hath made thee a tame snake—and say this to her: that if she loves me, I charge her to love thee; if she will not, I will never have her unless thou entreat for her. If you be a true lover, hence, and not a word. For here comes more company. Exit Silvius.

Enter Oliver.

Oli. Good morrow, fair ones. Pray you, if you know,
Where in the purlieus of this forest stands
A sheepcote fenc'd about with olive trees?
Cel. West of this place, down in the neighbor bottom.
The rank of osiers by the murmuring stream,
Left on your right hand, brings you to the place.
But at this hour the house doth keep itself;
There's none within.

Oli. If that an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description:
Such garments and such years. 'The boy is fair,
Of female favor, and bestows himself
Like a ripe sister; the woman low
And browner than her brother.' Are not you
The owner of the house I did inquire for?
Cel. It is no boast, being ask'd, to say we are.
Oli. Orlando doth commend him to you both,
And to that youth he calls his Rosalind
He sends this bloody napkin. Are you he?
Ros. I am. What must we understand by this?
Oli. Some of my shame, if you will know of me
What man I am, and how and why and where
This handkercher was stain'd.
Cel. I pray you tell it.
Oli. When last the young Orlando parted from you,
He left a promise to return again
Within an hour; and pacing through the forest,
Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy,
Lo, what befell! He threw his eye aside,
And mark what object did present itself
Under an old oak, whose boughs were moss'd with age
And high top bald with dry antiquity:
A wretched ragged man, o'ergrown with hair,
Lay sleeping on his back. About his neck
A green and gilded snake had wreath'd itself,
Who with her head nimble in threats approach'd
The opening of his mouth. But suddenly,
Seeing Orlando, it unlink'd itself
And with indented glides did slip away
Into a bush. Under which bush's shade
A lioness, with udders all drawn dry,
Lay couching head on ground, with catlike watch
When that the sleeping man should stir; for 'tis
The royal disposition of that beast
To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead.
This seen, Orlando did approach the man
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.
Cel. O, I have heard him speak of that same brother,
And he did render him the most unnatural
That liv'd amongst men.
Oli. And well he might so do,
For well I know he was unnatural.
Ros. But to Orlando: did he leave him there,
Food to the suck'd and hungry lioness?
Oli. Twice did he turn his back and purpos'd so.
But kindness, nobler ever than revenge.
And nature stronger that his just occasion
Made him give battle to the lioness,
Who quickly fell before him. In which hurtling
From miserable slumber I awaked.
Cel. Are you his brother?
Ros. Was't you he rescu'd?
Cel. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?
Oli. 'Twas I, but 'tis not I. I do not shame

34 Turk: cf. n. 35 giant rude: extremely rude 36 Ethiop: black 37 countenance: to be read 'count'nance' 40 Phebes: treats cruelly, acts like Phebe 45 Godhead: divinity laid apart: put aside 51 eyne: archaic plural of 'eye' 54 aspect: stressed — —́ 59 seal up thy mind: send under seal 60 youth and kind: youthful nature 76 purlieus: borders of a forest 78 bottom: valley 79 osiers: willows 81 keep itself: take care of itself (i.e. is empty)

86 favor: feature bestows: carries 87 ripe: grown up low: short 93 napkin: handkerchief 97 handkercher: handkerchief 103 threw . . . aside: looked to one side 105 old: this word causes an irregular line but it appears in all folios 112 unlink'd: uncoiled 113 indented: winding 123 render: describe 131 occasion: opportunity 133 hurtling: tumult 137 contrive: plot

To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.
Ros. But for the bloody napkin?
Oli. By and by.
When from the first to last, betwixt us two
Tears our recountments had most kindly bath'd,
As how I came into that desert place—
In brief, he led me to the gentle Duke,
Who gave me fresh array and entertainment,
Committing me unto my brother's love;
Who led me instantly unto his cave,
There stripp'd himself, and here upon his arm
The lioness had torn some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled. And now he fainted
And cried, in fainting, upon Rosalind.
Brief, I recover'd him, bound up his wound,
And after some small space, being strong at heart,
He sent me hither, stranger as I am,
To tell this story that you might excuse
His broken promise; and to give this napkin,
Dy'd in his blood, unto the shepherd youth
That he in sport doth call his Rosalind. [Rosalind faints.]
Cel. Why, how now, Ganymede, sweet Ganymede!
Oli. Many will swoon when they do look on blood.
Cel. There is more in it. Cousin Ganymede!
Oli. Look, he recovers.
Ros. I would I were at home.
Cel. We'll lead you thither.
I pray you, will you take him by the arm?
Oli. Be of good cheer, youth. You a man? You lack a man's heart.
Ros. I do so, I confess it. Ah, sirrah, a body would think this was well counterfeited. I pray you tell your brother how well I counterfeited. Heigh-ho!
Oli. This was not counterfeit; there is too great testimony in your complexion that it was a passion of earnest.
Ros. Counterfeit, I assure you.
Oli. Well then, take a good heart and counterfeit to be a man.
Ros. So I do. But, i' faith, I should have been a woman by right.
Cel. Come, you look paler and paler. Pray you, draw homewards. Good sir, go with us.
Oli. That will I, for we must bear answer back how you excuse my brother, Rosalind.
Ros. I shall devise something, but I pray you commend my counterfeiting to him. Will you go? Exeunt.

ACT FIVE ❧ SCENE FIRST

Enter Clown [Touchstone] and Audrey.

Touch. We shall find a time, Audrey. Patience, gentle Audrey.
Audrey. Faith, the priest was good enough, for all the old gentleman's saying.
Touch. A most wicked Sir Oliver, Audrey, a most vile Martext. But, Audrey, there is a youth here in the forest lays claim to you.
Audrey. Ay, I know who 'tis. He hath no interest in me in the world. Here comes the man you mean.

Enter William.

Touch. It is meat and drink to me to see a clown. By my troth, we that have good wits have much to answer for. We shall be flouting; we cannot hold.
William. Good ev'n, Audrey.
Audrey. God ye good ev'n, William.
William. And good ev'n to you, sir.
Touch. Good ev'n, gentle friend. Cover thy head, cover thy head. Nay, prithee be cover'd. How old are you, friend?
William Five and twenty, sir.
Touch. A ripe age. Is thy name William?
William. William, sir.
Touch. A fair name. Wast born i' th' forest here?
William. Ay, sir, I thank God.
Touch. 'Thank God': a good answer. Art rich?
William. Faith, sir, so-so.
Touch. 'So-so' is good, very good, very excellent good. And yet it is not; it is but so-so. Art thou wise?
William. Ay, sir, I have a pretty wit.
Touch. Why, thou say'st well. I do now remember a saying: 'The fool doth think he is wise, but the wise man knows himself to be a fool.' The heathen philosopher, when he had a desire to eat a grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth, meaning thereby that grapes were made to eat and lips to open. You do love this maid?
William. I do, sir.
Touch. Give me your hand. Art thou learned?
William. No, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me: to have is to have. For it is a figure in rhetoric that drink, being pour'd out of a cup into a glass, by filling the one doth empty the other. For all your writers do consent that ipse is he; now you are not ipse, for I am he.
William. Which he, sir?
Touch. He, sir, that must marry this woman. Therefore, you clown, abandon (which is in the vulgar 'leave') the society (which in the boorish is 'company') of this female (which in the common is 'woman'); which together is, abandon the society of this female. Or, clown, thou perishest; or, to thy better understanding, diest; or, to wit, I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage. I will deal in poison with thee, or in bastinado, or in steel; I will bandy with thee in faction; I will o'errun thee with policy; I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways. Therefore tremble and depart.
Audrey. Do, good William.
William. God rest you merry, sir. Exit.

Enter Corin.

Cor. Our master and mistress seeks you. Come away, away.
Touch. Trip, Audrey, trip, Audrey. I attend, I attend. Exeunt.

144 recountments: stories 154 Brief: briefly recover'd: revived 174 passion of earnest: a genuine swoon

10 clown: rustic 12 flouting: mocking hold: refrain 14 God ye: God give you 27 wit: intelligence 40 ipse: he himself (Latin) 50 bastinado: cudgel bandy: contend faction: dissension 51 o'errun: overwhelm policy: craft 54 God . . . merry: God keep you in good spirits

Scene Two

Enter Orlando and Oliver.

Orl. Is't possible that on so little acquaintance you should like her? That, but seeing, you should love her? And loving, woo? And wooing, she should grant? And will you persever to enjoy her?

Oli. Neither call the giddiness of it in question, the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor sudden consenting. But say with me, 'I love Aliena'; say with her, that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other. It shall be to your good: for my father's house and all the revenue that was old Sir Rowland's will I estate upon you, and here live and die a shepherd.

Enter Rosalind.

Orl. You have my consent. Let your wedding be tomorrow; thither will I invite the Duke and all's contented followers. Go you and prepare Aliena for, look you, here comes my Rosalind.

Ros. God save you, brother.

Oli. And you, fair sister. [Exit.]

Ros. O my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf.

Orl. It is my arm.

Ros. I thought thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to sound when he show'd me your handkercher?

Orl. Ay, and greater wonders than that.

Ros. O, I know where you are. Nay, 'tis true. There was never anything so sudden but the fight of two rams and Caesar's thrasonical brag of 'I came, saw, and overcame.' For your brother and my sister no sooner met, but they look'd; no sooner look'd, but they lov'd; no sooner lov'd, but they sigh'd; no sooner sigh'd, but they ask'd one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy. And in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage, which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage. They are in the very wrath of love, and they will together. Clubs cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married tomorrow, and I will bid the Duke to the nuptial. But O, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes. By so much the more shall I tomorrow be at the height of heart-heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then, tomorrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind?

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weary you then no longer with idle talking. Know of me then—for now I speak to some purpose—that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit. I speak not this that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, insomuch I say I know you are. Neither do I labor for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do yourself good and not to grace me. Believe then, if you please, that I can do strange things. I have, since I was three year old, convers'd with a magician most profound in his art, and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalind so near the heart as your gesture cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena shall you marry her. I know into what straits of fortune she is driven, and it is not impossible to me—if it appear not inconvenient to you—to set her before your eyes tomorrow human as she is, and without any danger.

Orl. Speak'st thou in sober meanings?

Ros. By my life, I do—which I tender dearly, though I say I am a magician. Therefore put you in your best array, bid your friends; for if you will be married tomorrow, you shall, and to Rosalind, if you will.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Look, here comes a lover of mine and a lover of hers.

Phebe. Youth, you have done me much ungentleness
To show the letter that I writ to you.

Ros. I care not if I have. It is my study
To seem despiteful and ungentle to you.
You are there followed by a faithful shepherd.
Look upon him, love him. He worships you.

Phebe. Good shepherd, tell this youth what 'tis to love.

Sil. It is to be all made of sighs and tears;
And so am I for Phebe.

Phebe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be made of faith and service;
And so am I for Phebe.

Phebe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasy,
All made of passion, and all made of wishes;
All adoration, duty, and observance;
All humbleness, all patience, and impatience;
All purity, all trial, all obedience;
And so am I for Phebe.

Phebe. And so am I for Ganymede.

Orl. And so am I for Rosalind.

Ros. And so am I for no woman.

Phebe. [To Rosalind.] If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Sil. [To Phebe.] If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Orl. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Ros. Who do you speak to? 'Why blame you me to love you?'

Orl. To her that is not here, nor doth not hear.

Ros. Pray you, no more of this. 'Tis like the howling of Irish wolves against the moon. [To Silvius.] I will help you if I can. [To Phebe.] I would love you if I could. Tomorrow meet me all together. [To Phebe.] I will marry you if ever I marry woman, and I'll be married tomorrow. [To Orlando.]

3 persever: persevere (stressed — ⏑ —) 5 giddiness: irresponsibility 11 estate: bestow 13 all's: all his 18 scarf: sling 23 sound: swoon 26 where you are: what you're getting at 28 thrasonical: boastful cf. n. 33 degrees: i.e. with a pun on stairs 34 incontinent: immediately incontinent: unchaste 48 conceit: understanding 52 grace me: do me honor 54 convers'd: associated 55 damnable: liable to damnation because of magic practices 56 gesture: attitude 60 human; cf. n. 62 tender: value 67 ungentleness: discourtesy 69 study: endeavor 70 despiteful: mean 86 observance: devotion 88 obedience; cf. n. 94 to love you: for loving you 98, 99 Who . . . you; cf. n.

I will satisfy you if ever I satisfied man, and you shall be married tomorrow. [To Silvius.] I will content you if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married tomorrow. As you love Rosalind, meet. As you love Phebe, meet. And as I love no woman, I'll meet. So fare you well. I have left you commands.

Sil. I'll not fail, if I live.

Phebe. Nor I.

Orl. Nor I. Exeunt.

Scene Three

Enter Clown [Touchstone] and Audrey.

Touch. Tomorrow is the joyful day, Audrey. Tomorrow will we be married.

Audrey. I do desire it with all my heart, and I hope it is no dishonest desire to desire to be a woman of the world. Here come two of the banish'd Duke's pages.

Enter two Pages.

1 Page. Well met, honest gentleman.

Touch. By my troth, well met. Come, sit, sit—and a song.

2 Page. We are for you. Sit i' th' middle.

1 Page. Shall we clap into 't roundly without hawking or spitting or saying we are hoarse, which are the only prologues to a bad voice?

2 Page. I'faith, i'faith. And both in a tune, like two gypsies on a horse.

Song

It was a lover and his lass,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
That o'er the green cornfield did pass
In the springtime, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding.
Sweet lovers love the spring.

Between the acres of the rye,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
These pretty country folks would lie
In springtime, etc.

This carol they began that hour,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
How that life was but a flower
In springtime, etc.

And therefore take the present time,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
For love is crowned with the prime
In springtime, etc.

Touch. Truly, young gentlemen, though there were no great matter in the ditty, yet the note was very untuneable.

1 Page. You are deceiv'd, sir. We kept time; we lost not our time.

Touch. By my troth, yes. I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song. God buy you, and God mend your voices. Come, Audrey. Exeunt.

4 dishonest: immodest woman of the world: married woman 8 We are for you: we agree with you 9 clap into't roundly: start briskly 12 in a tune: in unison Song: cf. n. 17 ring time: wedding time 20 Between . . . acres: on the strips between acres 24 carol; cf. n. 33 note: tune 34 untuneable: discordant 37 buy: be with

Scene Fourth

Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, Jaques, Orlando, Oliver, Celia.

Duke S. Dost thou believe, Orlando, that the boy
Can do all this that he hath promised?

Orl. I sometimes do believe and sometimes do not,
As those that fear they hope and know they fear.

Enter Rosalind, Silvius, and Phebe.

Ros. Patience once more whiles our compact is urg'd.
You say, if I bring in your Rosalind,
You will bestow her on Orlando here?

Duke S. That would I, had I kingdoms to give with her.

Ros. And you say that you will have her when I bring her?

Orl. That would I, were I of all kingdoms king.

Ros. You say you'll marry me, if I be willing?

Phebe. That will I, should I die the hour after.

Ros. But if you do refuse to marry me,
You'll give yourself to this most faithful shepherd?

Phebe. So is the bargain.

Ros. You say that you'll have Phebe, if she will?

Sil. Though to have her and death were both one thing.

Ros. I have promis'd to make all this matter even.
Keep you your word, O Duke, to give your daughter;
You yours, Orlando, to receive his daughter;
Keep you your word, Phebe, that you'll marry me
Or else, refusing me, to wed this shepherd;
Keep your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her
If she refuse me. And from hence I go
To make these doubts all even. Exeunt Rosalind and Celia.

Duke S. I do remember in this shepherd boy
Some lively touches of my daughter's favor.

Orl. My lord, the first time that I e'er saw him
Methought he was a brother to your daughter.
But, my good lord, this boy is forest born
And hath been tutor'd in the rudiments
Of many desperate studies by his uncle,
Whom he reports to be a great magician

Enter Clown [Touchstone] and Audrey.

Obscured in the circle of this forest.

Jaq. There is sure another flood toward, and these couples are coming to the ark. Here comes a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongues are call'd fools.

Touch. Salutation and greeting to you all.

Jaq. Good my lord, bid him welcome. This is the motley-minded gentleman that I have so often met in the forest. He hath been a courtier, he swears.

Touch. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation. I have trod a measure; I have flatt'red a lady; I have been politic with my friend, smooth with mine enemy; I have undone three tailors; I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Jaq. And how was that tane up?

Touch. Faith, we met and found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause.

4 As . . . fear; cf. n. 5 whiles: while compact: agreement (stressed — ⏑ ⏑) urg'd: pressed forward, expedited 18 I have: to be read I've' 25 doubts: impossibilities even: plain 27 lively: lifelike touches: traces favor: appearance 28 e'er: F ever 32 desperate: dangerous because they deal with forbidden arts 34 Obscured: hidden 35 toward: about to occur 42, 43 purgation: proof measure: a stately dance 45 three tailors; cf. n. 45, 46 like . . . fought: came near fighting 47 tane up: made up

Jaq. How 'seventh cause'? Good my lord, like this fellow.

Duke S. I like him very well.

Touch. God 'ild you, sir; I desire you of the like. I press in here, sir, amongst the rest of the country copulatives to swear and to forswear, according as marriage binds and blood breaks. A poor virgin, sir, an ill-favor'd thing, sir, but mine own. A poor humor of mine, sir, to take that that no man else will. Rich honesty dwells like a miser, sir, in a poor house, as your pearl in your foul oyster.

Duke S. By my faith, he is very swift and sententious.

Touch. According to the fool's bolt, sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Jaq. But for the seventh cause. How did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause?

Touch. Upon a lie seven times removed—bear your body more seeming, Audrey—as thus, sir: I did dislike the cut of a certain courtier's beard. He sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was. This is call'd the Retort Courteous. If I sent him word again it was not well cut, he would send me word he cut it to please himself. This is call'd the Quip Modest. If again, it was not well cut, he disabled my judgment. This is called the Reply Churlish. If again, it was not well cut, he would answer I spake not true. This is call'd the Reproof Valiant. If again, it was not well cut, he would say I lie. This is call'd the Countercheck Quarrelsome. And so to the Lie Circumstantial and the Lie Direct.

Jaq. And how oft did you say his beard was not well cut?

Touch. I durst go no further than the Lie Circumstantial, nor he durst not give me the Lie Direct. And so we measur'd swords and parted.

Jaq. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lie?

Touch. O sir, we quarrel in print, by the book, as you have books for good manners. I will name you the degrees: the first, the Retort Courteous; the second, the Quip Modest; the third, the Reply Churlish; the fourth, the Reproof Valiant; the fift, the Countercheck Quarrelsome; the sixt, the Lie with Circumstance; the seventh, the Lie Direct. All these you may avoid but the Lie Direct, and you may avoid that too, with an If. I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel, but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an If—as, 'If you said so, then I said so,' and they shook hands and swore brothers. Your If is the only peacemaker. Much virtue in If.

Jaq. Is not this a rare fellow, my lord? He's as good at anything, and yet a fool.

Duke S. He uses his folly like a stalking horse, and under the presentation of that he shoots his wit.

Enter Hymen, Rosalind, and Celia.

Still Music.

Hym. Then is there mirth in heaven
When earthly things made even
Atone together.
Good Duke, receive thy daughter;
Hymen from heaven brought her,
Yea, brought her hether,
That thou mightst join her hand with his
Whose heart within his bosom is.

Ros. To you I give myself, for I am yours. [To Duke.]
To you I give myself, for I am yours. [To Orlando.]

Duke S. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.

Phebe. If sight and shape be true,
Why then, my love adieu.

Ros. I'll have no father, if you be not he.
I'll have no husband, if you be not he.
Nor ne'er wed woman, if you be not she.

Hym. Peace ho! I bar confusion.
'Tis I must make conclusion
Of these most strange events.
Here's eight that must take hands
To join in Hymen's bands,
If truth holds true contents.
You and you no cross shall part. [To Orland and Rosalind.]
You and you are heart in heart. [To Oliver and Celia.]
You to his love must accord,
Or have a woman to your lord. [To Phebe.]
You and you are sure together
As the winter to foul weather. [To Touchstone and Audrey.]
Whiles a wedlock hymn we sing,
Feed yourselves with questioning,
That reason wonder may diminish
How thus we met and these things finish.

Song

Wedding is great Juno's crown:
O blessed bond of board and bed!
'Tis Hymen peoples every town.
High wedlock then be honored:
Honor, high honor, and renown
To Hymen, God of every town.

Duke S. O my dear niece, welcome thou art to me,
E'en daughter, welcome, in no less degree.

Phebe. I will not eat my word; now thou art mine.
Thy faith my fancy to thee doth combine. [To Silvius.]

Enter Second Brother [Jaques de Boys].

Second Brother. Let me have audience for a word or two.
I am the second son of old Sir Rowland
That brings these tidings to this fair assembly.
Duke Frederick, hearing how that every day
Men of great worth resorted to this forest,
Address'd a mighty power which were on foot
In his own conduct, purposely to take
His brother here and put him to the sword.

53 God 'ild: God reward 54 copulatives: those about to be married 55 blood: passion 57 humor: whim 58 honesty: chastity 60 sententious: pithy 61 fool's bolt; cf. n. dulcet diseases: cf. n. 66 seeming: becomingly 66 dislike: indicate disapproval of 71 Quip: retort 72 disabled: disparaged 75 Countercheck: rebuff (a term from chess) 76 the: (before Lie Circumstantial) F omits 79 measur'd: i.e. before dueling 81 nominate: name 83 books; cf. n. 87 fift: fifth sixt: sixth 93 swore brothers: made a blood pact 97 stalking horse: decoy, cf. n. 98 presentation: semblance SD Still Music: soft music

100 Hymen: the Greek and Roman god of marriage 102 Atone: unite 122 truth . . . contents: i.e. if the truth be the truth 127 sure together: permanently bound together 131 reason: explanation 134 Juno's; cf. n. 137 High: solemn 141 E'en: F Even 150 Address'd: prepared power: force 151 In his own conduct: under his leadership

And to the skirts of this wild wood he came,
Where, meeting with an old religious man,
After some question with him was converted
Both from his enterprise and from the world,
His crown bequeathing to his banish'd brother
And all their lands restor'd to them again
That were with him exil'd. This to be true
I do engage my life.
Duke S. Welcome, young man.
Thou offer'st fairly to thy brothers' wedding:
To one his lands witheld, and to the other
A land itself at large, a potent dukedom.
First, in this forest let us do those ends
That here were well begun and well begot.
And after, every of this happy number
That have endur'd shrewd days and nights with us
Shall share the good of our returned fortune,
According to the measure of their states.
Meantime forget this new-falne dignity
And fall into our rustic revelry.
Play, music, and you brides and bridegrooms all,
With measure heap'd in joy, to th' measures fall.
Jaq. Sir, by your patience. If I heard you rightly,
The Duke hath put on a religious life
And thrown into neglect the pompous court.
Second Brother. He hath.
Jaq. To him will I. Out of these convertites
There is much matter to be heard and learn'd.
You to your former honor I bequeath; [To Duke.]
Your patience and your virtue well deserves it.
You to a love that your true faith doth merit. [To Orlando.]
You to your land and love and great allies. [To Oliver.]
You to a long and well-deserved bed. [To Silvius.]
And you to wrangling, for thy loving voyage [To Touchstone.]
Is but for two months victuall'd. So to your pleasures.
I am for other than for dancing measures.
Duke S. Stay, Jaques, stay.
Jaq. To see no pastime I. What you would have
I'll stay to know at your abandon'd cave. Exit.
Duke S. Proceed, proceed. We will begin these rites,
As we do trust they'll end, in true delights. Exit.

Epilogue

Rosalind. It is not the fashion to see the lady the epilogue, but it is no more unhandsome than to see the lord the prologue. If it be true that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue. Yet to good wine they do use good bushes, and good plays prove the better by the help of good epilogues. What a case am I in then, that am neither a good epilogue nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalf of a good play. I am not furnish'd like a beggar; therefore to beg will not become me. My way is to conjure you, and I'll begin with the women. I charge you, O women, for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this play as please you. And I charge you, O men, for the love you bear to women—as I perceive by your simp'ring none of you hates them—that between you and the women the play may please. If I were a woman, I would kiss as many of you as had beards that pleas'd me, complexions that lik'd me, and breaths that I defied not. And I am sure as many as have good beards or good faces or sweet breaths will for my kind offer, when I make curtsy, bid me farewell. Exit.

Finis

154 religious man: hermit 155 question: conversation 159 exil'd: stressed — –˘ 160 engage: pledge 162 offer'st fairly: give most generously 164 potent: powerful 165 do those ends: complete those purposes 167 every: every one 168 shrewd: severe, difficult 171 new-falne: recently acquired 174 measure: due proportion measures: dances 175 by your patience: by your leave 177 pompous: ceremonious 179 convertites: converts

2 unhandsome: improper 3 wine . . . bush: cf. n. 6 insinuate: ingratiate myself 13 woman: cf. n. 15 defied: disliked 17 bid me farewell: i.e. a plea for applause

Notes

I.i.1. he. This word is omitted in the Folio. Though this sentence may be understood without the addition of he, the sense is clarified with its inclusion. Folio omissions of this sort will be noted hereafter at the foot of the page. Square brackets around stage directions indicate material not found in the Folio but necessary to explain the action.

I.i.27. mar. The bantering conjunction of make and mar is common. For example, see Love's Labour's Lost, IV.3.195, 196.

I.i.32. prodigal portion. A reference to the biblical story of the prodigal son (Luke 15).

I.i.44. reverence. That is, 'The fact that you are older puts you closer to that reverence associated with the head of the family.' Oliver bridles at Orlando's ironic compliment, as his next words indicate.

I.i.48. villain. Oliver uses this word in the modern sense of 'an evil person,' while Orlando's interpretation of the word conforms to its original meaning: 'a person of low birth, a servant.' At this stage in the action Orlando has seized his brother.

I.i.79. wrastler. This Folio spelling indicates a common Elizabethan pronunciation. Hereafter words of this kind will appear at the foot of the page: wrastler: wrestler.

I.i.86. Monsieur. Spelled Mounsieur in the Folio at this point, but elsewhere regularly Monsieur.

I.i.101. Forest of Arden. Certainly Shakespeare derived this name from Lodge's novel, Rosalynde (see Sources of the Play), but in addition to the Forest of the Ardennes in France there is a Forest of Arden in Warwickshire. The appearance of palm trees and lions, incongruous in either locale, is explained once we see Shakespeare's forest as an imaginary Arcadia. Arden was also his mother's maiden name.

I.i.105. golden world. The Golden Age of classical mythology, like the Garden of Eden, was characterized by happiness and innocence.

I.ii.26. housewife Fortune. The standard symbol of Fortune is, of course, the wheel—an image characteristic of the medieval and Elizabethan world. For example, Fluellen speaks of Fortune being 'painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and mutability, and variation' (Henry V, III.6.29, 30). In the present passage Celia is reducing Fortune to the status of a housewife with her spinning wheel.

I.ii.36. Nature. The antithesis between Nature and Fortune in this and the following lines is a characteristic Elizabethan concern. The idea is that Nature is the powerful creator and includes Fortune. Thus Nature cannot be guided by Fortune.

I.ii.45. whetstone. Though we do not learn the Clown's name until later in the play, the pun on Touchstone is obvious here. A clown is, of course, the court fool or jester.

I.ii.69. Celia. In the Folio this speech is assigned incorrectly to Rosalind, which would cause both of the dukes to have the same first name.

I.ii.69. enough. This is the Folio reading. An alternate reading could be: 'My father's love is enough to honor him. Enough!'

I.ii.81. Bon jour. The Folio spelling Boon-iour (i pronounced j) is perhaps indicative of common Elizabethan pronunciation of French.

I.ii.89. smell. A pun on the two meanings of rank: 'position' and 'odor.'

I.ii.98. old tale. Celia means that there is nothing novel or unusual about Le Beau's introduction.

I.ii.102. presents. A legal phrase meaning 'by this present document' and with a pun on 'presence.'

I.ii.104. which. The construction here is archaic: 'which . . . him' equals 'whom' and 'which . . . his' equals 'whose.'

I.ii.116. broken music. That is, to hear the music of having his ribs broken. Broken music is technically 'part music,' or music performed by instruments of different classes. The term could also refer to a musical instrument with its 'ribs' broken.

I.ii.133. such . . . man. The man is of course Charles, the wrestler of greater strength, and the meaning is clearly that the odds are all on his side.

I.ii.136. hether. The Folio spelling hether indicates a common Elizabethan pronunciation, though the word as it appears throughout the Folio is most often spelled in the modern fashion.

I.ii.139. them. Here used as a term of respect to include both Rosalind and Celia.

I.ii.214. out of suits. The meaning here is twofold: Rosalind means that she is no longer in Fortune's service (wearing Fortune's livery) and that her suits are rejected by Fortune.

I.ii.220. quintain. Used for jousting practice, this was an upright post with the figure of an armed man attached to it on a horizontal bar. The object was to ride full tilt against it and avoid being struck by the figure as it swung about.

I.ii.236. humorous. The Duke is temperamental in the sense of a Jonsonian 'humour' character. He is ruled by one guiding passion, in this case obstinacy.

I.ii.242. taller. Many editors have emended this to 'smaller' in order to eliminate Shakespeare's obvious inconsistency here, for Rosalind is later described as being taller than Celia (I.3.116).

I.iii.SD Rosalind. The Folio reads Rosaline at this point and elsewhere either Rosalind or Rosalinde.

I.iii.8. reasons. A particularly indelicate pun is suggested by the similarity in Elizabethan pronunciation between 'reason' and 'raising.' See Helge Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation (New Haven, 1953), pp. 138–9.

I.iii.18. 'hem' . . . him. A play on the similarity in pronunciation of these two words.

I.iii.31. deserve well. That is, to be hated—though Rosalind interprets the remark in an opposite fashion. Celia, in using the word containing 'serve,' is playing on the similarity in pronunciation of 'hate' and 'eat.'

I.iii.73. Juno's swans. The swan was traditionally sacred to Venus, the peacock to Juno. But Professor J. R. Crawford has pointed out a similar reference in Thomas Kyd's Soliman and Perseda (IV.1.70).

I.iii.102. change. That is, of fortune. This has sometimes been emended to charge, the reading of the Second Folio. But here change, in the sense of reversal of fortune, makes intelligible sense.

I.iii.126. Ganymede. A handsome boy whom Zeus made cupbearer of the gods. The name is spelled Ganimed in the Folio.

II.i.3. painted. The contrast between country life and court life was a characteristic theme in Elizabethan literature. The court, with its artificiality and hypocrisy, was compared unfavorably to the natural grace of the country. The Forest of Arden is just such a natural and idyllic place as this, far from the pomp of the court.

II.i.5. the penalty of Adam. The change of season is, of course, the penalty of Adam after his loss of Paradise. The not in this line has been often unnecessarily emended to 'but.' However, the Folio reading of not is consistent when we realize that the Duke is merely asking another rhetorical questions.

II.i.13. toad. It was an ancient superstition that the jewel called the 'toadstone' was to be found in the head of the toad.

II.i.18. Amiens. Most editors assign the first five words of Amiens' speech to the Duke. But there is no occasion to depart from the Folio reading and no reason to assume that Amiens would not immediately agree with the Duke and say: 'I would not change it.'

II.i.27. Jaques. Not to be confused with Orlando's youngest brother, Jaques de Boys, who appears briefly in the last act. Scansion obviously indicates the name is to be pronounced as dissyllabic here; in Elizabethan speech its qu was sounded k: 'Jā-kes.'

II.i.51. there. This word appears only in the First Folio and is omitted in the others. Its inclusion makes a six-foot line, but this is not an uncommon method of varying the blank verse pattern.

II.i.52. velvet. In other words, with the velvet on their horns they are like courtiers wearing velvet clothes.

II.iii.SD. Enter . . . Adam. It is obvious here that Adam and Orlando enter from opposite sides of the stage.

II.iv.1. weary. The Folio reading is merry but Theobald's emendation is obviously necessary. In Shakespeare's writing 'wery' and 'mery' could easily be confused.

II.iv.11. cross. The pun here develops from an alternate meaning of the word. Old pennies had crosses stamped on one side.

II.iv.13. Arden. The pun here develops from the similarity in pronunciation between 'Arden' and 'harden.' Harden was a coarse fabric made from flax or hemp and was the term used to describe the smock worn by country laborers. See Helge Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation (New Haven, 1953), p. 91. The idea is further elaborated in line 15 where travelers gives an echo of 'travail' of 'labor.' Jaques means that he has now become a complete rustic.

II.iv.50. mortal. The word is used in two slightly different ways in this sentence: as 'subject to death' and as 'humanly foolish.'

II.iv.64. kinsman. Rosalind is here playing on the two meanings of clown—'jester' and 'peasant.'

II.v.47. Ducdame. Many attempts have been made to ascertain the meaning of this word. Hanmer's reading 'duc ad me' is conceivable, as is Dover Wilson's belief that it is derived from a corruption of the Romani 'duḳrâ mē' (I foretell). This latter explanation would enrich the idea that the Duke and his followers are living as gypsies and would explain the reference to Egypt, the supposed home of the gypsies. But there is no satisfactory explanation, and certainly Jaques would think these conjectures merely a further illustration of the folly of the world.

II.v.52. circle. The ancient superstitious belief was that spirits could be conjured up in this fashion.

II.v.53, 54. first born of Egypt. Perhaps Jaques is railing against those of high degree, particularly the two Dukes, or he may be making a comment on the gypsy life in the Forest of Arden (the conjecture advanced by Dover Wilson).

II.vii.6. discord . . . spheres. Ptolemy's astronomical system maintained that the spheres revolving about the earth produced a harmonious melody. The Duke is elaborating on the incongruity of Jaques producing anything melodious.

II.vii.13. motley. Common stage tradition has always regarded this as the checkered costume of the court jester. Leslie Hotson, in Shakespeare's Motley (Oxford, 1952), considers this an anachronistic picture. He advances the theory that Elizabethan stage fools wore a long gown made of motley—a subdued cloth mixture like homespun or tweed.

II.vii.26. hour. This passage is particularly rich in indelicate puns. The basic pattern is established when we realize the identity in Elizabethan pronunciation between 'hour' and 'whore,' leading to Touchstone's play on the word tale in 1.28.

II.vii.26. ripe. The first meaning here is 'grow ripe,' but the additional meaning of 'search' fits well with the puns established in the preceding note.

II.vii.30. Chanticleer. The cock, seen also in Reynard the Fox and Chaucer's Nun's Priest's Tale.

II.vii.45. suit. A play on the two meanings of the word, 'request' and 'clothing' (which continues with weed in 1.46).

II.vii.74. weary very means. The phrase is obviously corrupt and there is very little satisfactory explanation. Wright's emendation of weary to wearer's furthers the idea of the extravagant amount spent on clothes. Dover Wilson would emend means to mints, thus enlarging the idea of national bankruptcy. Perhaps a more reasonable solution lies in the fact that 'means' and 'mains' were pronounced in the same fashion, 'main' being the high sea. In general, the sense is that pride (extravagance in dress) flows in huge quantity like the sea, until finally the very source becomes dried up.

II.vii.102. reason. The identity in Elizabethan pronunciation between 'reason' and 'raisin' explains the pun here. The banquet consisted of sweetmeats and fruit such as grapes (raisins).

II.vii.162. pantaloon. The stock figure of a foolish old man in the Italian commedia dell'arte.

III.i.6. candle. The reference here is to Luke 15:8.

III.ii.2. Queen of Night. The Queen is 'thrice crowned' in her capacity as Proserpina, Luna, and Diana.

III.ii.4. huntress' name. Rosalind, as a young maiden, owed homage to Diana, goddess of the hunt.

III.ii.38. manners. The word is used here in the two senses of 'etiquette' and 'morality.'

III.ii.55. tarr'd. Tar was regularly used by shepherds to salve sore spots on their animals.

III.ii.73. cuckoldly. The cuckold, or betrayed husband, was traditionally described as wearing horns.

III.ii.78. Ind. The Folio spelling of the rhyme words in this passage indicates the forced rhyme of the poem—Inde: Rosalinde: winde:Rosalinde: Linde:Rosalinde: mind:Rosalinde, etc.

III.ii.88. butter-women's rank. In other words, the verses jog along like a crowd of women riding to market to sell their butter.

III.ii.98. to cart. On their way to jail loose women were driven through the streets in a cart. Touchstone is also using the word in the sense of putting the harvest in a wagon.

III.ii.108. medlar. A small brown-skinned apple, eaten only when decayed. There is a pun, of course, on 'meddler.'

III.ii.144. Jupiter. Most editors follow Spedding's emendation of Jupiter to pulpiter to conform to the idea of preaching in the rest of the sentence. However, as merely representing a mild oath, the Folio reading is equally acceptable.

III.ii.163. Pythagoras' time. The reference here is to Pythagoras' doctrine of the transmigration of souls.

III.ii.164. Irish rat. This refers to the old belief that Irish magicians could kill animals with rhymed spells.

III.ii.179. Good my complexion. Rosalind appeals to her woman's nature not to cause her to blush.

III.ii.181, 182. South Sea of discovery. In other words, Rosalind is saying that further delay will seem as long as a voyage of discovery to the South Seas.

III.ii.207. Gargantua's mouth. Originally this was the name of a giant in French folklore, a legend later used by Rabelais whose giant Gargantua swallows five pilgrims in a salad.

III.ii.218. Jove's tree. The oak was sacred to Jove (Jupiter).

III.ii.252. goldsmiths' wives . . . rings. Jaques is saying that Orlando is so revoltingly poetical that he must have learned the mottoes on rings sold by goldsmiths' wives. These rings were love tokens and had romantic sentiments engraved on the inside.

III.ii.254. painted cloth. Cheap cloth was often painted with scenes and mottoes in imitation of tapestry. Orlando is saying that Jaques has learned just as many platitudes from this source.

III.ii.256, 257. Atalanta's heels. Atalanta, renowned for her swiftness, forced suitors to compete with her in a foot race.

III.ii.362. dark house. The whip and the dark room represented the extent of Elizabethan treatment of the insane. For example, compare with the treatment of Malvolio in Twelfth Night.

III.ii.380. liver. In ancient medicine the liver was believed to be the seat of love.

III.iii.3. feature. It is obvious from Audrey's answer that she has not understood Touchstone's remark. The words 'fetter,' 'faitour' (a cheat), and 'feature' were pronounced in an identical fashion in Elizabethan English, and it is difficult to know exactly what word Audrey had in mind.

III.iii.6. capricious. This word is derived from the Latin caper meaning a 'he-goat,' thus strengthening Touchstone's pun.

III.iii.6. Goths. The identical pronunciation of 'goats' and 'Goths' (where the th is sounded t) in Elizabethan English explains this pun.

III.iii.11, 12. reckoning . . . room. That is, an excessive bill for poor accommodations. Many editors have seen in this line a reference to Marlowe's death on May 30, 1593, in a quarrel over a tavern bill, finding in addition an echo of his line in the Jew of Malta: 'infinite riches in a little room' (I.1.37). But Marlowe's death occurred six years before the date of As You Like It, and it seems doubtful that Shakespeare is making a conscious reference here, though Dover Wilson has advanced the hypothesis that a first draft of the play was composed in 1593 (see Text and Date).

III.iii.33. Sir. This was the title of a bachelor of a university (Dominus). But the title was used loosely and was the usual form of address for a priest.

III.iii.38. heart. The pun on 'hart' is strengthened by 'stag' (stagger) and horn-beasts in the next line.

III.iii.40. horn-beasts. Here again is the common Elizabethan symbol for the cuckold or deceived husband.

III.iii.58. Master What-ye-call't. In Elizabethan English Jaques' name normally sounded the same as 'jakes' meaning 'privy.' Touchstone's humorous fastidiousness is revealed when he refuses to pronounce the word.

III.iii.79. O sweet Oliver. Though this is printed as prose in the Folio, Touchstone is singing bits of an old ballad, licensed in 1584.

III.iv.6. dissembling color. Judas, the betrayer of Christ, is protrayed as having red hair, the traditional sign of the untrustworthy.

III.iv.37. traverse athwart. In other words, like an unskillful jouster who breaks his lance by hitting his opponent's shield on an angle.

III.iv.48. pale complexion. The sighs of the true lover were supposed to draw blood from the heart and cause paleness.

III.v.41. candle . . . bed. Rosalind is saying that Phebe lacks Beauty's blaze—that is, her beauty is not bright enough to light her to bed without a candle.

III.v.52. south. In England a south wind brings fog and rain.

III.v.64. Foul . . . scoffer. Foul is used here with two meanings: 'ugly' and 'evil.' In other words, Rosalind is saying that Phebe is doubly foul, being both ugly and a scoffer.

III.v.82. Dead shepherd. Another reference to Marlowe. The maxim is from his Hero and Leander (i.176) published in 1598. But there is little reason to assume that this reference changes the date of the play (see Text and Date).

III.v.92. neighborly. Phebe is making a distinction between love and friendship.

III.v.111. Carlot. Used here as a proper name, as the italics in the Folio clearly indicate. As a noun the word means 'peasant' or 'churl.'

III.v.136. omittance . . . quittance. A proverb meaning 'to refrain from paying is not to discharge a debt.'

IV.i.52. horns. A further reference to the cuckold.

IV.i.74. suit. Rosalind continues her play on words with apparel in the next line.

IV.i.84. Troilus. This famous lover of Cressida was killed, not ingloriously by a club, but by the spear of Achilles.

IV.i.86. Leander. Hero and Leander were the classical prototypes of great lovers. Each night Leander swam the Hellespont to visit Hero in Sestos. For her purpose Rosalind chooses to regard them in mock heroic terms.

IV.i.133. Diana. The figure of Diana was common in garden statuary. There is no reason to suppose that any particular statue is being referred to here.

IV.i.145. 'Wit . . . wilt?' A proverbial phrase indicating that the person's intelligence is deserting him. It is also roughly equivalent to 'Hold your tongue.'

IV.i.152. occasion. In other words, a woman must be able to use her fault to advantage and turn the blame on her husband.

IV.i.178. bird . . . nest. Compare to the proverb: 'It is a foul bird defiles its own nest.'

IV.i.185. bastard of Venus. According to myth Cupid was the child of Venus, goddess of love, and Mars, god of War.

IV.ii.12, 13. The rest . . . burthen. Most editors have assumed that 'The rest shall bear this burthen' was a stage direction referring to the refrain following, even though the phrase is printed in the First Folio in italics as part of the song. Dover Wilson was the first to point out that the Folio reading could be justified.

IV.iii.17. Phoenix. A miraculous bird fabled to live in Arabia. It was supposed to live for five hundred years and then be reborn from its own ashes.

IV.iii.34. Turk. In other words, Phebe is being as barbarous as the infidel Turks in their attacks upon Christians. This refers to the time of the Crusades.

V.ii.28. thrasonical. Thraso, the braggart soldier in Terence's Eunuchus, was the prototype of the boaster.

V.ii.60. human. In other words, Rosalind will actually appear and will not be a phantom summoned by incantation.

V.ii.88. obedience. In the Folio observance is repeated here, and it is logical to assume that this was a printer's error and follow Malone's emendation.

V.ii.98, 99. Who . . . you. The Folio reading 'Why do you speak too, Why blame you me to love you' is understandable but makes Orlando's answer somewhat awkward, so Rowe's emendation is followed here.

V.iii.16. Song. The fourth stanza appears as the second in the Folio, but the text of the Edinburgh MS seems more logical.

V.iii.24. carol. This word is not used in the specialized modern sense but refers to any song at a festival. It originally meant a 'ring dance.'

V.iv.4. As . . . fear. This is a difficult line to interpret. The meaning may be: 'like those who are afraid they are really only dreaming and at the same time are fully aware of the logic of their fear.'

V.iv.45. three tailors. Touchstone means that his extravagance in dress and failure to pay his bills had ruined three merchants.

V.iv.61. fool's bolt. A bolt is literally a blunt arrow. The old proverb runs: 'A fool's bolt is soon spent.'

V.iv.61. dulcet diseases. 'Pleasant ailments.' In other words, to listen to a fool is an enjoyable experience.

V.iv.83. book. Touchstone is satirizing the many books on swordsmanship and good manners popular in Elizabethan England. There is, for example, Castiglione's Il Cortegiano, translated in 1561.

V.iv.97. stalking horse. A real or artificial horse under cover of which a hunter approached his game.

V.iv.134. Juno's. Juno was the queen of the gods and the symbol of married virtue.

Epilogue. 3. wine . . . bush. This is an ancient proverb derived from the fact that an ivy bush was the sign of a vintner's shop. Rosalind means that good wine needs no advertisement.

Epilogue. 13. woman. On the Elizabethan stage women's parts were of course taken by young boys.

Much Ado About Nothing

Edited by
TUCKER BROOKE

Dramatis Personae

DON PEDRO, Prince of Arragon
LEONATO, Governor of Messina
DON JOHN, Bastard Brother to Don Pedro
CLAUDIO, a young Lord of Florence, Favourite to Don Pedro
BENEDICK, a young Lord of Padua, favour'd likewise by Don Pedro
ANTONIO, Brother to Leonato
BALTHASAR, Servant to Don Pedro
BORACHIO, Confidant to Don John
CONRADE, Friend to Borachio
DOGBERRY, a Constable } two foolish Officers
VERGES, a Headborough }

FRIAR FRANCIS
(INNOGEN, Wife to Leonato)
HERO, Daughter to Leonato and Innogen
BEATRICE, Niece to Leonato
MARGARET, } two Gentlewomen
URSULA } attending on Hero

A SEXTON, A BOY IN ATTENDANCE ON BENEDICK, MESSENGERS, MEMBERS OF THE NIGHT WATCH, AND OTHER ATTENDANTS

SCENE—Messina in Sicily.

Much Ado About Nothing

Introduction

Sources of The Play

Much Ado about Nothing is a good example of the sort of originality which usually marks Shakespeare's plots. No source other than the poet's own invention has been discovered for those parts of the play which give it its particular charm and interest—the story of Benedick and Beatrice and the delectable folly of Dogberry. The famous scenes constructed about these figures seem to be based solely upon Shakespeare's knowledge of contemporary English character, as he had studied it in cultivated and in plebeian circles respectively. The author turned to books for his material only in the case of the story of Hero and Claudio.

The tale of two lovers, estranged by an envious villain by means of a sham interview between the lady and another man, has been found in the literature of many countries. It is likely that Shakespeare knew it in the form developed by the Italian story-writer, Matteo Bandello (1480-1561), the twentieth tale of whose collection (published at Lucca in 1554) 'telleth how Signor Timbreo di Cardona (Shakespeare's Claudio) being with King Piero of Arragon (Shakespeare's Don Pedro) in Messina, became enamoured of Fenicia Lionata (Shakespeare's Hero, daughter of Leonato), and of the various and unlooked-for chances which befell before he took her to wife.'

In this story we have the same scene of action as in Shakespeare and the same general progress of events, though there are important differences of detail. The names, except Don Pedro and Leonato, are quite unlike. The deception of the lover in Bandello is achieved simply by showing him a man entering a window of Leonato's house; there is no parallel to the disguising of Margaret to stimulate her mistress. Again, in Bandello, the denunciation of the heroine is performed less dramatically and also less heartlessly than in Shakespeare, by means of a messenger sent by the deceived lover to her father's house; and the villain himself exposes his plot from subsequent scruples of conscience. Thus Bandello's representatives of both Claudio and Don John are shown in a less odious light than their Shakespearean counterparts. Bandello appears to regard them both as rather excellent young men; Shakespeare, with distinctly different ideals of conduct, is at pains to emphasize his disapproval.

It would hardly be doubted that Shakespeare had read Bandello, if we were certain that he could read Italian. Probably he could, since Italian was the most commonly studied of all the modern tongues in his age and was perhaps more generally understood by educated men than any foreign language is in England to-day. No English translation of Bandello's tale is known to have existed in Shakespeare's lifetime, but a free French version, by François de Belle-Forest, was published in 1582. This may possibly have furnished the poet with the story, but the likelihood that it did so is lessened by the fact that Shakespeare shows no acquaintance with any of Belle-Forest's rather numerous deviations from his original. Another possibility is that Shakespeare knew Bandello's story at second hand, as it had been worked up into some earlier English play. Evidence for such a drama has been found in a record of the Revels Accounts for December 18, 1574, which shows that the Earl of Leicester's players acted a piece called 'theier matter of Panecia' (i.e. Phenicia or Fenicia, Bandello's heroine?), when Shakespeare was ten years old.

For one of Shakespeare's divergences from Bandello noted above—the introduction of Margaret in Hero's clothes—a source exists in Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, Book V (published, 1516), where a story somewhat similar to Bandello's is related. In all other details Ariosto's version is far less like Much Ado than Bandello's, but the former clearly foreshadows the part of Margaret in his Dalinda, whom he makes the narrator of the tale. In the fourth canto of the second book of the Fairy Queen (published 1590), Spenser introduces an adaptation of Ariosto's story, again changing the names and putting the narrative into the mouth of the figure corresponding to Claudio. Thus the latter portrays his sentiments while the deception is being practiced upon him:

Eftsoones he came vnto th' appointed place,
And with him brought Pryene [Margaret], rich arayd,
In Claribellaes [Hero's] clothes. Her proper face
I not descerned in that darkesome shade,
But weēnd it was my loue, with whom he playd.
Ah God, what horrour and tormenting griefe
My hart, my hands, mine eyes, and all assayd?
Me liefer were ten thousand deathes priefe [experience]
Then wound of gealous worme, and shame of such repriefe.

The figures of Dogberry and his companions and their whole connection with the plot were original with Shakespeare, as has been said. How truly the poet depicted the actual constabulary of his time is proved by a genuine letter written August 10, 1586, by Lord Burghley, Queen Elizabeth's chief minister of state, to Sir Francis Walsingham:

'Sir—As I cam from London homward, in my coche, I sawe at euery townes end the nombre of x. or xij. standyng, with long staues, and vntill I cam to Enfield I thought no other of them, but that they had stayd for auoyding of the rayne, or to drynk at some alehouses, for so they did stand vnder pentyces [penthouses] at alehouses. But at Enfeld fynding a dosen in a plump [group], whan ther was no rayne, I bethought myself that they war apoynted as watchmen, for the apprehendyng of such as ar missyng [i.e. certain escaped traitors]; and thereuppon I called some of them to me apart, and asked them wherfor they stood ther? and on of them answered,—To tak 3 yong men. And demandyng how they shuld know the persons, on answered with these words:—Mary, my Lord, by intelligence of ther fauor. What meane you by that? quoth I. Marry, sayd they, on of the partyes hath a hooked nose.—And haue you, quoth I, no other mark?—No, sayth they. And then I asked who apoynted them; and they answered on Bankes, a Head Constable, whom I willed to be sent to me.—Suerly, sir, who so euer had the chardg from yow hath vsed the matter negligently, for these watchmen stand so oppenly in plumps, as no suspected person will come neare them; and if they be no better instructed but to fynd 3 persons by on of them hauyng a hooked nose, they may miss therof. And thus I thought good to aduertise yow, that the Justyces that had the chardg, as I thynk, may vse the matter more circumspectly.'

The History of the Play

The definite history of Much Ado about Nothing goes back to the first year of the seventeenth century. On August 23, 1600, this play was licensed for publication, along with the second part of Henry IV, and it appeared in the same year in the only early quarto edition. This version was evidently followed by the publishers of the collected edition of Shakespeare's plays in the 1623 Folio, and the two texts exhibit only trivial differences. It is generally assumed that the comedy was written in 1599, and there is no reason for inferring an earlier date, except the bare possibility that Much Ado about Nothing is identical with a mysterious Love's Labor's Won, listed by Francis Meres as one of Shakespeare's comedies in 1598.

The title-page of the edition of 1600 records that the play 'hath been sundrie times publikely acted by the right honorable, the Lord Chamberlaine his seruants,' i.e. by Shakespeare's company, then acting at the newly built Globe Theatre. A memorandum in the Stationers' Register, dated August 4 (1600), less than three weeks before the official license for publication, notes that Much Ado about Nothing and three other plays performed by Shakespeare's company were 'to be staied,' i.e. withheld from publication. The purpose of this unsuccessful effort to prevent the printing of the comedy was doubtless the actors' fear that circulation of the printed text might detract from the success of their performances. The substitution in the early editions of the names of Jack Wilson, Kempe and Cowley instead of Balthazar, Dogberry and Verges (cf. notes on II. iii. S. d. and IV. ii.) gives welcome information regarding the creators of those parts.

Much Ado about Nothing was acted at Court, probably twice, on the occasion of the marriage of James I's daughter, the Princess Elizabeth, to Frederic, Elector Palatine, in 1613. More specific evidence of the play's popularity with Stuart audiences occurs in a poem by Leonard Digges, affixed to the 1640 edition of Shakespeare's Poems:

> Let but Beatrice
> And Benedicke be seene, loe, in a trice
> The Cockpit, Galleries, Boxes, all are full.

After the Restoration, Sir William Davenant (1606-1668) was responsible for an ill-advised effort to make capital out of Benedick and Beatrice by introducing them into the plot of Shakespeare's Measure for Measure, in a medley called The Law against Lovers (published, 1673). A further monstrosity appeared in 1736 in The Universal Passion, an attempt by one James Miller to combine Much Ado with Molière's Princess of Elis. In 1721, the genuine play was restored to the London stage, where it has since been an established favorite. David Garrick (1717-1779) was famous in the rôle of Benedick, as a great many of the chief English and American actors have been since. In general, however, the impersonators of Beatrice have found the greatest opportunity, and distinguished actresses like Helena Faucit (Lady Martin, 1817-1898), Ellen Terry (1848-1928), and Ada Rehan (1860-1916) have owed much of their success to their interpretations of this part.

Act First ❧ Scene First

[Before Antonio's Orchard]

Enter Leonato, Governor of Messina; Innogen, his wife; Hero, his daughter; and Beatrice, his niece; with a Messenger.

Leon. I learn in this letter that Don Pedro of Arragon comes this night to Messina.

Mess. He is very near by this: he was not three leagues off when I left him.

Leon. How many gentleman have you lost in this action?

Mess. But few of any sort, and none of name.

Leon. A victory is twice itself when the achiever brings home full numbers. I find here that Don Pedro hath bestowed much honour on a young Florentine called Claudio.

Mess. Much deserved on his part and equally remembered by Don Pedro. He hath borne himself beyond the promise of his age, doing in the figure of a lamb the feats of a lion: he hath indeed better bettered expectation than you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leon. He hath an uncle here in Messina will be very much glad of it.

Mess. I have already delivered him letters, and there appears much joy in him; even so much that joy could not show itself modest enough without a badge of bitterness.

Leon. Did he break out into tears?

Mess. In great measure.

Leon. A kind overflow of kindness. There are no faces truer than those that are so washed: how much better is it to weep at joy than to joy at weeping!

Beat. I pray you is Signior Mountanto returned from the wars or no?

Mess. I know none of that name, lady: there was none such in the army of any sort.

Leon. What is he that you ask for, niece?

Hero. My cousin means Signior Benedick of Padua.

Mess. O! he is returned, and as pleasant as ever he was.

Beat. He set up his bills here in Messina and challenged Cupid at the flight; and my uncle's fool, reading the challenge, subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the bird-bolt. I pray you, how many hath he killed and eaten in these wars? But how many hath he killed? for, indeed, I promised to eat all of his killing.

Leon. Faith, niece, you tax Signior Benedick too much; but he'll be meet with you, I doubt it not.

Mess. He hath done good service, lady, in these wars.

Beat. You had musty victual, and he hath holp to eat it: he is a very valiant trencher-man; he hath an excellent stomach.

Mess. And a gold soldier too, lady.

Beat. And a good soldier to a lady; but what is he to a lord?

Mess. A lord to a lord, a man to a man, stuffed with all honourable virtues.

Beat. It is so, indeed; he is no less than a stuffed man; but for the stuffing,—well, we are all mortal.

Leon. You must not, sir, mistake my niece. There is a kind of merry war betwixt Signior Benedick and her: they never meet but there's a skirmish of wit between them.

Beat. Alas! he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict four of his five wits went halting off,and now is the whole man governed with one! so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse; for it is all the wealth that he hath left to be known a reasonable creature. Who is his companion now? He hath every month a new sworn brother.

Mess. Is't possible?

Beat. Very easily possible: he wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat; it ever changes with the next block.

Mess. I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.

Beat. No; an he were, I would burn my study. But, I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer now that will make a voyage with him to the devil?

Mess. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beat. O Lord! he will hang upon him like a disease: he is sooner caught than the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio! if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound ere a' be cured.

Mess. I will hold friends with you, lady.

Beat. Do, good friend.

Leon. You will never run mad, niece.

Beat. No, not till a hot January.

Mess. Don Pedro is approached.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, Balthazar, and John the Bastard.

D. Pedro. Good Signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your Grace, for trouble being gone, comfort should remain; but when you depart from me, sorrow abides and happiness takes his leave.

D. Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly. I think this is your daughter.

Leon. Her mother hath many times told me so.

Bene. Were you in doubt, sir, that you asked her?

Leon. Signior Benedick, no; for then you were a child.

D. Pedro. You have it full, Benedick: we may guess by this what you are, being a man. Truly, the lady fathers herself. Be happy, lady, for you are like an honourable father.

Bene. If Signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is.

Beat. I wonder that you will still be talking, Signior Benedick: nobody marks you.

Bene. What! my dear Lady Disdain, are you yet living?

Beat. Is it possible Disdain should die while she hath such meet food to feed it as Signior Benedick? Courtesy itself must convert to disdain, if you come in her presence.

6 sort: rank; cf. n. name: reputation 19 badge: distinguishing mark 22 kind: natural 25 Mountanto; cf. n. 31 pleasant: given to joking 32 bills: advertisment 33 at the flight: at long-distance archery 34 subscribed: signed bird-bolt: blunt arrow for shooting birds; cf. n. 38 tax: blame 39 meet with: even with 42 trencher-man: glutton 48, 49 stuffed . . . stuffing; cf. n.

54 five wits; cf. n. went halting off: retired limping 56 difference; cf. n. 57, 58 to be known, etc.; cf. n. 61 faith: fidelity 62 next block: newest fashion (hat-mould) 63 books: 'good books' 65 squarer: quarreller 71 presently: immediately 72 the Benedick; cf. n. a': he 82 encounter: go towards 87 embrace your charge: accept your burden 92 full: full in the face 93 fathers herself: shows who is her father 98 still: always 102 meet: proper 103 convert: change

Bene. Then is courtesy a turncoat. But it is certain I am loved of all ladies, only you excepted; and I would I could find in my heart that I had not a hard heart; for, truly, I love none.

Beat. A dear happiness to women: they would else have been troubled with a pernicious suitor. I thank God and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that: I had rather hear my dog bark at a crow than a man swear he loves me.

Bene. God keep your ladyship still in that mind; so some gentleman or other shall 'scape a predestinate scratched face.

Beat. Scratching could not make it worse, an 'twere such a face as yours were.

Bene. Well, you are a rare parrot-teacher.

Beat. A bird of my tongue is better than a beast of yours.

Bene. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so good a continuer. But keep your way, i' God's name; I have done.

Beat. You always end with a jade's trick: I know you of old.

D. Pedro. This is the sum of all, Leonato.—Signior Claudio, and Signior Benedick, my dear friend Leonato hath invited you all. I tell him we shall stay here at the least a month, and he heartily prays some occasion may detain us longer: I dare swear he is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

Leon. If you swear, my lord, you shall not be forsworn. [To Don John.] Let me bid you welcome, my lord: being reconciled to the prince your brother, I owe you all duty.

D. John. I thank you: I am not of many words, but I thank you.

Leon. Please it your Grace lead on?

D. Pedro. Your hand, Leonato; we will go together.

Exeunt all but Benedick and Claudio.

Claud. Benedick, didst thou note the daughter of Signior Leonato?

Bene. I noted her not; but I looked on her.

Claud. Is she not a modest young lady?

Bene. Do you question me, as an honest man should do, for my simple true judgment; or would you have me speak after my custom, as being a professed tyrant to their sex?

Claud. No; I pray thee speak in sober judgment.

Bene. Why, i' faith, methinks she's too low for a high praise, too brown for a fair praise, and too little for a great praise: only this commendation I can afford her, that were she other than she is, she were unhandsome, and being no other but as she is, I do not like her.

Claud. Thou thinkest I am in sport: I pray thee tell me truly how thou likest her.

Bene. Would you buy her, that you inquire after her?

Claud. Can the world buy such a jewel?

Bene. Yea, and a case to put it into. But speak you this with a sad brow, or do you play the flouting Jack, to tell us Cupid is a good hare-finder, and Vulcan a rare carpenter? Come, in what key shall a man take you, to go in the song?

Claud. In mine eye she is the sweetest lady that ever I looked on.

Bene. I can see yet without spectacles and I see no such matter: there's her cousin an she were not possessed with a fury, exceeds her as much in beauty as the first of May doth the last of December. But I hope you have no intent to turn husband, have you?

Claud. I would scarce trust myself, though I had sworn to the contrary, if Hero would be my wife.

Bene. Is't come to this, i' faith? Hath not the world one man but he will wear his cap with suspicion? Shall I never see a bachelor of three-score again? Go to, i' faith; an thou wilt needs thrust thy neck into a yoke, wear the print of it, and sigh away Sundays. Look! Don Pedro is returned to seek you.

Enter Don Pedro.

D. Pedro. What secret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonato's?

Bene. I would your Grace would constrain me to tell.

D. Pedro. I charge thee on thy allegiance.

Bene. You hear, Count Claudio: I can be secret as a dumb man; I would have you think so; but on my allegiance, mark you this, on my allegiance: he is in love. With who? now that is your Grace's part. Mark how short his answer is: with Hero, Leonato's short daughter.

Claud. If this were so, so were it uttered.

Bene. Like the old tale, my lord: 'it is not so, nor 'twas not so; but, indeed, God forbid it should be so.'

Claud. If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

D. Pedro. Amen, if you love her, for the lady is very well worthy.

Claud. You speak this to fetch me in, my lord.

D. Pedro. By my troth, I speak my thought.

Claud. And in faith, my lord, I spoke mine.

Bene. And by my two faiths and troths, my lord, I spoke mine.

Claud. That I love her, I feel.

D. Pedro. That she is worthy, I know.

Bene. That I neither feel how she should be loved nor know how she should be worthy, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me: I will die in it at the stake.

D. Pedro. Thou wast ever an obstinate heretic in the despite of beauty.

Claud. And never could maintain his part but in the force of his will.

Bene. That a woman conceived me, I thank her; that she brought me up, I likewise give her most humble thanks: but that I will have a recheat winded in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an invisible baldrick, all women shall pardon me. Because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will do myself the right to trust none; and the fine is,—for the which I may go the finer,—I will live a bachelor.

D. Pedro. I shall see thee, ere I die, look pale with love.

Bene. With anger, with sickness, or with hunger, my lord; not with love: prove that ever I lose more blood with love than I will get again with drinking, pick out mine eyes with a ballad-maker's pen, and hang me up at the door of a brothel-house for the sign of blind Cupid.

108 dear happiness: rare luck 110 humour: disposition 113 predestinate; cf. n. 115 an: if; cf. n. 118 bird, etc.; cf. n. 120 so good a continuer: equal staying powers 122 jade's trick; cf. n. 130 being: since you are 138 noted; cf. n. 142 tyrant: fault-finder 154 sad: serious flouting Jack: mocking fellow 155 Cupid, etc.; cf. n. 156 go in: join in

167 wear his cap, etc.; cf. n. 168 Go to: come! 170 sigh away Sundays; cf. n. 181 the old tale; cf. n. 187 fetch . . . in: entrap 197 despite: contempt 203 recheat, etc.; cf. n. 206 fine: end 207 go the finer: wear finer clothes 210 prove: if you discover 213 sign . . . Cupid; cf. n.

D. Pedro. Well, if ever thou dost fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat and shoot at me; and he that hits me, let him be clapped on the shoulder, and called Adam.

D. Pedro. Well, as time shall try:
'In time the savage bull doth bear the yoke.'

Bene. The savage bull may; but if ever the sensible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bull's horns and set them in my forehead; and let me be vilely painted, and in such great letters as they write, 'Here is good horse to hire,' let them signify under my sign 'Here you may see Benedick the married man.'

Claud. If this should ever happen, thou wouldst be horn-mad.

D. Pedro. Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his quiver in Venice, thou wilt quake for this shortly.

Bene. I look for an earthquake too then.

D. Pedro. Well, you will temporize with the hours. In the meantime, good Signior Benedick, repair to Leonato's: commend me to him and tell him I will not fail him at supper; for indeed he hath made great preparation.

Bene. I have almost matter enough in me for such an embassage; and so I commit you—

Claud. To the tuition of God: from my house, if I had it,—

D. Pedro. The sixth of July: your loving friend, Benedick.

Bene. Nay, mock not, mock not. The body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but slightly basted on neither: ere you flout old ends any further, examine your conscience: and so I leave you. Exit.

Claud. My liege, your highness now may do me good.

D. Pedro. My love is thine to teach: teach it but how,
And thou shalt see how apt it is to learn
Any hard lesson that may do thee good.

Claud. Hath Leonato any son, my lord?

D. Pedro. No child but Hero; she's his only heir.
Dost thou affect her, Claudio?

Claud. O! my lord,
When you went onward on this ended action,
I looked upon her with a soldier's eye,
That lik'd, but had a rougher task in hand
Than to drive liking to the name of love;
But now I am return'd, and that war-thoughts
Have left their places vacant, in their rooms
Come thronging soft and delicate desires,
All prompting me how fair young Hero is,
Saying, I lik'd her ere I went to wars.

D. Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover presently,
And tire the hearer with a book of words.
If thou dost love fair Hero, cherish it,
And I will break with her, and with her father,
And thou shalt have her. Was't not to this end
That thou began'st to twist so fine a story?

Claud. How sweetly do you minister to love,
That know love's grief by his complexion!
But lest my liking might too sudden seem,
I would have salv'd it with a longer treatise.

D. Pedro. What need the bridge much broader than the flood?
The fairest grant is the necessity.
Look, what will serve is fit: 'tis once, thou lov'st,
And I will fit thee with the remedy.
I know we shall have revelling to-night:
I will assume thy part in some disguise,
And tell fair Hero I am Claudio;
And in her bosom I'll unclasp my heart,
And take her hearing prisoner with the force
And strong encounter of my amorous tale:
Then, after to her father will I break;
And the conclusion is, she shall be thine.
In practice let us put it presently. Exeunt.

215 argument: theme for talk 216 bottle; cf. n. 218 Adam; cf. n. 219 try: prove 220 Cf. n. 227 horn-mad: mad as a horned beast 229 Venice; cf. n. 231 temporize; cf. n. 237 tuition: protection; cf. n. 242 guarded: trimmed; cf. n. guards: trimmings 251 affect: love 265 break: open negotiations 267 twist: spin 269 complexion: outward appearance

Scene Second

[Leonato's House]

Enter Leonato and [Antonio,] an old man, brother to Leonato.

Leon. How now, brother! Where is my cousin, your son? Hath he provided this music?

Ant. He is very busy about it. But, brother, I can tell you strange news that you yet dreamt not of.

Leon. Are they good?

Ant. As the event stamps them: but they have a good cover; they show well outward. The prince and Count Claudio, walking in a thick-pleached alley in my orchard, were thus much overheard by a man of mine: the prince discovered to Claudio that he loved my niece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance; and, if he found her accordant, he meant to take the present time by the top and instantly break with you of it.

Leon. Hath the fellow any wit that told you this?

Ant. A good sharp fellow: I will send for him; and question him yourself.

Leon. No, no; we will hold it as a dream till it appear itself: but I will acquaint my daughter withal, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradventure this be true. Go you, and tell her of it. [Several persons cross the stage.] Cousins, you know what you have to do. O! I cry you mercy, friend; go you with me, and I will use your skill. Good cousin, have a care this busy time. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[The Same]

Enter Sir John the Bastard and Conrade, his companion.

Con. What the good-year, my lord! why are you thus out of measure sad?

D. John. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds; therefore the sadness is without limit.

271 salv'd: softened 274 Cf. n. 275 'tis once: once for all 1 cousin: nephew; cf. n. 6 event: outcome 8 thick-pleached: hedged with intertwining branches 9 discovered: revealed 12 accordant: consenting top: forelock 17 appear: make evident 18 withal: therewith 21 cry you mercy: beg pardon 1 good-year: an unexplained expletive 1, 2 out of measure: immeasurably

Con. You should hear reason.

D. John. And when I have heard it, what blessing brings it?

Con. If not a present remedy, at least a patient sufferance.

D. John. I wonder that thou, being,—as thou say'st thou art,—born under Saturn, goest about to apply a moral medicine to a mortifying mischief. I cannot hide what I am: I must be sad when I have cause, and smile at no man's jests; eat when I have stomach, and wait for no man's leisure; sleep when I am drowsy, and tend on no man's business; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.

Con. Yea; but you must not make the full show of this till you may do it without controlment. You have of late stood out against your brother, and he hath ta'en you newly into his grace; when it is impossible you should take true root but by the fair weather that you make yourself: it is needful that you frame the season for your own harvest.

D. John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge than a rose in his grace; and it better fits my blood to be disdained of all than to fashion a carriage to rob love from any: in this, though I cannot be said to be a flattering honest man, it must not be denied but I am a plain-dealing villain. I am trusted with a muzzle and enfranchised with a clog; therefore I have decreed not to sing in my cage. If I had my mouth, I would bite; if I had my liberty, I would do my liking: in the meantime, let me be that I am, and seek not to alter me.

Con. Can you make no use of your discontent?

D. John. I make all use of it, for I use it only. Who comes here?

Enter Borachio.

What news, Borachio?

Bora. I came yonder from a great supper: the prince, your brother, is royally entertained by Leonato; and I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.

D. John. Will it serve for any model to build mischief on? What is he for a fool that betroths himself to unquietness?

Bora. Marry, it is your brother's right hand.

D. John. Who? the most exquisite Claudio?

Bora. Even he.

D. John. A proper squire! And who, and who? which way looks he?

Bora. Marry, on Hero, the daughter and heir of Leonato.

D. John. A very forward March-chick! How came you to this?

Bora. Being entertained for a perfumer, as I was smoking a musty room, comes me the prince and Claudio, hand in hand, in sad conference: I whipt me behind the arras, and there heard it agreed upon that the prince should woo Hero for himself, and having obtained her, give her to Count Claudio.

D. John. Come, come; let us thither: this may prove food to my displeasure. That young start-up hath all the glory of my overthrow: if I can cross him any way, I bless myself every way. You are both sure, and will assist me?

Bora.
Con. } To the death, my lord.

D. John. Let us to the great supper: their cheer is the greater that I am subdued. Would the cook were of my mind! Shall we go prove what's to be done?

Bora. We'll wait upon your lordship. Exeunt.

9 born under Saturn; cf. n. 10 mortifying mischief: deadly disease 13 tend on: attend to 14 claw: tickle, flatter 20 frame: produce 21 canker: dog-rose 22 blood: temper 23 fashion a carriage: counterfeit a behavior 26 enfranchised: liberated 38 What . . . for: what kind of 42 proper: fine 45 March-chick: prematurely hatched chicken 47 entertained: employed smoking, etc.; cf. n. 53 start-up: upstart 55 sure: trustworthy

Act Second ❧ Scene First

[A Hall in Leonato's House]

Enter Leonato; [Antonio,] his brother; his wife; Hero, his daughter; and Beatrice, his niece; and a kinsman.

Leon. Was not Count John here at supper?

Ant. I saw him not.

Beat. How tartly that gentleman looks! I never can see him but I am heart-burned an hour after.

Hero. He is of a very melancholy disposition.

Beat. He were an excellent man that were made just in the mid-way between him and Benedick: the one is too like an image, and says nothing; and the other too like my lady's eldest son, evermore tattling.

Leon. Then half Signior Benedick's tongue in Count John's mouth, and half Count John's melancholy in Signior Benedick's face,—

Beat. With a good leg and a good foot, uncle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would win any woman in the world, if a' could get her good will.

Leon. By my troth, niece, thou wilt never get thee a husband, if thou be so shrewd of thy tongue.

Ant. In faith, she's too curst.

Beat. Too curst is more than curst: I shall lessen God's sending that way; for it is said, 'God sends a curst cow short horns;' but to a cow too curst he sends none.

Leon. So, by being too curst, God will send you no horns?

Beat. Just, if he send me no husband; for the which blessing I am at him upon my knees every morning and evening. Lord! I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face: I had rather lie in the woollen.

Leon. You may light on a husband that hath no beard.

Beat. What should I do with him? dress him in my apparel and make him my waiting-gentlewoman? He that hath a beard is more than a youth, and he that hath no beard is less than a man; and he that is more than a youth is not for me; and he that is less than a man, I am not for him: therefore I will even take sixpence in earnest of the bear-ward, and lead his apes into hell.

Leon. Well then, go you into hell?

Beat. No; but to the gate; and there will the devil meet me, like an old cuckold, with horns on his head, and say, 'Get you to heaven, Beatrice, get you to heaven; here's no place for you maids:' so deliver I up my apes, and away to Saint Peter for the heavens; he shows me where the bachelors sit, and there live we as merry as the day is long.

Ant. [To Hero.] Well, niece, I trust you will be ruled by your father.

Beat. Yes, faith; it is my cousin's duty to make curtsy, and say, 'Father, as it please you:'—but yet for all that, cousin,

4 heart-burned: dyspeptic 17 shrewd: sharp 20 curst: ill-tempered. 23 Just: just so 26 lie in the woollen: sleep between blankets (without sheets) 33 earnest: advance wages bear-ward: trainer of bears (and often apes) lead . . . hell; cf. n. 37 cuckold: deceived husband 39, 40 for the heavens; cf. n.

let him be a handsome fellow, or else make another curtsy, and say, 'Father, as it please me.'

Leon. Well, niece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beat. Not till God make men of some other metal than earth. Would it not grieve a woman to be over-mastered with a piece of valiant dust? to make an account of her life to a clod of wayward marl? No, uncle, I'll none: Adam's sons are my brethren; and truly, I hold it a sin to match in my kindred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you: if the prince do solicit you in that kind, you know your answer.

Beat. The fault will be in the music, cousin, if you be not wooed in good time: if the prince be too important, tell him there is measure in everything, and so dance out the answer. For, hear me, Hero: wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinque-pace: the first suit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch jig, and full as fantastical; the wedding, mannerly-modest, as a measure, full of state and ancientry; and then comes Repentance, and, with his bad legs, falls into the cinque-pace faster and faster, till he sink into his grave.

Leon. Cousin, you apprehend passing shrewdly.

Beat. I have a good eye, uncle: I can see a church by daylight.

Leon. The revellers are entering, brother: make good room.

Enter Prince Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, Balthazar, Don John, [Borachio, Margaret, Ursula, and other] Maskers with a drum.

D. Pedro. Lady, will you walk about with your friend?

Hero. So you walk softly and look sweetly and say nothing, I am yours for the walk; and especially when I walk away.

D. Pedro. With me in your company?

Hero. I may say so, when I please.

D. Pedro. And when please you to say so?

Hero. When I like your favour; for God defend the lute should be like the case!

D. Pedro. My visor is Philemon's roof; within the house is Jove.

Hero. Why, then, your visor should be thatch'd.

D. Pedro. Speak low, if you speak love. [Takes her aside.]

Balth. Well, I would you did like me.

Marg. So would not I, for your own sake: for I have many ill qualities.

Balth. Which is one?

Marg. I say my prayers aloud.

Balth. I love you the better; the hearers may cry Amen.

Marg. God match me with a good dancer!

Balth. Amen.

Marg. And God keep him out of my sight when the dance is done! Answer, clerk.

Balth. No more words: the clerk is answered.

Urs. I know you well enough: you are Signior Antonio.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. I know you by the waggling of your head.

Ant. To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

50 metal: substance 51 over-mastered with: subject to 53 marl: clay 59 important: importunate 62 measure: a stately dance cinque-pace: lively dance 64 mannerly-: becomingly 65 ancientry: antique style 68 apprehend: understand passing: exceedingly 69 see a church: cf. n. 79 favour: face defend: forbid 81 visor: mask Philemon's roof: cf. n. 86 ill: bad 93 Answer, clerk: cf. n. 96 at a word: to be brief

Urs. You could never do him so ill-well, unless you were the very man. Here's his dry hand up and down: you are he, you are he.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. Come, come; do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit? Can virtue hide itself? Go to, mum, you are he: graces will appear, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Bene. No, you shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you not tell me who you are?

Bene. Not now.

Beat. That I was disdainful, and that I had my good wit out of the 'Hundred Merry Tales.' Well, this was Signior Benedick that said so.

Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure you know him well enough.

Bene. Not I, believe me.

Beat. Did he never make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you, what is he?

Beat. Why, he is the prince's jester: a very dull fool; only his gift is in devising impossible slanders: none but libertines delight in him; and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villainy; for he both pleases men and angers them, and then they laugh at him and beat him. I am sure he is in the fleet: I would he had boarded me!

Bene. When I know the gentleman, I'll tell him what you say.

Beat. Do, do: he'll but break a comparison or two on me; which, peradventure not marked or not laughed at, strikes him into melancholy; and then there's a partridge wing saved, for the fool will eat no supper that night. Music for the dance. We must follow the leaders.

Bene. In every good thing.

Beat. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning. Dance.

Exeunt [all but Don John, Borachio, and Claudio].

D. John. Sure my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it. The ladies follow her and but one visor remains.

Bora. And that is Claudio: I know him by his bearing.

D. John. Are you not Signior Benedick?

Claud. You know me well; I am he.

D. John. Signior, you are very near my brother in his love: he is enamoured on Hero; I pray you, dissuade him from her; she is no equal for his birth: you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Claud. How know you he loves her?

D. John. I heard him swear his affection.

Bora. So did I too; and he swore he would marry her tonight.

D. John. Come, let us to the banquet.

Exeunt Don John and Borachio.

Claud. Thus answer I in name of Benedick,
But hear these ill news with the ears of Claudio.
'Tis certain so; the prince woos for himself.
Friendship is constant in all other things

99 do him so ill-well: represent his imperfection so perfectly 100 up and down: all over 105 an end: no more to be said 111 'Hundred Merry Tales': cf. n. 119 only his gift: his only talent 123 fleet: cf. n. 126 break a comparison: crack a joke 140 near: intimate with 152 certain: certainly

Save in the office and affairs of love:
Therefore all hearts in love use their own tongues;
Let every eye negotiate for itself
And trust no agent; for beauty is a witch
Against whose charms faith melteth into blood.
This is an accident of hourly proof,
Which I mistrusted not. Farewell, therefore, Hero!

Enter Benedick.

Bene. Count Claudio?

Claud. Yea, the same.

Bene. Come, will you go with me?

Claud. Whither?

Bene. Even to the next willow, about your own business, count. What fashion will you wear the garland of? About your neck, like a usurer's chain? or under your arm, like a lieutenant's scarf? You must wear it one way, for the prince hath got your Hero.

Claud. I wish him joy of her.

Bene. Why, that's spoken like an honest drovier: so they sell bullocks. But did you think the prince would have served you thus?

Claud. I pray you, leave me.

Bene. Ho! now you strike like the blind man: 'twas the boy that stole your meat, and you'll beat the post.

Claud. If it will not be, I'll leave you. Exit.

Bene. Alas! poor hurt fowl. Now will he creep into sedges. But, that my lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me! The prince's fool! Ha! it may be I go under that title because I am merry. Yea, but so I am apt to do myself wrong; I am not so reputed: it is the base though bitter disposition of Beatrice that puts the world into her person, and so gives me out. Well, I'll be revenged as I may.

Enter the Prince.

D. Pedro. Now, signior, where's the count? Did you see him?

Bene. Troth, my lord, I have played the part of Lady Fame. I found him here as melancholy as a lodge in a warren. I told him, and I think I told him true, that your Grace had got the good will of this young lady; and I offered him my company to a willow tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to bind him up a rod, as being worthy to be whipped.

D. Pedro. To be whipped! What's his fault?

Bene. The flat transgression of a school-boy, who, being overjoy'd with finding a bird's nest, shows it his companion, and he steals it.

D. Pedro. Wilt thou make a trust a transgression? The transgression is in the stealer.

Bene. Yet it had not been amiss the rod had been made, and the garland too; for the garland he might have worn himself, and the rod he might have bestowed on you, who, as I take it, have stolen his bird's nest.

D. Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

Bene. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith, you say honestly.

D. Pedro. The Lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you: the gentleman that danced with her told her she is much wronged by you.

Bene. O! she misused me past the endurance of a block: an oak but with one green leaf on it, would have answered her: my very visor began to assume life and scold with her. She told me, not thinking I had been myself, that I was the prince's jester; that I was duller than a great thaw; huddling jest upon jest with such impossible conveyance upon me, that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me. She speaks poniards, and every word stabs: if her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no living near her; she would infect to the north star. I would not marry her, though she were endowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgressed: she would have made Hercules have turned spit, yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too. Come, talk not of her; you shall find her the infernal Ate in good apparel. I would to God some scholar would conjure her, for certainly, while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell as in a sanctuary; and people sin upon purpose because they would go thither; so, indeed, all disquiet, horror and perturbation follow her.

Enter Claudio, Beatrice, Hero, and Leonato.

D. Pedro. Look! here she comes.

Bene. Will your Grace command me any service to the world's end. I will go on the slightest errand now to the Antipodes that you can devise to send me on; I will fetch you a toothpicker now from the furthest inch of Asia; bring you the length of Prester John's foot; fetch you a hair off the Great Cham's beard; do you any embassage to the Pigmies, rather than hold three words' conference with this harpy. You have no employment for me?

D. Pedro. None, but to desire your good company.

Bene. O God, sir, here's a dish I love not: I cannot endure my Lady Tongue. Exit.

D. Pedro. Come, lady, come; you have lost the heart of Signior Benedick.

Beat. Indeed, my lord, he lent it me awhile; and I gave him use for it, a double heart for a single one: marry, once before he won it of me with false dice, therefore your Grace may well say I have lost it.

D. Pedro. You have put him down, lady, you have put him down.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, my lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools. I have brought Count Claudio, whom you sent me to seek.

D. Pedro. Why, how now, count! wherefore are you sad?

Claud. Not sad, my lord.

D. Pedro. How then? Sick?

Count. Neither, my lord.

Beat. The count is neither sad, nor sick, nor merry, nor well; but civil count, civil as an orange, and something of that jealous complexion.

155 use; cf. n. 158 Against: in contact with 165 willow; cf. n. 171 drovier: cattle-dealer 175 like the blind man; cf. n. 178 creep into sedges; cf. n. 182 base though bitter; cf. n. 183 puts ... person: identifies the world with herself gives me out: represents me 187 Lady Fame; cf. n. 188 lodge in a warren: solitary gamekeeper's hut 192 bind ... rod: tie several willow switches into a scourge 195 flat: downright 204 them: the birds in the nest

206, 207 Cf. n. 210 misused: abused 214 thaw: unseasonable wet spell in winter huddling: piling 215 impossible conveyance: incredible jugglery 216 man at a mark; cf. n. 218 terminations: epithets 219 infect, etc.; cf. n. 221 Hercules, etc.; cf. n. 223 infernal Ate, etc.; cf. n. 224 some scholar, etc.; cf. n. 234–237 Prester John's foot, etc.; cf. notes 244 use: usury, interest 247 put him down: vanquished him 257 civil ... civil; cf. n.

D. Pedro. I' faith, lady, I think your blazon to be true; though, I'll be sworn, if he be so, his conceit is false. Here, Claudio, I have wooed in thy name, and fair Hero is won; I have broke with her father, and, his good will obtained; name the day of marriage, and God give thee joy!

Leon. Count, take of me my daughter, and with her my fortunes: his Grace hath made the match, and all grace say Amen to it!

Beat. Speak, count, 'tis your cue.

Claud. Silence is the perfectest herald of joy: I were but little happy, if I could say how much. Lady, as you are mine, I am yours: I give away myself for you and dote upon the exchange.

Beat. Speak, cousin; or, if you cannot, stop his mouth with a kiss, and let not him speak neither.

D. Pedro. In faith, lady, you have a merry heart.

Beat. Yea, my lord; I thank it, poor fool, it keeps on the windy side of care. My cousin tells him in his ear that he is in her heart.

Claud. And so she doth, cousin.

Beat. Good Lord, for alliance! Thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am sun-burnt. I may sit in a corner and cry heigh-ho for a husband!

D. Pedro. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

Beat. I would rather have one of your father's getting. Hath your Grace ne'er a brother like you? Your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

D. Pedro. Will you have me, lady?

Beat. No, my lord, unless I might have another for working days: your Grace is too costly to wear every day. But, I beseech your Grace, pardon me; I was born to speak all mirth and no matter.

D. Pedro. Your silence most offends me, and to be merry best becomes you; for, out of question, you were born in a merry hour.

Beat. No, sure, my lord, my mother cried; but then there was a star danced, and under that was I born. Cousins, God give you joy!

Leon. Niece, will you look to those things I told you of?

Beat. I cry you mercy, uncle. By your Grace's pardon.

Exit Beatrice.

D. Pedro. By my troth, a pleasant-spirited lady.

Leon. There's little of the melancholy element in her, my lord: she is never sad but when she sleeps; and not ever sad then, for I have heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamed of unhappiness and waked herself with laughing.

D. Pedro. She cannot endure to hear tell of a husband.

Leon. O! by no means: she mocks all her wooers out of suit.

D. Pedro. She were an excellent wife for Benedick.

Leon. O Lord! my lord, if they were but a week married, they would talk themselves mad.

D. Pedro. Count Claudio, when mean you to go to church?

Claud. To-morrow, my lord. Time goes on crutches till love have all his rites.

Leon. Not till Monday, my dear son, which is hence a just seven-night; and a time too brief too, to have all things answer my mind.

259 blazon: description 260 conceit: conception 265 all grace: i.e. the grace of God 276 windy: windward (or advantageous) tells . . . ear: whispers 279 alliance; cf. n. goes . . . to the world: marries 280 sun-burnt; cf. n. 283 getting: begetting 290 matter: sense 301 ever: always 305 suit: courtship 309 go to church: marry 314 answer my mind: correspond with my intention

D. Pedro. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing; but, I warrant thee, Claudio, the time shall not go dully by us. I will in the interim undertake one of Hercules' labours, which is, to bring Signior Benedick and the Lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection the one with the other. I would fain have it a match; and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction.

Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

Claud. And I, my lord.

D. Pedro. And you too, gentle Hero?

Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

D. Pedro. And Benedick is not the unhopefullest husband that I know. Thus far can I praise him; he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick; and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer: his glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift.

Exeunt

Scene Second

[The Same]

Enter Don John and Borachio.

D. John. It is so; the Count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Bora. Yea, my lord; but I can cross it.

D. John. Any bar, any cross, any impediment will be medicinable to me: I am sick in displeasure to him, and whatsoever comes athwart his affection ranges evenly with mine. How canst thou cross this marriage?

Bora. Not honestly, my lord; but so covertly that no dishonesty shall appear in me.

D. John. Show me briefly how.

Bora. I think I told your lordship, a year since, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting-gentlewoman to Hero.

D. John. I remember.

Bora. I can, at any unseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her lady's chamber-window.

D. John. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Bora. The poison of that lies in you to temper. Go you to the prince your brother; spare not to tell him, that he hath wronged his honour in marrying the renowned Claudio,—whose estimation do you mightily hold up,—to a contaminated stale, such a one as Hero.

D. John. What proof shall I make of that?

Bora. Proof enough to misuse the prince, to vex Claudio, to undo Hero, and kill Leonato. Look you for any other issue?

315 breathing: delay 321 minister: offer 323 am for you: accept your proposal 331 strain: lineage approved: tested honesty: honor 334, 335 queasy stomach: squeamish taste 338 drift: purpose 1 shall: is to 5 displeasure: dislike 6 affection: liking ranges evenly: runs parallel 19 lies in: depends upon temper: mix 22 estimation: worth 23 stale: wanton 25 misuse: delude

D. John. Only to despite them, I will endeavour any thing.

Bora. Go, then; find me a meet hour to draw Don Pedro and the Count Claudio alone: tell them that you know that Hero loves me; intend a kind of zeal both to the prince and Claudio, as—in love of your brother's honour, who hath made this match, and his friend's reputation, who is thus like to be cozened with the semblance of a maid,—that you have discovered thus. They will scarcely believe this without trial: offer them instances, which shall bear no less likelihood than to see me at her chamber-window, hear me call Margaret Hero; hear Margaret term me Claudio; and bring them to see this the very night before the intended wedding: for in the meantime I will so fashion the matter that Hero shall be absent; and there shall appear such seeming truth of Hero's disloyalty, that jealousy shall be called assurance, and all the preparation overthrown.

D. John. Grow this to what adverse issue it can, I will put it in practice. Be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducats.

Bora. Be you constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me.

D. John. I will presently go learn their day of marriage.

Exeunt.

Scene Third

[Leonato's Orchard]

Enter Benedick, alone.

Bene. Boy!

[Enter Boy.]

Boy. Signior?

Bene. In my chamber-window lies a book; bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am here already, sir.

Bene. I know that; but I would have thee hence, and here again. [Exit Boy.] I do much wonder that one man, seeing how much another man is a fool when he dedicates his behaviours to love, will, after he hath laughed at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his own scorn by falling in love: and such a man is Claudio. I have known, when there was no music with him but the drum and the fife; and now had he rather hear the tabor and the pipe: I have known, when he would have walked ten mile afoot to see a good armour; and now will he lie ten nights awake, carving the fashion of a new doublet. He was wont to speak plain and to the purpose, like an honest man and a soldier; and now is he turned orthographer; his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes. May I be so converted, and see with these eyes? I cannot tell; I think not: I will not be sworn by love may transform me to an oyster; but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool. One woman is fair, yet I am well; another is wise, yet I am well; another virtuous, yet I am well; but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace. Rich she shall be, that's certain; wise, or I'll none; virtuous, or I'll never cheapen her; fair, or I'll never look on her; mild, or come not near me; noble, or not I for an angel; of good discourse, an excellent musician, and her hair shall be of what colour it please God. Ha! the prince and Monsieur Love! I will hide me in the arbour. [Withdraws.]

Enter Prince, Leonato, Claudio, and Balthazar, with Music.

D. Pedro. Come, shall we hear this music?

Claud. Yea, my good lord. How still the evening is,
As hush'd on purpose to grace harmony!

D. Pedro. See you where Benedick hath hid himself?

Claud. O! very well, my lord: the music ended,
We'll fit the kid-fox with a penny-worth.

D. Pedro. Come, Balthazar, we'll hear that song again.

Balth. O! good my lord, tax not so bad a voice
To slander music any more than once.

D. Pedro. It is the witness still of excellency,
To put a strange face on his own perfection.
I pray thee, sing, and let me woo no more.

Balth. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing;
Since many a wooer doth commence his suit
To her he thinks not worthy; yet he woos;
Yet will he swear he loves.

D. Pedro. Nay, pray thee, come;
Or if thou wilt hold longer argument,
Do it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes;
There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

D. Pedro. Why these are very crotchets that he speaks;
Notes, notes, forsooth, and nothing! [Music.]

Bene. Now, divine air! now is his soul ravished! Is it not strange that sheeps' guts should hale souls out of men's bodies? Well, a horn for my money, when all's done.

The Song.

[Balth.]

'Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever;
One foot in sea, and one on shore,
To one thing constant never.
Then sigh not so,
But let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny,
Converting all your sounds of woe
Into Hey nonny, nonny.
'Sing no more ditties, sing no mo
Of dumps so dull and heavy;
The fraud of men was ever so,
Since summer first was leavy.
Then sigh not so,
But let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny,
Converting all your sounds of woe
Into Hey nonny, nonny.'

30 intend: pretend 33 cozened: deceived 35 instances: proofs 37 term me Claudio; cf. n. 41 jealousy: suspicion 42 preparation: i.e. for the marriage 45 ducats: Italian coins, worth about a dollar 5 here already; cf. n. 13 tabor; cf. n. 15 carving: moulding 16 doublet: close fitting coat

26 I'll none: I'll have none of her 27 cheapen: bargain for 28 angel; cf. n. 30 of what colour, etc.; cf. n. S. d. Balthazar; cf. n. 34 grace harmony: do honor to music 37 kid-fox; cf. n. penny-worth: a good bargain 39 tax: impose a task 41, 42 Cf. n. 43 woo: entreat 50 notes: music 53 crotchets; cf. n. 54 Cf. n. 56 sheep's guts: i.e. violin strings 69 mo: more 70 dumps: mournful tunes 72 leavy: leafy

D. Pedro. By my troth, a good song.

Balth. And an ill singer, my lord.

D. Pedro. Ha, no, no, faith; thou singest well enough for a shift.

Bene. [Aside.] An he had been a dog that should have howled thus, they would have hanged him; and I pray God his bad voice bode no mischief. I had as lief have heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it.

D. Pedro. Yea, marry. Dost thou hear, Balthazar? I pray thee, get us some excellent music, for to-morrow night we would have it at the Lady Hero's chamber-window.

Balth. The best I can, my lord.

D. Pedro. Do so: farewell. Exit Balthazar. Come hither, Leonato: what was it you told me of to-day, that your niece Beatrice was in love with Signior Benedick?

Claud. O! ay:—[Aside to D. Pedro.] Stalk on, stalk on; the fowl sits. I did never think that lady would have loved any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither; but most wonderful that she should so dote on Signior Benedick, whom she hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to abhor.

Bene. [Aside.] Is't possible? Sits the wind in that corner?

Leon. By my troth, my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it but that she loves him with an enraged affection: it is past the infinite of thought.

D. Pedro. May be she doth but counterfeit.

Claud. Faith, like enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit! There was never counterfeit of passion came so near the life of passion as she discovers it.

D. Pedro. Why, what effects of passion shows she?

Claud. [Aside.] Bait the hook well: this fish will bite.

Leon. What effects, my lord? She will sit you—[To Claudio.] You heard my daughter tell you how.

Claud. She did, indeed.

D. Pedro. How, how, I pray you? You amaze me: I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection.

Leon. I would have sworn it had, my lord; especially against Benedick.

Bene. [Aside.] I should think this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speaks it: knavery cannot, sure, hide itself in such reverence.

Claud. [Aside.] He hath ta'en the infection: hold it up.

D. Pedro. Hath she made her affection known to Benedick?

Leon. No; and swears she never will: that's her torment.

Claud. 'Tis true, indeed; so your daughter says: 'Shall I,' says she, 'that have so oft encountered him with scorn, write to him that I love him?'

Leon. This says she now when she is beginning to write to him; for she'll be up twenty times a night, and there will she sit in her smock till she have writ a sheet of paper: my daughter tells us all.

Claud. Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

Leon. O! when she had writ it, and was reading it over, she found Benedick and Beatrice between the sheet?

Claud. That.

Leon. O! she tore the letter into a thousand halfpence; railed at herself, that she should be so immodest to write to one that she knew would flout her: 'I measure him,' says she, 'by my own spirit; for I should flout him, if he writ to me; yea, though I love him, I should.'

Claud. Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sobs, beats her heart, tears her hair, prays, curses; 'O sweet Benedick! God give me patience!'

Leon. She doth indeed; my daughter says so; and the ecstasy hath so much overborne her, that my daughter is sometimes afeard she will do a desperate outrage to herself. It is very true.

D. Pedro. It were good that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

Claud. To what end? he would but make a sport of it and torment the poor lady worse.

D. Pedro. An he should, it were an alms to hang him. She's an excellent sweet lady, and, out of all suspicion, she is virtuous.

Claud. And she is exceeding wise.

D. Pedro. In everything but in loving Benedick.

Leon. O! my lord, wisdom and blood combating in so tender a body, we have ten proofs to one that blood hath the victory. I am sorry for her, as I have just cause, being her uncle and her guardian.

D. Pedro. I would she had bestowed this dotage on me; I would have daffed all other respects and made her half myself. I pray you, tell Benedick of it, and hear what a' will say.

Leon. Were it good, think you?

Claud. Hero thinks surely she will die; for she says she will die if he love her not, and she will die ere she make her love known, and she will die if he woo her, rather than she will bate one breath of her accustomed crossness.

D. Pedro. She doth well: if she should make tender of her love, 'tis very possible he'll scorn it; for the man,—as you know all,—hath a contemptible spirit.

Claud. He is a very proper man.

D. Pedro. He hath indeed a good outward happiness.

Claud. 'Fore God, and in my mind, very wise.

D. Pedro. He doth indeed show some sparks that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

D. Pedro. As Hector, I assure you: and in the managing of quarrels you may say he is wise; for either he avoids them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a most Christian-like fear.

Leon. If he do fear God, a' must necessarily keep peace: if he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrel with fear and trembling.

D. Pedro. And so will he do; for the man doth fear God, howsoever it seems not in him by some large jests he will make. Well, I am sorry for your niece. Shall we go seek Benedick, and tell him of her love?

Claud. Never tell him, my lord: let her wear it out with good counsel.

Leon. Nay, that's impossible: she may wear her heart out first.

81 shift: makeshift 85 night-raven; cf. n. 86 Yea, marry; cf. n. 93 Stalk on, etc.; cf. n. 100 enraged: frenzied 101 infinite: utmost power 116 gull: trick 119 hold it up: keep it up 127 smock: undergarment 133 That: That was it 134 halfpence: pieces small as silver halfpence

142 ecstasy: madness 144 outrage: act of violence 150 alms: good deed 151 out of: beyond 159 dotage: doting 160 daffed: put aside respects: considerations half myself: my wife 168 tender: offer 170 contemptible: contemptuous 171 proper: good-looking 172 outward happiness: lucky exterior 185 large: broad

D. Pedro. Well, we will hear further of it by your daughter: let it cool the while. I love Benedick well, and I could wish he would modestly examine himself, to see how much he is unworthy to have so good a lady.

Leon. My lord, will you walk? dinner is ready.

Claud. [Aside.] If he do not dote on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation.

D. Pedro. [Aside.] Let there be the same net spread for her; and that must your daughter and her gentlewoman carry. The sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter: that's the scene that I would see, which will be merely a dumb-show. Let us send her to call him in to dinner. Exeunt [all but Benedick].

Bene. [Advancing from the arbour.] This can be no trick: the conference was sadly borne. They have the truth of this from Hero. They seem to pity the lady: it seems, her affections have their full bent. Love me! why, it must be requited. I hear how I am censured: they say I will bear myself proudly, if I perceive the love come from her; they say too that she will rather die than give any sign of affection. I did never think to marry: I must not seem proud: happy are they that hear their detractions, and can put them to mending. They say the lady is fair: 'tis a truth, I can bear them witness; and virtuous: 'tis so, I cannot reprove it; and wise, but for loving me: by my troth, it is no addition to her wit, nor no great argument of her folly, for I will be horribly in love with her. I may chance have some odd quirks and remnants of wit broken on me, because I have railed so long against marriage; but doth not the appetite alter? A man loves the meat in his youth that he cannot endure in his age. Shall quips and sentences and these paper bullets of the brain awe a man from the career of his humour? No; the world must be peopled. When I said I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married. Here comes Beatrice. By this day! she's a fair lady: I do spy some marks of love in her.

Enter Beatrice.

Beat. Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

Bene. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains.

Beat. I took no more pains for those thanks than you take pains to thank me: if it had been painful, I would not have come.

Bene. You take pleasure then in the message?

Beat. Yea, just so much as you may take upon a knife's point, and choke a daw withal. You have no stomach, signior: fare you well. Exit.

Bene. Ha! 'Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner,' there's a double meaning in that. 'I took no more pains for those thanks than you took pains to thank me,' that's as much as to say, Any pains that I take for you is as easy as thanks. If I do not take pity of her, I am a villain; if I do not love her, I am a Jew. I will go get her picture. Exit.

196 walk: go 200 carry: carry out 202 no such matter: nothing of the kind exists 206 sadly borne: seriously conducted 208 full bent: extreme tension 213 put them to mending: profit by them 215 reprove: disprove 216 addition: honor 218 quirks: jests 220 quips: sarcasms sentences: wise sayings 222 paper bullets; cf. n. 235 choke . . . withal: more than a mouthful for a jackdaw

Act Third ❧ Scene First

[Leonato's Orchard]
Enter Hero, Margaret, and Ursula.

Hero. Good Margaret, run thee to the parlour;
There shalt thou find my cousin Beatrice
Proposing with the prince and Claudio:
Whisper her ear, and tell her, I and Ursula
Walk in the orchard, and our whole discourse
Is all of her; say that thou overheard'st us,
And bid her steal into the pleached bower,
Where honey-suckles, ripen'd by the sun,
Forbid the sun to enter; like favourites,
Made proud by princes, that advance their pride
Against that power that bred it. There will she hide her,
To listen our propose. This is thy office;
Bear thee well in it and leave us alone.

Marg. I'll make her come, I warrant you, presently. [Exit.]

Hero. Now, Ursula, when Beatrice doth come,
As we do trace this alley up and down,
Our talk must only be of Benedick:
When I do name him, let it be thy part
To praise him more than ever man did merit.
My talk to thee must be how Benedick
Is sick in love with Beatrice: of this matter
Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made,
That only wounds by hearsay.

Enter Beatrice [into the bower].

Now begin;
For look where Beatrice, like a lapwing, runs
Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

Urs. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish
Cut with her golden oars the silver stream,
And greedily devour the treacherous bait:
So angle we for Beatrice; who even now
Is couched in the woodbine coverture.
Fear you not my part of the dialogue.

Hero. Then go we near her, that her ear lose nothing
Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it.
[They advance towards the bower.]
No, truly, Ursula, she is too disdainful;
I know her spirits are as coy and wild
As haggards of the rock.

Urs. But are you sure
That Benedick loves Beatrice so entirely?

Hero. So says the prince, and my new-trothed lord.

Urs. And did they bid you tell her of it, madam?

Hero. They did entreat me to acquaint her of it;
But I persuaded them, if they lov'd Benedick,
To wish him wrestle with affection,
And never to let Beatrice know of it.

Urs. Why did you so? Doth not the gentleman
Deserve as full as fortunate a bed
As ever Beatrice shall couch upon?

Hero. O god of love! I know he doth deserve

3 Proposing: talking 12 propose: conversation 16 trace: traverse 23 only . . . hearsay: hearsay alone 31 woodbine coverture: honeysuckle bower 37 haggards: female hawks, grown up in freedom 47 as full as; cf. n.

As much as may be yielded to a man;
But nature never fram'd a woman's heart
Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice;
Disdain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes,
Misprising what they look on, and her wit
Values itself so highly, that to her
All matter else seems weak. She cannot love
Nor take no shape nor project of affection,
She is so self-endear'd.
Urs. Sure, I think so;
And therefore certainly it were not good
She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.
Hero. Why, you speak truth. I never yet saw man,
How wise, how noble, young, how rarely featur'd,
But she would spell him backward: if fair-fac'd,
She would swear the gentleman should be her sister;
If black, why, Nature, drawing of an antic,
Made a foul blot; if tall, a lance ill-headed;
If low, an agate very vilely cut;
If speaking, why, a vane blown with all winds;
If silent, why, a block moved with none.
So turns she every man the wrong side out,
And never gives to truth and virtue that
Which simpleness and merit purchaseth.
Urs. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.
Hero. No; not to be so odd and from all fashions
As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable.
But who dare tell her so? If I should speak,
She would mock me into air: O! she would laugh me
Out of myself, press me to death with wit.
Therefore let Benedick, like cover'd fire,
Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly:
It were a better death than die with mocks,
Which is as bad as die with tickling.
Urs. Yet tell her of it: hear what she will say.
Hero. No; rather I will go to Benedick,
And counsel him to fight against his passion.
And, truly, I'll devise some honest slanders
To stain my cousin with. One doth not know
How much an ill word may empoison liking.
Urs. O! do not do your cousin such a wrong.
She cannot be so much without true judgment,—
Having so swift and excellent a wit
As she is priz'd to have,—as to refuse
So rare a gentleman as Signior Benedick.
Hero. He is the only man of Italy,
Always excepted my dear Claudio.
Urs. I pray you, be not angry with me, madam,
Speaking my fancy: Signior Benedick,
For shape, for bearing, argument and valour,
Goes foremost in report through Italy.
Hero. Indeed, he hath an excellent good name.
Urs. His excellence did earn it, ere he had it.
When are you married, madam?
Hero. Why, every day—to-morrow. Come, go in:
I'll show thee some attires, and have thy counsel
Which is the best to furnish me to-morrow.
Urs. [Aside to Hero.] She's lim'd, I warrant you: we have caught her, madam.
Hero. [Aside to Urs.] If it prove so, then loving goes by haps:
Some Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps.
Exeunt Hero and Ursula.
Beat. [Advancing.] What fire is in mine ears?
Can this be true?
Stand I condemn'd for pride and scorn so much?
Contempt, farewell! and maiden pride, adieu!
No glory lives behind the back of such.
And, Benedick, love on; I will requite thee,
Taming my wild heart to thy loving hand:
If thou dost love, my kindness shall incite thee
To bind our loves up in a holy band;
For others say thou dost deserve, and I
Believe it better than reportingly. Exit.

54 Misprising: despising 57 project: idea 58 self-endear'd: full of self-love 63 How: however 64 spell ... backward; cf. n. 66 black: dark antic: grotesque figure 68 agate: human figure cut cameo-like on agate 73 purchaseth: deservedly obtain 75 from: contrary to 87 honest: not injurious to character 93 priz'd: esteemed 99 argument: power of reason 104 every day—to-morrow; cf. n.

107 lim'd: snared 110 haps: chances 116 behind the back; cf. n. 118 Cf. n. 120 band: bond 122 better ... reportingly: on better evidence than report 10 hangman: rogue 22 hang ... draw; cf. n. 24 worm; cf. n. 28 fancy: love 27 slops: loose breeches no doublet; cf. n.

Scene Second

[Leonato's House?]
Enter Prince, Claudio, Benedick, and Leonato.

D. Pedro. I do but stay till your marriage be consummate, and then go I toward Arragon.
Claud. I'll bring you thither, my lord, if you'll vouchsafe me.
D. Pedro. Nay, that would be as great a soil in the new gloss of your marriage, as to show a child his new coat and forbid him to wear it. I will only be bold with Benedick for his company; for, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth: he hath twice or thrice cut Cupid's bow-string, and the little hangman dare not shoot at him. He hath a heart as sound as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper; for what his heart thinks his tongue speaks.
Bene. Gallants, I am not as I have been.
Leon. So say I: methinks you are sadder.
Claud. I hope he be in love.
D. Pedro. Hang him, truant! there's no true drop of blood in him, to be truly touched with love. If he be sad, he wants money.
Bene. I have the tooth-ache.
D. Pedro. Draw it.
Bene. Hang it.
Claud. You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards.
D. Pedro. What! sigh for the tooth-ache?
Leon. Where is but a humour or a worm?
Bene. Well, every one can master a grief but he that has it.
Claud. Yet say I, he is in love.
D. Pedro. There is no appearance of fancy in him, unless it be a fancy that he hath to strange disguises; as, to be a Dutchman to-day, a Frenchman to-morrow, or in the shape of two countries at once, as a German from the waist downward, all slops, and a Spaniard from the hip upward, no doublet.

Unless he have a fancy to this foolery, as it appears he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it appear he is.

Claud. If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signs: a' brushes his hat a mornings; what should that bode?

D. Pedro. Hath any man seen him at the barber's?

Claud. No, but the barber's man hath been seen with him; and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls.

Leon. Indeed he looks younger than he did, by the loss of a beard.

D. Pedro. Nay, a' rubs himself with civet: can you smell him out by that?

Claud. That's as much as to say the sweet youth's in love.

D. Pedro. The greatest note of it is his melancholy.

Claud. And when was he wont to wash his face?

D. Pedro. Yea, or to paint himself? for the which, I hear what they say of him.

Claud. Nay, but his jesting spirit; which is now crept into a lute-string, and new-governed by stops.

D. Pedro. Indeed, that tells a heavy tale for him. Conclude, conclude he is in love.

Claud. Nay, but I know who loves him.

D. Pedro. That would I know too: I warrant, one that knows him not.

Claud. Yes, and his ill conditions; and in despite of all, dies for him.

D. Pedro. She shall be buried with her face upwards.

Bene. Yet is this no charm for the tooth-ache Old signior, walk aside with me: I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby-horses must not hear.

[Exeunt Benedick and Leonato.]

D. Pedro. For my life, to break with him about Beatrice.

Claud. 'Tis even so. Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice, and then the two bears will not bite one another when they meet.

Enter John the Bastard.

D. John. My lord and brother, God save you!

D. Pedro. Good den, brother.

D. John. If your leisure served, I would speak with you.

D. Pedro. In private?

D. John. If it please you; yet Count Claudio may hear, for what I would speak of concerns him.

D. Pedro. What's the matter?

D. John. [To Claudio.] Means your lordship to be married to-morrow?

D. Pedro. You know he does.

D. John. I know not that, when he knows what I know.

Claud. If there be any impediment, I pray you discover it.

D. John. You may think I love you not: let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me by that I now will manifest. For my brother, I think he holds you well, and in dearness of heart hath holp to effect your ensuing marriage; surely suit ill spent, and labour ill bestowed!

D. Pedro. Why, what's the matter?

D. John. I came hither to tell you; and circumstances shortened,—for she hath been too long a talking of,—the lady is disloyal.

Claud. Who, Hero?

D. John. Even she: Leonato's Hero, your Hero, every man's Hero.

Claud. Disloyal?

D. John. The word's too good to paint out her wickedness; I could say, she were worse: think you of a worse title, and I will fit her to it. Wonder not till further warrant: go but with me to-night, you shall see her chamber-window entered, even the night before her wedding-day: if you love her then, to-morrow wed her; but it would better fit your honour to change your mind.

Claud. May this be so?

D. Pedro. I will not think it.

D. John. If you dare not trust that you see, confess not that you know. If you will follow me, I will show you enough; and when you have seen more and heard more, proceed accordingly.

Claud. If I see any thing to-night why I should not marry her to-morrow, in the congregation, where I should wed, there will I shame her.

D. Pedro. And, as I wooed for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her.

D. John. I will disparage her no further till you are my witnesses: bear it coldly but till midnight, and let the issue show itself.

D. Pedro. O day untowardly turned!

Claud. O mischief strangely thwarting!

D. John. O plague right well prevented! So will you say when you have seen the sequel. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[A Street]

Enter Dogberry and his compartner [Verges], with the watch.

Dogb. Are you good men and true?

Verg. Yea, or else it were pity but they should suffer salvation, body and soul.

Dogb. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the prince's watch.

Verg. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

Dogb. First, who think you the most desartless man to be constable?

First Watch. Hugh Oatcake, sir, or George Seacoal; for they can write and read.

Dogb. Come hither, neighbour Seacoal. God hath blessed you with a good name: to be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune; but to write and read comes by nature.

Sec. Watch. Both which, Master constable,—

Dogb. You have: I knew it would be your answer. Well, for your favour, sir, why, give God thanks, and make no boast of 40 the old ornament, etc.; cf. n. 44 civet: a perfume 53 stops: frets, regulating the sound of the lutestring 59 conditions: characteristics 61 buried, etc.; cf. n. 64 hobby-horses: cf. n. 71 Good den: Good even(ing). 76 Cf. n. 83 aim . . . at: judge of 84 holds: esteems dearness: affection

88, 89 circumstances shortened: cutting short the particulars a talking of: under discussion 95 paint out: depict 97 till . . . warrant: till further proof appears 104 that: what 116 untowardly turned: unluckily altered Sc. iii., S. d. watch: night watchmen 3 salvation: i.e. damnation 8 desartless: i.e. deserving 13 well-favoured: good-looking

it; and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of such vanity. You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man for the constable of the watch; therefore bear you the lantern. This is your charge: you shall comprehend all vagrom men; you are to bid any man stand, in the prince's name.

Watch. How, if a' will not stand?

Dogb. Why, then, take no note of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave.

Verg. If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the prince's subjects.

Dogb. True, and they are to meddle with none but the prince's subjects. You shall also make no noise in the streets: for, for the watch to babble and to talk is most tolerable and not to be endured.

Sec. Watch. We will rather sleep than talk: we know what belongs to a watch.

Dogb. Why, you speak like an ancient and most quiet watchman, for I cannot see how sleeping should offend; only have a care that your bills be not stolen. Well, you are to call at all the alehouses, and bid those that are drunk get them to bed.

Watch. How if they will not?

Dogb. Why then, let them alone till they are sober: if they make you not then the better answer, you may say they are not the men you took them for.

Watch. Well, sir.

Dogb. If you meet a thief, you may suspect him, by virtue of your office, to be no true man; and, for such kind of men, the less you meddle or make with them, why, the more is for your honesty.

Sec. Watch. If we know him to be a thief, shall we not lay hands on him?

Dogb. Truly, by your office, you may; but I think they that touch pitch will be defiled. The most peaceable way for you, if you do take a thief, is, to let him show himself what he is and steal out of your company.

Verg. You have been always called a merciful man, partner.

Dogb. Truly, I would not hang a dog by my will, much more a man who hath any honesty in him.

Verg. If you hear a child cry in the night, you must call to the nurse and bid her still it.

Sec. Watch. How if the nurse be asleep and will not hear us?

Dogb. Why, then, depart in peace, and let the child wake her with crying; for the ewe that will not hear her lamb when it baes, will never answer a calf when he bleats.

Verg. 'Tis very true.

Dogb. This is the end of the charge. You, constable, are to present the prince's own person: if you meet the prince in the night, you may stay him.

Verg. Nay, by 'r lady, that I think, a' cannot.

Dogb. Five shillings to one on 't, with any man that knows the statues, he may stay him: marry, not without the prince be willing; for, indeed, the watch ought to offend no man, and it is an offence to stay a man against his will.

Verg. By 'r lady, I think it be so.

Dogb. Ha, ah, ha! Well, masters, good night: an there be any matter of weight chances, call up me: keep your fellows' counsels and your own, and good night. Come, neighbour.

Sec. Watch. Well, masters, we hear our charge: let us go sit here upon the church-bench till two, and then all go to bed.

Dogb. One word more, honest neighbours. I pray you, watch about Signior Leonato's door; for the wedding being there to-morrow, there is a great coil to-night. Adieu; be vigitant, I beseech you. Exeunt [Dogberry and Verges].

Enter Borachio and Conrade.

Bora. What, Conrade!

Watch. [Aside.] Peace! stir not.

Bora. Conrade, I say!

Con. Here, man, I am at thy elbow.

Bora. Mass, and my elbow itched; I thought there would a scab follow.

Con. I will owe thee an answer for that; and now forward with thy tale.

Bora. Stand thee close then under this pent-house, for it drizzles rain, and I will, like a true drunkard, utter all to thee.

Watch. [Aside.] Some treason, masters; yet stand close.

Bora. Therefore know, I have earned of Don John a thousand ducats.

Con. Is it possible that any villainy should be so dear?

Bora. Thou shouldst rather ask if it were possible any villainy should be so rich; for when rich villains have need of poor ones, poor ones may make what price they will.

Con. I wonder at it.

Bora. That shows thou art unconfirmed. Thou knowest that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

Con. Yes, it is apparel.

Bora. I mean, the fashion.

Con. Yes, the fashion is the fashion.

Bora. Tush! I may as well say the fool's the fool. But seest thou not what a deformed thief this fashion is?

Watch. [Aside.] I know that Deformed; a' has been a vile thief this seven years; a' goes up and down like a gentleman: I remember his name.

Bora. Didst thou not hear somebody?

Con. No: 'twas the vane on the house.

Bora. Seest thou not, I say, what a deformed thief this fashion is? how giddily he turns about all the hot bloods between fourteen and five-and-thirty? sometime fashioning them like Pharaoh's soldiers in the reechy painting; sometime like god Bel's priests in the old church-window; sometime like the shaven Hercules in the smirched worm-eaten tapestry, where his cod-piece seems as massy as his club?

Con. All this I see, and I see that the fashion wears out more apparel than the man. But art not thou thyself giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?

Bora. Not so, neither; but know, that I have to-night wooed Margaret, the Lady Hero's gentle-woman, by the name of

22 comprehend: i.e. apprehend vagrom: vagrant 35 belongs to: befits 38 bills: pikes 46 true: honest 47 meddle or make: have to do 48 is: (it) is 68 present: represent 72 statues: i.e. statutes

80 church-bench: bench outside the church 84 coil: bustle 85 vigitant: i.e. vigilant 90 Mass: by the Mass! 91 scab; cf. n. 94 pent-house: projecting roof 96 stand close: keep concealed 104 unconfirmed: inexperienced 120 reechy: dirty, stained with smoke 121 Bel's priests; cf. n. 123 cod-piece: part of Elizabethan breeches 126 the fashion, etc.; cf. n.

Hero: she leans me out at her mistress' chamber-window, bids me a thousand times good night,—I tell this tale vilely:—I should first tell thee how the prince, Claudio, and my master, planted and placed and possessed by my master Don John, saw afar off in the orchard this amiable encounter.

Con. And thought they Margaret was Hero?

Bora. Two of them did, the prince and Claudio; but the devil my master, knew she was Margaret; and partly by his oaths, which first possessed them, partly by the dark night, which did deceive them, but chiefly by my villainy, which did confirm any slander that Don John had made, away went Claudio enraged; swore he would meet her, as he was appointed, next morning at the temple, and there, before the whole congregation, shame her with what he saw o'er night, and send her home again without a husband.

First Watch. We charge you in the prince's name, stand!

Sec. Watch. Call up the right Master constable. We have here recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery that ever was known in the commonwealth.

First Watch. And one Deformed is one of them: I know him, a' wears a lock.

Con. Masters, masters!

Sec. Watch. You'll be made bring Deformed forth, I warrant you.

Con. Masters,—

First Watch. Never speak: we charge you let us obey you to go with us.

Bora. We are like to prove a goodly commodity, being taken up of these men's bills.

Con. A commodity in question, I warrant you. Come, we'll obey you. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[Hero's Apartment]
Enter Hero, Margaret, and Ursula.

Hero. Good Ursula, wake my cousin Beatrice, and desire her to rise.

Urs. I will, lady.

Hero. And bid her come hither.

Urs. Well. [Exit.]

Marg. Troth, I think your other rabato were better.

Hero. No, pray thee, good Meg, I'll wear this.

Marg. By my troth's not so good; and I warrant your cousin will say so.

Hero. My cousin's a fool, and thou art another: I'll wear none but this.

Marg. I like the new tire within excellently, if the hair were a thought browner; and your gown's a most rare fashion, i' faith. I saw the Duchess of Milan's gown that they praise so.

Hero. O! that exceeds, they say.

Marg. By my troth's but a night-gown in respect of yours: cloth o' gold, and cuts, and laced with silver, set with pearls, down sleeves, side sleeves, and skirts round, underborne with a bluish tinsel; but for a fine, quaint, graceful, and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten on 't.

Hero. God give me joy to wear it! for my heart is exceeding heavy.

Marg. 'Twill be heavier soon by the weight of a man.

Hero. Fie upon thee! art not ashamed?

Marg. Of what, lady? of speaking honourably? is not marriage honourable in a beggar? Is not your lord honourable without marriage? I think you would have me say, 'saving your reverence, a husband:' an bad thinking do not wrest true speaking, I'll offend nobody. Is there any harm in 'the heavier for a husband?' None, I think, an it be the right husband and the right wife; otherwise 'tis light, and not heavy: ask my Lady Beatrice else; here she comes.

Enter Beatrice.

Hero. Good morrow, coz.

Beat. Good morrow, sweet Hero.

Hero. Why, how now! do you speak in the sick tune?

Beat. I am out of all other tune, methinks.

Marg. Clap's into 'Light o' love;' that goes without a burden: do you sing it, and I'll dance it.

Beat. Ye light o' love with your heels! then, if your husband have stables enough, you'll see he shall lack no barns.

Marg. O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.

Beat. 'Tis almost five o'clock, cousin; 'tis time you were ready. By my troth, I am exceeding ill. Heigh-ho!

Marg. For a hawk, a horse, or a husband?

Beat. For the letter that begins them all, H.

Marg. Well, an you be not turned Turk, there's no more sailing by the star.

Beat. What means the fool, trow?

Marg. Nothing I; but God send every one their heart's desire!

Hero. These gloves the count sent me; they are an excellent perfume.

Beat. I am stuffed, cousin, I cannot smell.

Marg. A maid, and stuffed! there's goodly catching of cold.

Beat. O, God help me! God help me! how long have you professed apprehension?

Marg. Ever since you left it. Doth not my wit become me rarely!

Beat. It is not seen enough, you should wear it in your cap. By my troth, I am sick.

Marg. Get you some of this distilled Carduus Benedictus, and lay it to your heart: it is the only thing for a qualm.

Hero. There thou prick'st her with a thistle.

Beat. Benedictus! why Benedictus? you have some moral in this Benedictus.

Marg. Moral! no, by my troth, I have no moral meaning; I meant, plain holy-thistle. You may think, perchance, that I think you are in love: nay, by'r lady, I am not such a fool to think what I list; nor I list not to think what I can; nor,

133 possessed: influenced 146 right Master: cf. n. 147 recovered: i.e. discovered 150 lock: love-lock (of hair) 157 commodity: cf. n. 159 in question: subject to trial 6 rabato: stiff collar 8 troth's: i.e. troth, it is 12 tire: headdress within: cf. n. 16 night-gown: 'tea-gown' in respect of: compared with 17 cuts: slashed openings, showing the fabric underneath laced: trimmed 18 down sleeves: tight-fitting sleeves (?) side sleeves: long outer sleeves, open from the shoulder underborne: lined

27, 28 saving your reverence: cf. n. wrest: distort 31 light: wanton (pun) 35 sick tune: tone of an invalid 37 'Light o' love': a popular song 38 burden: bass accompaniment 40 barns: pun on bairns, children 41 with my heels: as if by kicking 46 H: pronounced much like 'ache' 47 turned Turk: become renegade 49 trow: (do you) think? 58 professed apprehension: made wit your profession 63 Carduus Benedictus: holy thistle, used in medicine 66 moral: hidden meaning 71 list: like indeed, I cannot think, if I would think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love, or that you will be in love, or that you can be in love. Yet Benedick was such another, and now is he become a man: he swore he would never marry; and yet now, in despite of his heart, he eats his meat without grudging: and how you may be converted, I know not; but methinks you look with your eyes as other women do.

Beat. What pace is this that thy tongue keeps?

Marg. Not a false gallop.

Enter Ursula.

Urs. Madam, withdraw: the prince, the count, Signior Benedick, Don John, and all the gallants of the town, are come to fetch you to church.

Hero. Help to dress me, good coz, good Meg, good Ursula.

[Exeunt.]

Scene Fifth

[Another Room in Leonato's House]

Enter Leonato and the Constable [Dogberry], and the Headborough [Verges].

Leon. What would you with me, honest neighbour?

Dogb. Marry, sir, I would have some confidence with you, that decerns you nearly.

Leon. Brief, I pray you; for you see it is a busy time with me.

Dogb. Marry, this it is, sir.

Verg. Yes, in truth it is, sir.

Leon. What is it, my good friends?

Dogb. Goodman Verges, sir, speaks a little off the matter: an old man, sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as, God help, I would desire they were; but, in faith, honest as the skin between his brows.

Verg. Yes, I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man and no honester than I.

Dogb. Comparisons are odorous: palabras, neighbour Verges.

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.

Dogb. It pleases your worship to say so, but we are the poor duke's officers; but truly, for mine own part, if I were as tedious as a king, I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.

Leon. All thy tediousness on me! ha?

Dogb. Yes, an 't were a thousand pound more than 'tis; for I hear as good exclamation on your worship, as of any man in the city, and though I be but a poor man, I am glad to hear it.

Verg. And so am I.

Leon. I would fain know what you have to say.

Verg. Marry, sir, our watch to-night, excepting your worship's presence, ha' ta'en a couple of as arrant knaves as any in Messina.

Dogb. A good old man, sir; he will be talking: as they say, 'when the age is in, the wit is out.' God help us! it is a world to see! Well said, i' faith, neighbour Verges: well, God's a good man; an two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind. An honest soul, i' faith, sir; by my troth he is, as ever broke bread: but God is to be worshipped: all men are not alike; alas! good neighbour.

Leon. Indeed, neighbour, he comes too short of you.

Dogb. Gifts that God gives.

Leon. I must leave you.

Dogb. One word, sir: our watch, sir, hath indeed comprehended two aspicious persons, and we would have them this morning examined before your worship.

Leon. Take their examination yourself, and bring it me: I am now in great haste, as may appear unto you.

Dogb. It shall be suffigance.

Leon. Drink some wine ere you go: fare you well.

[Enter a Messenger.]

Mess. My lord, they stay for you to give your daughter to her husband.

Leon. I'll wait upon them: I am ready.

[Exeunt Leonato and Messenger.]

Dogb. Go, good partner, go, get you to Francis Seacoal; bid him bring his pen and inkhorn to the gaol: we are now to examination these men.

Verg. And we must do it wisely.

Dogb. We will spare for no wit, I warrant you; here's that shall drive some of them to a non-come: only get the learned writer to set down our excommunication, and meet me at the gaol.

Exeunt.

Act Fourth

Scene First

[Within a Church]

Enter Prince, Bastard, Leonato, Friar [Francis], Claudio, Benedick, Hero, and Beatrice.

Leon. Come, Friar Francis, be brief: only to the plain form of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.

Friar. You come hither, my lord, to marry this lady?

Claud. No.

Leon. To be married to her, friar; you come to marry her.

Friar. Lady, you come hither to be married to this count?

Hero. I do.

Friar. If either of you know any inward impediment, why you should not be conjoined, I charge you, on your souls, to utter it.

Claud. Know you any, Hero?

Hero. None, my lord.

Friar. Know you any, count?

Leon. I dare make his answer; none.

Claud. O! what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do, not knowing what they do!

Bene. How now! Interjections? Why then, some be of laughing, as ah! ha! he!

Claud. Stand thee by, friar. Father, by your leave:

80 false gallop: canter Sc. v., S. d. Headborough: petty constable 2 confidence: i.e. conference 3 decerns: i.e. concerns 8 Goodman: yeoman; a rustic title 14 odorous: i.e. odious palabras: cf. n. 18 poor duke's: i.e. duke's poor 19 of: on 23 exclamation: i.e. acclamation (?) 28 to-night: last night 32 when the age is in, etc.; cf. n. a world: a wonder

33, 34 God's a good man; cf. n. 42 aspicious: i.e. suspicious 46 suffigance: i.e. sufficient 50 wait upon: attend 56 non-come; cf. n. 57 excommunication: i.e. examination or communication 18, 19 some . . . laughing, etc.; cf. n.

Will you with free and unconstrained soul
Give me this maid, your daughter?
Leon. As freely, son, as God did give her me.
Claud. And what have I to give you back whose worth
May counterpoise this rich and precious gift?
D. Pedro. Nothing, unless you render her again.
Claud. Sweet prince, you learn me noble thankfulness.
There, Leonato, take her back again:
Give not this rotten orange to your friend;
She's but the sign and semblance of her honour.
Behold! how like a maid she blushes here.
O! what authority and show of truth
Can cunning sin cover itself withal.
Comes not that blood as modest evidence
To witness simple virtue? Would you not swear,
All you that see her, that she were a maid,
By these exterior shows? But she is none:
She knows the heat of a luxurious bed;
Her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.
Leon. What do you mean, my lord?
Claud. Not to be married,
Not to knit my soul to an approved wanton.
Leon. Dear my lord, if you, in your own proof,
Have vanquish'd the resistance of her youth,
And made defeat of her virginity,—
Claud. I know what you would say: if I have known her,
You'll say she did embrace me as a husband,
And so extenuate the 'forehand sin:
No, Leonato,
I never tempted her with word too large;
But, as a brother to his sister, show'd
Bashful sincerity and comely love.
Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you?
Claud. Out on thee! Seeming! I will write against it:
You seem to me as Dian in her orb,
As chaste as is the bud ere it be blown;
But you are more intemperate in your blood
Than Venus, or those pamper'd animals
That rage in savage sensuality.
Hero. Is my lord well, that he doth speak so wide?
Leon. Sweet prince, why speak not you?
D. Pedro. What should I speak?
I stand dishonour'd, that have gone about
To link my dear friend to a common stale.
Leon. Are these things spoken, or do I but dream?
D. John. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.
Bene. This looks not like a nuptial.
Hero. True! O God!
Claud. Leonato, stand I here?
Is this the prince? Is this the prince's brother?
Is this face Hero's? Are our eyes our own?
Leon. All this is so; but what of this, my lord?
Claud. Let me but move one question to your daughter;
And by that fatherly and kindly power
That you have in her, bid her answer truly.
Leon. I charge thee do so, as thou art my child.

Hero. O, God defend me! how am I beset!
What kind of catechizing call you this?
Claud. To make you answer truly to your name.
Hero. Is it not Hero? Who can blot that name
With any just reproach?
Claud. Marry, that can Hero:
Hero itself can blot out Hero's virtue.
What man was he talk'd with you yesternight
Out at your window, betwixt twelve and one?
Now, if you are a maid, answer to this.
Hero. I talk'd with no man at that hour, my lord.
D. Pedro. Why, then are you no maiden. Leonato,
I am sorry you must hear: upon mine honour,
Myself, my brother, and this grieved count,
Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night,
Talk with a ruffian at her chamber-window;
Who hath indeed, most like a liberal villain
Confess'd the vile encounters they have had
A thousand times in secret.
D. John. Fie, fie! they are not be to nam'd, my lord,
Not to be spoke of;
There is not chastity enough in language
Without offence to utter them. Thus, pretty lady,
I am sorry for thy much misgovernment.
Claud. O Hero! what a Hero hadst thou been,
If half thy outward graces have been plac'd
About thy thoughts and counsels of thy heart!
But fare thee well, most foul, most fair! farewell,
Thou pure impiety, and impious purity!
For thee I'll lock up all the gates of love,
And on my eyelids shall conjecture hang,
To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm,
And never shall it more be gracious.
Leon. Hath no man's dagger here a point for me?
[Hero swoons.]
Beat. Why, how now, cousin! wherefore sink you down?
D. John. Come, let us go. These things, come thus to light,
Smother her spirits up.
[Exeunt Don Pedro, Don John and Claudio.]
Bene. How doth the lady?
Beat. Dead, I think! help, uncle!
Hero! why, Hero! Uncle! Signior Benedick!
Friar!
Leon. O Fate! take not away thy heavy hand:
Death is the fairest cover for her shame
That may be wish'd for.
Beat. How now, cousin Hero!
Friar. Have comfort, lady.
Leon. Dost thou look up?
Friar. Yea; wherefore should she not?
Leon. Wherefore! Why, doth not every earthly thing
Cry shame upon her? Could she here deny
The story that is printed in her blood?
Do not live, Hero; do not ope thine eyes;
For, did I think thou wouldst not quickly die,
Thought I thy spirits were stronger than thy shames,
Myself would, on the rearward of reproaches,
Strike at thy life. Griev'd I, I had but one?

25 counterpoise: balance 26 render: give back 32 authority: authenticity 38 luxurious: lustful 43 in your own proof; cf. n. 48 'forehand sin: sin of over-haste 55 Dian in her orb: the chaste Diana, enthroned in the moon 60 wide: wide of the mark, incorrectly 68 True! cf. n. 74 kindly: natural

83 Hero itself, etc.; cf. n. 93 liberal: gross 100 much misgovernment: great misconduct 107 conjecture: suspicion 109 gracious: attractive 131 on the rearward of: following after

Chid I for that at frugal nature's frame?
O! one too much by thee. Why had I one?
Why ever wast thou lovely in mine eyes?
Why had I not with charitable hand
Took up a beggar's issue at my gates,
Who smirched thus, and mir'd with infamy,
I might have said, 'No part of it is mine;
This shame derives itself from unknown loins?'
But mine, and mine I lov'd, and mine I prais'd,
And mine that I was proud on, mine so much
That I myself was to myself not mine,
Valuing of her; why, she—O! she is fallen
Into a pit of ink, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her clean again,
And salt too little which may season give
To her foul-tainted flesh.
Bene. Sir, sir, be patient.
For my part, I am so attir'd in wonder,
I know not what to say.
Beat. O! on my soul, my cousin is belied!
Bene. Lady, were you her bedfellow last night?
Beat. No, truly, not; although, until last night,
I have this twelvemonth been her bedfellow.
Leon. Confirm'd, confirm'd! O! that is stronger made,
Which was before barr'd up with ribs of iron.
Would the two princes lie? and Claudio lie,
Who lov'd her so, that, speaking of her foulness,
Wash'd it with tears? Hence from her! let her die.
Friar. Hear me a little;
For I have only been silent so long,
And given way unto this course of fortune,
By noting of the lady: I have mark'd
A thousand blushing apparitions
To start into her face; a thousand innocent shames
In angel whiteness bear away those blushes;
And in her eye there hath appear'd a fire,
To burn the errors that these princes hold
Against her maiden truth. Call me a fool;
Trust not my reading nor my observations,
Which with experimental seal doth warrant
The tenour of my book; trust not my age,
My reverence, calling, nor divinity,
If this sweet lady lie not guiltless here
Under some biting error.
Leon. Friar, it cannot be.
Thou seest that all the grace that she hath left
Is, that she will not add to her damnation
A sin of perjury: she not denies it.
Why seek'st thou then to cover with excuse
That which appears in proper nakedness?
Friar. Lady, what man is he you are accus'd of?
Hero. They know that do accuse me, I know none;
If I know more of any man alive
Than that which maiden modesty doth warrant,
Let all my sins lack mercy! O, my father!
Prove you that any man with me convers'd
At hours unmeet, or that I yesternight
Maintain'd the change of words with any creature,
Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.
Friar. There is some strange misprision in the princes.
Bene. Two of them have the very bent of honour;
And if their wisdoms be misled in this,
The practice of it lives in John the bastard,
Whose spirits toil in frame of villainies.
Leon. I know not. If they speak but truth of her,
These hands shall tear her; if they wrong her honour,
The proudest of them shall well hear of it.
Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,
Nor age so eat up my invention,
Nor fortune made such havoc of my means,
Nor my bad life reft me so much of friends,
But they shall find, awak'd in such a kind,
Both strength of limb and policy of mind,
Ability in means and choice of friends,
To quit me of them throughly.
Friar. Pause awhile,
And let my counsel sway you in this case.
Your daughter here the princes left for dead;
Let her awhile be secretly kept in,
And publish it that she is dead indeed:
Maintain a mourning ostentation;
And on your family's old monument
Hang mournful epitaphs and do all rites
That appertain unto a burial.
Leon. What shall become of this? What will this do?
Friar. Marry, this well carried shall on her behalf
Change slander to remorse; that is some good:
But not for that dream I on this strange course,
But on this travail look for greater birth.
She dying, as it must be so maintain'd,
Upon the instant that she was accus'd,
Shall be lamented, pitied and excus'd
Of every hearer; for it so falls out
That what we have we prize not to the worth
Whiles we enjoy it, but being lack'd and lost,
Why, then we rack the value, then we find
The virtue that possession would not show us
Whiles it was ours. So will it fare with Claudio:
When he shall hear she died upon his words,
The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination,
And every lovely organ of her life
Shall come apparell'd in more precious habit,
More moving-delicate, and full of life
Into the eye and prospect of his soul,
Than when she liv'd indeed: then shall he mourn,—
If ever love had interest in his liver,—
And wish he had not so accused her,
No, though he thought his accusation true.
Let this be so, and doubt not but success
Will fashion the event in better shape
Than I can lay it down in likelihood.
But if all aim but this be levell'd false,

133 frame: established order 143 Cf. n. 144 Valuing: when estimating the value 145 that: so that 147 season: savor 150 attir'd: wrapped up 172 experimental seal: seal of experience 173 book: cf. n. 190 change: exchange

192 misprision: misunderstanding 193 bent: natural inclination 195 practice: trickery 196 frame: contrivance 201 invention: power of mind 204 kind: manner 207 quit . . . of: avenge . . . on 211 secretly kept in: kept hidden 213 mourning ostentation: show of mourning 228 rack: stretch 233 study of imagination: imaginative study 234 organ: faculty 235 habit: dress 236 moving-delicate: touchingly delicate 237 prospect: view 239 liver: supposed seat of love 242 success: the result 244 lay . . . likelihood: conjecture 245 Cf. n.

The supposition of the lady's death
Will quench the wonder of her infamy:
And if it sort not well, you may conceal her,—
As best befits her wounded reputation,—
In some reclusive and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds and injuries.
Bene. Signior Leonato, let the friar advise you:
And though you know my inwardness and love
Is very much unto the prince and Claudio,
Yet, by mine honour, I will deal in this
As secretly and justly as your soul
Should with your body.
Leon. Being that I flow in grief,
The smallest twine may lead me.
Friar. 'Tis well consented: presently away;
For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure.
Come, lady, die to live: this wedding day
Perhaps is but prolong'd: have patience and endure.
Exit [with Leonato and Hero.]
Bene. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while?
Beat. Yea, and I will weep a while longer.
Bene. I will not desire that.
Beat. You have no reason; I do it freely.
Bene. Surely I do believe your fair cousin is wronged.
Beat. Ah! how much might the man deserve of me that would right her.
Bene. Is there any way to show such friendship?
Beat. A very even way, but no such friend.
Bene. May a man do it?
Beat. It is a man's office, but not yours.
Bene. I do love nothing in the world so well as you: is not that strange?
Beat. As strange as the thing I know not.
It were as possible for me to say I loved nothing so well as you; but believe me not, and yet I lie not; I confess nothing, nor I deny nothing. I am sorry for my cousin.
Bene. By my sword, Beatrice, thou lovest me.
Beat. Do not swear by it, and eat it.
Bene. I will swear by it that you love me; and I will make him eat it that says I love not you.
Beat. Will you not eat your word?
Bene. With no sauce that can be devised to it. I protest I love thee.
Beat. Why then, God forgive me!
Bene. What offence, sweet Beatrice?
Beat. You have stayed me in a happy hour: I was about to protest I loved you.
Bene. And do it with all thy heart.
Beat. I love you with so much of my heart that none is left to protest.
Bene. Come, bid me do anything for thee.
Beat. Kill Claudio.
Bene. Ha! not for the wide world.
Beat. You kill me to deny it. Farewell.
Bene. Tarry, sweet Beatrice.
Beat. I am gone, though I am here: there is no love in you: nay, I pray you, let me go.
Bene. Beatrice,—

248 sort: turn out 250 reclusive: secluded 251 injuries: insults 253 inwardness: intimacy 258 flow in: overflow with 261 Cf. n. 263 prolong'd: postponed 272 even: smooth, easy 300 gone: absent in spirit

Beat. In faith, I will go.
Bene. We'll be friends first.
Beat. You dare easier be friends with me than fight with mine enemy.
Bene. Is Claudio thine enemy?
Beat. Is he not approved in the height a villain, that hath slandered, scorned, dishonoured my kinswoman? O! that I were a man. What! bear her in hand until they come to take hands, and then, with public accusation, uncovered slander, unmitigated rancour,—O God, that I were a man! I would eat his heart in the market-place.
Bene. Hear me, Beatrice,—
Beat. Talk with a man out at a window! a proper saying!
Bene. Nay, but Beatrice,—
Beat. Sweet Hero! she is wronged, she is slandered, she is undone.
Bene. Beat—
Beat. Princes and counties! Surely, a princely testimony, a goodly Count Comfect; a sweet gallant, surely! O! that I were a man for his sake, or that I had any friend would be a man for my sake! But manhood is melted into curtsies, valour into compliment, and men are only turned into tongue, and trim ones too: he is now as valiant as Hercules, that only tells a lie and swears it. I cannot be a man with wishing, therefore I will die a woman with grieving.
Bene. Tarry, good Beatrice. By this hand, I love thee.
Beat. Use it for my love some other way than swearing by it.
Bene. Think you in your soul the Count Claudio hath wronged Hero?
Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a soul.
Bene. Enough! I am engaged, I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render me a dear account. As you hear of me, so think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead; and so, farewell. [Exeunt.]

308 height: highest degree 310 bear . . . in hand: delude 311 uncovered: open 319 counties: counts 320 Comfect: sweetmeat Sc. ii; cf. n. 1 dissembly: i.e. assembly 4 Dogb.; cf. n. 5 exhibition: i.e. commission (?)

Scene Second

[A Prison]

Enter the Constables [Dogberry and Verges] and the Town Clerk [Sexton] in gowns, [with the Watch, Conrade and] Borachio.

Dogb. Is our whole dissembly appeared?
Verg. O! a stool and a cushion for the sexton.
Sexton. Which be the malefactors?
Dogb. Marry, that am I and my partner.
Verg. Nay, that's certain: we have the exhibition to examine.
Sexton. But which are the offenders that are to be examined? let them come before Master constable.
Dogb. Yea, marry, let them come before me. What is your name, friend?
Bora. Borachio.
Dogb. Pray write down Borachio. Yours, sirrah?
Con. I am a gentleman, sir, and my name is Conrade.
Dogb. Write down Master gentleman Conrade. Masters, do you serve God?
Con. } Yea, sir, we hope.
Bora. }

Dogb. Write down that they hope they serve God: and write God first; for God defend but God should go before such villains! Masters, it is proved already that you are little better than false knaves, and it will go near to be thought so shortly. How answer you for yourselves?

Con. Marry, sir, we say we are none.

Dogb. A marvellous witty fellow, I assure you; but I will go about with him. Come you hither, sirrah; a word in your ear: sir, I say to you, it is thought you are false knaves.

Bora. Sir, I say to you we are none.

Dogb. Well, stand aside. 'Fore God, they are both in a tale. Have you writ down, that they are none?

Sexton. Master constable, you go not the way to examine: you must call forth the watch that are their accusers.

Dogb. Yea, marry, that's the eftest way. Let the watch come forth. Masters, I charge you, in the prince's name, accuse these men.

First Watch. This man said, sir, that Don John, the prince's brother, was a villain.

Dogb. Write down Prince John a villain. Why, this is flat perjury, to call a prince's brother villain.

Bora. Master constable,—

Dogb. Pray thee, fellow, peace: I do not like thy look, I promise thee.

Sexton. What heard you him say else?

Sec. Watch. Marry, that he had received a thousand ducats of Don John for accusing the Lady Hero wrongfully.

Dogb. Flat burglary as ever was committed.

Verg. Yea, by the mass, that it is.

Sexton. What else, fellow?

First Watch. And that Count Claudio did mean, upon his words, to disgrace Hero before the whole assembly, and not marry her.

Dogb. O villain! thou wilt be condemned into everlasting redemption for this.

Sexton. What else?

Sec. Watch. This is all.

Sexton. And this is more, masters, than you can deny. Prince John is this morning secretly stolen away: Hero was in this manner accused, in this very manner refused, and, upon the grief of this, suddenly died. Master constable, let these men be bound, and brought to Leonato's: I will go before and show him their examination. [Exit.]

Dogb. Come, let them be opinioned.

Verg. Let them be in the hands—

Con. Off, coxcomb!

Dogb. God's my life! where's the sexton? let him write down the prince's officer coxcomb. Come, bind them. Thou naughty varlet!

Con. Away! you are an ass; you are an ass.

Dogb. Dost thou not suspect my place? Dost thou not suspect my years? O that he were here to write me down an ass! but, masters, remember that I am an ass; though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass. No, thou villain, thou art full of piety, as shall be proved upon thee by good witness. I am a wise fellow; and, which is more, an officer; and, which is more, a householder; and, which is more, as pretty a piece of flesh as any in Messina; and one that knows the law, go to; and a rich fellow enough, go to; and a fellow that hath had losses; and one that hath two gowns, and everything handsome about him. Bring him away. O that I had been writ down an ass! Exeunt.

21 go near to: almost 24 witty: cunning 25 go about with: circumvent 28 in a tale: agreed on one story 32 eftest: quickest (?) 61 opinioned: i.e. pinioned 61, 62 Cf. n. 66 naughty: good-for-naught 68 suspect: i.e. respect 72 piety: i.e. impiety 74 householder: head of a household

Act Fifth ❧ Scene First

[Before Leonato's House.]
Enter Leonato and his brother [Antonio].

Ant. If you go on thus, you will kill yourself;
And 'tis not wisdom thus to second grief
Against yourself.
Leon. I pray thee, cease thy counsel,
Which falls into mine ears as profitless
As water in a sieve: give not me counsel;
Nor let no comforter delight mine ear
But such a one whose wrongs do suit with mine:
Bring me a father that so lov'd his child,
Whose joy of her is overwhelm'd like mine,
And bid him speak of patience;
Measure his woe the length and breadth of mine,
And let it answer every strain for strain,
As thus for thus and such a grief for such,
In every lineament, branch, shape, and form:
If such a one will smile, and stroke his beard;
Bid sorrow wag, cry 'hem' when he should groan,
Patch grief with proverbs; make misfortune drunk
With candle-wasters; bring him yet to me,
And I of him will gather patience.
But there is no such man; for, brother, men
Can counsel and speak comfort to that grief
Which they themselves not feel; but, tasting it,
Their counsel turns to passion, which before
Would give preceptial medicine to rage,
Fetter strong madness in a silken thread,
Charm ache with air and agony with words.
No, no; 'tis all men's office to speak patience
To those that wring under the load of sorrow,
But no man's virtue nor sufficiency
To be so moral when he shall endure
The like himself. Therefore give me no counsel:
My griefs cry louder than advertisement.
Ant. Therein do men from children nothing differ.
Leon. I pray thee, peace! I will be flesh and blood;
For there was never yet philosopher
That could endure the toothache patiently,
However they have writ the style of gods
And made a push at chance and sufferance.
Ant. Yet bend not all the harm upon yourself;
Make those that do offend you suffer too.
Leon. There thou speak'st reason: nay, I will do so.
My soul doth tell me Hero is belied;

75 as pretty . . . flesh: as fine a fellow 2 second: assist 8 suit: agree 13 strain: strong feeling 17 wag: pass on; cf. n. 19 candle-wasters: sleepless revellers or students 25 preceptial: made up of precepts 27 air: mere breath 29 wring: writhe 31 moral: full of wisdom 33 advertisement: advice 38 style of: language worthy of 39 push: cf. n. sufferance: suffering

And that shall Claudio know; so shall the prince,
And all of them that thus dishonour her.
Ant. Here come the prince and Claudio hastily.

Enter Prince and Claudio.

D. Pedro. Good den, good den.
Claud. Good day to both of you.
Leon. Hear you, my lords,—
D. Pedro. We have some haste, Leonato.
Leon. Some haste, my lord! well, fare you well, my lord:
Are you so hasty now?—well, all is one.
D. Pedro. Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old man.
Ant. If he could right himself with quarrelling,
Some of us would lie low.
Claud. Who wrongs him?
Leon. Marry, thou dost wrong me; thou dissembler, thou.
Nay, never lay thy hand upon thy sword;
I fear thee not.
Claud. Marry, beshrew my hand,
If it should give your age such case of fear.
In faith, my hand meant nothing to my sword.
Leon. Tush, tush, man! never fleer and jest at me:
I speak not like a dotard nor a fool,
As, under privilege of age, to brag
What I have done being young, or what would do,
Were I not old. Know, Claudio, to thy head,
Thou hast so wrong'd mine innocent child and me
That I am forc'd to lay my reverence by,
And, with grey hairs and bruise of many days,
Do challenge thee to trial of a man.
I say thou hast belied mine innocent child:
Thy slander hath gone through and through her heart,
And she lies buried with her ancestors;
O! in a tomb where never scandal slept,
Save this of hers, fram'd by thy villainy!
Claud. My villainy?
Leon Thine, Claudio; thine, I say.
D. Pedro. You say not right, old man.
Leon My lord, my lord,
I'll prove it on his body, if he dare,
Despite his nice fence and his active practice,
His May of youth and bloom of lustihood.
Claud. Away! I will not have to do with you.
Leon. Canst thou so daff me? Thou hast kill'd my child;
If thou kill'st me, boy, thou shalt kill a man.
Ant. He shall kill two of us, and men indeed:
But that's no matter; let him kill one first:
Win me and wear me; let him answer me.
Come, follow me, boy; come, sir boy, come, follow me.
Sir boy, I'll whip you from your foining fence;
Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.
Leon. Brother,—
Ant. Content yourself. God knows I lov'd my niece;
And she is dead, slander'd to death by villains,
That dare as well answer a man indeed
As I dare take a serpent by the tongue.
Boys, apes, braggarts, Jacks, milksops!
Leon. Brother Antony,—
Ant. Hold you content. What, man! I know them, yea,
And what they weigh, even to the utmost scruple,
Scambling, out-facing, fashion-monging boys,
That lie and cog and flout, deprave and slander,
Go anticly, show outward hideousness,
And speak off half a dozen dangerous words,
How they might hurt their enemies, if they durst;
And this is all!
Leon. But, brother Antony,—
Ant. Come, 'tis no matter:
Do not you meddle, let me deal in this.
D. Pedro. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience.
My heart is sorry for your daughter's death;
But, on my honour, she was charg'd with nothing
But what was true and very full of proof.
Leon. My lord, my lord—
D. Pedro. I will not hear you.
Leon. No?
Come, brother, away. I will be heard.—
Ant. And shall, or some of us will smart for it.

Exeunt Leonato and Antonio.

Enter Benedick.

D. Pedro. See, see; here comes the man we went to seek.
Claud. Now, signior, what news?
Bene. Good day, my lord.
D. Pedro. Welcome, signior: you are almost come to part almost a fray.
Claud. We had like to have had our two noses snapped off with two old men without teeth.
D. Pedro. Leonato and his brother. What thinkest thou? Had we fought, I doubt we should have been too young for them.
Bene. In a false quarrel there is no true valour. I came to seek you both.
Claud. We have been up and down to seek thee; for we are high-proof melancholy, and would fain have it beaten away. Wilt thou use thy wit?
Bene. It is in my scabbard; shall I draw it?
D. Pedro. Dost thou wear thy wit by thy side?
Claud. Never any did so, though very many have been beside their wit. I will bid thee draw, as we do the minstrels; draw, to pleasure us.
D. Pedro. As I am an honest man, he looks pale. Art thou sick, or angry?
Claud. What, courage, man! What though care killed a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.
Bene. Sir, I shall meet your wit in the career, an you charge it against me. I pray you choose another subject.
Claud. Nay then, give him another staff: this last was broke cross.
D. Pedro. By this light, he changes more and more: I think he be angry indeed.
Claud. If he be, he knows how to turn his girdle.
Bene. Shall I speak a word in your ear?
Claud. God bless me from a challenge!
Bene. [Aside to Claudio.] You are a villain; I jest not: I will

52 all is one: 'tis all the same 60 beshrew: curse 63 fleer: sneer 67 to thy head: to thy face 82 fence: skill in fencing 83 lustihood: vigor 89 Win me, etc.; cf. n. 91 foining: thrusting make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare. Do me right, or I will protest your cowardice. You have killed a sweet lady, and her death shall fall heavy on you. Let me hear from you.

102 Scambling: contentious out-facing: swaggering 103 cog: cheat deprave: vilify 104 anticly: dressed like clowns 111 wake your patience; cf. n. 133 high-proof: in the highest degree 137 beside their wit: out of their wits draw; cf. n. 143 in the career: at full speed 144 charge: direct 145 staff: lance broke cross; cf. n. 149 turn his girdle; cf. n.

Claud. Well I will meet you, so I may have good cheer.

D. Pedro. What, a feast, a feast?

Claud. I' faith, I thank him; he hath bid me to a calf's-head and a capon, the which if I do not carve most curiously, say my knife's naught. Shall I not find a woodcock too?

Bene. Sir, your wit ambles well; it goes easily.

D. Pedro. I'll tell thee how Beatrice praised thy wit the other day. I said, thou hadst a fine wit. 'True,' says she, 'a fine little one.' 'No,' said I, 'a great wit.' 'Right,' said she, 'a great gross one.' 'Nay,' said I, 'a good wit.' 'Just,' said she, 'it hurts nobody.' 'Nay,' said I, 'the gentlemen is wise.' 'Certain,' said she, 'a wise gentleman.' 'Nay,' said I, 'he hath the tongues.' 'That I believe,' said she, 'for he swore a thing to me on Monday night, which he forswore on Tuesday morning: there's a double tongue; there's two tongues.' Thus did she, an hour together, trans-shape thy particular virtues; yet at last she concluded with a sigh, thou wast the properest man in Italy.

Claud. For the which she wept heartily and said she cared not.

D. Pedro. Yea, that she did; but yet, for all that, an if she did not hate him deadly, she would love him dearly. The old man's daughter told us all.

Claud. All, all; and moreover, God saw him when he was hid in the garden.

D. Pedro. But when shall we set the savage bull's horns on the sensible Benedick's head?

Claud. Yea, and text underneath, 'Here dwells Benedick the married man!'

Bene. Fare you well, boy: you know my mind. I will leave you now to your gossip-like humour: you break jests as braggarts do their blades, which, God be thanked, hurt not. My lord, for your many courtesies I thank you: I must discontinue your company. Your brother the bastard is fled from Messina: you have, among you, killed a sweet and innocent lady. For my Lord Lack-beard there, he and I shall meet; and till then, peace be with him. [Exit.]

D. Pedro. He is in earnest.

Claud. In most profound earnest; and, I'll warrant you, for the love of Beatrice.

D. Pedro. And hath challenged thee?

Claud. Most sincerely.

D. Pedro. What a pretty thing man is when he goes in his doublet and hose and leaves off his wit!

Claud. He is then a giant to an ape; but then is an ape a doctor to such a man.

D. Pedro. But, soft you; let me be: pluck up, my heart, and be sad! Did he not say my brother was fled?

Enter Constable [Dogberry, Verges, and Watch, with] Conrade and Borachio.

Dogb. Come, you, sir: if justice cannot tame you, she shall ne'er weigh more reasons in her balance. Nay, an you be a cursing hypocrite once, you must be looked to.

D. Pedro. How now! two of my brother's men bound! Borachio, one!

Claud. Hearken after their offence, my lord.

D. Pedro. Officers, what offence have these men done?

Dogb. Marry, sir, they have committed false report; moreover, they have spoken untruths; secondarily, they are slanders; sixth and lastly, they have belied a lady; thirdly, they have verified unjust things; and to conclude, they are lying knaves.

D. Pedro. First, I ask thee what they have done; thirdly, I ask thee what's their offence; sixth and lastly, why they are committed; and, to conclude, what you lay to their charge?

Claud. Rightly reasoned, and in his own division; and, by my troth, there's one meaning well suited.

D. Pedro. Who have you offended, masters, that you are thus bound to your answer? this learned constable is too cunning to be understood. What's your offence?

Bora. Sweet prince, let me go no further to mine answer: do you hear me, and let this count kill me. I have deceived even your very eyes: what your wisdoms could not discover, these shallow fools have brought to light; who, in the night overheard me confessing to this man how Don John your brother incensed me to slander the Lady Hero; how you were brought into the orchard and saw me court Margaret in Hero's garments; how you disgraced her, when you should marry her. My villainy they have upon record; which I had rather seal with my death than repeat over to my shame. The lady is dead upon mine and my master's false accusation; and, briefly, I desire nothing but the reward of a villain.

D. Pedro. Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?

Claud. I have drunk poison whiles he utter'd it.

D. Pedro. But did my brother set thee on to this?

Bora. Yea; and paid me richly for the practice of it.

D. Pedro. He is compos'd and fram'd of treachery:
And fled he is upon this villainy.

Claud. Sweet Hero! now thy image doth appear
In the rare semblance that I lov'd it first.

Dogb. Come, bring away the plaintiffs: by this time our sexton hath reformed Signior Leonato of the matter. And masters, do not forget to specify, when time and place shall serve, that I am an ass.

Verg. Here, here comes Master Signior Leonato, and the sexton too.

Enter Leonato [, Antonio, and the Sexton].

Leon. Which is the villain? Let me see his eyes,
That, when I note another man like him,
I may avoid him. Which of these is he?

Bora. If you would know your wronger, look on me.

Leon. Art thou the slave that with thy breath hast kill'd
Mine innocent child?

Bora. Yea, even I alone.

Leon. No, not so, villain; thou beliest thyself:
Here stand a pair of honourable men;
A third is fled, that had a hand in it.
I thank you, princes, for my daughter's death:
Record it with your high and worthy deeds.
'Twas bravely done, if you bethink you of it.

154 Do me right: give me satisfaction protest: proclaim 161 curiously: daintily naught: worthless woodcock: a stupid bird 168 a wise gentleman; cf. n. 172 trans-shape: distort 199 leaves off his wit; cf. n. 201 doctor: learned man; cf. n. 202 soft you: gently! pluck up: rouse thyself

209 Hearken after: inquire into 212 slanders: i.e. slanderers 214 verified: i.e. testified 219 well suited; cf. n. 221 to your answer: to answer for your conduct 228 incensed: instigated 243 plaintiffs: i.e. defendants 244 reformed: i.e. informed 245 specify: i.e. testify (?)

Claud. I know not how to pray your patience;
Yet I must speak. Choose your revenge yourself;
Impose me to what penance your invention
Can lay upon my sin: yet sinn'd I not
But in mistaking.
D. Pedro. By my soul, nor I:
And yet, to satisfy this good old man,
I would bend under any heavy weight
That he'll enjoin me to.
Leon. I cannot bid you bid my daughter live;
That were impossible: but, I pray you both,
Possess the people in Messina here
How innocent she died; and if your love
Can labour aught in sad invention,
Hang her an epitaph upon her tomb,
And sing it to her bones: sing it to-night.
To-morrow morning come you to my house,
And since you could not be my son-in-law,
Be yet my nephew. My brother hath a daughter,
Almost the copy of my child that's dead,
And she alone is heir to both of us:
Give her the right you should have given her cousin,
And so dies my revenge.
Claud. O noble sir,
Your over-kindness doth wring tears from me!
I do embrace your offer; and dispose
For henceforth of poor Claudio.
Leon. To-morrow then I will expect your coming;
To-night I take my leave. This naughty man
Shall face to face be brought to Margaret,
Who, I believe, was pack'd in all this wrong,
Hir'd to it by your brother.
Bora. No, by my soul she was not;
Nor knew not what she did when she spoke to me;
But always hath been just and virtuous
In anything that I do know by her.
Dogb. Moreover, sir,—which, indeed, is not under white and black,—this plaintiff here, the offender, did call me ass: I beseech you, let it be remembered in his punishment. And also, the watch heard them talk of one Deformed: they say he wears a key in his ear and a lock hanging by it, and borrows money in God's name, the which he hath used so long and never paid, that now men grow hard-hearted, and will lend nothing for God's sake. Pray you, examine him upon that point.
Leon. I thank thee for thy care and honest pains.
Dogb. Your worship speaks like a most thankful and reverend youth, and I praise God for you.
Leon. There's for thy pains.
Dogb. God save the foundation!
Leon. Go, I discharge thee of thy prisoner, and I thank thee.
Dogb. I leave an arrant knave with your worship; which I beseech your worship to correct yourself, for the example of others. God keep your worship! I wish your worship well; God restore you to health! I humbly give you leave to depart, and if a merry meeting may be wished, God prohibit it! Come, neighbour. Exeunt [Dogberry and Verges].

Leon. Until to-morrow morning, lords, farewell.
Ant. Farewell, my lords: we look for you to-morrow.
D. Pedro. We will not fail.
Claud. To-night I'll mourn with Hero.
[Exeunt Don Pedro and Claudio.]
Leon [To the Watch.] Bring you these fellows on. We'll talk with Margaret,
How her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Leonato's Orchard.]
Enter Benedick and Margaret.

Bene. Pray thee, sweet Mistress Margaret, deserve well at my hands by helping me to the speech of Beatrice.
Marg. Will you then write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty?
Bene. In so high a style, Margaret, that no man living shall come over it; for, in most comely truth, thou deservest it.
Marg. To have no man come over me! why, shall I always keep below stairs?
Bene. Thy wit is as quick as the greyhound's mouth; it catches.
Marg. And yours as blunt as the fencer's foils, which hit, but hurt not.
Bene. A most manly wit, Margaret; it will not hurt a woman: and so, I pray thee, call Beatrice. I give thee the bucklers.
Marg. Give us the swords, we have bucklers of our own.
Bene. If you use them, Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice; and they are dangerous weapons for maids.
Marg. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who I think hath legs.
Bene. And therefore will come. Exit Margaret.

'The god of love,
That sits above,
And knows me, and knows me,
How pitiful I deserve,—'

I mean, in singing; but in loving, Leander the good swimmer, Troilus the first employer of pandars, and a whole book full of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose names yet run smoothly in the even road of a blank verse, why, they were never so truly turned over and over as my poor self, in love. Marry, I cannot show it in rime; I have tried: I can find out no rime to 'lady' but 'baby,' an innocent rime; for 'scorn,' 'horn,' a hard rime; for 'school,' 'fool,' a babbling rime; very ominous endings: no, I was not born under a riming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms.

Enter Beatrice.

Sweet Beatrice, wouldst thou come when I called thee?
Beat. Yea, signior; and depart when you bid me.
Bene. O, stay but till then!

264 Impose: subject 273 Possess: inform 292 pack'd: implicated 297 by: concerning 298, 299 under black and white: in writing 311 foundation; cf. n. 317 prohibit: i.e. permit (?)

5 style; cf. n. 8 keep below stairs: remain a servant 14, 15 give ... bucklers: yield 18 vice; cf. n. 26, 27 Leander ... Troilus: cf. n. 28 quondam carpet-mongers: carpet-knights of old 32 innocent: silly 34 riming planet; cf. n. 35 festival terms: language not used every day

Beat. 'Then' is spoken; fare you well now: and yet, ere I go, let me go with that I came for; which is, with knowing what hath passed between you and Claudio.

Bene. Only foul words; and thereupon I will kiss thee.

Beat. Foul words is but foul wind, and foul wind is but foul breath, and foul breath is noisome; therefore I will depart unkissed.

Bene. Thou hast frighted the word out of his right sense, so forcible is thy wit. But I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge, and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward. And, I pray thee now, tell me, for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in love with me?

Beat. For them all together; which maintained so politic a state of evil that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them. But for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me?

Bene. 'Suffer love,' a good epithet! I do suffer love indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spite of your heart, I think. Alas, poor heart! If you spite it for my sake, I will spite it for yours; for I will never love that which my friend hates.

Bene. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceably.

Beat. It appears not in this confession: there's not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself.

Bene. An old, an old instance, Beatrice, that lived in the time of good neighbours. If a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monument than the bell rings and the widow weeps.

Beat. And how long is that, think you?

Bene. Question: why, an hour in clamour and a quarter rheum: therefore it is most expedient for the wise,—if Don Worm, his conscience, find no impediment to the contrary,— to be the trumpet of his own virtues, as I am to myself. So much for praising myself, who, I myself will bear witness, is praiseworthy. And now tell me, how doth your cousin?

Beat. Very ill.

Bene. And how do you?

Beat. Very ill too.

Bene. Serve God, love me, and mend. There will I leave you too, for here comes one in haste.

Enter Ursula.

Urs. Madam, you must come to your uncle. Yonder's old coil at home: it is proved, my Lady Hero hath been falsely accused, the prince and Claudio mightily abused; and Don John is the author of all, who is fled and gone. Will you come presently?

Beat. Will you go hear this news, signior?

Bene. I will live in thy heart, die in thy lap, and be buried in thy eyes; and moreover I will go with thee to thy uncle's.

Exeunt.

46 his: its 47, 48 undergoes: is subject to (?) 49 subscribe: write down 52 politic: prudently governed 64 instance: saying (?) 65 time of good neighbours; cf. n. 69 Question: that is the question clamour: i.e. sound of the bell 70 rheum: tears 70, 71 Don Worm; cf. n. 79 mend: recover health 81 old coil: a great ado 83 abused: deceived

Scene Third

[Within the Church]

Enter Claudio, Prince, and three or four with tapers.

Claud. Is this the monument of Leonato?

A Lord. It is, my lord.

[Claud., reading the] Epitaph.

'Done to death by slanderous tongues
Was the Hero that here lies:
Death, in guerdon of her wrongs,
Gives her fame which never dies.
So the life that died with shame
Lives in death with glorious fame.'

Hang thou there upon the tomb,
Praising her when I am dumb.
Now, music, sound, and sing your solemn hymn.

Song

'Pardon, goddess of the night,
Those that slew thy virgin knight;
For the which, with songs of woe,
Round about her tomb they go.
Midnight, assist our moan;
Help us to sigh and groan,
Heavily, heavily:
Graves, yawn and yield your dead,
Till death be uttered,
Heavily, heavily.'

Claud. Now, unto thy bones good night!
yearly will I do this rite.

D. Pedro. Good morrow, masters: put your torches out.
The wolves have prey'd; and look, the gentle day,
Before the wheels of Phœbus, round about
Dapples the drowsy east with spots of grey.
Thanks to you all, and leave us: fare you well.

Claud. Good morrow, masters: each his several way.

D. Pedro. Come, let us hence, and put on other weeds;
And then to Leonato's we will go.

Claud. And Hymen now with luckier issue speed's,
Than this for whom we render'd up this woe! Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[Leonato's House]

Enter Leonato, Antonio, Benedick, [Beatrice,] Margaret, Ursula, Friar and Hero.

Friar. Did I not tell you she was innocent?

Leon. So are the prince and Claudio, who accus'd her
Upon the error that you heard debated:
But Margaret was in some fault for this,
Although against her will, as it appears
In the true course of all the question.

Ant. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.

9, 10 Cf. n. 20 uttered; cf. n. 25 have prey'd: have ceased to prey (night is over) 30 weeds: garments 32 luckier issue: better fortune speed's: grant us help 33 this; cf. n. 3 debated: discussed 6 In the true course, etc.; cf. n.

Bene. And so am I, being else by faith enforc'd
To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.
Leon. Well, daughter, and you gentlewomen all,
Withdraw into a chamber by yourselves,
And when I send for you, come hither, mask'd;
The prince and Claudio promis'd by this hour
To visit me. Exeunt ladies.
You know your office, brother;
You must be father to your brother's daughter,
And give her to young Claudio.
Ant. Which I will do with confirm'd countenance.
Bene. Friar, I must entreat your pains, I think.
Friar. To do what, signior?
Bene. To bind me, or undo me; one of them.
Signior Leonato, truth it is, good signior,
Your niece regards me with an eye of favour.
Leon. That eye my daughter lent her: 'tis most true.
Bene. And I do with an eye of love requite her.
Leon. The sight whereof I think, you had from me,
From Claudio, and the prince. But what's your will?
Bene. Your answer, sir, is enigmatical:
But, for my will, my will is your good will
May stand with ours, this day to be conjoin'd
In the state of honourable marriage:
In which, good friar, I shall desire your help.
Leon. My heart is with your liking.
Friar. And my help.
Here come the prince and Claudio.

Enter Prince and Claudio, with Attendants.

D. Pedro. Good morrow to this fair assembly.
Leon. Good morrow, prince; good morrow, Claudio:
We here attend you. Are you yet determin'd
To-day to marry with my brother's daughter?
Claud. I'll hold my mind, were she an Ethiop.
Leon. Call her forth, brother: here's the friar ready.
[Exit Antonio.]
D. Pedro. Good morrow, Benedick. Why, what's the matter,
That you have such a February face,
So full of frost, of storm and cloudiness?
Claud. I think he thinks upon the savage bull.
Tush! fear not, man, we'll tip thy horns with gold,
And all Europa shall rejoice at thee,
As once Europa did at lusty Jove,
When he would play the noble beast in love.
Bene. Bull Jove, sir, had an amiable low:
And some such strange bull leap'd your father's cow,
And got a calf in that same noble feat,
Much like to you, for you have just his bleat.
Claud. For this I owe you: here come other reckonings.

Enter Antonio [with] Hero, Beatrice, Margaret, Ursula [masked].

Which is the lady I must seize upon?
Ant. This same is she, and I do give you her.
Claud. Why, then she's mine. Sweet, let me see your face.
Leon. No, that you shall not, till you take her hand
Before this friar, and swear to marry her.
Claud. Give me your hand: before this holy friar,
I am your husband, if you like of me.
Hero. And when I liv'd, I was your other wife:
[Unmasking.]
And when you lov'd, you were my other husband.
Claud. Another Hero!
Hero. Nothing certainer
One Hero died defil'd, but I do live,
And surely as I live, I am a maid.
D. Pedro. The former Hero! Hero that is dead!
Leon. She died, my lord, but whiles her slander liv'd.
Friar. All this amazement can I qualify:
When after that the holy rites are ended,
I'll tell you largely of fair Hero's death:
Meantime, let wonder seem familiar,
And to the chapel let us presently.
Bene. Soft and fair, friar. Which is Beatrice?
Beat. [Unmasking.] I answer to that name.
What is your will?
Bene. Do not you love me?
Beat. Why, no; no more than reason.
Bene. Why, then, your uncle and the prince and Claudio
Have been deceived; for they swore you did.
Beat. Do not you love me?
Bene. Troth, no; no more than reason.
Beat. Why, then, my cousin, Margaret, and Ursula,
Are much deceiv'd; for they did swear you did.
Bene. They swore that you were almost sick for me.
Beat. They swore that you were well-nigh dead for me.
Bene. 'Tis no such matter. Then, you do not love me?
Beat. No, truly, but in friendly recompense.
Leon. Come, cousin, I am sure you love the gentleman.
Claud. And I'll be sworn upon 't that he loves her;
For here's a paper written in his hand,
A halting sonnet of his own pure brain,
Fashion'd to Beatrice.
Hero. And here's another,
Writ in my cousin's hand, stolen from her pocket,
Containing her affection unto Benedick.
Bene. A miracle! here's our own hands against our hearts.
Come, I will have thee; but, by this light, I take thee for pity.
Beat. I would not deny you; but, by this good day, I yield upon great persuasion, and partly to save your life, for I was told you were in a consumption.
Bene. Peace! I will stop your mouth. [Kisses her.]
D. Pedro. How dost thou, 'Benedick, the married man'?
Bene. I'll tell thee what, prince; a college of witcrackers cannot flout me out of my humour. Dost thou think I care for a satire or an epigram? No; if a man will be beaten with brains, a' shall wear nothing handsome about him. In brief, since I do purpose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it; and therefore never flout at me for what I have said against it, for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion. For thy part, Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee; but, in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruised, and love my cousin.
Claud. I had well hoped thou wouldst have denied Beatrice, that I might have cudgelled thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double-dealer; which, out of question, thou wilt be, if my cousin do not look exceeding narrowly to thee.

8 by faith: by my pledged word 18 confirm'd: steady 21 undo: (1) unbind, (2) ruin 45 Cf. n. 47, 48 Europa; cf. n. 54 owe you: i.e. owe you an answer 61 like of: care for 70 qualify: moderate 72 largely: fully 73 let wonder, etc.; cf. n. 83 Troth: by my troth 93 his own pure: purely his own 105 Cf. n. 108 beaten with brains, etc.; cf. n.

Bene. Come, come, we are friends. Let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts and our wives' heels.

Leon. We'll have dancing afterward.

Bene. First, of my word; therefore play, music! Prince, thou art sad; get thee a wife, get thee a wife: there is no staff more reverend than one tipped with horn.

Enter Messenger.

Mes. My lord, your brother John is ta'en in flight,
And brought with armed men back to Messina.

Bene. Think not on him till to-morrow; I'll devise thee brave punishments for him. Strike up, pipers! Dance.

FINIS

118 double-dealer: cf. n. 124 of: on 130 brave: fine

Notes

I.i.S. d. [Before Antonio's Orchard], etc. The quarto edition of this play (1600) makes no division into either acts or scenes. The folio edition (1623) divides the acts correctly, but does not mark the separate scenes, except in the case of the present one, the first. Neither of the early editions indicates where the action of the various scenes occurs. In the present instance modern editors have usually located the scene 'Before Leonato's House.' Line 83-85 and 232, however, suggest that Leonato and his family have come to meet their distinguished guests near the edge of the town, and lines 7-9 of scene ii point to the neighborhood of Antonio's orchard (i.e. garden) as the place of meeting. See L. Mason, Modern Philology, xi. 379-89.

I.i.S. d. Innogen, his wife. Leonato's wife is mentioned only in this stage direction and in that at the opening of Act II. Modern editors have therefore regularly omitted her name in both places. It is possible that Shakespeare gave her a small part in the first draft of the play, and subsequently cut it out for the sake of compression.

I.i.6 sort. The interpretation of this word given in the footnote is preferred by most editors; but it is possible to take the word in the more general sense which it bears at present: 'kind.'

I.i.25 Mountanto. A team in fencing, 'upper-cut,' used by Beatrice to characterize Benedick's lively and pugnacious disposition.

I.i.32-34 challenged Cupid . . . bird-bolt. The jest is that Benedick vaingloriously challenged Cupid to a contest at shooting hearts, to which Leonato's fool replied by suggesting himself as Benedick's proper competitor and the childish bird-bolt as his proper weapon.

I.i.48, 49 stuffed . . . stuffing. Beatrice calls Benedick a 'stuffed' man because of his proneness to over-eat; then, playing with the phrase, suggests that his 'stuffing'—what is in him, what he is made of—is of no very fine quality.

I.i.54 five wits. 'Not the five senses, but the five other wits: the memory, fantasy, estimation, imagination, and common wit. Benedick is left the last only.'

I.i.56 bear it for a difference. Alluding to a term in heraldry, where a 'difference' was some slight mark added to differentiate coats of arms otherwise indistinguishable.

I.i.57, 58 to be known, etc. This infinitive clause is the subject of the sentence. Bare recognition as a rational creature, not a dumb animal, is all the intellectual wealth Benedick has left.

I.i.72 the Benedick. Beatrice affects to think the harmful result of Benedick's company a physical disease, like the colic.

I.i.113 a predestinate scratched face. The gentleman destined to marry Beatrice is predestined to have his face scratched by her. If she refuses to marry, he will escape that destiny.

I.i.115 an. The conjunction 'and,' one old meaning of which was 'if.' Here and regularly elsewhere the old editions spell 'and,' which modern editors alter for the sake of clearness.

I.i.118 A bird of my tongue, etc. 'A bird taught to speak like me,' alluding to Benedick's gibe, 'parrot-teacher.' The latter part of the sentence implies that only a beast could be taught to speak like Benedick.

I.i.122 a jade's trick. Some such trick of a bad horse as slipping the head out of the collar and escaping. Beatrice gibes at Benedick's sudden breaking off of the dispute.

I.i.138 noted. Benedick puns on one of the less obvious meanings of the word. Possibly the sense he has in mind is to provide with notes, set to music: 'I did not set the young lady to music,' i.e. did not go into raptures over her.

I.i.155 Cupid . . . carpenter. It would be an obvious absurdity to select the blind god, Cupid, to spy out the sitting hare, or to name Vulcan, the god of the flaming forge, as a proper person to work with the carpenter's inflammable materials.

I.i.167 wear his cap with suspicion. 'Deceived husbands, according to the ancient jest, wore invisible horns. Every husband, therefore, would suspect his cap of concealing horns.' (MacCracken.)

I.i.170 sigh away Sundays. It is hardly clear whether Sundays are particularly named because the days normally most happily spent or because the discontented husband would be most conscious of his yoke in the special domesticity of Sundays.

I.i.181 Like the old tale, etc. An old children's tale, somewhat similar to that of Bluebeard, survived till the eighteenth century, in which occurred the words: 'It is not so, nor it was not so, and God forbid it should be so.'

I.i.203 recheat winded in my forehead . . . invisible baldrick. Another allusion to the invisible 'horns'; cf. note on l. 167. The recheat was a horn blast blown (winded) to recall the hounds from the chase; the baldrick, a strap worn across the shoulder and supporting the horn.

I.i.213 for the sign of blind Cupid. Alluding to the pictorial signs hung up before places of business in Shakespeare's time. Benedick, treated as he suggests and hung up at the door, would make a proper illustration for 'The Blind Cupid.'

I.i.216 hang me in a bottle like a cat, etc. 'Bottle' means probably the wicker basket used to hold the cat used as the mark in archery contests.

I.i.218 called Adam. A special title of honor for the successful archer, doubtless from the fame of the archer-outlaw of the ballads, Adam Bell.

I.i.220 'In time the savage bull doth bear the yoke.' A line quoted from memory, and not quite accurately, from Thomas Kyd's famous Spanish Tragedy (composed about 1587).

I.i.228, 229 Cupid . . . Venice. Venice was famed for frivolity.

I.i.231. temporize. The meaning is not certain. 'Come to terms' is one explanation; another, rather more probable, is 'become tempered', i.e. grow milder. 'With the hours' means 'in the course of time.'

I.i.236-240 and so I commit you . . . your loving friend, Benedick. The words of Benedick suggest to Claudio the conventional mode of concluding formal letters, which he and Don Pedro proceed to parody. The sixth of July, formerly celebrated as Midsummer Day, is mentioned because of its suggestion of 'midsummer madness.'

I.i.242 guarded with fragments, etc. Metaphors from tailoring. Benedick means that Don Pedro and Claudio cannot in conscience afford to mock at trite phrases ('flout old ends'), for their own conversation is often made up of just such materials very poorly assimilated.

I.i.274 The fairest grant is the necessity. The best gift is the one which just fits the need of the recipient; i.e. it is a mistake to be excessive.

I.ii.1 my cousin, your son. Antonio's son is not elsewhere mentioned, and V.i.284 suggests that he has no son. The inconsistency may be due to oversight. The 'cousins' and 'cousin' addressed by Leonato in ll. 21 and 22 are probably more distant relatives, dependants of his household.

I.iii.9 born under Saturn. According to the old belief, persons born under the domination of the planet Saturn acquired the morose disposition hence called saturnine.

I.iii.47 smoking a musty room. Elizabethan rooms, strewn with stale rushes, often required perfuming in order to dispel unpleasant odors.

I.iii.48 comes me. Shakespeare very frequently employs a dative personal pronoun, as here, in a sense not found in modern usage. It is sometimes called the 'ethical' dative and merely suggests the interest of the person referred to in the act mentioned.

II.i.33, 34 lead his apes into hell. An allusion to a very common ancient saying that women who died old maids 'led apes in hell.' The origin of the phrase is uncertain; it may refer to the weakness of elderly spinsters for pet animals. Small apes held the place in their affection in Tudor times which cats hold to-day.

II.i.39, 40 for the heavens. The phrase can be interpreted either (1) 'on my way to heaven,' St. Peter being the gate-keeper whom one met before entering; or (2) as a petty oath equivalent to 'by heaven' or perhaps 'for dear life.'

II.i.69 I can see a church by daylight. 'I am not wholly blind.' The church would be the most conspicuous object in nearly any old town.

II.i.81 Philemon's roof. A reference to the story in Ovid's Metamorphoses (bk. viii) of how the peasant couple, Philemon and Baucis, entertained Jupiter under their humble roof. Hence, thatch'd in line 82, peasant cottages having thatched roofs.

II.i.93 Answer, clerk. Balthazar's Amen in the previous speech reminds Margaret of the parish clerk, whose business was to read out the responses at church in a loud voice.

II.i.111 the 'Hundred Merry Tales.' A popular collection of coarse anecdotes.

II.i.123 fleet. Properly a company of vessels sailing together, Beatrice uses the word of the company of masqueraders present. The nautical suggestion of the word leads her to continue the figure in the word boarded, which implies the attack of one vessel on another.

II.i.155 use. It is disputed whether this word is a plain indicative or a subjunctive, equivalent to 'let all hearts . . . use.' The latter seems more probable.

II.i.165, 166 willow . . . garland. Referring to the garlands of weeping willow worn by forsaken lovers.

II.i.175 like the blind man, etc. An allusion to an incident at the close of the first chapter of the Spanish novel, Lazarillo de Tormes.

II.i.178 creep into sedges. Waterfowl, when wounded, creep for shelter into the sedges along the river bank. So Claudio will go off and pine by himself.

II.i.182 base though bitter. The adjectives have been condemned as unintelligible in their context; but Benedick means to condemn the disposition of Beatrice as 'base,' i.e. unworthy, unjust, while admitting that her words have a sting (bitterness) which 'base' criticisms do not usually possess.

II.i.187 Lady Fame. The Vergilian deity Fama, Rumor, who goes about the world spreading news.

II.i.206, 207 If their singing, etc. 'If the birds sings as you say (i.e. if Hero consents to do as you intend and marry Claudio) . . . what you say is creditable to you.'

II.i.216 like a man at a mark. In archery contests a man stood beside the mark to check off the contestants' arrows as they struck. It was a perilous position when the archers shot badly.

II.i.219 infect to the north star. The infection of her breath would reach beyond planetary space.

II.i.221 made Hercules have turned spit, etc. Beatrice would have treated Hercules worse than Omphale, who in the legend put him into domestic service. Turning the spit was the meanest office in the Elizabethan kitchen. It was often performed by dogs.

II.i.223 infernal Ate in good apparel. Beatrice is like Ate, the goddess of discord, in everything except that she wears the clothes of a fashionable gentlewoman.

II.i.224 I would . . . some scholar would conjure her. Scholars were reputed to be able to raise up and banish evil spirits.

II.i.234 Prester John's foot. Prester John was a fabled Christian king, supposed to live in some remote part of Asia or Africa.

II.i.235 the Great Cham's beard. The Great Cham or Grand Khan was the ruler of the Mongols.

II.i.235 the Pigmies. The fabulous race who fought with cranes.

II.i.236 harpy. The Harpies were rapacious female monsters who afflicted voyagers.

II.i.257 civil . . . civil. A pun on civil and Seville, commonly spelled and pronounced alike. Seville oranges are bitter-sweet, neither one thing nor the other. Hence the application to Claudio. Yellow, the color of oranges, is also the color (complexion) of jealousy (l. 258).

II.i.279 alliance. I.e. relationship by marriage. Beatrice teases Claudio for addressing her as 'cousin' as if he were already married to her cousin Hero.

II.i.280. sun-burnt. Probably, a mild way of saying 'unattractive'; but some editors explain it as 'exposed to the sun,' unsheltered, i.e. a lone woman.

II.ii.37 term me Claudio. Editors have found difficulty in understanding why Margaret should address Borachio by any name but his own; but how is Margaret, who is not privy to the design against her mistress, to be prevented from suspecting a plot when she hears herself loudly called 'Hero,' unless Borachio has previously persuaded her to act out a little play in which they are to simulate the happiness of the declared lovers?

II.iii.5 I am here already, sir. The boy indulges in hyperbole: 'I will go so fast that you may say I am back again already.' Benedick pretends to take his words literally.

II.iii.13 the tabor and the pipe. Drum and fife (l. 12) are of course the instruments of martial music; tabor (a small drum) and pipe are the corresponding instruments which appear in times of peaceful revelry.

II.iii.28 noble . . . angel. A pun, frequent in Shakespeare, on the names of two coins of his day. A 'noble' was worth one-third of a sovereign (i.e. 6s. 8d.), an 'angel' half a sovereign (10s.).

II.iii.30 of what colour it pleases God. That is, her hair must not be dyed.

II.iii.S. d. Balthazar. The folio edition here substitutes for 'Balthazar' the name of the actor who took his part: Iacke Wilson. Compare the note on IV. ii.

II.iii.37 kid-fox. Since 'kid fox' does not appear to have been a current name for a young fox, many of the best editors are disposed to alter the text to 'the hid fox.'

II.iii.41, 42 It is the witness still of excellency, etc. 'It is always (still) a proof of excellence that, in demeanour, it is unconscious, or unknowing, of its own perfection.' (Furness.)

II.iii.53 crotchets. A pun on two meanings of the word: (1) whims, (2) notes of music.

II.iii.54 notes, notes, forsooth, and nothing! A pun is evident here, 'nothing' being pronounced by Elizabethans much or precisely like 'noting.' It has been suggested that a similar pun is involved in the title of the play, Much Ado about Nothing (or Noting, i.e. eavesdropping).

II.iii.85 night-raven. The voice of this bird (which has not been certainly identified) was supposed to betoken some 'plague,' especially sickness or death.

II.iii.86 Yea, marry. These words have no reference, of course, to the speech of Benedick, who has hidden himself apart from the others (cf. l. 35). Furness explains that while Benedick speaks the Prince has been talking to Claudio about the music for Hero 'to-morrow night' (l. 87) and that he here assents to Claudio's suggestion.

II.iii.93 Stalk on, etc. A figure from game-stalking. The 'fowl' is Benedick, whom they hope to catch 'sitting.'

II.iii.222 paper bullets of the brain. Quips and sentences, Benedick foresees, will be shot at him like bullets, but being taken from books, they are but paper bullets, which do no real injury. For career in the sense of full speed, cf. V.i.144.

III.i.47 as full as. Possibly a misprint for at full as, 'fully as.'

III.i.64 spell him backward. Alluding to the practice of conjurors, who spell prayers and holy names backwards in order to produce incantations. The meaning is: turn his virtues into vices.

III.i.104 every day—to-morrow. The meaning seems to be: 'I am married every day—it is constantly in my thoughts; but the actual time is to-morrow.' Perhaps, however, Hero refers to the postponement of the ceremony (cf. II.i.310 ff.) and means: 'Every day it is set for the next.'

III.i.116 behind the back. I.e. when their back is turned, when people talk about them.

III.i.118 Taming my wild heart to thy loving hand. A figure suggested by the taming of a hawk, which comes to know the hand of the falconer.

III.ii.22 hang . . . draw. Alluding to the punishment of traitors, who were hanged, drawn, and quartered.

III.ii.24 a humour or a worm. Contemporary dental theory ascribed toothache, among other causes, to the presence of humors, i.e. unhealthy secretions, and to actual worms in the teeth.

III.ii.27 no doublet. That is, no doublet is to be seen, because, like a Spaniard, the upper part of his body is quite enveloped by his cloak.

III.ii.40, 41 the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls. He has cut off his beard. The tennis-balls of the day were sometimes stuffed with human hair.

III.ii.61 buried with her face upwards. Suicides were sometimes buried with their faces downward. The Prince means that Beatrice will not be responsible for her own death.

III.ii.64 hobby-horses. Originally morris-dancers dressed to look like horses; hence any ridiculously frivolous persons.

III.ii.76 This line should perhaps be assigned to Claudio.

III.iii.91 scab. Modern usage of 'scab' for a scurvy fellow renders the pun still intelligible.

III.iii.121 god Bel's priests. Threescore and ten priests of Bel are mentioned in the Apocryphal book of Daniel.

III.iii.126 the fashion wears out more apparel than the man. That is, new clothes are required oftener to conform to changes of fashion than for actual use.

III.iii.146 right Master constable. An absurd title. The speaker is thinking of such respectful phrases as 'right worshipful.'

III.iii.157, 158 commodity . . . bills. 'Bills' is used punningly with reference, first, to the bills (halberds) of the watch; second, to the common commercial phrase, 'to take up a commodity on one's bills,' i.e. buy merchandise on credit.

III.iv.12 within. Furness prefers to take 'tire within' as meaning the inner trimming of the head dress. Within may, however, mean 'in an inner room.'

III. iv.27, 28 saving your reverence. A common expression, sometimes abbreviated sir-reverence.' It means that no disrespect to the hearer is intended.

III.v.14 palabras. A scrap of Spanish: pocas palabras, few words.

III.v.32 when the age is in, etc. An original adaptation of an old proverb: 'When ale is in, wit is out.'

III.v.33, 34 God's a good man. A proverbial saying.

III.v.56 non-come. Dogberry probably means 'non plus,' but confuses that bit of learning with another: 'non compos mentis.'

IV.i.18, 19 some be of laughing, as ah! ha! he! Alluding to the way Latin and English grammars of the day listed the interjections according to the emotions they expressed.

IV.i.43 in your own proof. 'In making trial of her yourself.' (Wright.)

IV.i.68 True! Hero's exclamation refers to Don John's speech, not Benedick's.

IV.i.83 Hero itself, etc. 'The very name, by becoming a byword and a reproach, can blot out virtue.' (Furness.)

IV.i.143 That I myself was to myself not mine. I.e. Hero was so much a part of me that by comparison I was not myself.

IV.i.173 The tenour of my book. 'Book' is used in the general sense of the learning gained from books, the tenor or general nature of which is warranted (i.e. confirmed) by the Friar's practical observations of life.

IV.i.245 But if all aim but this be levell'd false. 'If every other aim miscarry.'

IV.i.261 For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure. 'Strange diseases require desperately strange cures.'

IV. ii. The early editions, both quarto and folio, prefix to the speeches of Dogberry and Verges in this scene the names of the actors who originally took their parts; viz., Kempe and Cowley respectively. The phrase 'in gowns' in the opening stage direction means that the constables and town clerk (sexton) wore their gowns of office.

IV.ii.4 Dogb. In this case the early editions give the speech to 'Andrew,' perhaps a nickname of the clown or Merry-Andrew, Kempe.

IV.ii.61, 62. In the early editions these lines form a single speech, printed thus: 'Let them be in the hands of Coxcombe.' The folio gives the words to the Sexton, the quarto to Cowley (i.e. Verges). Malone suggested the accepted reading, which cannot be regarded as certain.

V.i.17 Bid sorrow wag. Capell's emendation. The early editions have 'And sorrow, wagge,' which apparently makes no sense.

V.i.39 made a push. The most probable meaning is made a 'pish!', i.e. mocked.

V.i.89 Win me and wear me. A proverbial phrase: 'He may have me if he wins me (by the sword).'

V.i.111 wake your patience. 'We will not keep your patience wakeful or excited.' It would be more natural to say 'wake your impatience,' but the Prince is too polite to use the uncomplimentary term.

V.i.137 draw. The word is used punningly, with special reference to bidding the minstrels draw their bows across the strings of their instruments.

V.i.145 broke cross. Like 'in the career' above (l. 143), this is a figure from the tilting matches of the day. Only a very awkward tilter would aim so badly as to break his staff 'cross,' i.e. not by a direct blow, but by allowing it to strike lengthwise across his opponent's body.

V.i.149 turn his girdle. A common proverbial saying of rather vague force. Probably it means no more than 'change his mood,' but it has also been explained as 'prepare to fight,' referring to the alleged custom of wrestlers to turn the buckles of their girdles to the back before beginning.

V.i.168 a wise gentleman. Evidently the words, as repeated by Beatrice, had some colloquial derogatory force now lost. Perhaps they were a cant name for a fool.

V.i.198, 199 goes in his doublet and hose and leaves off his wit. Doublet and hose formed the Elizabethan undress costume, a cloak being worn over them on formal occasions. The Prince suggests ironically that man's wit is a mere outward embellishment which he can leave off as easily as he can his cloak and go about in his natural stupidity.

V.i.200 He is then a giant to an ape, etc. In physical proportions man is much greater than an ape (i.e. an Elizabethan pet ape, a small monkey), but in mental power the ape is far superior.

V.i.219 one meaning well suited. One meaning provided with many different suits of clothes; alluding to the previous speech of Don Pedro, where practically the same idea is expressed in four different ways.

V.i.311 God save the foundation. A customary phrase, used by those who received assistance from a charitable foundation, quite out of place here since Leonato is not a 'foundation.'

V.ii.5 so high a style. A pun on the two words, 'style' and 'stile,' is intended; 'come over' in the next line implying both 'excel' the style and 'climb over' the stile.

V.ii.18 with a vice. A play on 'vice,' the screw by which the sharp pointed 'pike' was fastened in the centre of the buckler, and 'vice,' sin.

V.ii.26, 27 Leander . . . Troilus. Allusions probably to Marlowe's Hero and Leander and Chaucer's Troilus and Criseide respectively.

V.ii.34 not born under a riming planet. Alluding to the old-fashioned belief in the influence exerted upon each man's temperament by the particular planet which was most conspicuous when he was born.

V.ii.65 in the time of good neighbours. In the time when people's neighbours used to speak well of them—a very long time ago.

V.ii.70, 71 Don Worm, his conscience. The old moralists represented conscience as a gnawing worm. The title 'Don' is given it from mock respect.

V.iii.9, 10 Hang thou there upon the tomb, etc. Dr. Furness holds that these lines are not Claudio's comment while affixing the epitaph, but part of the epitaph itself; but compare Claudio's similar riming comment below, ll. 22, 23.

V.iii.20 Till death be uttered. There has been much unnecessary discussion of the meaning of this passage. It is clear if we understand uttered in the common Elizabethan sense of 'sent abroad,' 'put into circulation.' The word is regularly so used with regard to books placed on sale, news made public, etc. The meaning here is, then, that the graves are to yawn and yield their dead until death is scattered abroad among the world of men.

V.iii.33 Than this, etc. 'This' probably refers to Hero: 'May Hymen grant us a happier outcome than he granted to her whose marriage was the means of her death.' Hymen is the god of marriage. Dr. Furness explains 'Than this' as a contraction for 'than in this (issue).'

V.iv.6. In the true course of all the question. 'Now that the whole question has been truly followed up.'

V.iv.45 I think he thinks upon the savage bull. A jesting reminiscence of the conversation between Don Pedro and Benedick, I.i.219-226.

V.iv.47, 48 Europa . . . Europa. In the first instance the continent of Europe, in the second the mythological maiden, supposed to have been carried off by Jupiter in the form of a bull, and to have given her name to the land whither she was brought.

V.iv.73 let wonder seem familiar. 'Act as if your curiosity had already been satisfied.'

V.iv.105 'Benedick, the married man.' See I.i.225.

V.iv.108 beaten with brains. Subjected to ridicule. If a man fears ridicule, Benedick says, he will not dare to have anything handsome about him (whether clothes or a wife), which might attract attention to him.

V.iv.118 a double-dealer. Used punningly, first of one who gives up his single life for the double life of matrimony, and then with an allusion to double-dealing, inconstancy.

The Text of the Present Edition

The text of the present volume is, by permission of the Oxford University Press, that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig, except for the following deviations:

1. The stage directions are based on those in the two original editions of the play, a few obvious errors in the latter being corrected and words there missing added within square brackets.

2. About half a dozen words are differently spelled: e.g., antic (antick), lantern (lanthorn), villainy (villany), haggard (haggerd).

3. Five changes of punctuation or wording have been made, viz.:

I.i.123	Leonato.—for Leonato:
II.iii.86	marry. Dost for marry; dost
II.iii.108	sit you—for sit you;
III.i.104	day—for day,
V.i.102	Scambling for Scrambling

The Merry Wives of Windsor

Edited by
GEORGE VAN SANTVOORD

Dramatis Personae

SIR JOHN FALSTAFF
FENTON, a young Gentleman
SHALLOW, a Country Justice
SLENDER, Cousin to Shallow
FORD, PAGE } two Gentlemen dwelling at Windsor
WILLIAM PAGE, a Boy, Son to Page
SIR HUGH EVANS, a Welsh Parson
DOCTOR CAIUS, a French Physician
HOST of the Garter Inn
BARDOLPH, PISTOL, NYM } Followers of Falstaff

ROBIN, Page to Falstaff
SIMPLE, Servant to Slender
RUGBY, Servant to Doctor Caius

MISTRESS FORD
MISTRESS PAGE
ANNE PAGE, her Daughter, in love with Fenton
MISTRESS QUICKLY, Servant to Doctor Caius

SERVANTS TO PAGE, FORD ETC.

SCENE—Windsor; and the Neighbourhood.

The Merry Wives of Windsor

Introduction

Sources of the Play

The Merry Wives of Windsor ranks next after Love's Labour's Lost, A Midsummer Night's Dream, and The Tempest among Shakespeare's plays, as owing least to any definite sources for its plot. It is a comedy of contemporary manners, and most of its details seem to be original with Shakespeare.

There are two elements in the plot for which parallels can be found in contemporary English and Italian literature. The first of these is the incident of the women who discover that one gallant is courting them simultaneously, and their luring him on successively, only to make a laughingstock of him in the end. A story of this sort which Shakespeare may have seen is found in William Painter's Palace of Pleasure, published at London in 1566. The 49th tale in Painter's first volume is a free adaptation of an Italian story told by Straparola and by Ser Giovanni Fiorentino, whose novels were printed in Italy about 1550. In Painter's story, Philenio Sisterno, a scholar of Bologna, meets three ladies at a ball, and professes his devotion to each in turn. The ladies' discovery of his deceit and their determination to make a mockery of him have some slight resemblance to the story of Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Page and their revenge on Falstaff.

'Esmerentiana, the wife of Seignior Lamberto, not for any euill, but in sporting wise said vnto her companions: "Gentlewomen, I have gotten this night in dauncing, a curteous louer, a very faire Gentleman, and of so good behauiour as any one in the world": and from point to point, (she) rehearsed vnto them all that he had said. Which Panthemia and Simphorosia vnderstanding, answered, that the like had chaunced vnto them, and they departed not from the feaste before eche of them knewe him that was their louer: whereby they perceiued that his woordes proceded not of faithful Loue, but rather of follie and dissimulation, and they separated not from thence vntill all three with one accorde, had conspired every one to give him mocke.' Each of the ladies then sends Philenio an invitation to visit her and each tricks him when he comes to her house. Esmerentiana's husband returns unexpectedly, and she claps Philenio into a hiding-place which she had filled with 'fagots of sharp thorns.' Panthemia leads him into a closet, and a loose board in the floor precipitates him into an outhouse, where he spends a miserable night. Simphorosia gives him drugged wine, which he drinks all unsuspecting. Her servants then strip him and fling him into the street, where he lies unconscious until morning.

Another element in Shakespeare's plot, which may have been suggested by several contemporary stories, is that of the lover who unwittingly confides his plans to the jealous husband of his lady. This theme is found in the Tale of the two lovers of Pisa in Tarlton's Newes out of Purgatorie, a collection of stories published in 1590. In this tale, Mutio, an old doctor of Pisa, discovers that Lionello is courting Margaret, the beautiful woman he has just married. Lionello informs his friend of his plans for meeting Margaret, so Mutio is able to break in upon them each time. Margaret is quick of wit, and manages to conceal her lover—once in a 'dry-vat' full of feathers; again 'between two ceilings of a chamber,' and finally in an old chest where valuable papers are stored. This time Mutio is sure Lionello is in the house, so he sets fire to the room, and Margaret saves her lover by bidding the servants carry out the chest.

Similar stories by Straparola and Ser Giovanni Fiorentino have interesting parallels to Mrs. Ford's trick of concealing Falstaff in the buck-basket. In these stories the wife makes use of 'a chest with clothes in front,' or 'a heap of wet clothes from the wash' for hiding her lover. But it is doubtful if English translations of them were available at the time The Merry Wives was written. A translation of one of them (printed in 1632) describes the husband in words that might apply to Shakespeare's Ford, as 'a person naturally inclin'd to jealousy (a passion extraordinarily reigning in Italy).' Recent scholars have been interested in elements in the play that may be derived from ancient Roman comedy.

Except for such details as may be drawn from these sources, The Merry Wives of Windsor is of Shakespeare's own invention. It is the only one of his plays which deals exclusively with English country society.

The History of the Play

The Merry Wives of Windsor was entered on the Stationers' Register on January 18, 1602. It was published the same year as a small Quarto, which was reprinted in 1619. The text of both is very corrupt. Comparison of them with the text of the Folio, published in 1623, seems to indicate that the publisher of the Quarto secured his version of the play by taking it down as best he could from the mouths of the players, perhaps with some assistance from one of them.

The play was probably written in 1599. In the epilogue to the Second Part of Henry IV (produced about 1598), Shakespeare had written: 'If you be not too much cloy'd with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story with Sir John in it . . . where for anything I know Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless a' be killed already with your hard opinions.' The Merry Wives seems to offer the promised continuation of Sir John's adventures.

Two interesting traditions have long been current about the play. The first of these is that it was written at the command of Queen Elizabeth, and in a period of fourteen days. John Dennis, writing in 1702, says of the play: 'I know very well that it hath pleased one of the greatest queens that ever was in the world. . . . This comedy was written at her command, and by her direction, and she was so eager to see it acted that she commanded it to be finished in fourteen days; and was afterwards, as tradition tells us, very well pleased at the representation.' Rowe repeated the story in his Life of Shakespeare, adding of Queen Elizabeth: 'She was so well pleased with that admirable character of Falstaff in the two parts of Henry the Fourth, that she commanded him to continue it for one play more, and to show him in love. This is said to be the occasion of his writing The Merry Wives of Windsor. How well she was obeyed, the play itself is an admirable proof.'

The other tradition is that in Justice Shallow, Shakespeare is satirizing Sir Thomas Lucy of Charlecote, near Stratford, who had prosecuted him in his youth for poaching. According to a note by Archdeacon Davies, written probably between 1688 and 1707, Shakespeare was 'much given to all unluckinesse in stealing venison and Rabbits particularly from Sr. Lucy, . . . but his reveng is so great that he is his Justice Clodpate, and calls him a great man and that in allusion to his name bore three lowses rampant for his Arms.' Rowe, in 1709, adds to this: 'Amongst other extravagancies, in The Merry Wives of Windsor he has made him a deer-stealer, that he might at the same time remember his Warwickshire prosecutor under the name of Justice Shallow; he has given him very near the same coat of arms which Dugdale, in his Antiquities of that county, describes for a family there, and makes the Welsh parson descant very pleasantly upon them.'

Of the earliest performances of the play we know from the title-page of the 1602 Quarto that it was 'divers times acted, both before her Majesty and elsewhere.' Shakespeare's company presented it at Whitehall before King James during the winter of 1604-1605; and another court performance occurred in 1612-1613. The play was presented before Charles I also; for in the records of Sir Henry Herbert is the entry: 'before the king and queene this yeare of our Lord 1638. . . . At the Cocpit the 15th of November. The merry wifes of winser.'

Of the actors in these productions we know nothing definite. John Heminge, a member of Shakespeare's company and one of editors of the 1623 Folio, is said to have been the original Falsaff; and after the Restoration John Lowen (1576-1659) was remembered as having excelled in the part 'before the wars.'

The Merry Wives was one of the first plays revived after the Commonwealth. On December 5, 1660, Pepys records seeing it with 'the humours of the country gentlemen and the French doctor very well done, but the rest but very poorly, and Sir J. Falstaffe as bad as any.' In 1661 he went again to the theatre 'such is the power of the Devil over me . . . and saw the Merry Wives ill done.' And in 1667 yet another production of the play 'did not please me at all in no part.'

When the Drury Lane Theatre opened in 1663 The Merry Wives was one of the productions which 'being well performed were very satisfactory to the town'; and forty years later John Dennis still remembered Wintersel's success as Falstaff 'in King Charles the Second's reign.'

In 1702 Dennis produced an adaptation of The Merry Wives under the title of The Comical Gallant, or the Amours of Sir John Falstaff. Falstaff's beating at the end of the play is shifted to Ford, to punish him for his jealousy, and Sir John is spared the humiliation of appearing in women's clothes, but he has a far more degrading part to play when he is bullied by Mrs. Page, disguised as a roistering captain. Dennis' piece 'was received but coldly,' and the original play was soon afterward successfully revived by Betterton, with Mrs. Bracegirdle, and later Peg Woffington, in the rôle of Mrs. Ford.

During the eighteenth century the part of Falstaff was ably interpreted by Quin, Henderson, and Cooke. Horace Walpole wrote on hearing of Quin's death, 'Pray, who is to give an idea of Falstaff, now Quin is dead?' John Henderson (1747-1785) won great applause in the part. Rogers in his table-talk says 'his Hamlet and his Falstaff were equally good.' Kemble revised the play in 1797, and successfully produced his version a few years later, playing Ford to the Falstaff of George Frederick Cooke. Cooke later visited the United States, where he died in 1811. The Merry Wives had already been produced in this country in 1770, at the Southwark Theatre in Philadelphia.

During the nineteenth century the play has been a favorite source for librettos for operas. In 1824 Frederick Reynolds was 'censured as an interpolator, for converting Shakespeare's plays into operas'; but his production of the Merry Wives ran for thirty-two performances at Drury Lane, and was a great success. In 1838 Balfe's opera, Falstaff, with an Italian libretto by Maggioni, was produced at London. Nine years later a German version, Die lustigen Weiber von Windsor with music by Nicolai, was given in Berlin. Nicolai's work was soon afterwards produced in Paris with some amusingly Gallic touches—Fenton is transformed into a young poet; Caius becomes a bullying captain; and Anne Page's character suffers by being made deceitful and dishonest. Perhaps to balance these French features Rule Britannia was introduced into a chorus toward the end of the piece. The greatest of the operatic versions of the play is Verdi's Falstaff (1893).

During all this time the original comedy has maintained its popularity on the stage. Among innumerable modern productions may be mentioned that at the New Theatre in New York (1910), and those of Sir Herbert Tree, who 'made Falstaff such a merry rogue that you forgot his cowardice and his grossness in laughing at his conceit and his mock bravery.' Tree's productions of the play in England and America were elaborately mounted, and generally accompanied by the music for the lyrics composed by Arthur Sullivan in 1874. The play is a favorite for amateur performances. It was presented by the Yale Dramatic Association in 1909.

ACT FIRST ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Windsor. Before Page's House]

Enter Justice Shallow, Slender, [and] Sir Hugh Evans; [and later] Master Page, Falstaff, Bardolph, Nym, Pistol, Anne Page, Mistress Ford, Mistress Page, [and] Simple.

Shal. Sir Hugh, persuade me not; I will make a Star-chamber matter of it; if he were twenty Sir John Falstaffs he shall not abuse Robert Shallow, esquire.

Slen. In the county of Gloucester, justice of peace, and coram.

Shal. Ay, cousin Slender, and cust-alorum.

Slen. Ay, and rato-lorum too; and a gentleman born, Master Parson; who writes himself armigero, in any bill, warrant, quittance, or obligation,—armigero.

Shal. Ay, that I do; and have done any time these three hundred years.

Slen. All his successors gone before him hath done 't; and all his ancestors that come after him may: they may give the dozen white luces in their coat.

Shal. It is an old coat.

Eva. The dozen white louses do become an old coat well; it agrees well, passant; it is a familiar beast to man, and signifies love.

Shal. The luce is the fresh fish; the salt fish is an old coat.

Slen. I may quarter, coz?

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Eva. It is marring indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Eva. Yes, py'r lady; if he has a quarter of your coat, there is but three skirts for yourself, in my simple conjectures: but that is all one. If Sir John Falstaff have committed disparagements unto you, I am of the Church, and will be glad to do my benevolence to make atonements and compremises between you.

Shal. The Council shall hear it; it is a riot.

Eva. It is not meet the Council hear a riot; there is no fear of Got in a riot. The Council, look you, shall desire to hear the fear of Got, and not to hear a riot; take your vizaments in that.

Shal. Ha! o' my life, if I were young again, the sword should end it.

Eva. It is petter that friends is the sword, and end it; and there is also another device in my prain, which, peradventure, prings goot discretions with it. There is Anne Page, which is daughter to Master Thomas Page, which is pretty virginity.

Slen. Mistress Anne Page? She has brown hair, and speaks small like a woman.

Eva. It is that fery person for all the 'orld, as just as you will desire; and seven hundred pounds of moneys, and gold and silver, is her grandsire, upon his death's-bed,—Got deliver to a joyful resurrections!—give, when she is able to overtake seventeen years old. It were a goot motion if we leave our pribbles and prabbles, and desire a marriage between Master Abraham and Mistress Anne Page.

Shal. Did her grandsire leave her seven hundred pound?

Eva. Ay, and her father is make her a petter penny.

Shal. I know the young gentlewoman; she has good gifts.

Eva. Seven hundred pounds and possibilities is goot gifts.

Shal. Well, let us see honest Master Page. Is Falstaff there?

Eva. Shall I tell you a lie? I do despise a liar as I do despise one that is false; or as I despise one that is not true. The knight, Sir John, is there; and, I beseech you, be ruled by your well-willers. I will peat the door for Master Page. [Knocks.] What, hoa! Got pless your house here!

Page. [Within.] Who's there?

Eva. Here is Got's plessing, and your friend, and Justice Shallow; and here young Master Slender, that peradventures shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

[Enter Page.]

Page. I am glad to see your worships well. I thank you for my venison, Master Shallow.

Shal. Master Page, I am glad to see you: much good do it your good heart! I wished your venison better; it was ill killed. How doth good Mistress Page?—and I thank you always with my heart, la! with my heart.

Page. Sir, I thank you.

Shal. Sir, I thank you; by yea and no, I do.

Page. I am glad to see you, good Master Slender.

Slen. How does your fallow greyhound, sir? I heard say he was outrun on Cotsall.

Page. It could not be judged, sir.

Slen. You'll not confess, you'll not confess.

Shal. That he will not: 'tis your fault, 'tis your fault. 'Tis a good dog.

Page. A cur, sir.

Shal. Sir, he's a good dog, and a fair dog; can there be more said? he is good and fair. Is Sir John Falstaff here?

Page. Sir, he is within; and I would I could do a good office between you.

Eva. It is spoke as a Christians ought to speak.

Shal. He hath wronged me, Master Page.

Page. Sir, he doth in some sort confess it.

Shal. If it be confessed, it is not redressed: is not that so, Master Page? He hath wronged me; indeed, he hath;—at a word, he hath,—believe me: Robert Shallow, esquire, saith, he is wronged.

Page. Here comes Sir John.

[Enter Sir John Falstaff, Pistol, Bardolph, and Nym.]

Fal. Now, Master Shallow, you'll complain of me to the king?

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men, killed my deer, and broke open my lodge.

Fal. But not kissed your keeper's daughter?

Shal. Tut, a pin! this shall be answered.

Fal. I will answer it straight: I have done all this. That is now answered.

Shal. The Council shall know this.

Fal. 'Twere better for you if it were known in counsel: you'll be laughed at.

SCENE ONE S. d.; cf. n. Sir: old title for a priest, 1, 2 Star-chamber matter; cf. n. 5 coram; cf. n. 6, 7 cust-alorum . . . rato-lorum; cf. n. 8 armigero: esquire bill: bill of exchange quittance: discharge from debt 13 give: display 14 luces: pikes (fish); cf. n. 17 passant: walking (heraldry) 19 Cf. n. 20 quarter; cf. n. 28 compremises: i.e., compromises 29 Council: i.e., the Privy Council sitting in Star Chamber 32 vizaments: i.e., avisements, deliberations 39 Mistress: formal title for women 40 small: shrilly 41 'orld: i.e., world 46 pribbles and prabbles: quibbles and brabbles (?), i.e., petty disputings

50 gifts: qualities of mind 51 possibilities: expectations 71 fallow: fawn-color 72 Cotsall; cf. n. 75 fault: misfortune 95 pin: trifle answered: atoned for 96 straight: immediately 99 in counsel: in secret

Eva. Pauca verba, Sir John; goot worts.

Fal. Good worts! good cabbage. Slender, I broke your head: what matter have you against me?

Slen. Marry, sir, I have matter in my head against you; and against your cony-catching rascals, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol. [They carried me to the tavern, and made me drunk, and afterwards picked my pocket.]

Bard. You Banbury cheese!

Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Pist. How now, Mephistophilus!

Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Nym. Slice, I say! pauca, pauca; slice! that's my humour.

Slen. Where's Simple, my man? can you tell, cousin?

Eva. Peace, I pray you. Now let us understand: there is three umpires in this matter, as I understand; that is— Master Page, fidelicet, Master Page; and there is myself, fidelicet, myself; and the three party is, lastly and finally, mine host of the Garter.

Page. We three, to hear it and end it between them.

Eva. Fery goot: I will make a prief of it in my note-book; and we will afterwards 'ork upon the cause with as great discreetly as we can.

Fal. Pistol!

Pist. He hears with ears.

Eva. The tevil and his tam! what phrase is this, 'He hears with ear'? Why, it is affectations.

Fal. Pistol, did you pick Master Slender's purse?

Slen. Ay, by these gloves, did he,—or I would I might never come in mine own great chamber again else,—of seven groats in mill-sixpences, and two Edward shovel-boards, that cost me two shilling and two pence a-piece of Yead Miller, by these gloves.

Fal. Is this true, Pistol?

Eva. No; it is false, if it is a pick-purse.

Pist. Ha, thou mountain foreigner!—Sir John and master mine,
I combat challenge of this latten bilbo.
Word of denial in thy labras here!
Word of denial: froth and scum, thou liest.

Slen. By these gloves, then, 'twas he.

Nym. Be avised, sir, and pass good humours. I will say, 'marry trap,' with you, if you run the nuthook's humour on me: that is the very note of it.

Slen. By this hat, then, he in the red face had it; for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an ass.

Fal. What say you, Scarlet and John?

Bard. Why, sir, for my part, I say, the gentleman had drunk himself out of his five sentences.

Eva. It is his 'five senses'; fie, what the ignorance is!

Bard. And being fap, sir, was, as they say, cashier'd; and so conclusions pass'd the careires.

Slen. Ay, you spake in Latin then too; but 'tis no matter. I'll ne'er be drunk whilst I live again, but in honest, civil, godly company, for this trick: if I be drunk, I'll be drunk with those that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

Eva. So Got udge me, that is a virtuous mind.

Fal. You hear all these matters denied, gentlemen; you hear it.

[Enter Anne Page with wine; Mistress Ford and Mistress Page following.]

Page. Nay, daughter, carry the wine in; we'll drink within.

[Exit Anne Page.]

Slen. O heaven! this is Mistress Anne Page.

Page. How now, Mistress Ford!

Fal. Mistress Ford, by my troth, you are very well met: by your leave, good mistress. [Kisses her.]

Page. Wife, bid these gentlemen welcome. Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner: come, gentlemen, I hope we shall drink down all unkindness. [Exeunt all except Shallow, Slender, and Evans.]

Slen. I had rather than forty shillings I had my Book of Songs and Sonnets here.

[Enter Simple.]

How now, Simple! Where have you been? I must wait on myself, must I? You have not the Book of Riddles about you, have you?

Sim. Book of Riddles! why, did you not lend it to Alice Shortcake upon All-Hallowmas last, a fortnight afore Michaelmas?

Shal. Come, coz; come, coz; we stay for you. A word with you, coz; marry, this, coz: there is, as 'twere a tender, a kind of tender, made afar off by Sir Hugh here: do you understand me?

Slen. Ay, sir, you shall find me reasonable: if it be so, I shall do that that is reason.

Shal. Nay, but understand me.

Slen. So I do, sir.

Eva. Give ear to his motions, Master Slender: I will description the matter to you, if you pe capacity of it.

Slen. Nay, I will do as my cousin Shallow says. I pray you pardon me; he's a justice of peace in his country, simple though I stand here.

Eva. But that is not the question; the question is concerning your marriage.

Shal. Ay, there's the point, sir.

Eva. Marry, is it, the very point of it; to Mistress Anne Page.

Slen. Why, if it be so, I will marry her upon any reasonable demands.

Eva. But can you affection the 'oman? Let us command to know that of your mouth or of your lips; for divers philosophers hold that the lips is parcel of the mouth: therefore, precisely, can you carry your good will to the maid?

Shal. Cousin Abraham Slender, can you love her?

Slen. I hope, sir, I will do as it shall become one that would do reason.

101 Pauca verba: few words worts: i.e., words 102 worts: vegetables 105 cony-catching: cheating 106, 107 They . . . pocket; cf. n. 108 Banbury cheese; cf. n. 110 Mephistophilus: devil; cf. n. 112 Slice: of cheese (?); cf. n. humour; cf. n. 116 fidelicet: i.e., videlicet, namely 118 Garter: an inn at Windsor 129 great chamber: hall groats: coins valued at fourpence 130 mill-sixpences: coins with raised borders Edward shovel-boards: broad shillings; cf. n. 131 Yead: abbreviation of Edward 135 mountain foreigner: Welshman 137 latten bilbo: brass sword 138 labras: lips 141 avised: advised 142 marry trap: be off with you (?) 142 run . . . humour: cf. n. 143 very note: exact information 147 Scarlet and John; cf. n. 151 fap: drunk cashier'd: slang for robbed 152 careires; cf. n.

157 udge: i.e., judge 170, 171 Book of Songs and Sonnets; cf. n. 175 All-Hallowmas: All Saints' Day, November 1 176 Michaelmas: St. Michael's Day, September 29 177 stay: wait 178 tender: offer 179 afar off: indirectly 188, 189 simple though: as sure as 199 parcel: part

Eva. Nay, Got's lords and his ladies! you must speak possitable, if you can carry her your desires towards her.

Shal. That you must. Will you, upon good dowry, marry her?

Slen. I will do a greater thing than that, upon your request, cousin, in any reason.

Shal. Nay, conceive me, conceive me, sweet coz: what I do, is to pleasure you, coz. Can you love the maid?

Slen. I will marry her, sir, at your request; but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance, when we are married and have more occasion to know one another: I hope, upon familiarity will grow more contempt: but if you say, 'Marry her,' I will marry her; that I am freely dissolved, and dissolutely.

Eva. It is a fery discretion answer; save, the faul is in the 'ort 'dissolutely': the 'ort is, according to our meaning, 'resolutely.' His meaning is goot.

Shal. Ay, I think my cousin meant well.

Slen. Ay, or else I would I might be hanged, la!

Shal. Here comes fair Mistress Anne.

[Enter Anne Page.]

Would I were young for your sake, Mistress Anne.

Anne. The dinner is on the table; my father desires your worships' company.

Shal. I will wait on him, fair Mistress Anne.

Eva. Od's plessed will! I will not be absence at the grace.

[Exeunt Shallow and Evans.]

Anne. Will 't please your worship to come in, sir?

Slen. No, I thank you, forsooth, heartily; I am very well.

Anne. The dinner attends you, sir.

Slen. I am not a-hungry, I thank you forsooth. Go, sirrah, for all you are my man, go wait upon my cousin Shallow. [Exit Simple.] A justice of peace sometime may be beholding to his friend for a man. I keep but three men and a boy yet, till my mother be dead; but what though? yet I live like a poor gentleman born.

Anne. I may not go in without your worship: they will not sit till you come.

Slen. I' faith, I'll eat nothing; I thank you as much as though I did.

Anne. I pray you, sir, walk in.

Slen. I had rather walk here, I thank you. I bruised my shin th' other day with playing at sword and dagger with a master of fence; three veneys for a dish of stewed prunes;—and, by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meat since. Why do your dogs bark so? be there bears i' the town?

Anne. I think there are, sir; I heard them talked of.

Slen. I love the sport well; but I shall as soon quarrel at it as any man in England. You are afraid, if you see the bear loose, are you not?

Anne. Ay, indeed, sir.

Slen. That's meat and drink to me, now: I have seen Sackerson loose twenty times, and have taken him by the chain; but, I warrant you, the women have so cried and shrieked at it, that it passed: but women, indeed, cannot abide 'em; they are very ill-favoured rough things.

[Enter Page.]

Page. Come, gentle Master Slender, come; we stay for you.

Slen. I'll eat nothing, I thank you, sir.

Page. By cock and pie, you shall not choose, sir! come, come.

Slen. Nay, pray you, lead the way.

Page. Come on, sir.

Slen. Mistress Anne, yourself shall go first.

Anne. Not I, sir; pray you, keep on.

Slen. Truly, I will not go first: truly, la! I will not do you that wrong.

Anne. I pray you, sir.

Slen. I'll rather be unmannerly than trouble-some. You do yourself wrong, indeed, la! Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Same]
Enter Evans and Simple.

Eva. Go your ways, and ask of Doctor Caius' house, which is the way: and there dwells one Mistress Quickly, which is in the manner of his nurse, or his try nurse, or his cook, or his laundry, his washer, and his wringer.

Sim. Well, sir.

Eva. Nay, it is petter yet. Give her this letter; for it is a 'oman that altogether's acquaintance with Mistress Anne Page: and the letter is, to desire and require her to solicit your master's desires to Mistress Anne Page. I pray you, be gone: I will make an end of my dinner; there's pippins and seese to come. Exeunt

Scene Third

[A Room in the Garter Inn]
Enter Falstaff, Host, Bardolph, Nym, Pistol, [and] Page [Robin].

Fal. Mine host of the Garter!

Host. What says my bully-rook? Speak scholarly and wisely.

Fal. Truly, mine host, I must turn away some of my followers.

Host. Discard, bully Hercules; cashier: let them wag; trot, trot.

Fal. I sit at ten pounds a week.

Host. Thou'rt an emperor, Cæsar, Keisar, and Pheezar. I will entertain Bardolph; he shall draw, he shall tap: said I well, bully Hector?

Fal. Do so, good mine host.

Host. I have spoke; let him follow. [To Bardolph.] Let me see thee froth and lime: I am at a word; follow. [Exit.]

Fal. Bardolph, follow him. A tapster is a good trade: an old cloak makes a new jerkin; a withered serving-man, a fresh tapster. Go; adieu.

Bard. It is life that I have desired. I will thrive.

205 possitable: i.e., positively 210 conceive: understand 211 pleasure: please 218 faul: i.e., fault 219 'ort: i.e., word 228 Od's: i.e., God's 231 attends: awaits 232 sirrah: fellow 246 fence: fencing veneys: fencing-bouts 250 the sport: i.e., bear-baiting 255 Sackerson; cf. n. 257 passed: beat everything 258 ill-favoured: ugly

261 By cock and pye: a petty oath 3 manner: capacity 10 seese: i.e., cheese 2 bully-rook: fine fellow (slang) 5 wag: go their way 7 I sit at: my expenses are 8 Keisar, and Pheezar; cf. n. 9 entertain: employ as servant draw: draw liquor tap: act as tapster 13 froth and lime; cf. n. at a word: reader 15 jerkin: jacket

Pist. O base Hungarian wight! wilt thou the spigot wield?
[Exit Bardolph.]

Nym. He was gotten in drink; is not the humour conceited?

Fal. I am glad I am so acquit of this tinderbox; his thefts were too open; his filching was like an unskilful singer; he kept not time.

Nym. The good humour is to steal at a minim's rest.

Pist. 'Convey,' the wise it call. 'Steal!' foh! a fico for the phrase!

Fal. Well, sirs, I am almost out at heels.

Pist. Why, then, let kibes ensue.

Fal. There is no remedy; I must cony-catch, I must shift.

Pist. Young ravens must have food.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this town?

Pist. I ken the wight: he is of substance good.

Fal. My honest lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Pist. Two yards, and more.

Fal. No quips now, Pistol! Indeed, I am in the waist two yards about; but I am now about no waste; I am about thrift. Briefly, I do mean to make love to Ford's wife: I spy entertainment in her; she discourses, she carves, she gives the leer of invitation: I can construe the action of her familiar style; and the hardest voice of her behaviour, to be Englished rightly, is, 'I am Sir John Falstaff's.'

Pist. He hath studied her well, and translated her well, out of honesty into English.

Nym. The anchor is deep: will that humour pass?

Fal. Now, the report goes she has all the rule of her husband's purse; he hath a legion of angels.

Pist. As many devils entertain, and 'To her, boy,' say I.

Nym. The humour rises; it is good: humour me the angels.

Fal. I have writ me here a letter to her; and here another to Page's wife, who even now gave me good eyes too, examined my parts with most judicious œillades: sometimes the beam of her view gilded my foot, sometimes my portly belly.

Pist. Then did the sun on dunghill shine.

Nym. I thank thee for that humour.

Fal. O! she did so course o'er my exteriors with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me up like a burning-glass. Here's another letter to her: she bears the purse too; she is a region in Guiana, all gold and bounty. I will be 'cheator to them both, and they shall be exchequers to me: they shall be my East and West Indies, and I will trade to them both. Go bear thou this letter to Mistress Page; and thou this to Mistress Ford. We will thrive, lads, we will thrive.

Pist. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become,
And by my side wear steel? then, Lucifer take all!

Nym. I will run no base humour: here, take the humour-letter. I will keep the haviour of reputation.

Fal. [To Robin.] Hold, sirrah, bear you these letters tightly:
Sail like my pinnace to these golden shores
Rogues, hence! avaunt! vanish like hailstones, go;
Trudge, plod away o' the hoof; seek shelter, pack!
Falstaff will learn the humour of this age,
French thrift, you rogues: myself and skirted page.
[Exeunt Falstaff and Robin.]

Pist. Let vultures gripe thy guts! for gourd and fullam holds,
And high and low beguile the rich and poor.
Tester I'll have in pouch when thou shalt lack,
Base Phrygian Turk!

Nym. I have operations [in my head,] which be humours of revenge.

Pist. Wilt thou revenge?

Nym. By welkin and her star!

Pist. With wit or steel?

Nym. With both the humours, I:
I will discuss the humour of this love to Page.

Pist. And I to Ford shall eke unfold
How Falstaff, varlet vile,
His dove will prove, his gold will hold,
And his soft couch defile.

Nym. My humour shall not cool: I will incense Page to deal with poison; I will possess him with yellowness, for the revolt of mine is dangerous: that is my true humour.

Pist. Thou art the Mars of malcontents: I second thee; troop on. [Exeunt.]

Scene Fourth

[A Room in Doctor Caius's House]
Enter Mistress Quickly, Simple, [and] John Rugby; [and later] Doctor Caius, and Fenton.

Quick. What, John Rugby!—
I pray thee, go to the casement, and see if you can see my master, Master Doctor Caius, coming: if he do, i' faith, and find anybody in the house, here will be an old abusing of God's patience and the king's English.

Rug. I'll go watch.

Quick. Go: and we'll have a posset for 't soon at night, in faith, at the latter end of a sea-coal fire. [Exit Rugby.] An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withal; and, I warrant you, no tell-tale, nor no breed-bate: his worst fault is, that he is given to prayer; he is something peevish that way, but nobody but has his fault; but let that pass. Peter Simple you say your name is?

Sim. Ay, for fault of a better.

Quick. And Master Slender's your master?

Sim. Ay, forsooth.

Quick. Does he not wear a great round beard like a glover's paring-knife?

Sim. No, forsooth: he hath but a little whey-face, with a little yellow beard—a Cain-coloured beard.

Quick. A softly-sprighted man, is he not?

Sim. Ay, forsooth; but he is as tall a man of his hands as

18 wight: man; cf. n. 19 gotten: begotten conceited: ingenious 20 acquit: rid 23 minim's rest: time of a half measure (music) 24 Convey: thieves' slang for steal fico: fig 26 out at heels: out of money 27 kibes: chilblains 28 shift: devise a trick 31 ken: know 37 carves: shows courtesy 38 action: gesture 42 honesty: chastity 43 anchor . . . deep: cf. n. 45 angels: gold coins valued at about half a sovereign 50 œillades: amorous glances 57 Guiana: cf. n. 58 'cheator: cf. n. 63 Sir Pandarus: cf. n. 66 haviour: behavior 67 tightly: safely 69 avaunt: be off

70 pack: depart 72 French thrift: cf. n. skirted: wearing a coat with skirts 73 gourd and fullam: cf. n. 74 high and low: i.e., high and low numbers on dice 75 Tester: sixpence pouch: purse 80 welkin: sky 83 discuss: tell 88, 89 deal with: employ possess . . . yellowness: make him jealous 89, 90 the revolt of mine: i.e., my revolt 4 old: great 7 posset: hot milk curdled with ale soon at night: as soon as night comes 8 sea-coal: mineral coal (i.e., not charcoal) brought by sea 10 withal: with breed-bate: mischief-maker 12 peevish: silly 14 fault: lack 20 Cain-coloured: cf. n. 21 softly-sprighted: gentle (?) 22 tall: valiant any is between this and his head: he hath fought with a warrener.

Quick. How say you?—O! I should remember him: does he not hold up his head, as it were, and strut in his gait?

Sim. Yes, indeed, does he.

Quick. Well, heaven send Anne Page no worse fortune! Tell Master Parson Evans I will do what I can for your master: Anne is a good girl, and I wish—

[Enter Rugby.]

Rug. Out, alas! here comes my master.

Quick. We shall all be shent. Run in here, good young man; go into this closet. He will not stay long [Shuts Simple in the closet.] What, John Rugby! John, what, John, I say! Go, John, go inquire for my master; I doubt he be not well, that he comes not home. [Exit Rugby.] [Singing.] 'And down, down, adown-a,' &c.

[Enter Doctor Caius.]

Caius. Vat is you sing? I do not like dese toys. Pray you, go and vetch me in my closet une boitine verde; a box, a green-a box: do intend vat I speak? a green-a box.

Quick. Ay, forsooth; I'll fetch it you. [Aside.] I am glad he went not in himself: if he had found the young man, he would have been horn-mad.

Caius. Fe, fe, fe, fe! ma foi, il fait fort chaud. Je m'en vais à la cour,—la grande affaire.

Quick. Is it this, sir?

Caius. Oui; mettez le au mon pocket; dé-pêchez, quickly.—Vere is dat knave Rugby?

Quick. What, John Rugby! John!

[Enter Rugby.]

Rug. Here, sir.

Caius. You are John Rugby, and you are Jack Rugby: come, take-a your rapier, and come after my heel to de court.

Rug. 'Tis ready, sir, here in the porch.

Caius. By my trot, I tarry too long.—Od's me! Qu'ay j'oublié? dere is some simples in my closet, dat I will not for de varld I shall leave behind.

Quick. [Aside] Ay me! he'll find the young man there, and be mad.

Caius. O diable! diable! vat is in my closet?—Villain! larron! [Pulling Simple out.] Rugby, my rapier!

Quick. Good master, be content.

Caius. Verefore shall I be content-a?

Quick. The young man is an honest man.

Caius. Vat shall de honest man do in my closet? dere is no honest man dat shall come in my closet.

Quick. I beseech you, be not so phlegmatic. Hear the truth of it: he came of an errand to me from Parson Hugh.

Caius. Vell.

Sim. Ay, forsooth, to desire her to—

Quick. Peace, I pray you.

Caius. Peace-a your tongue!—Speak-a your tale.

Sim. To desire this honest gentlewoman, your maid, to speak a good word to Mistress Anne Page for my master in the way of marriage.

Quick. This is all, indeed, la! but I'll ne'er put my finger in the fire, and need not.

Caius. Sir Hugh send-a you?—Rugby, baillez me some paper: tarry you little-a while. [Writes.]

Quick. [Aside to Simple.] I am glad he is so quiet: if he had been throughly moved, you should have heard him so loud, and so melancholy. But, notwithstanding, man, I'll do your master what good I can; and the very yea and the no is, the French doctor, my master,—I may call him my master, look you, for I keep his house; and I wash, wring, brew, bake, scour, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all myself,—

Sim. [Aside to Quickly.] 'Tis a great charge to come under one body's hand.

Quick. [Aside to Simple.] Are you avis'd o' that? you shall find it a great charge: and to be up early and down late; but notwithstanding,—to tell you in your ear,—I would have no words of it,—my master himself is in love with Mistress Anne Page: but notwithstanding that, I know Anne's mind, that's neither here nor there.

Caius. You jack'nape, give-a dis letter to Sir Hugh; by gar, it is a challenge: I vill cut his troat in de Park; and I vill teach a scurvy jack-a-nape priest to meddle or make. You may be gone; it is not good you tarry here: by gar, I vill cut all his two stones; by gar, he shall not have a stone to trow at his dog. [Exit Simple.]

Quick. Alas! he speaks but for his friend.

Caius. It is no matter-a for dat:—do not you tell-a me dat I shall have Anne Page for myself? By gar, I vill kill de Jack priest; and I have appointed mine host of de Jartiere to measure our weapon. By gar, I vill myself have Anne Page.

Quick. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well. We must give folks leave to prate: what, the good-jer!

Caius. Rugby, come to the court vit me. By gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door. Follow my heels, Rugby. [Exeunt Caius and Rugby.]

Quick. You shall have An fool's-head of your own. No, I know Anne's mind for that: never a woman in Windsor knows more of Anne's mind than I do; nor can do more than I do with her, I thank heaven.

Fent. [Within.] Who's within there? ho!

Quick. Who's there, I trow? Come near the house, I pray you.

[Enter Fenton.]

Fent. How now, good woman! how dost thou?

Quick. The better, that it pleases your good worship to ask.

Fent. What news? how does pretty Mistress Anne?

Quick. In truth, sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle; and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way; I praise heaven for it.

Fent. Shall I do any good, thinkest thou? Shall I not lose my suit?

Quick. Troth, sir, all is in his hands above; but notwithstanding, Master Fenton, I'll be sworn on a book, she loves you. Have not your worship a wart above your eye?

Fent. Yes, marry have I; what of that?

24 warrener: gamekeeper 32 shent: scolded 35 doubt: fear 38 toys: foolish things 40 intend: hear (Fr. entendre) 43 horn-mad: stark-mad 54 trot: troth 55 simples: medicinal herbs 66 phlegmatic: i.e., choleric (?)

77 baillez: fetch 80 throughly: thoroughly 87 charge: burden 95 jack'nape: coxcomb 97 meddle or make: interfere 102 Jack: term of contempt 104 measure our weapon: i.e., as umpire in a duel 106 good-jer: an expression of disgust 110 An fool's-head; cf. n. 115 trow: wonder Come near: enter 120 honest: chaste

Quick. Well, thereby hangs a tale. Good faith, it is such another Nan; but, I detest, an honest maid as ever broke bread: we had an hour's talk of that wart. I shall never laugh but in that maid's company;—but, indeed, she is given too much to allicholy and musing. But for you—well, go to.

Fent. Well, I shall see her to-day. Hold, there's money for thee; let me have thy voice in my behalf: if thou seest her before me, commend me.

Quick. Will I? i' faith, that we will: and I will tell your worship more of the wart the next time we have confidence; and of other wooers.

Fent. Well, farewell; I am in great haste now.

Quick. Farewell to your worship. [Exit Fenton.] Truly, an honest gentleman: but Anne loves him not; for I know Anne's mind as well as another does. Out upon 't! what have I forgot? Exit.

Act Second ❧ Scene First

[Before Page's House]

Enter Mistress Page, [with a letter; and later] Mistress Ford, Master Page, Master Ford, Pistol, Nym, [Mistress] Quickly, Host, [and] Shallow.

Mrs. Page. What! have I 'scaped love-letters in the holiday-time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them? Let me see. [Reads.]

'Ask me no reason why I love you; for though Love use Reason for his physician, he admits him not for his counsellor. You are not young, no more am I; got to then, there's sympathy; you are merry, so am I; ha! ha! then, there's more sympathy; you love sack, and so do I; would you desire better sympathy? Let it suffice thee, Mistress Page, at the least, if the love of a soldier can suffice, that I love thee. I will not say, pity me,—'tis not a soldier-like phrase; but I say, love me. By me,

Thine own true knight,
By day or night,
Or any kind of light,
With all his might
For thee to fight, John Falstaff.'

What a Herod of Jewry is this! O wicked, wicked world! one that is well-nigh worn to pieces with age, to show himself a young gallant! What an unweighed behaviour hath this Flemish drunkard picked, with the devil's name! out of my conversation, that he dares in this manner assay me? Why, he hath not been thrice in my company! What should I say to him? I was then frugal of my mirth:—heaven forgive me! Why, I'll exhibit a bill in the parliament for the putting down of men. How shall I be revenged on him? for revenged I will be, as sure as his guts are made of puddings.

[Enter Mistress Ford.]

Mrs. Ford. Mistress Page! trust me, I was going to your house.

Mrs. Page. And, trust me, I was coming to you. You look very ill.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I'll ne'er believe that: I have to show to the contrary.

Mrs. Page. Faith, but you do, in my mind.

Mrs. Ford. Well, I do then; yet, I say I could show you to the contrary. O, Mistress Page! give me some counsel.

Mrs. Page. What's the matter, woman?

Mrs. Ford. O woman, if it were not for one trifling respect, I could come to such honour!

Mrs. Page. Hang the trifle, woman; take the honour. What is it?—dispense with trifles;—what is it?

Mrs. Ford. If I would but go to hell for an eternal moment or so, I could be knighted.

Mrs. Page. What? thou liest. Sir Alice Ford! These knights will hack; and so thou shouldst not alter the article of thy gentry.

Mrs. Ford. We burn daylight: here, read, read; perceive how I might be knighted. I shall think the worse of fat men as long as I have an eye to make difference of men's liking: and yet he would not swear; praised women's modesty; and gave such orderly and well-behaved reproof to all uncomeliness, that I would have sworn his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words; but they do no more adhere and keep place together than the Hundredth Psalm to the tune of 'Green Sleeves.' What tempest, I trow, threw this whale, with so many tuns of oil in his belly, ashore at Windsor? How shall I be revenged on him? I think, the best way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his own grease. Did you ever hear the like?

Mrs. Page. Letter for letter, but that the name of Page and Ford differs! To thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, here's the twin brother of thy letter: but let thine inherit first; for, I protest, mine never shall. I warrant, he hath a thousand of these letters, writ with blank space for different names, sure more, and these are the second edition. He will print them, out of doubt; for he cares not what he puts into the press, when he would put us two: I had rather be a giantess, and lie under Mount Pelion. Well, I will find you twenty lascivious turtles ere one chaste man.

Mrs. Ford. Why, this is the very same; the very hand, the very words. What doth he think of us?

Mrs. Page. Nay, I know not: it makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own honesty. I'll entertain myself like one that I am not acquainted withal; for, sure, unless he know some strain in me, that I know not myself, he would never have boarded me in this fury.

Mrs. Ford. Boarding call you it? I'll be sure to keep him above deck.

Mrs. Page. So will I: if he come under my hatches, I'll never to sea again. Let's be revenged on him: let's appoint him a meeting; give him a show of comfort in his suit, and lead him on with a fine-baited delay, till he hath pawned his horses to mine host of the Garter.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I will consent to act any villainy against him, that may not sully the chariness of our honesty. O,

133 allicholy: i.e., melancholy go to: no more of that! 6, 7 sympathy: agreement 8 sack: white Spanish wine 18 Herod of Jewry: cf. n. 20 unweighed: inconsiderate Flemish drunkard: cf. n. 21 conversation: conduct 24 exhibit: submit for consideration 25 putting down: destroying 27 puddings: stuffed intestines, sausages

45 hack: grow common (?); cf. n. article . . . gentry: character of your rank 47 burn daylight: waste time 49 make difference: discriminate between liking: looks 51 uncomeliness: rude behavior 52, 53 disposition . . . words: cf. n. 53 adhere: agree 54 Green Sleeves: cf. n. 57 entertain: fill his thoughts 69 turtles: turtle doves, symbolic of faithful love 73 entertain: treat 82 fine-baited: subtly alluring 85 chariness: scrupulous integrity that my husband saw this letter! it would give eternal food to his jealousy.

Mrs. Page. Why, look where he comes; and my good man too: he's as far from jealousy, as I am from giving him cause; and that, I hope, is an unmeasurable distance.

Mrs. Ford. You are the happier woman.

Mrs. Page. Let's consult together against this greasy knight. Come hither. [They retire.]

[Enter Ford, with Pistol; and Page, with Nym.]

Ford. Well, I hope it be not so.

Pist. Hope is a curtal dog in some affairs: Sir John affects thy wife.

Ford. Why, sir, my wife is not young.

Pist. He woos both high and low, both rich and poor,
Both young and old, one with another, Ford.
He loves the galimaufry: Ford, perpend.

Ford. Love my wife!

Pist. With liver burning hot: prevent, or go thou,
Like Sir Actæon he, with Ringwood at thy heels.—
O! odious is the name!

Ford. What name, sir?

Pist. The horn, I say. Farewell:
Take heed; have open eye, for thieves do foot by night:
Take heed, ere summer comes or cuckoo-birds do sing.
Away, sir Corporal Nym!
Believe it, Page; he speaks sense. [Exit.]

Ford. [Aside.] I will be patient: I will find out this.

Nym. [To Page.] And this is true; I like not the humour of lying. He hath wronged me in some humours: I should have borne the humoured letter to her, but I have a sword and it shall bite upon my necessity. He loves your wife; there's the short and the long. My name is Corporal Nym; I speak, and I avouch 'tis true: my name is Nym, and Falstaff loves your wife. Adieu. I love not the humour of bread and cheese; [and there's the humour of it.] Adieu. [Exit.]

Page. 'The humour of it,' quoth 'a! here's a fellow frights humour out of his wits.

Ford. I will seek out Falstaff.

Page. I never heard such a drawling, affecting rogue.

Ford. If I do find it: well.

Page. I will not believe such a Cataian, though the priest o' the town commended him for a true man.

Ford. 'Twas a good sensible fellow; well.

Page. How now, Meg!

[Mrs. Page and Mrs. Ford come forward.]

Mrs. Page. Whither go you, George?—Hark you.

Mrs. Ford. How now, sweet Frank! why art thou melancholy?

Ford. I melancholy! I am not melancholy. Get you home, go.

Mrs. Ford. Faith, thou hast some crotchets in thy head now. Will you go, Mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. Have with you. You'll come to dinner, George? [Aside to Mrs. Ford.] Look, who comes yonder: she shall be our messenger to this paltry knight.

Mrs. Ford. [Aside to Mrs. Page.] Trust me, I thought on her: she'll fit it.

[Enter Mistress Quickly.]

Mrs. Page. You are come to see my daughter Anne?

Quick. Ay, forsooth; and, I pray, how does good Mistress Anne?

Mrs. Page. Go in with us, and see: we'd have an hour's talk with you. [Exeunt Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Mrs. Quickly.]

Page. How now, Master Ford!

Ford. You heard what this knave told me, did you not?

Page. Yes; and you heard what the other told me?

Ford. Do you think there is truth in them?

Page. Hang 'em, slaves! I do not think the knight would offer it: but these that accuse him in his intent towards our wives, are a yoke of his discarded men; very rogues, now they be out of service.

Ford. Were they his men?

Page. Marry, were they.

Ford. I like it never the better for that. Does he lie at the Garter?

Page. Ay, marry, does he. If he should intend this voyage towards my wife, I would turn her loose to him; and what he gets more of her than sharp words, let it lie on my head.

Ford. I do not misdoubt my wife, but I would be loth to turn them together. A man may be too confident: I would have nothing 'lie on my head': I cannot be thus satisfied.

Page. Look, where my ranting host of the Garter comes. There is either liquor in his pate or money in his purse when he looks so merrily.—

[Enter Host.]

How now, mine host!

Host. How now, bully-rook! thou'rt a gentleman. Cavaliero-justice, I say!

[Enter Shallow.]

Shal. I follow, mine host, I follow. Good even and twenty, good Master Page! Master Page, will you go with us? we have sport in hand.

Host. Tell him, cavaliero-justice; tell him, bully-rook.

Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought between Sir Hugh the Welsh priest and Caius the French doctor.

Ford. Good mine host o' the Garter, a word with you. [Drawing him aside.]

Host. What sayest thou, my bully-rook?

Shal. [To Page.] Will you go with us to behold it? My merry host hath had the measuring of their weapons, and, I think, hath appointed them contrary places; for, believe me, I hear the parson is no jester. Hark, I will tell you what our sport shall be. [They converse apart.]

Host. Hast thou no suit against my knight, my guest-cavalier?

Ford. None, I protest: but I'll give you a pottle of burnt sack to give me recourse to him and tell him my name is Brook, only for a jest.

Host. My hand, bully: thou shalt have egress and regress; said I well? and thy name shall be Brook. It is a merry knight. Will you go, mynheers?

Shal. Have with you, mine host.

95 curtal: having tail docked affects: is fond of 100 galimaufry: medley perpend: consider 102 liver: supposed seat of love 103 Actæon . . . Ringwood; cf. n. 107 foot: walk 108 cuckoo-birds; cf. n. 123 affecting: affected 125 Cataian: Chinese; cf. n. 132 crotchets: whims 134 Have with you: I'll go along with you

150 yoke: pair very: thorough 159 misdoubt: mistrust 166, 167 Cavaliero-justice; cf. n. 168, 169 Good even and twenty; cf. n. 178 contrary: different 183 pottle: tankard burnt sack: warm wine 184 recourse: access 188 mynheers: sirs

Page. I have heard, the Frenchman hath good skill in his rapier.

Shal. Tut, sir! I could have told you more. In these times you stand on distance, your passes, stoccadoes, and I know not what: 'tis the heart, Master Page; 'tis here, 'tis here. I have seen the time with my long sword I would have made you four tall fellows skip like rats.

Host. Here, boys, here, here! shall we wag?

Page. Have with you. I had rather hear them scold than fight. [Exeunt Host, Shallow, and Page.]

Ford. Though Page be a secure fool, and stands so firmly on his wife's frailty, yet I cannot put off my opinion so easily. She was in his company at Page's house, and what they made there, I know not. Well, I will look further into 't; and I have a disguise to sound Falstaff. If I find her honest, I lose not my labour; if she be otherwise, 'tis labour well bestowed. [Exit.]

Scene Second

[A Room in the Garter Inn]

Enter Falstaff [and] Pistol; [and later] Robin, [Mistress] Quickly, Bardolph, [and] Ford.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Pist. Why, then the world's mine oyster,
Which I with sword will open.
[I will retort the sum in equipage.]

Fal. Not a penny. I have been content, sir, you should lay my countenance to pawn: I have grated upon my good friends for three reprieves for you and your coach-fellow Nym; or else you had looked through the grate, like a geminy of baboons. I am damned in hell for swearing to gentlemen my friends, you were good soldiers and tall fellows; and when Mistress Bridget lost the handle of her fan, I took 't upon mine honour thou hadst it not.

Pist. Didst thou not share? hadst thou not fifteen pence?

Fal. Reason, you rogue, reason: thinkest thou, I'll endanger my soul gratis? At a word, hang no more about me; I am no gibbet for you: go: a short knife and a throng!—to your manor of Pickt-hatch! go. You'll not bear a letter for me, you rogue!—you stand upon your honour!—Why, thou unconfinable baseness, it is as much as I can do to keep the terms of mine honour precise. I, I, I, myself sometimes, leaving the fear of God on the left hand and hiding mine honour in my necessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge and to lurch; and yet you, rogue, will ensconce your rags, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases, and your bold-beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour! You will not do it, you!

Pist. I do relent: what wouldst thou more of man?

[Enter Robin.]

Rob. Sir, here's a woman would speak with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

[Enter Mistress Quickly.]

193 distance: interval between fencers passes: lunges stoccadoes: thrusts 196 made you: made ('you' is 'ethical') 200 secure: unsuspicious 4 retort: i.e., repay equipage; cf. n. 6 countenance; cf. n. 7 coach-fellow: mate 8 geminy: pair 11 handle; cf. n. took 't: swore 16 short knife: for cutting purses 17 Pickt-hatch; cf. n. 22 shuffle: equivocate hedge: cheat lurch: lie in ambush 23 cat-a-mountain: wildcat 24 red-lattice phrases: alehouse talk bold-beating: blustering

Quick. Give your worship good morrow.

Fal. Good morrow, good wife.

Quick. Not so, an 't please your worship.

Fal. Good maid, then.

Quick. I'll be sworn
As my mother was, the first hour I was born.

Fal. I do believe the swearer. What with me?

Quick. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word or two?

Fal. Two thousand, fair woman; and I'll vouchsafe thee the hearing.

Quick. There is one Mistress Ford, sir,—I pray, come a little nearer this ways:—I myself dwell with Master Doctor Caius.

Fal. Well, on: Mistress Ford, you say,—

Quick. Your worship says very true:—I pray your worship, come a little nearer this ways.

Fal. I warrant thee, nobody hears; mine own people, mine own people.

Quick. Are they so? God bless them, and make them his servants!

Fal. Well: Mistress Ford; what of her?

Quick. Why, sir, she's a good creature. Lord, Lord! your worship's a wanton! Well, heaven forgive you, and all of us, I pray!

Fal. Mistress Ford; come, Mistress Ford,—

Quick. Marry, this is the short and the long of it. You have brought her into such a canaries as 'tis wonderful: the best courtier of them all, when the court lay at Windsor, could never have brought her to such a canary; yet there has been knights, and lords, and gentlemen, with their coaches, I warrant you, coach after coach, letter after letter, gift after gift; smelling so sweetly—all musk, and so rushling, I warrant you, in silk and gold; and in such alligant terms; and in such wine and sugar of the best and the fairest, that would have won any woman's heart; and, I warrant you, they could never get an eye-wink of her. I had myself twenty angels given me this morning; but I defy all angels, in any such sort, as they say, but in the way of honesty: and, I warrant you, they could never get her so much as sip on a cup with the proudest of them all; and yet there has been earls, nay, which is more, pensioners; but, I warrant you, all is one with her.

Fal. But what says she to me? be brief, my good she-Mercury.

Quick. Marry, she hath received your letter; for the which she thanks you a thousand times; and she gives you to notify that her husband will be absence from his house between ten and eleven.

Fal. Ten and eleven?

Quick. Ay, forsooth; and then you may come and see the picture, she says, that you wot of: Master Ford, her husband, will be from home. Alas! the sweet woman leads an ill life with him; he's a very jealousy man; she leads a very frampold life with him, good heart.

Fal. Ten and eleven. Woman, commend me to her; I will not fail her.

Quick. Why, you say well. But I have another messenger to your worship: Mistress Page hath her hearty commendations to you too: and let me tell you in your ear, she's as fartuous a civil modest wife, and one, I tell you, that will not miss you

54 canaries: i.e., quandary (?) 59 rushling: i.e., rustling 60 alligant: i.e., eloquent 68 pensioners: gentlemen of the sovereign's bodyguard 69, 70 she-Mercury; female messenger 77 wot: know 79 frampold: quarrelsome 85 fartuous: i.e., virtuous morning nor evening prayer, as any is in Windsor, whoe'er be the other: and she bade me tell your worship that her husband is seldom from home; but, she hopes there will come a time. I never knew a woman so dote upon a man: surely, I think you have charms, la; yes, in truth.

Fal. Not I, I assure thee: setting the attraction of my good parts aside, I have no other charms.

Quick. Blessing on your heart for 't!

Fal. But, I pray thee, tell me this: has Ford's wife and Page's wife acquainted each other how they love me?

Quick. That were a jest indeed! they have not so little grace, I hope: that were a trick, indeed! But Mistress Page would desire you to send her your little page, of all loves: her husband has a marvellous infection to the little page; and, truly, Master Page is an honest man. Never a wife in Windsor leads a better life than she does: do what she will, say what she will, take all, pay all, go to bed when she list, rise when she list, all is as she will: and, truly she deserves it; for if there be a kind woman in Windsor, she is one. You must send her your page; no remedy.

Fal. Why, I will.

Quick. Nay, but do so, then: and, look you, he may come and go between you both; and in any case have a nay-word, that you may know one another's mind, and the boy never need to understand anything; for 'tis not good that children should know any wickedness: old folks, you know, have discretion, as they say, and know the world.

Fal. Fare thee well: commend me to them both. There's my purse; I am yet thy debtor.—Boy, go along with this woman.—[Exeunt Mistress Quickly and Robin.] This news distracts me.

Pist. This punk is one of Cupid's carriers.
Clap on more sails; pursue; up with your fights;
Give fire! she is my prize, or ocean whelm them all!
[Exit.]

Fal. Sayest thou so, old Jack? go thy ways; I'll make more of thy old body than I have done. Will they yet look after thee? Wilt thou, after the expense of so much money, be now a gainer? Good body, I thank thee. Let them say 'tis grossly done; so it be fairly done, no matter.

[Enter Bardolph.]

Bard. Sir John, there's one Master Brook below would fain speak with you, and be acquainted with you: and hath sent your worship a morning's draught of sack.

Fal. Brook is his name?

Bard. Ay, sir.

Fal. Call him in. [Exit Bardolph.] Such Brooks are welcome to me, that o'erflow such liquor. Ah, ha! Mistress Ford and Mistress Page, have I encompassed you? go to; via!

[Enter Bardolph, with Ford, disguised.]

Ford. Bless you, sir!

Fal. And you, sir; would you speak with me?

Ford. I make bold to press with so little preparation upon you.

Fal. You're welcome. What's your will?—Give us leave, drawer. [Exit Bardolph.]

Ford. Sir, I am a gentleman that have spent much: my name is Brook.

Fal. Good Master Brook, I desire more acquaintance of you.

Ford. Good Sir John, I sue for yours: not to charge you; for I must let you understand I think myself in better plight for a lender than you are: the which hath something emboldened me to this unseasoned intrusion; for, they say, if money go before, all ways do lie open..

Fal. Money is a good soldier, sir, and will on.

Ford. Troth, and I have a bag of money here troubles me: if you will help to bear it, Sir John, take all, or half, for easing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deserve to be your porter.

Ford. I will tell you, sir, if you will give me the hearing.

Fal. Speak, good Master Brook; I shall be glad to be your servant.

Ford. Sir, I hear you are a scholar,—I will be brief with you, and you have been a man long known to me, though I had never so good means, as desire, to make myself acquainted with you. I shall discover a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine own imperfection; but, good Sir John, as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the register of your own, that I may pass with a reproof the easier, sith you yourself know how easy it is to be such an offender.

Fal. Very well, sir; proceed.

Ford. There is a gentlewoman in this town, her husband's name is Ford.

Fal. Well, sir.

Ford. I have long loved her, and, I protest to you, bestowed much on her; followed her with a doting observance; engrossed opportunities to meet her; fee'd every slight occasion that could but niggardly give me sight of her; not only bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many to know what she would have given. Briefly, I have pursued her as love hath pursued me; which hath been on the wing of all occasions. But whatsoever I have merited, either in my mind or in my means, meed, I am sure, I have received none; unless experience be a jewel that I have purchased at an infinite rate; and that hath taught me to say this,
'Love like a shadow flies when substance love pursues;
Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues.'

Fal. Have you received no promise of satisfaction at her hands?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Have you importuned her to such a purpose?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Of what quality was your love, then?

Ford. Like a fair house built upon another man's ground; so that I have lost my edifice by mistaking the place where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpose have you unfolded this to me?

Ford. When I have told you that, I have told you all. Some say, that though she appear honest to me, yet in other places she enlargeth her mirth so far that there is shrewd construction made of her. Now, Sir John, here is the heart of my purpose: you are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse,

93 parts: qualities 99 of all loves: for love's sake 100 infection: i.e., affection 103 list: please 108 nay-word: password 116 punk: strumpet carriers: messengers 117 fights; cf. n. 118 my prize; cf. n. 123 grossly: heavily 129 Brooks; cf. n. 131 encompassed: outwitted via: go on 136 Give us leave: withdraw

141 charge: cause expense to 144 unseasoned: ill-timed 157 discover: disclose 160 register: record 161 sith: since 168 engrossed: bought up wholesale 169 fee'd: employed 178, 179 Cf. n. 192 shrewd: evil of great admittance, authentic in your place and person, generally allowed for your many warlike, courtlike, and learned preparations.

Fal. O, sir!

Ford. Believe it, for you know it. There is money; spend it, spend it; spend more; spend all I have; only give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Ford's wife: use your art of wooing, win her to consent to you; if any man may, you may as soon as any.

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection, that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks you prescribe to yourself very preposterously.

Ford. O, understand my drift. She dwells so securely on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not present itself: she is too bright to be looked against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand, my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves: I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage-vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too-too strongly embattled against me. What say you to 't, Sir John?

Fal. Master Brook, I will first make bold with your money; next, give me your hand; and last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Ford's wife.

Ford. O good sir!

Fal. I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money, Sir John; you shall want none.

Fal. Want no Mistress Ford, Master Brook; you shall want none. I shall be with her, I may tell you, by her own appointment; even as you came in to me, her assistant or go-between parted from me: I say I shall be with her between ten and eleven; for at that time the jealous rascally knave her husband will be forth. Come you to me at night; you shall know how I speed.

Ford. I am blest in your acquaintance. Do you know Ford, sir?

Fal. Hang him, poor cuckoldly knave! I know him not. Yet I wrong him, to call him poor: they say the jealous wittolly knave hath masses of money; for the which his wife seems to me well-favoured. I will use her as the key of the cuckoldly rogue's coffer; and there's my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir, that you might avoid him, if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanical salt-butter rogue! I will stare him out of his wits; I will awe him with my cudgel: it shall hang like a meteor o'er the cuckold's horns. Master Brook, thou shalt know I will predominate over the peasant, and thou shalt lie with his wife. Come to me soon at night. Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his style; thou, Master Brook, shalt know him for knave and cuckold. Come to me soon at night. [Exit.]

Ford. What a damned Epicurean rascal is this! My heart is ready to crack with impatience. Who says this is improvident jealousy? my wife hath sent to him, the hour is fixed, the match is made. Would any man have thought this? See the hell of having a false woman! My bed shall be abused, my coffers ransacked, my reputation gnawn at; and I shall not only receive this villainous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abominable terms, and by him that does me this wrong. Terms! names! Amaimon sounds well; Lucifer, well; Barbason, well; yet they are devils' additions, the names of fiends: but Cuckold! Wittol!—Cuckold! the devil himself hath not such a name. Page is an ass, a secure ass: he will trust his wife; he will not be jealous. I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, Parson Hugh the Welshman with my cheese, an Irishman with my aqua-vitæ bottle, or a thief to walk my ambling gelding, than my wife with herself: then she plots, then she ruminates, then she devises; and what they think in their hearts they may effect, they will break their hearts but they will effect. God be praised for my jealousy! Eleven o'clock the hour: I will prevent this, detect my wife, be revenged on Falstaff, and laugh at Page. I will about it; better three hours too soon than a minute too late. Fie, fie, fie! cuckold! cuckold! cuckold! Exit.

Scene Third

[A Field near Windsor]

Enter Caius [and] Rugby; [and later] Page, Shallow, Slender, [and] Host.

Caius. Jack Rugby!

Rug. Sir?

Caius. Vat is de clock, Jack?

Rug. 'Tis past the hour, sir, that Sir Hugh promised to meet.

Caius. By gar, he has save his soul, dat he is no come: he has pray his Pible vell, dat he is no come. By gar, Jack Rugby, he is dead already, if he be come.

Rug. He is wise, sir; he knew your worship would kill him, if he came.

Caius. By gar, de herring is no dead so as I vill kill him. Take your rapier, Jack; I vill tell you how I vill kill him.

Rug. Alas, sir! I cannot fence.

Caius. Villainy, take your rapier.

Rug. Forbear; here's company.

[Enter Host, Shallow, Slender, and Page.]

Host. Bless thee, bully Doctor!

Shal. Save you, Master Doctor Caius!

Page. Now, good Master Doctor!

Slen. Give you good morrow, sir.

Caius. Vat be all you, one, two, tree, four, come for?

Host. To see thee fight, to see thee foin, to see thee traverse; to see thee here, to see thee there; to see thee pass thy punto, thy stock, thy reverse, thy distance, thy montant. Is he dead, my Ethiopian? is he dead, my Francisco? ha, bully! What says my Æsculapius? my Galen? my heart of elder? ha! is he dead, bully stale? is he dead?

195 admittance: fashion authentic: powerful 196 allowed: approved 197 preparations: accomplishments 201 amiable: amorous 212 instance: evidence 213 ward: posture of defence (fencing) 228 forth: away from home 232 cuckoldly: having an unfaithful wife 233 wittolly: cuckoldly 235 well-favoured: good-looking 239 mechanical: vulgar salt-butter: rank (?) 242 predominate: have ascendancy 244 aggravate: add to style: title 247 Epicurean: sensual

253, 254 stand . . . terms: cf. n. 255, 256 Amaimon, Barbason: devils additions: titles 257 Wittol: contented cuckold 21 foin: thrust (fencing) traverse: march back and forth 22, 23 punto . . . montant: fencing terms; cf. n. 24 Francisco: i.e., Frenchman 25 Æsculapius: Greek god of medicine Galen: Greek physician of second century A. D. heart of elder: coward; cf. n. 26 stale: cf. n.

Caius. By gar, he is de coward Jack priest of de vorld; he is not show his face.

Host. Thou art a Castilian King Urinal! Hector of Greece, my boy!

Caius. I pray you, bear vitness that me have stay six or seven, two, tree hours for him, and he is no come.

Shal. He is the wiser man, Master Doctor: he is a curer of souls, and you a curer of bodies; if you should fight, you go against the hair of your professions. Is it not true, Master Page?

Page. Master Shallow, you have yourself been a great fighter, though now a man of peace.

Shal. Bodykins, Master Page, though I now be old and of the peace, if I see a sword out, my finger itches to make one. Though we are justices and doctors and churchmen, Master Page, we have some salt of our youth in us; we are the sons of women, Master Page.

Page. 'Tis true, Master Shallow.

Shal. It will be found so, Master Page. Master Doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home. I am sworn of the peace: you have showed yourself a wise physician, and Sir Hugh hath shown himself a wise and patient churchman. You must go with me, Master Doctor.

Host. Pardon, guest-justice.—A word, Monsieur Mockwater.

Caius. Mock-vater! vat is dat?

Host. Mock-water, in our English tongue, is valour, bully.

Caius. By gar, den, I have as mush mock-vater as de Englishman.—Scurvy jack-dog priest! by gar, me vill cut his ears.

Host. He will clapper-claw thee tightly, bully.

Caius. Clapper-de-claw! vat is dat?

Host. That is, he will make thee amends.

Caius. By gar, me do look, he shall clapper-de-claw me; for, by gar, me vill have it.

Host. And I will provoke him to 't, or let him wag.

Caius. Me tank you for dat.

Host. And moreover, bully,—But first, Master guest, and Master Page, and eke Cavaliero Slender, go you through the town to Frogmore. [Aside to them.]

Page. Sir Hugh is there, is he?

Host. He is there: see what humour he is in; and I will bring the doctor about by the fields. Will it do well?

Shal. We will do it.

Page, Shal., and Slen. Adieu, good Master Doctor.

[Exeunt Page, Shallow, and Slender.]

Caius. By gar, me vill kill de priest; for he speak for a jack-an-ape to Anne Page.

Host. Let him die. Sheathe thy impatience; throw cold water on thy choler: go about the fields with me through Frogmore: I will bring thee where Mistress Anne Page is, at a farmhouse a-feasting; and thou shalt woo her. Cried game; said I well?

Caius. By gar, me tank you for dat: by gar, I love you; and I shall procure-a you de good guest, de earl, de knight, de lords, de gentlemen, my patients.

Host. For the which I will be thy adversary toward Anne Page: said I well?

Caius. By gar, 'tis good; vell said.

Host. Let us wag, then.

Caius. Come at my heels, Jack Rugby. Exeunt.

29 Hector of Greece: i.e., valiant warrior 35 hair: grain 38 Bodykins: God's body 39 make one: join in 41 salt: quality 49 Mockwater: physician (slang) 54 clapper-claw: thrash 63 Frogmore; cf. n. 74 Cried game; cf. n.

Act Third ❧ Scene First

[A Field near Frogmore]

Enter Evans [and] Simple; [and later] Page, Shallow, Slender, Host, Caius, [and] Rugby.

Eva. I pray you now, good Master Slender's serving-man, and friend Simple by your name, which way have you looked for Master Caius, that calls himself doctor of physic?

Sim. Marry, sir, the pittie-ward, the parkward, every way; old Windsor way, and every way but the town way.

Eva. I most fehemently desire you you will also look that way.

Sim. I will, sir. [Exit.]

Eva. Pless my soul! how full of chollors I am, and trempling of mind! I shall be glad if he have deceived me. How melancholies I am! I will knog his urinals about his knave's costard when I have goot opportunities for the 'ork: pless my soul! [Sings.]

'To shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals;
There will we make our peds of roses,
And a thousand fragrant posies.
To shallow—'

Mercy on me! I have a great dispositions to cry. [Sings.]

Melodious birds sing madrigals,—
When as I sat in Pabylon,—
And a thousand vagram posies.
To shallow,—'

[Enter Simple.]

Sim. Yonder he is coming, this way, Sir Hugh.

Eva. He's welcome. [Sings.]

'To shallow rivers, to whose falls—'

Heaven prosper the right!—what weapons is he?

Sim. No weapons, sir. There comes my master, Master Shallow, and another gentleman, from Frogmore, over the stile, this way.

Eva. Pray you, give me my gown; or else keep it in your arms. [Reads in a book.]

[Enter Page, Shallow, and Slender.]

Shal. How now, Master Parson! Good morrow, good Sir Hugh. Keep a gamester from the dice, and a good student from his book, and it is wonderful.

Slen. [Aside.] Ah, sweet Anne Page!

Page. Save you, good Sir Hugh!

Eva. Pless you from His mercy sake, all of you!

Shal. What, the sword and the word! do you study them both, Master Parson?

Page. And youthful still in your doublet and hose! this raw rheumatic day?

Eva. There is reasons and causes for it.

Page. We are come to you to do a good office, Master Parson.

4 pittie-ward: toward the little park; cf. n. 9 chollors: choler, ie., anger 11 knog: knock costard: apple, used jokingly for head 12 'ork: i.e., work 13–20 Cf. n. 21 vagram: i.e., fragrant 40 doublet and hose; cf. n.

Eva. Fery well: what is it?

Page. Yonder is a most reverend gentleman, who, belike having received wrong by some person, is at most odds with his own gravity and patience that ever you saw.

Shal. I have lived fourscore years and upward; I never heard a man of his place, gravity, and learning, so wide of his own respect.

Eva. What is he?

Page. I think you know him; Master Doctor Caius, the renowned French physician.

Eva. Got's will, and his passion of my heart! I had as lief you would tell me of a mess of porridge.

Page. Why?

Eva. He has no more knowledge in Hibbocrates and Galen,—and he is a knave besides; a cowardly knave as you would desires to be acquainted withal.

Page. I warrant you, he's the man should fight with him.

Slen. [Aside.] O, sweet Anne Page!

Shal. It appears so, by his weapons. Keep them asunder: here comes Doctor Caius.

[Enter Host, Caius, and Rugby.]

Page. Nay, good Master Parson, keep in your weapon.

Shal. So do you, good Master Doctor.

Host. Disarm them, and let them question: let them keep their limbs whole and hack our English.

Caius. I pray you, let-a me speak a word vit your ear: verefore will you not meet-a me?

Eva. [Aside to Caius.] Pray you, use your patience: in good time.

Caius. By gar, you are de coward, de Jack dog, John ape.

Eva. [Aside to Caius.] Pray you, let us not be laughing-stogs to other men's humours; I desire you in friendship, and I will one way or other make you amends. [Aloud.] I will knog your urinals about your knave's cogscomb [for missing your meetings and appointments.]

Caius. Diable!—Jack Rugby,—mine host de Jarretierre,—have I not stay for him to kill him? have I not, at de place I did appoint?

Eva. As I am a Christians soul, now, look you, this is the place appointed: I'll be judgment by mine host of the Garter.

Host. Peace, I say, Gallia and Gaul; French and Welsh, soul-curer and body-curer!

Caius. Ay, dat is very good; excellent.

Host. Peace, I say! hear mine host of the Garter. Am I politic? am I subtle? am I a Machiavel? Shall I lose my doctor? no; he gives me the potions and the motions. Shall I lose my parson, my priest, my Sir Hugh? no; he gives me the proverbs and the no-verbs. [Give me thy hand, terrestrial; so;]—give me thy hand celestial; so. Boys of art, I have deceived you both; I have directed you to wrong places: your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole, and let burnt sack be the issue. Come, lay their swords to pawn. Follow me, lads of peace; follow, follow, follow.

Shal. Trust me, a mad host!—Follow, gentlemen, follow.

Slen. [Aside.] O, sweet Anne Page!

[Exeunt Shallow, Slender, Page, and Host.]

Caius. Ha! do I perceive dat? have you make-a de sot of us, ha, ha?

Eva. This is well; he has made us his vlouting-stog. I desire you that we may be friends and let us knog our prains together to be revenge on this same scall, scurvy, cogging companion, the host of the Garter.

Caius. By gar, vit all my heart. He promise to bring me vere is Anne Page: by gar, he deceive me too.

Eva. Well, I will smite his noddles. Pray you, follow.

[Exeunt.]

Scene Second

[A Street in Windsor]

[Enter] Mist[ress] Page [and] Robin; [and later] Ford, Page, Shallow, Slender, Host, Evans, [and] Caius.

Mrs. Page. Nay, keep your way, little gallant: you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a leader. Whether had you rather lead mine eyes, or eye your master's heels?

Rob. I had rather, forsooth, go before you like a man than follow him like a dwarf.

Mrs. Page. O! you are a flattering boy: now I see you'll be a courtier.

[Enter Ford.]

Ford. Well met, Mistress Page. Whither go you?

Mrs. Page. Truly, sir, to see your wife: is she at home?

Ford. Ay; and as idle as she may hang together, for want of company. I think if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

Mrs. Page. Be sure of that,—two other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty weather-cock?

Mrs. Page. I cannot tell what the dickens his name is my husband had him of. What do you call your knight's name, sirrah?

Rob. Sir John Falstaff.

Ford. Sir John Falstaff!

Mrs. Page. He, he; I can never hit on's name. There is such a league between my good man and he! Is your wife at home indeed?

Ford. Indeed she is.

Mrs. Page. By your leave, sir: I am sick till I see her.

[Exeunt Mistress Page and Robin.]

Ford. Has Page any brains? hath he any eyes? hath he any thinking? Sure, they sleep; he hath no use of them. Why, this boy will carry a letter twenty mile, as easy as a cannon will shoot point-blank twelve score. He pieces out his wife's inclination; he gives her folly motion and advantage: and now she's going to my wife, and Falstaff's boy with her. A man may hear this shower sing in the wind: and Falstaff's boy with her! Good plots! they are laid; and our revolted wives share damnation together. Well; I will take him, then torture my wife, pluck the borrowed veil of modesty from the so seeming Mistress Page, divulge Page himself for a secure and wilful Actæon; and to these violent proceedings all my neighbours shall cry

47 odds: strife 50, 51 so . . . respect: so indifferent to his reputation 58 Hibbocrates: i.e., Hippocrates, Greek physician and writer of fifth century B. C. 67 question: talk 84 Gallia: i.e., Wales (Fr. Galles) 88 Machiavel: intriguer 92 art: learning 95 issue: conclusion aim. [Clock strikes.] The clock gives me my cue, and my assurance bids me search; there I shall find Falstaff. I shall be rather praised for this than mocked; for it is as positive as the earth is firm, that Falstaff is there: I will go.

99 sot: fool 101 vlouting-stog: i.e., floutingstock, laughingstock 103 scall: i.e., scald, scurvy cogging: cheating 2 Whether: (I wonder) whether 21 league: friendship 28 pieces out: ekes out 29 motion: instigation 31 hear . . . wind: i.e., the matter is perfectly obvious 36 cry aim: express their approval; cf. n.

[Enter Page, Shallow, Slender, Host, Sir Hugh Evans, Caius, and Rugby.]

Shal., Page, &c. Well met, Master Ford.

Ford. Trust me, a good knot. I have good cheer at home; and I pray you all go with me.

Shal. I must excuse myself, Master Ford.

Slen. And so must I, sir: we have appointed to dine with Mistress Anne, and I would not break with her for more money than I'll speak of.

Shal. We have lingered about a match between Anne Page and my cousin Slender, and this day we shall have our answer.

Slen. I hope I have your good will, father Page.

Page. You have, Master Slender; I stand wholly for you: but my wife, Master Doctor, is for you altogether.

Caius. Ay, by gar; and de maid is love-a me: my nursh-a Quickly tell me so mush.

Host. What say you to young Master Fenton? he capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth, he writes verses, he speaks holiday, he smells April and May: he will carry 't, he will carry 't; 'tis in his buttons; he will carry 't.

Page. Not by my consent, I promise you. The gentleman is of no having: he kept company with the wild prince and Poins; he is of too high a region; he knows too much. No, he shall not knit a knot in his fortunes with the finger of my substance: if he take her, let him take her simply; the wealth I have waits on my consent, and my consent goes not that way.

Ford. I beseech you heartily, some of you go home with me to dinner: besides your cheer, you shall have sport; I will show you a monster. Master Doctor, you shall go; so shall you, Master Page; and you, Sir Hugh.

Shal. Well, fare you well: we shall have the freer wooing at Master Page's. [Exeunt Shallow and Slender.]

Caius. Go home, John Rugby; I come anon. [Exit Rugby.]

Host. Farewell, my hearts: I will to my honest knight Falstaff, and drink canary with him. [Exit]

Ford. [Aside.] I think I shall drink in pipe-wine first with him; I'll make him dance. Will you go, gentles?

All. Have with you to see this monster. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[A Room in Ford's House]

Enter M[istress] Ford [and] M[istress] Page; [and later] Servants, Robin, Falstaff, Ford, Page, Caius, [and] Evans.

Mrs. Ford. What, John! what, Robert!

Mrs. Page. Quickly, quickly:—Is the buck-basket—

Mrs. Ford. I warrant. What, Robin, I say!

[Enter Servants with a basket.]

Mrs. Page. Come, come, come.

Mrs. Ford. Here, set it down.

Mrs. Page. Give your men the charge; we must be brief.

Mrs. Ford. Marry, as I told you before, John, and Robert, be ready here hard by in the brewhouse; and when I suddenly call you, come forth, and without any pause or staggering, take this basket on your shoulders: that done, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the whitsters in Datchet-mead, and there empty it in the muddy ditch, close by the Thames side.

Mrs. Page. You will do it?

Mrs. Ford. I have told them over and over; they lack no direction. Be gone, and come when you are called.

[Exeunt Servants.]

Mrs. Page. Here comes little Robin.

[Enter Robin.]

Mrs. Ford. How now, my eyas-musket! what news with you?

Rob. My master, Sir John, is come in at your back-door, Mistress Ford, and requests your company.

Mrs. Page. You little Jack-a-Lent, have you been true to us?

Rob. Ay, I'll be sworn. My master knows not of your being here, and hath threatened to put me into everlasting liberty if I tell you of it; for he swears he'll turn me away.

Mrs. Page. Thou'rt a good boy; this secrecy of thine shall be a tailor to thee and shall make thee a new doublet and hose. I'll go hide me.

Mrs. Ford. Do so. Go tell thy master I am alone. [Exit Robin.] Mistress Page, remember you your cue.

Mrs. Page. I warrant thee; if I do not act it, hiss me.

[Exit.]

Mrs. Ford. Go to, then: we'll use this unwholesome humidity, this gross watery pumpion; we'll teach him to know turtles from jays.

[Enter Falstaff.]

Fal. 'Have I caught my heavenly jewel?' Why, now let me die, for I have lived long enough: this is the period of my ambition: O this blessed hour!

Mrs. Ford. O, sweet Sir John!

Fal. Mistress Ford, I cannot cog, I cannot prate, Mistress Ford. Now shall I sin in my wish: I would thy husband were dead. I'll speak it before the best lord, I would make thee my lady.

Mrs. Ford. I your lady, Sir John! alas, I should be a pitiful lady.

Fal. Let the court of France show me such another. I see how thine eye would emulate the diamond: thou hast the right arched beauty of the brow that becomes the ship-tire, the tire-valiant, or any tire of Venetian admittance.

Mrs. Ford. A plain kerchief, Sir John: my brows become nothing else; nor that well neither.

Fal. By the Lord, thou art a traitor to say so: thou wouldst make an absolute courtier; and the firm fixture of thy foot would give an excellent motion to thy gait in a semi-circled farthingale. I see what thou wert, if Fortune thy foe were not, Nature thy friend. Come, thou canst not hide it.

42 knot: company 57 holiday: in choice language 57, 58 he will . . . buttons: he'll win; he has it in him 60 having: property 60, 61 prince and Poins: cf. n. region: height in the heavens 63 simply: by herself 73 canary: a sweet wine 74 pipe-wine: wine in the cask; cf. n. 2 buck-basket: basket for soiled linen

6 charge: order 11 whitsters: bleachers of linen Datchet-mead; cf. n. 17 eyas-musket: young sparrow-hawk 20 Jack-a-Lent: puppet used as target in a game 31 pumpion: pumpkin 33 Cf. n. 34 period: final point 37 cog: fawn 45 ship-tire: headdress shaped like a ship 46 tire-valiant: fantastic headdress 50 absolute: perfect 51, 52 semi-circled farthingale: petticoat, the hoops of which did not come round in front Fortune thy foe; cf. n.

Mrs. Ford. Believe me, there's no such thing in me.

Fal. What made me love thee? let that persuade thee there's something extraordinary in thee. Come, I cannot cog and say thou art this and that, like a many of these lisping hawthornbuds, that come like women in men's apparel, and smell like Bucklersbury in simple-time; I cannot; but I love thee; none but thee; and thou deservest it.

Mrs. Ford. Do not betray me, sir. I fear you love Mistress Page.

Fal. Thou mightst as well say, I love to walk by the Counter-gate, which is as hateful to me as the reek of a lime-kiln.

Mrs. Ford. Well, heaven knows how I love you; and you shall one day find it.

Fal. Keep in that mind; I'll deserve it.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you do, or else I could not be in that mind.

Rob. [Within.] Mistress Ford! Mistress Ford! here's Mistress Page at the door, sweating and blowing and looking wildly, and would needs speak with you presently.

Fal. She shall not see me: I will ensconce me behind the arras.

Mrs. Ford. Pray you, do so: she's a very tattling woman. [Falstaff hides himself.]

[Enter Mistress Page and Robin.]

What's the matter? how now!

Mrs. Page. O Mistress Ford! what have you done? You're shamed, you are overthrown, you're undone for ever!

Mrs. Ford. What's the matter, good Mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. O well-a-day, Mistress Ford! having an honest man to your husband, to give him such cause of suspicion!

Mrs. Ford. What cause of suspicion?

Mrs. Page. What cause of suspicion! Out upon you! how am I mistook in you!

Mrs. Ford. Why, alas, what's the matter?

Mrs. Page. Your husband's coming hither, woman, with all the officers in Windsor, to search for a gentleman that he says is here now in the house by your consent, to take an ill advantage of his absence: you are undone.

Mrs. Ford. [Aside.] Speak louder.—'Tis not so, I hope.

Mrs. Page. Pray heaven it be not so, that you have such a man here! but 'tis most certain your husband's coming with half Windsor at his heels, to search for such a one. I come before to tell you. If you know yourself clear, why, I am glad of it; but if you have a friend here, convey, convey him out. Be not amazed; call all your senses to you: defend your reputation, or bid farewell to your good life for ever.

Mrs. Ford. What shall I do?—There is a gentleman, my dear friend; and I fear not mine own shame so much as his peril: I had rather than a thousand pound he were out of the house.

Mrs. Page. For shame! never stand 'you had rather' and 'you had rather': your husband's here at hand; bethink you of some conveyance: in the house you cannot hide him. O, how have you deceived me! Look, here is a basket: if he be of any reasonable stature, he may creep in here; and throw foul linen upon him, as if it were going to bucking: or—it is whiting-time—send him by your two men to Datchet-mead.

58 hawthorn-buds: dandies 59 Bucklersbury: cf. n. 63, 64 Counter-gate: gate of debtors' prison 73 ensconce: conceal. 74 arras: hanging screen of tapestry placed round the walls of a room 94 clear: innocent 101 stand: lose time over 106 bucking: washing whiting-time: bleaching-time

Mrs. Ford. He's too big to go in there. What shall I do?

Fal. [Coming forward.] Let me see 't, let me see 't, O, let me see 't! I'll in, I'll in. Follow your friend's counsel. I'll in.

Mrs. Page. What, Sir John Falstaff! Are these your letters, knight?

Fal. I love thee, and none but thee; help me away: let me creep in here. I'll never— [Gets into the basket; they cover him with foul linen.]

Mrs. Page. Help to cover your master, boy. Call your men, Mistress Ford. You dissembling knight!

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John! [Exit Robin.]

[Enter Servants.]

Go take up these clothes here quickly; where's the cowl-staff? look, how you drumble! carry them to the laundress in Datchet-mead; quickly, come.

[Enter Ford, Page, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans.]

Ford. Pray you, come near: if I suspect without cause, why then make sport at me; then let me be your jest; I deserve it. How now! what goes here? whither bear you this?

Serv. To the laundress, forsooth.

Mrs. Ford. Why, what have you to do whither they bear it? You were best meddle with buck-washing.

Ford. Buck! I would I could wash myself of the buck! Buck, buck, buck! Ay, buck; I warrant you, buck; and of the season too; it shall appear. [Exeunt Servants with the basket.] Gentlemen, I have dreamed to-night; I'll tell you my dream. Here, here, here be my keys: ascend my chambers; search, seek, find out: I'll warrant we'll unkennel the fox. Let me stop this way first. [Locking the door.] So, now uncape.

Page. Good Master Ford, be contented: you wrong yourself too much.

Ford. True, Master Page. Up, gentlemen; you shall see sport anon: follow me, gentlemen. [Exit.]

Eva. This is fery fantastical humours and jealousies.

Caius. By gar, 'tis no de fashion of France; it is not jealous in France.

Page. Nay, follow him, gentlemen; see the issue of his search. [Exeunt Page, Caius, and Evans.]

Mrs. Page. Is there not a double excellency in this?

Mrs. Ford. I know not which pleases me better; that my husband is deceived, or Sir John.

Mrs. Page. What a taking was he in when your husband asked who was in the basket!

Mrs. Ford. I am half afraid he will have need of washing; so throwing him into the water will do him a benefit.

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest rascal! I would all of the same strain were in the same distress.

Mrs. Ford. I think my husband hath some special suspicion of Falstaff's being here; for I never saw him so gross in his jealousy till now.

Mrs. Page. I will lay a plot to try that; and we will yet have more tricks with Falstaff: his dissolute disease will scarce obey this medicine.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we send that foolish carrion Mistress

118 cowl-staff: pole for carrying a basket between two persons 119 drumble: dawdle 126 buck-washing: washing of clothes 128 of the season: in season 130 to-night: last night 132 unkennel: drive from cover 133 uncape: uncouple; cf. n, 146 taking: fright

Quickly to him, and excuse his throwing into the water; and give him another hope, to betray him to another punishment?

Mrs. Page. We will do it: let him be sent for to-morrow, eight o'clock, to have amends.

[Enter Ford, Page, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans.]

Ford. I cannot find him: may be the knave bragged of that he could not compass.

Mrs. Page. [Aside to Mrs. Ford.] Heard you that?

Mrs. Ford. [Aside to Mrs. Page.] Ay, ay, peace.—You use me well, Master Ford, do you?

Ford. Ay, I do so.

Mrs. Ford. Heaven make you better than your thoughts!

Ford. Amen!

Mrs. Page. You do yourself mighty wrong, Master Ford.

Ford. Ay, ay; I must bear it.

Eva. If there pe any pody in the house, and in the chambers, and in the coffers, and in the presses, heaven forgive my sins at the day of judgment!

Caius. By gar, nor I too, dere is no bodies.

Page. Fie, fie, Master Ford! are you not ashamed? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? I would not ha' your distemper in this kind for the wealth of Windsor Castle.

Ford. 'Tis my fault, Master Page: I suffer for it.

Eva. You suffer for a pad conscience: your wife is as honest a 'omans as I will desires among five thousand, and five hundred too.

Caius. By gar, I see 'tis an honest woman.

Ford. Well; I promised you a dinner. Come, come, walk in the Park: I pray you, pardon me; I will hereafter make known to you why I have done this. Come, wife; come, Mistress Page. I pray you, pardon me; pray heartily, pardon me.

Page. Let's go in, gentlemen; but, trust me, we'll mock him. I do invite you to-morrow morning to my house to breakfast; after, we'll a-birding together: I have a fine hawk for the bush. Shall it be so?

Ford. Anything.

Eva. If there is one, I shall make two in the company.

Caius. If dere be one or two, I shall make-a de turd.

Ford. Pray you go, Master Page.

Eva. I pray you now, remembrance tomorrow on the lousy knave, mine host.

Caius. Dat is good; by gar, vit all my heart.

Eva. A lousy knave! to have his gibes and his mockeries!

Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[A Room in Page's House]

Enter Fenton [and] Anne Page; [and later] Shallow, Slender, [Mistress] Quickly, Page, [and] Mist[ress] Page.

Fent. I see I cannot get thy father's love; Therefore no more turn me to him, sweet Nan.

Anne. Alas! how then?

Fent. Why, thou must be thyself.
He doth object, I am too great of birth,
And that my state being gall'd with my expense,
I seek to heal it only by his wealth.
Besides these, other bars he lays before me,
My riots past, my wild societies;
And tells me 'tis a thing impossible
I should love thee but as a property.

Anne. May be he tells you true.

Fent. No, heaven so speed me in my time to come!
Albeit I will confess thy father's wealth
Was the first motive that I woo'd thee, Anne:
Yet, wooing thee, I found thee of more value
Than stamps in gold or sums in sealed bags;
And 'tis the very riches of thyself
That now I aim at.

Anne. Gentle Master Fenton,
Yet seek my father's love; still seek it, sir:
If opportunity and humblest suit
Cannot attain it, why, then,—hark you hither.

[They converse apart.]

[Enter Shallow, Slender, and Mistress Quickly.]

Shal. Break their talk, Mistress Quickly: my kinsman shall speak for himself.

Slen. I'll make a shaft or a bolt on 't. 'Slid, 'tis but venturing.

Shal. Be not dismayed.

Slen. No, she shall not dismay me: I care not for that, but that I am afeard.

Quick. Hark ye; Master Slender would speak a word with you.

Anne. I come to him. [Aside.] This is my father's choice.
O, what a world of veil ill-favour'd faults
Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year!

Quick. And how does good Master Fenton? Pray you, a word with you.

Shal. She's coming; to her, coz. O boy, thou hadst a father!

Slen. I had a father, Mistress Anne; my uncle can tell you good jests of him. Pray you, uncle, tell Mistress Anne the jest, how my father stole two geese out of a pen, good uncle.

Shal. Mistress Anne, my cousin loves you.

Slen. Ay, that I do; as well as I love any woman in Gloucestershire.

Shal. He will maintain you like a gentlewoman.

Slen. Ay, that I will, come cut and long-tail, under the degree of a squire.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and fifty pounds jointure.

Anne. Good Master Shallow, let him woo for himself.

Shal. Marry, I thank you for it; I thank you for that good comfort. She calls you, coz: I'll leave you.

Anne. Now, Master Slender.

Slen. Now, good Mistress Anne.—

Anne. What is your will?

Slen. My will? od's heartlings! that's a pretty jest, indeed! I ne'er made my will yet, I thank heaven; I am not such a sickly creature, I give heaven praise.

Anne. I mean, Master Slender, what would you with me?

Slen. Truly, for mine own part, I would little or nothing with you. Your father and my uncle have made motions: if it be any luck, so; if not, happy man be his dole! They can tell you how things go better than I can: you may ask your father; here he comes.

174 presses: clothespresses 179 kind: way 191 a-birding: hawking; cf. n. refer 6 state: estate gall'd with my expense: exhausted by my squandering 2 turn: refer 17 stamps: coins 24 Break: interrupt 26 shaft . . . bolt; cf. n. 'Slid: God's eyelid 46 cut: with docked tail 56 od's heartlings: God's little heart

[Enter Page and Mistress Page.]

Page. Now, Master Slender: love him, daughter Anne.
Why, how now! what does Master Fenton here?
You wrong me, sir, thus still to haunt my house:
I told you, sir, my daughter is dispos'd of.
Fent. Nay, Master Page, be not impatient.
Mrs. Page. Good Master Fenton, come not to my child.
Page. She is no match for you.
Fent. Sir, will you hear me?
Page. No, good Master Fenton.
Come, Master Shallow; come, son Slender, in.
Knowing my mind, you wrong me, Master Fenton.
[Exeunt Page, Shallow, and Slender.]
Quick. Speak to Mistress Page.
Fent. Good Mistress Page, for that I love your daughter
In such a righteous fashion as I do,
Perforce, against all checks, rebukes and manners,
I must advance the colours of my love
And not retire: let me have your good will.
Anne. Good mother, do not marry me to yond fool.
Mrs. Page. I mean it not; I seek you a better husband.
Quick. That's my master, Master Doctor.
Anne. Alas! I had rather be set quick i' the earth, And bowl'd to death with turnips.
Mrs. Page. Come, trouble not yourself. Good Master Fenton,
I will not be your friend nor enemy:
My daughter will I question how she loves you,
And as I find her, so am I affected.
Till then, farewell, sir: she must needs go in;
Her father will be angry.
Fent. Farewell, gentle mistress. Farewell, Nan.
[Exeunt Mistress Page and Anne.]
Quick. This is my doing now: 'Nay,' said I, 'will you cast away your child on a fool, and a physician? Look on Master Fenton.' This is my doing.
Fent. I thank thee: and I pray thee, once to-night
Give my sweet Nan this ring. There's for thy pains.
Quick. Now heaven send thee good fortune! [Exit Fenton.]
A kind heart he hath: a woman would run through fire and water for such a kind heart. But yet I would my master had Mistress Anne; or I would Master Slender had her; or, in sooth, I would Master Fenton had her. I will do what I can for them all three, for so I have promised, and I'll be as good as my word; but speciously for Master Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to Sir John Falstaff from my two mistresses: what a beast am I to slack it! [Exit.]

Scene Fifth

[A Room in the Garter Inn]
Enter Falstaff [and] Bardolph;
[and later Mistress] Quickly, [and] Ford.

Fal. Bardolph, I say,—
Bard. Here, sir.
Fal. Go fetch me a quart of sack; put a toast in 't. [Exit Bardolph.] Have I lived to be carried in a basket, and to be thrown in the Thames like a barrow of butcher's offal? Well, if I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains ta'en out, and buttered, and give them to a dog for a new year's gift. The rogues slighted me into the river with as little remorse as they would have drowned a blind bitch's puppies, fifteen i' the litter; and you may know by my size that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking: if the bottom were as deep as hell, I should down. I have been drowned but that the shore was shelvy and shallow; a death that I abhor, for the water swells a man, and what a thing should I have been when I had been swelled! I should have been a mountain of mummy.

[Enter Bardolph with sack.]

Bard. Here's Mistress Quickly, sir, to speak with you.
Fal. Come, let me pour in some sack to the Thames water, for my belly's as cold as if I had swallowed snowballs for pills to cool the reins. Call her in.
Bard. Come in, woman.

[Enter Mistress Quickly.]

Quick. By your leave. I cry you mercy: give your worship good morrow.
Fal. Take away these chalices. Go brew me a pottle of sack finely.
Bard. With eggs, sir?
Fal. Simple of itself; I'll no pullet-sperm in my brewage. [Exit Bardolph.]—How now!
Quick. Marry, sir, I come to your worship from Mistress Ford.
Fal. Mistress Ford! I have had ford enough; I was thrown into the ford; I have my belly full of ford.
Quick. Alas the day! good heart, that was not her fault: she does so take on with her men; they mistook their erection.
Fal. So did I mine, to build upon a foolish woman's promise.
Quick. Well, she laments, sir, for it, that it would yearn your heart to see it. Her husband goes this morning a-birding: she desires you once more to come to her between eight and nine. I must carry her word quickly: she'll make you amends, I warrant you.
Fal. Well, I will visit her: tell her so; and bid her think what a man is: let her consider his frailty, and then judge of my merit.
Quick. I will tell her.
Fal. Do so. Between nine and ten, sayest thou?
Quick. Eight and nine, sir.
Fal. Well, be gone: I will not miss her.
Quick. Peace be with you, sir. [Exit.]
Fal. I marvel I hear not of Master Brook; he sent me word to stay within. I like his money well. O! here he comes.

[Enter Ford.]

62 happy man be his dole: happiness be his portion (a proverbial phrase) 79 checks: reproofs 80 colours: standards 85 quick: alive 90 affected: inclined 97 once: sometime 105 speciously: i.e., especially

8 slighted: tossed carelessly 15 mummy: dead flesh 19 reins: kidneys 21 cry you mercy: beg your pardon 23 pottle: two-quart measure 33 erection: i.e., direction 36 yearn: grieve

Ford. Bless you, sir!

Fal. Now, Master Brook, you come to know what hath passed between me and Ford's wife?

Ford. That, indeed, Sir John, is my business.

Fal. Master Brook, I will not lie to you: I was at her house the hour she appointed me.

Ford. And sped you, sir?

Fal. Very ill-favouredly, Master Brook.

Ford. How so, sir? did she change her determination?

Fal. No, Master Brook; but the peaking cornuto her husband, Master Brook, dwelling in a continual 'larum of jealousy, comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embraced, kissed, protested, and, as it were, spoke the prologue of our comedy; and at his heels a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his distemper, and, forsooth, to search his house for his wife's love.

Ford. What! while you were there?

Fal. While I was there.

Ford. And did he search for you, and could not find you?

Fal. You shall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one Mistress Page; gives intelligence of Ford's approach; and in her invention, and Ford's wife's distraction, they conveyed me into a buck-basket.

Ford. A buck-basket!

Fal. By the Lord, a buck-basket! rammed me in with foul shirts and smocks, socks, foul stockings, greasy napkins; that, Master Brook, there was the rankest compound of villainous smell that ever offended nostril.

Ford. And how long lay you there?

Fal. Nay, you shall hear, Master Brook, what I have suffered to bring this woman to evil for your good. Being thus crammed in the basket, a couple of Ford's knaves, his hinds, were called forth by their mistress to carry me in the name of foul clothes to Datchet-lane: they took me on their shoulders; met the jealous knave their master in the door, who asked them once or twice what they had in their basket. I quaked for fear lest the lunatic knave would have searched it; but Fate, ordaining he should be a cuckold, held his hand. Well; on went he for a search, and away went I for foul clothes. But mark the sequel, Master Brook: I suffered the pangs of three several deaths: first, an intolerable fright, to be detected with a jealous rotten bell-wether; next, to be compassed, like a good bilbo, in the circumference of a peck, hilt to point, heel to head; and then, to be stopped in, like a strong distillation, with stinking clothes that fretted in their own grease: think of that, a man of my kidney, think of that, that am as subject to heat as butter; a man of continual dissolution and thaw: it was a miracle to 'scape suffocation. And in the height of this bath, when I was more than half stewed in grease, like a Dutch dish, to be thrown into the Thames, and cooled, glowing hot, in that surge, like a horse-shoe; think of that, hissing hot, think of that, Master Brook!

Ford. In good sadness, sir, I am sorry that for my sake you have suffered all this. My suit then is desperate; you'll undertake her no more?

Fal. Master Brook, I will be thrown into Etna, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her thus. Her husband is this morning gone a-birding: I have received from her another embassy of meeting; 'twixt eight and nine is the hour, Master Brook.

Ford. 'Tis past eight already, sir.

Fal. Is it? I will then address me to my appointment. Come to me at your convenient leisure, and you shall know how I speed, and the conclusion shall be crowned with your enjoying her: adieu. You shall have her, Master Brook; Master Brook, you shall cuckold Ford. [Exit.]

Ford. Hum! ha! is this a vision? is this a dream? do I sleep? Master Ford, awake! awake, Master Ford! there's a hole made in your best coat, Master Ford. This 'tis to be married: this 'tis to have linen and buck-baskets! Well, I will proclaim myself what I am: I will now take the lecher; he is at my house; he cannot 'scape me; 'tis impossible he should; he cannot creep into a half-penny purse, nor into a pepper-box; but, lest the devil that guides him should aid him, I will search impossible places. Though what I am I cannot avoid, yet to be what I would not, shall not make be tame: if I have horns to make one mad, let the proverb go with me; I'll be horn-mad. [Exit.]

58 ill-favouredly: badly 60 peaking: sneaking cornuto: cuckold 61 'larum: alarm 65 distemper: ill humour 76 that: so that 82 hinds: servants 91 with: by 92 bilbo; cf. n. 95 fretted: consumed 103 sadness: seriousness

ACT FOURTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

[A Street]

Enter Mistress Page, [Mistress] Quickly, [and] William; [and later] Evans.

Mrs. Page. Is he at Master Ford's already, thinkest thou?

Quick. Sure he is by this, or will be presently; but truly, he is very courageous mad about his throwing into the water. Mistress Ford desires you to come suddenly.

Mrs. Page. I'll be with her by and by: I'll but bring my young man here to school. Look, where his master comes; 'tis a playing-day, I see.

[Enter Sir Hugh Evans.]

How now, Sir Hugh! no school to-day?

Eva. No; Master Slender is let the boys leave to play.

Quick. Blessing of his heart!

Mrs. Page. Sir Hugh, my husband says my son profits nothing in the world at his book: I pray you, ask him some questions in his accidence.

Eva. Come hither, William; hold up your head; come.

Mrs. Page. Come on, sirrah; hold up your head; answer your master, be not afraid.

Eva. William, how many numbers is in nouns?

Will. Two.

Quick. Truly, I thought there had been one number more, because they say, 'Od's nouns.'

Eva. Peace your tattlings! What is fair, William?

Will. Pulcher.

Quick. Polecats! there are fairer things than polecats, sure.

Eva. You are a very simplicity 'oman: I pray you peace. What is lapis, William?

Will. A stone.

Eva. And what is a stone, William?

109 embassy: message 112 address: prepare 4 suddenly: at once 5 by and by: immediately 20 Od's nouns: God's wounds

Will. A pebble.

Eva. No, it is lapis: I pray you remember in your prain.

Will. Lapis.

Eva. That is a good William. What is he, William, that does lend articles?

Will. Articles are borrowed of the pronoun, and be thus declined, Singulariter, nominativo, hic, hæc, hoc.

Eva. Nominativo, hig, hag, hog; pray you, mark: genitivo, hujus. Well, what is your accusative case?

Will. Accusativo, hinc.

Eva. I pray you, have your remembrance, child; accusativo, hung, hang, hog.

Quick. Hang-hog is Latin for bacon, I warrant you.

Eva. Leave your prabbles, 'oman. What is the focative case, William?

Will. O vocativo, O.

Eva. Remember, William; focative is caret.

Quick. And that's a good root.

Eva. 'Oman, forbear.

Mrs. Page. Peace!

Eva. What is your genitive case plural, William?

Will. Genitive case?

Eva. Ay.

Will. Genitive, horum, harum, horum.

Quick. Vengeance of Jenny's case! fie on her! Never name her, child, if she be a whore.

Eva. For shame, 'oman!

Quick. You do ill to teach the child such words. He teaches him to hick and to hack, which they'll do fast enough of themselves, and to call 'horum'; fie upon you!

Eva. 'Oman, art thou lunatics? hast thou no understandings for thy cases and the numbers of the genders? Thou art as foolish Christian creatures as I would desires.

Mrs. Page. Prithee, hold thy peace.

Eva. Show me now, William, some declensions of your pronouns.

Will. Forsooth, I have forgot.

Eva. It is qui, quæ, quod; if you forget your quis, your quæs, and your quods, you must be preeches. Go your ways and play; go.

Mrs. Page. He is a better scholar than I thought he was.

Eva. He is a good sprag memory. Farewell, Mistress Page.

Mrs. Page. Adieu, good Sir Hugh. [Exit Sir Hugh.] Get you home, boy. Come, we stay too long. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[A Room in Ford's House]

Enter Falstaff, Mist[ress] Ford; [and later] Mist[ress] Page, Servants, Ford, Page, Caius, Evans, [and] Shallow.

Fal. Mistress Ford, your sorrow hath eaten up my sufferance. I see you are obsequious in your love, and I profess requital to a hair's breadth; not only, Mistress Ford, in the simple office of love, but in all the accoutrement, complement and ceremony of it. But are you sure of your husband now?

Mrs. Ford. He's a-birding, sweet Sir John.

Mrs. Page. [Within.] What ho! gossip Ford! what ho!

Mrs. Ford. Step into the chamber, Sir John. [Exit Falstaff.]

[Enter Mistress Page.]

Mrs. Page. How now, sweetheart! who's at home besides yourself?

Mrs. Ford. Why, none but mine own people.

Mrs. Page. Indeed!

Mrs. Ford. No, certainly.—[Aside to her.] Speak louder.

Mrs. Page. Truly, I am so glad you have nobody here.

Mrs. Ford. Why?

Mrs. Page. Why, woman, your husband is in his old lines again: he so takes on yonder with my husband; so rails against all married mankind; so curses all Eve's daughters, of what complexion soever; and so buffets himself on the forehead, crying, 'Peer out, peer out!' that any madness I ever yet beheld seemed but tameness, civility and patience, to this his distemper he is in now. I am glad the fat knight is not here.

Mrs. Ford. Why, does he talk of him?

Mrs. Page. Of none but him; and swears he was carried out, the last time he searched for him, in a basket: protests to my husband he is now here, and hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his suspicion. But I am glad the knight is not here; now he shall see his own foolery.

Mrs. Ford. How near is he, Mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. Hard by; at street end; he will be here anon.

Mrs. Ford. I am undone! the knight is here.

Mrs. Page. Why then you are utterly shamed, and he's but a dead man. What a woman are you! Away with him, away with him! better shame than murder.

Mrs. Ford. Which way should he go? how should I bestow him? Shall I put him into the basket again?

[Enter Falstaff.]

Fal. No, I'll come no more i' the basket. May I not go out ere he come?

Mrs. Page. Alas! three of Master Ford's brothers watch the door with pistols, that none shall issue out; otherwise you might slip away ere he came. But what make you here?

Fal. What shall I do? I'll creep up into the chimney.

Mrs. Ford. There they always use to discharge their birding-pieces.

Mrs. Page. Creep into the kiln-hole.

Fal. Where is it?

Mrs. Ford. He will seek there, on my word. Neither press, coffer, chest, trunk, well, vault, but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his note: there is no hiding you in the house.

Fal. I'll go out, then.

Mrs. Page. If you go out in your own semblance, you die, Sir John. Unless you go out disguised,—

Mrs. Ford. How might we disguise him?

Mrs. Page. Alas the day! I know not. There is no woman's gown big enough for him; otherwise, he might put on a hat, a muffler, and a kerchief, and so escape.

Fal. Good hearts, devise something: any extremity rather than a mischief.

40 Hang-hog: cf. n. 44 caret: is wanting (Latin) 56 hick: hiccup 66 preeches: i.e., breeched, flogged 69 sprag: i.e., sprack, alert 1, 2 sufferance: sufferings obsequious: devoted

7 gossip: friend 16 lines: rage 19 complexion: sort 44 use: are accustomed 49 abstract: catalogue

Mrs. Ford. My maid's aunt, the fat woman of Brainford, has a gown above.

Mrs. Page. On my word, it will serve him; she's as big as he is: and there's her thrummed hat and her muffler too. Run up, Sir John.

Mrs. Ford. Go, go, sweet Sir John: Mistress Page and I will look some linen for your head.

Mrs. Page. Quick, quick! we'll come dress you straight; put on the gown the while. [Exit Falstaff.]

Mrs. Ford. I would my husband would meet him in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brainford; he swears she's a witch; forbade her my house, and hath threatened to beat her.

Mrs. Page. Heaven guide him to thy husband's cudgel, and the devil guide his cudgel afterwards!

Mrs. Ford. But is my husband coming?

Mrs. Page. Ay, in good sadness, is he; and talks of the basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence.

Mrs. Ford. We'll try that; for I'll appoint my men to carry the basket again, to meet him at the door with it, as they did last time.

Mrs. Page. Nay, but he'll be here presently: let's go dress him like the witch of Brainford.

Mrs. Ford. I'll first direct my men what they shall do with the basket. Go up; I'll bring linen for him straight. [Exit.]

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest varlet! we cannot misuse him enough.
We'll leave a proof, by that which we will do,
Wives may be merry, and yet honest too:
We do not act that often jest and laugh;
'Tis old but true, 'Still swine eats all the draff.' [Exit.]

[Enter Mistress Ford, and two servants.]

Mrs. Ford. Go, sirs, take the basket again on your shoulders: your master is hard at door; if he bid you set it down, obey him. Quickly; dispatch. [Exit.]

First Serv. Come, come, take it up.

Sec. Serv. Pray heaven, it be not full of knight again.

First Serv. I hope not; I had as lief bear so much lead.

[Enter Ford, Page, Shallow, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans.]

Ford. Ay, but if it prove true, Master Page, have you any way then to unfool me again? Set down the basket, villains. Somebody call my wife. Youth in a basket! O you panderly rascals! there's a knot, a ging, a pack, a conspiracy against me: now shall the devil be shamed. What, wife, I say! Come, come forth! Behold what honest clothes you send forth to bleaching!

Page. Why, this passes! Master Ford, you are not to go loose any longer; you must be pinioned.

Eva. Why, this is lunatics! this is mad as a mad dog!

Shal. Indeed, Master Ford, this is not well, indeed.

Ford. So say I too, sir.—

[Enter Mistress Ford.]

Come hither Mistress Ford; the honest woman, the modest wife, the virtuous creature, that hath the jealous fool to her husband! I suspect without cause, mistress, do I?

Mrs. Ford. Heaven be my witness, you do, if you suspect me in any dishonesty.

Ford. Well said, brazen-face! hold it out. Come forth, sirrah! [Pulling clothes out of the basket.]

Page. This passes!

Mrs. Ford. Are you not ashamed? let the clothes alone.

Ford. I shall find you anon.

Eva. 'Tis unreasonable. Will you take up your wife's clothes? Come away.

Ford. Empty the basket, I say!

Mrs. Ford. Why, man, why?

Ford. Master Page, as I am an honest man, there was one conveyed out of my house yesterday in this basket: why may not he be there again? In my house I am sure he is; my intelligence is true; my jealousy is reasonable. Pluck me out all the linen.

Mrs. Ford. If you find a man there he shall die a flea's death.

Page. Here's no man.

Shal. By my fidelity, this is not well, Master Ford, this wrongs you.

Eva. Master Ford, you must pray, and not follow the imaginations of your own heart: this is jealousies.

Ford. Well, he's not here I seek for.

Page. No, nor nowhere else but in your brain.

Ford. Help to search my house this one time: if I find not what I seek, show no colour for my extremity; let me for ever be your table-sport; let them say of me, 'As jealous as Ford, that searched a hollow walnut for his wife's leman.' Satisfy me once more; once more search with me.

Mrs. Ford. What ho, Mistress Page! come you and the old woman down; my husband will come into the chamber.

Ford. Old woman! What old woman's that?

Mrs. Ford. Why, it is my maid's aunt of Brainford.

Ford. A witch, a quean, an old cozening quean! Have I not forbid her my house? She comes of errands, does she? We are simple men; we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortune-telling. She works by charms, by spells, by the figure, and such daubery as this is, beyond our element: we know nothing. Come down, you witch, you hag, you; come down, I say!

Mrs. Ford. Nay, good, sweet husband! good gentlemen, let him not strike the old woman.

[Enter Falstaff in woman's clothes, and Mistress Page.]

Mrs. Page. Come, Mother Prat; come, give me your hand.

Ford. I'll 'prat' her.—[Beating him.] Out of my door, you witch, you rag, you baggage, you polecat, you ronyon! out, out! I'll conjure you, I'll fortune-tell you. [Exit Falstaff.]

Mrs. Page. Are you not ashamed? I think you have killed the poor woman.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, he will do it. 'Tis a goodly credit for you.

Ford. Hang her, witch!

Eva. By yea and no, I think the 'oman is a witch indeed: I like not when a 'oman has a great peard; I spy a great peard under his muffler.

Ford. Will you follow, gentlemen? I beseech you, follow: see but the issue of my jealousy. If I cry out thus upon no trail, never trust me when I open again.

61 fat woman of Brainford; cf. n. 64 thrummed: made of coarse yarn 86 dishonest: unchaste 91 draff: swill 94 dispatch: hasten 101 ging: gang pack: confederacy

136 show no colour: suggest no excuse extremity: extravagance 138 leman: lover 144 quean: hussy cozening: deceiving 148 figure: effigy; cf. n. daubery: false show 155 ronyon: mangy woman

Page. Let's obey his humour a little further. Come, gentlemen. [Exeunt Ford, Page, Shallow, Caius, and Evans.]

Mrs. Page. Trust me, he beat him most pitifully.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, by the mass, that he did not; he beat him most unpitifully methought.

Mrs. Page. I'll have the cudgel hallowed and hung o'er the altar: it hath done meritorious service.

Mrs. Ford. What think you? May we, with the warrant of womanhood and the witness of a good conscience, pursue him with any further revenge?

Mrs. Page. The spirit of wantonness is, sure, scared out of him: if the devil have him not in fee-simple, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, in the way of waste, attempt us again.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we have served him?

Mrs. Page. Yes, by all means; if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husband's brains. If they can find in their hearts the poor unvirtuous fat knight shall be any further afflicted, we two will still be the ministers.

Mrs. Ford. I'll warrant they'll have him publicly shamed, and methinks there would be no period to the jest, should he not be publicly shamed.

Mrs. Page. Come, to the forge with it then; shape it: I would not have things cool. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[A Room in the Garter Inn]
Enter Host and Bardolph.

Bard. Sir, the Germans desire to have three of your horses: the duke himself will be to-morrow at court, and they are going to meet him.

Host. What duke should that be comes so secretly? I hear not of him in the court. Let me speak with the gentlemen; they speak English?

Bard. Ay, sir; I'll call them to you.

Host. They shall have my horses, but I'll make them pay; I'll sauce them: they have had my house a week at command; I have turned away my other guests: they must come off; I'll sauce them. Come. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[A Room in Ford's House]
Enter Page, Ford, Mistress Page, Mistress Ford, and Evans.

Eva. 'Tis one of the pest discretions of a 'oman as ever I did look upon.

Page. And did he send you both these letters at an instant?

Mrs. Page. Within a quarter of an hour.

Ford. Pardon me, wife. Henceforth do what thou wilt;
I rather will suspect the sun with cold
Than thee with wantonness: now doth thy honour stand,
In him that was of late an heretic,
As firm as faith.

Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well; no more.
Be not as extreme in submission
As in offence;
But let our plot go forward: let our wives
Yet once again, to make us public sport,
Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow,
Where we may take him and disgrace him for it.

Ford. There is no better way than that they spoke of.

Page. How? to send him word they'll meet him in the Park at midnight? Fie, fie! he'll never come.

Eva. You say he has been thrown into the rivers, and has been grievously peaten as an old 'oman: methinks there should be terrors in him that he should not come; methinks his flesh is punished, he shall have no desires.

Page. So think I too.

Mrs. Ford. Devise but how you'll use him when he comes,
And let us two devise to bring him thither.

Mrs. Page. There is an old tale goes that Herne the hunter,
Sometime a keeper here in Windsor forest,
Doth all the winter-time, at still midnight,
Walk round about an oak, with great ragg'd horns;
And there he blasts the tree, and takes the cattle,
And makes milch-kine yield blood, and shakes a chain
In a most hideous and dreadful manner:
You have heard of such a spirit, and well you know
The superstitious idle-headed eld
Receiv'd and did deliver to our age
This tale of Herne the hunter for a truth.

Page. Why, yet there want not many that do fear
In deep of night to walk by this Herne's oak.
But what of this?

Mrs. Ford. Marry, this is our device;
That Falstaff at that oak shall meet with us,
[Disguis'd like Herne with huge horns on his head.]

Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come,
And in this shape when you have brought him thither,
What shall be done with him? what is your plot?

Mrs. Page. That likewise have we thought upon, and thus:
Nan Page my daughter, and my little son,
And three or four more of their growth, we'll dress
Like urchins, ouphs, and fairies, green and white,
With rounds of waxen tapers on their heads,
And rattles in their hands. Upon a sudden,
As Falstaff, she, and I, are newly met,
Let them from forth a sawpit rush at once
With some diffused song: upon their sight,
We two in great amazedness will fly:
Then let them all encircle him about,
And, fairy-like, to-pinch the unclean knight;
And ask him why, that hour of fairy revel,
In their so sacred paths he dares to tread
In shape profane.

Mrs. Ford. And till he tell the truth,
Let the supposed fairies pinch him sound
And burn him with their tapers.

Mrs. Page. The truth being known,
We'll all present ourselves, dis-horn the spirit,
And mock him home to Windsor.

178 fee-simple: absolute possession fine and recovery; cf. n. 179 waste: spoliation 183 figures: phantasms 185 ministers: agents 187 period: fitting conclusion 1 Germans; cf. n. 10 come off: pay down

31 blasts: blights takes: bewitches 35 eld: people of olden time 50 urchins: goblins ouphs: elves 55 diffused: confused 58 to-pinch: pinch soundly 63 sound: soundly

Ford. The children must
Be practis'd well to this, or they'll ne'er do 't.
Eva. I will teach the children their behaviours; and I will be like a jack-an-apes also, to burn the knight with my taber.
Ford. That will be excellent. I'll go buy them vizards.
Mrs. Page. My Nan shall be the queen of all the fairies,
Finely attired in a robe of white.
Page. That silk will I go buy:—[Aside.] and in that time
Shall Master Slender steal my Nan away,
And marry her at Eton. Go, send to Falstaff straight.
Ford. Nay, I'll to him again in name of Brook;
He'll tell me all his purpose. Sure, he'll come.
Mrs. Page. Fear not you that. Go, get us properties,
And tricking for our fairies.
Eva. Let us about it: it is admirable pleasures and fery honest knaveries. [Exeunt Page, Ford, and Evans.]
Mrs. Page. Go, Mistress Ford,
Send Quickly to Sir John, to know his mind. [Exit Mistress Ford.]
I'll to the doctor: he hath my good will,
And none but he, to marry with Nan Page.
That Slender, though well landed, is an idiot;
And him my husband best of all affects:
The doctor is well money'd, and his friends
Potent at court: he, none but he, shall have her,
Though twenty thousand worthier come to crave her. [Exit.]

Scene Fifth

[A Room in the Garter Inn]
Enter Host [and] Simple; [and later] Falstaff, Bardolph, Evans, Caius, [and Mistress] Quickly.

Host. What wouldst thou have, boor? what, thick-skin? speak, breathe, discuss; brief, short, quick, snap.
Sim. Marry, sir, I come to speak with Sir John Falstaff from Master Slender.
Host. There's his chamber, his house, his castle, his standing-bed and truckle-bed: 'tis painted about with the story of the Prodigal, fresh and new. Go knock and call: he'll speak like an Anthropophaginian unto thee: knock, I say.
Sim. There's an old woman, a fat woman, gone up into his chamber: I'll be so bold as stay, sir, till she come down; I come to speak with her, indeed.
Host. Ha! a fat woman! the knight may be robbed: I'll call. Bully knight! Bully Sir John! speak from thy lungs military: art thou there? it is thine host, thine Ephesian, calls.
Fal. [Above.] How now, mine host!
Host. Here's a Bohemian-Tartar tarries the coming down of thy fat woman. Let her descend, bully; let her descend; my chambers are honourable: fie! privacy? fie!

[Enter Falstaff.]

Fal. There was, mine host, an old fat woman even now with me, but she's gone.
Sim. Pray you, sir, was 't not the wise woman of Brainford?
Fal. Ay, marry, was it, mussel-shell: what would you with her?
Sim. My master, sir, Master Slender, sent to her, seeing her go thorough the streets, to know, sir, whether one Nym, sir, that beguiled him of a chain, had the chain or no.
Fal. I spake with the old woman about it.
Sim. And what says she, I pray, sir?
Fal. Marry, she says that the very same man that beguiled Master Slender of his chain cozened him of it.
Sim. I would I could have spoken with the woman herself: I had other things to have spoken with her too, from him.
Fal. What are they? let us know.
Host. Ay, come; quick.
Sim. I may not conceal them, sir.
Host. Conceal them, or thou diest.
Sim. Why, sir, they were nothing but about Mistress Anne Page; to know if it were my master's fortune to have her or no.
Fal. 'Tis, 'tis his fortune.
Sim. What, sir?
Fal. To have her, or no. Go; say the woman told me so.
Sim. May I be bold to say so, sir?
Fal. Ay, sir: like who more bold?
Sim. I thank your worship: I shall make my master glad with these tidings. [Exit.]
Host. Thou art clerkly, thou art clerkly, Sir John. Was there a wise woman with thee?
Fal. Ay, that there was, mine host; one that hath taught me more wit than ever I learned before in my life: and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

[Enter Bardolph.]

Bard. Out, alas, sir! cozenage, mere cozenage!
Host. Where be my horses? speak well of them, varletto.
Bard. Run away, with the cozeners; for so soon as I came beyond Eton, they threw me off, from behind one of them, in a slough of mire; and set spurs and away, like three German devils, three Doctor Faustuses.
Host. They are gone but to meet the duke, villain. Do not say they be fled: Germans are honest men.

[Enter Sir Hugh Evans.]

Eva. Where is mine host?
Host. What is the matter, sir?
Eva. Have a care of your entertainments: there is a friend of mine come to town, tells me, there is three cozen-germans that has cozened all the hosts of Readins, of Maidenhead, of Colebrook, of horses and money. I tell you for good will, look you: you are wise and full of gibes and vlouting-stogs, and 'tis not convenient you should be cozened. Fare you well. [Exit.]

[Enter Doctor Caius.]

Caius. Vere is mine host de Jarteer?
Host. Here, Master Doctor, in perplexity and doubtful dilemma.
Caius. I cannot tell vat is dat; but it is tell-a me dat you

72 vizards: masks 77 Eton; cf. n. 80 properties: stage requisites 81 tricking: adornment 6 truckle-bed: trundle-bed, pushed under standing-bed when not in use 8 Anthropophaginian: cannibal 14 Ephesian: boon companion 16 Bohemian-Tartar: wild fellow

22 mussel-shell; cf. n. 25 thorough: through 35 conceal: i.e., reveal 44 like . . . bold: like the boldest 47 clerkly: scholarly 52 mere: pure 53 varletto: rascal servant 57 Doctor Faustuses; cf. n. 63 cozen-germans; cf. n. 64 Readins: Reading 64, 65 Colebrook: Colnbrook, four miles east of Windsor

make grand preparation for a duke de Jamany: by my trot, dere is no duke dat de court is know to come. I tell you for good vill: adieu. [Exit.]

Host. Hue and cry, villain! go. Assist me, knight; I am undone. Fly, run, hue and cry, villain! I am undone! [Exeunt Host and Bardolph.]

Fal. I would all the world might be cozened, for I have been cozened and beaten too. If it should come to the ear of the court how I have been transformed, and how my transformation hath been washed and cudgelled, they would melt me out of my fat drop by drop, and liquor fishermen's boots with me: I warrant they would whip me with their fine wits till I were as crest-fallen as a dried pear. I never prospered since I forswore myself at primero. Well, if my mind were but long enough to say my prayers, I would repent.

[Enter Mistress Quickly.]

Now, whence come you?

Quick. From the two parties, forsooth.

Fal. The devil take one party and his dam the other! and so they shall be both bestowed. I have suffered more for their sakes, more than the villainous inconstancy of man's disposition is able to bear.

Quick. And have not they suffered? Yes, I warrant; speciously one of them: Mistress Ford, good heart, is beaten black and blue, that you cannot see a white spot about her.

Fal. What tellest thou me of black and blue? I was beaten myself into all the colours of the rainbow; and I was like to be apprehended for the witch of Brainford: but that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old woman, delivered me, the knave constable had set me i' the stocks, i' the common stocks, for a witch.

Quick. Sir, let me speak with you in your chamber; you shall hear how things go, and, I warrant, to your content. Here is a letter will say somewhat. Good hearts! what ado here is to bring you together! Sure, one of you does not serve heaven well, that you are so crossed.

Fal. Come up into my chamber. Exeunt.

Scene Sixth

[Another Room in the Garter Inn]
Enter Fenton [and] Host.

Host. Master Fenton, talk not to me: my mind is heavy; I will give over all.

Fent. Yet hear me speak. Assist me in my purpose,
And, as I am a gentleman, I'll give thee
A hundred pound in gold more than your loss.

Host. I will hear you, Master Fenton; and I will, at the least, keep your counsel.

Fent. From time to time I have acquainted you
With the dear love I bear to fair Anne Page;
Who mutually hath answer'd my affection,
So far forth as herself might be her chooser,
Even to my wish. I have a letter from her
Of such contents as you will wonder at;
The mirth whereof so larded with my matter,
That neither singly can be manifested,
Without the show of both; wherein fat Falstaff
Hath a great scene: the image of the jest
I'll show you where at large. [Showing the letter.]
Hark, good mine host:
To-night at Herne's oak, just 'twixt twelve and one,
Must my sweet Nan present the Fairy Queen;
The purpose why, is here: in which disguise,
While other jests are something rank on foot,
Her father hath commanded her to slip
Away with Slender, and with him at Eton
Immediately to marry: she hath consented:
Now, sir,
Her mother, even strong against that match
And firm for Doctor Caius, hath appointed
That he shall likewise shuffle her away,
While other sports are tasking of their minds;
And at the deanery, where a priest attends,
Straight marry her: to this her mother's plot
She, seemingly obedient, likewise hath
Made promise to the doctor. Now, thus it rests:
Her father means she shall be all in white,
And in that habit, when Slender sees his time
To take her by the hand and bid her go,
She shall go with him: her mother hath intended,
The better to denote her to the doctor,—
For they must all be mask'd and vizarded—
That quaint in green she shall be loose enrob'd,
With ribands pendent, flaring 'bout her head;
And when the doctor spies his vantage ripe,
To pinch her by the hand; and on that token
The maid hath given consent to go with him.

Host. Which means she to deceive, father or mother?

Fent. Both, my good host, to go along with me:
And here it rests, that you'll procure the vicar
To stay for me at church 'twixt twelve and one,
And, in the lawful name of marrying,
To give our hearts united ceremony.

Host. Well, husband your device; I'll to the vicar.
Bring you the maid, you shall not lack a priest.

Fent. So shall I evermore be bound to thee;
Besides, I'll make a present recompense. Exeunt.

Act Fifth • Scene first

[A room in the Garter Inn]
Enter Falstaff [and Mistress] Quickly; and [later] Ford.

Fal. Prithee, no more prattling; go: I'll hold. This is the third time; I hope good luck lies in odd numbers. Away! go. They say there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance or death. Away!

Quick. I'll provide you a chain, and I'll do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

72 Jamany: i.e., Germany 81 liquor: grease 83 crest-fallen . . . pear: cf. n. 84 primero: a card game 105 crossed: thwarted 10 mutually: reciprocally

14 larded: interspersed 17 image: idea 21 present: represent 23 something: somewhat rank: abundantly 28 even: equally 31 tasking: occupying 42 quaint: elegantly 52 united ceremony: union of the marriage rite 1 hold: keep the engagement

Fal. Away, I say; time wears: hold up your head, and mince. [Exit Mistress Quickly.]

[Enter Ford.]

How now, Master Brook! Master Brook, the matter will be known to-night, or never. Be you in the Park about midnight, at Herne's oak, and you shall see wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yesterday, sir, as you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her, Master Brook, as you see, like a poor old man; but I came from her, Master Brook, like a poor old woman. That same knave Ford, her husband, hath the finest mad devil of jealousy in him, Master Brook, that ever governed frenzy. I will tell you: he beat me grievously, in the shape of a woman; for in the shape of a man, Master Brook, I fear not Goliath with a weaver's beam, because I know also life is a shuttle. I am in haste: go along with me; I'll tell you all, Master Brook. Since I plucked geese, played truant, and whipped top, I knew not what it was to be beaten till lately. Follow me: I'll tell you strange things of this knave Ford, on whom to-night I will be revenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand. Follow. Strange things in hand, Master Brook! Follow. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Windsor Park]
Enter Page, Shallow, [and] Slender.

Page. Come, come; we'll couch i' the castle-ditch till we see the light of our fairies. Remember, son Slender, my daughter.

Slen. Ay, forsooth; I have spoke with her and we have a nayword how to know one another. I come to her in white, and cry, 'mum'; she cries, 'budget'; and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: but what needs either your 'mum,' or her 'budget'? the white will decipher her well enough. It hath struck ten o'clock.

Page. The night is dark; light and spirits will become it well. Heaven prosper our sport! No man means evil but the devil, and we shall know him by his horns. Let's away; follow me. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[A Street leading to the Park]
Enter Mist[ress] Page, Mist[ress] Ford, [and] Caius.

Mrs. Page. Master Doctor, my daughter is in green: when you see your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the deanery, and dispatch it quickly. Go before into the Park: we two must go together.

Caius. I know vat I have to do. Adieu.

Mrs. Page. Fare you well, sir. [Exit Caius.] My husband will not rejoice so much at the abuse of Falstaff, as he will chafe at the doctor's marrying my daughter: but 'tis no matter; better a little chiding than a great deal of heart-break.

Mrs. Ford. Where is Nan now and her troop of fairies, and the Welsh devil, Hugh?

Mrs. Page. They are all couched in a pit hard by Herne's oak, with obscured lights; which, at the very instant of Falstaff's and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

Mrs. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze him.

Mrs. Page. If he be not amazed, he will be mocked; if he be amazed, he will every way be mocked.

Mrs. Ford. We'll betray him finely.

Mrs. Page. Against such lewdsters and their lechery,
Those that betray them do no treachery.

Mrs. Ford. The hour draws on: to the oak, to the oak! Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[Windsor Park]
Enter Evans [disguised] and [others as] Fairies.

Eva. Trib, trib, fairies: come; and remember your parts: Be pold, I pray you; follow me into the pit, and when I give the watch-'ords, do as I pid you. Come, come; trib, trib. Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

[Another Part of the Park]
Enter Falstaff [disguised as Herne; and later] Mistress Page, Mistress Ford, Evans, Anne Page, [and others, as] Fairies; [also] Page, Ford, [Mistress] Quickly, Slender, Fenton, Caius, [and] Pistol.

Fal. The Windsor bell hath struck twelve; the minute draws on. Now, the hot-blooded gods assist me! Remember, Jove, thou wast a bull for thy Europa; love set on thy horns. O powerful love! that, in some respects, makes a beast a man; in some other, a man a beast. You were also, Jupiter, a swan for the love of Leda; O omnipotent love! how near the god drew to the complexion of a goose! A fault done first in the form of a beast; O Jove, a beastly fault! and then another fault in the semblance of a fowl: think on 't, Jove; a foul fault! When gods have hot backs, what shall poor men do? For me, I am here a Windsor stag; and the fattest, I think, i' the forest: send me a cool rut-time, Jove, or who can blame me to piss my tallow? Who comes here? my doe?

[Enter Mistress Ford and Mistress Page.]

Mrs. Ford. Sir John! art thou there, my deer? my male deer?

Fal. My doe with the black scut! Let the sky rain potatoes; let it thunder to the tune of 'Green Sleeves'; hail kissing-comfits and snow eringoes; let there come a tempest of provocation, I will shelter me here.

Mrs. Ford. Mistress Page is come with me, sweetheart.

Fal. Divide me like a brib'd buck, each a haunch: I will keep my sides to myself, my shoulders for the fellow of this walk, and my horns I bequeath your husbands. Am I a

7 mince: walk prudishly 19, 20 life is a shuttle; cf. n. 1 couch: lie 5 mum . . . budget; cf. n. 8 decipher: indicate

19 lewdsters: lechers 3 Europa; cf. n. 6 Leda; cf. n. 15 scut: tail (of a deer) potatoes: sweet potatoes (supposed to incite love) 16 kissing-comfits: perfumed sweetmeats 17 eringoes: candied sea-holly 20 brib'd: cut into portions 21 fellow: keeper 22 walk: forest

woodman, ha? Speak I like Herne the hunter? Why, now is Cupid a child of conscience; he makes restitution! As I am a true spirit, welcome! [Noise within.]

Mrs. Page. Alas! what noise?

Mrs. Ford. Heaven forgive our sins!

Fal. What should this be?

Mrs. Ford. } Away, away! [They run off.]
Mrs. Page. }

Fal. I think the devil will not have me damned, lest the oil that is in me should set hell on fire; he would never else cross me thus.

Enter [Sir Hugh Evans, disguised as before; Pistol, as Hobgoblin; Anne Page, and others, as] Fairies [with tapers.]

Anne. Fairies, black, grey, green, and white,
You moonshine revellers, and shades of night,
You orphan heirs of fixed destiny,
Attend your office and your quality.
Crier Hobgoblin, make the fairy oyes.

Pist. Elves, list your names: silence, you airy toys!
Cricket, to Windsor chimneys shalt thou leap:
Where fires thou find'st unrak'd and hearths unswept,
There pinch the maids as blue as bilberry:
Our radiant queen hates sluts and sluttery.

Fal. They are fairies; he that speaks to them shall die:
I'll wink and couch: no man their works must eye.
[Lies down upon his face.]

Eva. Where's Bede? Go you, and where you find a maid
That, ere she sleep, has thrice her prayers said,
Raise up the organs of her fantasy,
Sleep she as sound as careless infancy;
But those as sleep and think not on their sins,
Pinch them, arms, legs, backs, shoulders, sides, and shins.

Anne. About, about!
Search Windsor castle, elves, within and out:
Strew good luck, ouphs, on every sacred room,
That it may stand till the perpetual doom,
In state as wholesome as in state 'tis fit,
Worthy the owner, and the owner it.
The several chairs of order look you scour
With juice of balm and every precious flower:
Each fair instalment, coat, and several crest,
With loyal blazon, ever more be blest!
And nightly, meadow-fairies, look you sing,
Like to the Garter's compass, in a ring:
The expressure that it bears, green let it be,
More fertile-fresh than all the field to see;
And, Honi soit qui mal y pense write
In emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and white;
Like sapphire, pearl, and rich embroidery,
Buckled below fair knighthood's bending knee:
Fairies use flowers for their charactery.
Away! disperse! But, till 'tis one o'clock,
Our dance of custom round about the oak
Of Herne the hunter, let us not forget.

Eva. Pray you, lock hand in hand; yourselves in order set;
And twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be,
To guide our measure round about the tree.
But, stay; I smell a man of middle-earth.

Fal. Heavens defend me from that Welsh fairy, lest he transform me to a piece of cheese!

Pist. Vile worm, thou wast o'erlook'd even in thy birth.

Anne. With trial-fire touch me his finger-end:
If he be chaste, the flame will back descend
And turn him to no pain; but if he start,
It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

Pist. A trial! come.

Eva. Come, will this wood take fire?
[They burn him with their tapers.]

Fal. Oh, oh, oh!

Anne. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire!
About him, fairies, sing a scornful rime;
And, as you trip, still pinch him to your time.

The Song.

'Fie on sinful fantasy!
Fie on lust and luxury!
Lust is but a bloody fire,
Kindled with unchaste desire,
Fed in heart, whose flames aspire,
As thoughts do blow them higher and higher.
Pinch him, fairies, mutually;
Pinch him for his villainy;
Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him about,
Till candles and star-light and moonshine be out.'

[During this song they pinch Falstaff. Doctor Caius comes one way, and steals away a boy in green; Slender another way, and takes off a boy in white; and Fenton comes, and steals away Anne Page. A noise of hunting is heard within. All the fairies run away. Falstaff rises.]

[Enter Page, Ford, Mistress Page, and Mistress Ford.]

Page. Nay, do not fly: I think we have watch'd you now:
Will none but Herne the hunter serve your turn?

Mrs. Page. I pray you, come, hold up the jest no higher.
Now, good Sir John, how like you Windsor wives?
See you these, husband? do not these fair yokes
Become the forest better than the town?

Ford. Now sir, who's a cuckold now? Master Brook,
Falstaff's a knave, a cuckoldly knave; here are his horns,
Master Brook: and, Master Brook, he hath enjoyed nothing of Ford's but his buck-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money, which must be paid too, Master Brook; his horses are arrested for it, Master Brook.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck; we could never meet. I will never take you for my love again, but I will always count you my deer.

Fal. I do begin to perceive that I am made an ass.

Ford. Ay, and an ox too; both the proofs are extant.

Fal. And these are not fairies? I was three or four times in the thought they were not fairies; and yet the guiltiness of my mind, the sudden surprise of my powers, drove the grossness of the foppery into a received belief, in despite of the teeth of all rime and reason, that they were fairies. See now how wit may be made a Jack-a-lent, when 'tis upon ill employment!

23 woodman: hunter; cf. n. 24 child of conscience: cf. n. S.d. Hobgoblin: Puck 37 orphan heirs: cf. n. 37 office: duty quality: profession 39 oyes: hear ye! (the court crier's call) 43 bilberry: blueberry 46 wink: close my eyes 49 Cf. n. 59 chairs of order: cf. n. 61 instalment: stall 62 blazon: armorial bearings 64 compass: circle 65 expressure: picture 71 charactery: writing

78 middle-earth: world of mortals 81 o'erlook'd: bewitched 94 luxury: lasciviousness 95 bloody fire: fire in the blood 99 mutually: all at once 112 yokes; cf. n. 119 arrested: seized by warrant 127 powers: faculties 128 foppery: deceit

Eva. Sir John Falstaff, serve Got, and leave your desires, and fairies will not pinse you.

Ford. Well said, fairy Hugh.

Eva. And leave you your jealousies too, I pray you.

Ford. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Fal. Have I laid my brain in the sun and dried it, that it wants matter to prevent so gross o'er-reaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welsh goat too? shall I have a coxcomb of frize? 'Tis time I were choked with a piece of toasted cheese.

Eva. Seese is not goot to give putter: your pelly is all putter.

Fal. 'Seese' and 'putter'! have I lived to stand at the taunt of one that makes fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of lust and late-walking through the realm.

Mrs. Page. Why, Sir John, do you think, though we would have thrust virtue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and have given ourselves without scruple to hell, that ever the devil could have made your our delight?

Ford. What, a hodge-pudding? a bag of flax?

Mrs. Page. A puffed man?

Page. Old, cold, withered, and of intolerable entrails?

Ford. And one that is as slanderous as Satan?

Page. And as poor as Job?

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Eva. And given to fornications, and to taverns, and sack and wine and metheglins, and to drinkings and swearings and starings, pribbles and prabbles?

Fal. Well, I am your theme: you have the start of me; I am dejected; I am not able to answer the Welsh flannel. Ignorance itself is a plummet o'er me: use me as you will.

Ford. Marry, sir, we'll bring you to Windsor, to one Master Brook, that you have cozened of money, to whom you should have been a pander: over and above that you have suffered, I think, to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

[Mrs. Ford. Nay, husband, let that go to make amends; Forgive that sum, and so we'll all be friends.

Ford. Well, here's my hand: all is forgiven at last.]

Page. Yet be cheerful, knight: thou shalt eat a posset to-night at my house; where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee. Tell her, Master Slender hath married her daughter.

Mrs. Page. [Aside.] Doctors doubt that: if Anne Page be my daughter, she is, by this, Doctor Caius' wife.

[Enter Slender.]

Slen. Whoa, ho! ho! father Page!

Page. Son, how now! how now, son! have you dispatched?

Slen. Dispatched! I'll make the best in Gloucestershire know on 't; would I were hanged, la, else!

Page. Of what, son?

Slen. I came yonder at Eton to marry Mistress Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly boy: if it had not been i' the church, I would have swinged him, or he should have swinged me. If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never stir! and 'tis a postmaster's boy.

Page. Upon my life, then, you took the wrong.

Slen. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a boy for a girl. If I had been married to him, for all he was in woman's apparel, I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did not I tell you how you should know my daughter by her garments?

Slen. I went to her in white, and cried, 'mum,' and she cried 'budget,' as Anne and I had appointed; and yet it was not Anne, but a postmaster's boy.

[Eva. Jeshu! Master Slender, cannot you see put marry poys?

Page. O I am vexed at heart: what shall I do?]

Mrs. Page. Good George, be not angry: I knew of your purpose; turned my daughter into green; and, indeed, she is now with the doctor at the deanery, and there married.

[Enter Caius.]

Caius. Vere is Mistress Page? By gar, I am cozened: I ha' married un garçon, a boy; un paysan, by gar, a boy; it is not Anne Page: by gar, I am cozened.

Mrs. Page. Why, did you not take her in green?

Caius. Ay, by gar, and 'tis a boy: by gar, I'll raise all Windsor. [Exit.]

Ford. This is strange. Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart misgives me: here comes Master Fenton.

[Enter Fenton and Anne Page.]

How now, Master Fenton!

Anne. Pardon, good father! good my mother, pardon!

Page. Now, mistress, how chance you went not with Master Slender?

Mrs. Page. Why went you not with Master Doctor, maid?

Fent. You do amaze her: hear the truth of it.
You would have married her most shamefully,
Where there was no proportion held in love.
The truth is, she and I, long since contracted,
Are now so sure that nothing can dissolve us.
The offence is holy that she hath committed,
And this deceit loses the name of craft,
Of disobedience, or unduteous title,
Since therein she doth evitate and shun
A thousand irreligious cursed hours,
Which forced marriage would have brought upon her.

Ford. Stand not amaz'd: here is no remedy:
In love the heavens themselves do guide the state:
Money buys lands, and wives are sold by fate.

Fal. I am glad, though you have ta'en a special stand to strike at me, that your arrow hath glanced.

Page. Well, what remedy?—Fenton, heaven give thee joy!
What cannot be eschew'd must be embrac'd.

Fal. When night dogs run all sorts of deer are chas'd.

Mrs. Page. Well, I will muse no further. Master Fenton,
Heaven give you many, many merry days!
Good husband, let us every one go home,
And laugh this sport o'er by a country fire;
Sir John and all.

Ford. Let it be so. Sir John,
To Master Brook you yet shall hold your word;
For he to-night shall lie with Mistress Ford. Exeunt.

FINIS

139 coxcomb: fool's cap frize: woollen cloth, made in Wales 149 hodge-pudding: pudding of many ingredients (?) 156 metheglins: mead, a fermented drink 159 dejected: humbled flannel: cloth, commonly made in Wales 159, 160 Ignorance . . . me: cf. n. 181 swinged: beaten 183 postmaster: master of post horses

214 contracted: betrothed 219 evitate: avoid 225 stand: place from which to shoot 230 muse: complain

Notes

I.i.S.d. At the head of each scene of this play in the Folio of 1623 is prefixed a list of all the characters who appear during the scene. Except for these lists, and the exeunt at the close of each scene, the Folio is practically without stage-directions. It has been suggested that whoever prepared the play for the Folio was probably influenced by the 'classical method' of dividing plays into scenes, followed in the volume of Ben Jonson's plays published in 1616. By this method a new scene begins every time there is a change of actors on the stage. Thus the exit or entrance of a character marks the beginning of a new scene, and to each scene is prefixed a list of the actors who are actually on the stage during its course.

I.i.1, 2. Star-chamber matter. The Star Chamber was a court deriving its name from the 'chambre des estoiles' at Westminster, where it sat, beginning with the reign of Edward III. It was proverbially harsh and arbitrary.

I.i.5. coram. Slender is confusing the Latin words quorum and coram. Quorum was the first word of a clause in the commission which named justices, and so came to be a title of certain justices. Coram was the first word Shallow would use as justice, in attestation of the legal documents he speaks of in lines 8 and 9: 'Coram me Roberto Shallow, armigero,' i.e., 'before me Robert Shallow, Esquire.'

I.i.6, 7. cust-alorum . . . rato-lorum. Blunders for Custos Rotulorum, Keeper of the Rolls, the principal justice of the peace of a county.

I.i.14. luces. This is evidently a hit at the Warwickshire gentleman, Sir Thomas Lucy of Charlecote, whose game Shakespeare poached while a youth at Stratford. His arms were 'three luces hauriant argent.' Cf. The History of the Play.

I.i.19. An obscure passage. 'May not the whole point of the matter lie in Shallow's use of the word "salt," the heraldic term used especially for vermin? If so, "salt fish"="leaping louse," with a quibble on "salt" as opposed to "fresh fish." There is a further allusion to the predilection of vermin for "old coats," used quibblingly in the sense of "coats of arms" ' (Gollancz).

I.i.20. quarter. In heraldry, to combine the arms of another family with one's own by placing them in one of the four compartments of the shield.

I.i.72. Cotsall. The Cotswolds, a hilly region in Gloucestershire, celebrated for the 'Cotswold games,' where coursing and other rural sports flourished.

I.i.106, 107. Here and elsewhere, passages of the text found in the Quarto of 1602, but not in the Folio, are marked by square brackets.

I.i.108. Banbury cheese. Proverbially thin, 'nothing but paring.' Bardolph is ridiculing Slender's leanness.

I.i.110. Mephistophilus. The evil spirit attendant upon the hero in Marlowe's tragedy, Doctor Faustus (1588).

I.i.112. Slice. Either Nym is still ridiculing Slender's thinness, or he is using the word in its slang sense, meaning to cut, whether to cut with a sword, or 'cut and run.'

I.i.112. humour. According to medieval physiology there were four chief 'humours' (or fluids) in the human body—blood, phlegm, choler and black bile. The relative proportion of these determined whether a person's temperament were sanguine, phlegmatic, choleric or melancholy. In Shakespeare's time 'humour' was the most overworked word in the language, 'racked and tortured with constant abuse,' as Ben Jonson said. It is a favorite with Nym and Pistol.

I.i.130. Edward shovel-boards. Shilling pieces coined in the reign of Edward VI (1547-1553), commonly used in a game which consisted in pushing coins toward a mark. They were sufficiently rare to bring a premium in Shakespeare's day.

I.i.142. run . . . humour. 'If you say I am a thief' (Steevens). Nuthook was the slang for constable.

I.i.147. Scarlet and John. Two of Robin Hood's men. Falstaff is ridiculing Bardolph's red face.

I.i.151. careires. A term used to designate galloping a horse at full speed, backward and forward. Probably Bardolph's 'conclusions pass'd the careires' meant 'the words ran high, at full gallop.' Commentators have been as much puzzled by it as is Slender.

I.i.170, 171. Book of Songs and Sonnets. 'Songes and Sonnets, written by the Right Honourable Lord Henry Howard, late Earle of Surrey, and others,' printed in 1557, and very popular during the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

I.i.255. Sackerson. A famous bear exhibited at Paris Garden in Southwark.

I.iii.8. Keisar, and Pheezar. Keisar is another form of Cæsar, the general term for emperor. Pheezar is probably from 'pheeze,' to beat.

I.iii.13. froth and lime. The host calls for an immediate exhibition of Bardolph's abilities as a tapster. Frothing a pot of beer made it appear fuller than it really was; mixing lime with the sack made it sparkle in the glass.

I.iii.18. Pistol's line is 'a parody on a line taken from one of the old bombast plays' (Steevens).

I.iii.43. anchor . . . deep. 'The scheme for debauching Ford's wife is deep.'

I.iii.57. Guiana. In 1596 Sir Walter Raleigh returned from an expedition to South America and published a book entitled "The Discoverie of the Large, Rich, and Bewtiful Empyre of Guiana, with a relation of the great and golden Citie of Manoa, which the Spaniards call El Dorado.'

I.iii.58. 'cheator. An officer appointed to look after the King's escheats (i.e., properties which fell to a lord by forfeit or fine). He would have abundant opportunity of defrauding people of their estates, hence Falstaff's pun.

I.iii.63. Sir Pandarus. The go-between in the story of Troilus and Cressida. Pistol makes him a knight.

I.iii.72. French thrift. 'An economy then practised in France of making a single page serve in lieu of a train of attendants' (Clarke).

I.iii.73. gourd and fullam. Gourds were hollow dice; fullams were dice loaded at one corner.

I.iv.20. Cain-coloured. 'In old pictures and tapestries Cain and Judas were always represented as having yellow beards, or what we now call sandy-coloured' (Hudson).

I.iv.110. An fool's-head. Mistress Quickly is punning on 'Anne' and 'an' with reference to Caius' speech in line 108.

II.i.18. Herod of Jewry. Herod was the arch-villain in the old mystery plays.

II.i.20. Flemish drunkard. The Flemish were notorious for their intemperance.

II.i.45. hack. This word is a puzzle. 'Grow cheap,' 'kick,' 'deny,' and 'do mischief' are some of the meanings that have been suggested for it. It occurs again in the play, IV.i.56. Whatever the exact meaning, the general sense is clearly that Mrs. Page does not set a high value upon knighthood.

II.i.52, 53. disposition would have gone to the truth of his words. That is, his character would have been in accordance with his speech.

II.i.54. Green Sleeves. An old ballad-tune, usually sung with vulgar words, popular 'from the time of Elizabeth to the present day.'

II.i.104. Actæon . . . Ringwood. Actæon was a hunter in classical mythology, who accidentally saw Diana bathing, and was transformed by her into a stag. He was then slain by his dogs. Like him Ford will have 'horns' (the symbol of a cuckold, or deceived husband) if Falstaff's plans succeed. Ringwood was a typical dog's name.

II.i.109. cuckoo-birds. The cuckoo's note was supposed to foretell cuckoldom. Cf. Love's Labour's Lost, V.ii.946.

> "The cuckoo then on every tree
> Mocks married men,' etc.

II.i.126. Cataian. Often used as a term of reproach. From Cataia, or Cathay, the old name for China.

II.i.168, 169. Cavaliero-justice. The host is bestowing an additional title on Justice Shallow. Cavaliero meant a gentleman trained in arms; hence a gallant.

II.i.170, 171. Good even and twenty. 'Good evening and twenty of 'em!'

II.ii.4. equipage. Pistol may mean 'I'll pay you in commodities,' i.e., swords, bucklers, etc.; or (as Greg suggests) the sense may be 'I will return the money to you in all fairness' (equity).

II.ii.6. countenance. Falstaff means he had gone surety for Pistol's borrowings. He is punning on the two meanings of countenance: (1) face, and (2) patronage.

II.ii.11. handle. Fans were often set in handles of gold and silver.

II.ii.17. Pickt-hatch. A district of ill-repute in London, the houses having hatches or half-doors guarded with spikes to prevent marauders from 'leaping the hatch.' (Cf. King Lear, III. vi.70.)

II.ii.117. fights. A kind of screen used during naval engagements to protect the crew of a vessel.

II.ii.118. my prize. Perhaps an intimation of the fate of Mistress Quickly. In Henry V we find Pistol has married her.

II.ii.129. Brooks. Throughout the play as printed in the Folio, Ford's assumed name is Broome. Falstaff's pun here, and the authority of the two Quartos, have led modern editors to follow Pope in reading Brook throughout the play. Wright suggests the name may have been altered at the instance of someone named Brook, who had influence with the actors or their patron.

II.ii.177, 178. Cf. Ben Jonson's

> "Follow a shadow, it still flies you;
> Seem to fly it, it will pursue:
> So court a mistress, she denies you;
> Let her alone, she will court you."

II.ii.252, 253. stand under the adoption of abominable terms. Have to submit to being called by vile names.

II.iii.22, 23. punto . . . montant. The punto was a blow with the point of the sword, the stock or stoccado (cf. II.i. 196) a thrust, the reverse a backhand stroke, and the montant an upward blow.

II.iii.25. heart of elder. 'In contradistinction to "heart of oak," elder wood having nothing but soft pith at heart' (Clarke). Stale. Slang term for physician. The word means urine, and alludes to the practice of examining patients' water in diagnosing cases.

II.iii.63. Frogmore. Now best known as the site of the mansion in Little Park, Windsor, built for the late King Edward VII while Prince of Wales.

II.iii.74. Cried game. 'The sport is arranged and proclaimed' (Hart). The phrase is from bear-baiting.

III.i.4. pittie-ward. Towards the Petty or Little Park, as distinguished from the Windsor Great Park.

III.i.13-20. Stanzas from a popular song by Christopher Marlowe. In line 20 Sir Hugh substitutes for one of Marlowe's lines a line from a metrical version of Psalm 137.

III.i.40. doublet and hose. The ordinary men's dress in Elizabethan times was the doublet, a close-fitting garment extending to the hips, and hose. Out of doors, and in cold weather a cloak or gown (line 30) was worn outside this. The latter still survives in the academic gown.

III.ii.36. cry aim. Archers when about to shoot were encouraged by cries of 'Aim!'

III.ii.60, 61. prince and Poins. This is a reference to the adventures of Falstaff in Henry IV, where he is the associate of Prince Hal and his companions.

III.ii.74. pipe-wine. There is a pun here upon pipe in its double sense of a cask and a musical instrument. It is suggested by Falstaff's mention in line 73, of canary, which was the name of a lively dance, as well as a sort of wine.

III.iii.11. Datchet-mead. An open meadow by the river, where clothes were washed out of doors as they are in France to-day. The village of Datchet is two miles east of Windsor, on the left bank of the Thames.

III.iii.33. Falstaff is quoting the opening line of the second song of Sir Philip Sidney's Astrophel and Stella, which begins:

'Have I caught my heavenly jewel
Teaching sleepe most faire to be?'

III.iii.52. Fortune thy foe. An allusion to a popular old song beginning 'Fortune my foe, why dost thou frown on me?'

III.iii.59. Bucklersbury. A street off Cheapside in London, inhabited by herbalists, who sold all sorts of simples or medicinal herbs.

III.iii.133. uncape. Ford is here using the language of the hunting-field. 'The collar of the grayhound was sometimes called his cape; a term equally applicable to the couple (or leash) of the running hound' (Madden). Hence to uncape would mean to uncouple, or set free, the hounds.

III.iii.191. a-birding. Birding was hawking with a sparrow hawk. Page's hawk is especially trained 'for the bush'; that is he flies at small birds which take refuge in a bush, where they can be shot.

III.iv.26. a shaft or a bolt. A shaft was a long slender arrow, a bolt a short thick one. Slender's whole phrase means 'I'll do it one way or another.'

III.v.92. bilbo. The swords of Bilbao, in Spain, were noted for the temper and elasticity of their blades. The test of a good sword was that it could be bent into a circle.

IV.i.40. Hang-hog . . . bacon. Probably suggested by an anecdote of Sir Nicholas Bacon. A prisoner named Hog had been condemned to death and prayed for mercy on the ground of kindred. 'Ay,' replied the judge, 'but you and I cannot be of kindred unless you be hanged, for Hog is not Bacon till it be well hanged.'

IV.ii.61. fat woman of Brainford. 'The witch of Brentford,' a well-known personage of Shakespeare's day, kept a tavern at Brentford, a town on the Thames about twelve miles directly east of Windsor. In the 1602 Quarto of The Merry Wives, and in Dekker and Webster's Westward Ho! she is spoken of as 'Gillian of Brainford.'

IV.ii.148. figure. To 'work by the figure' meant to operate on a wax effigy of a person for the purpose of enchantment.

IV.ii.178. fine and recovery. The means by which an estate tail was converted into a fee simple, so that the owner might dispose of it as he wished.

IV.iii.1. The Germans. Perhaps an allusion to the visit to Windsor in 1592 of Count Frederick of Mompelgard, afterwards Duke of Wurtemberg and Teck (cf. IV.v.72). In the text of the 1602 edition of the play there is evidently a reference to his title in the lines:

There is three sorts of cosen garmombles
Is cosen all the Hosts of Maidenhead and Readings.

Post horses were furnished him gratis during his stay, through a pass of Lord Howard.

IV.iv.77. Eton. Town in Buckinghamshire across the Thames from Windsor, famous for the school founded there in 1440 by Henry VI.

IV.v.22. mussel-shell. 'He calls poor Simple mussel-shell because he stands with his mouth open' (Johnson).

IV.v.57. Doctor Faustuses. Faustus was the famous mediæval scholar who obtained magic power for twenty-four years by selling his soul to the devil. He is the hero of Marlowe's tragedy of Doctor Faustus.

IV.v.63. cozen-germans. A pun on cousin-german, relative, and cozening, or cheating, Germans.

IV.v.83. crest-fallen as a dried pear. 'Pears when they are dried become flat, and lose the erect and oblong form that distinguishes them from apples' (Steevens).

V.i.20. life is a shuttle. Falstaff is thinking of Job 7. 6: 'My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope.'

V.ii.5. mum . . . budget. 'To play mum-budget' was 'to be tongue-tyed, to say never a word.'

V.v.3. Europa. The sister of Cadmus, who was carried off by Jove in the shape of a bull. Her story is told by Ovid, Metamorphoses, ii. 833 ff.

V.v.6. Leda. Courted by Jupiter in the shape of a swan. The story is given in the Odyssey, Book xi, and in Ovid's Metamorphoses vi. 109 ff.

V.v.23. woodman. Falstaff is priding himself on his knowledge of the rules for cutting up and apportioning a buck.

V.v.24. child of conscience. Cupid is conscientious, and will requite him for his past misfortunes.

V.v.37. orphan heirs. Fairies were believed to be of spontaneous birth, and so were 'created orphans by fate.'

V.v.49. 'Exalt her imagination by pleasant dreams.'

V.v.59. chairs of order. The stalls in St. George's Chapel at Windsor assigned to the Knights of the Garter, an order of Knighthood, founded about 1347 by Edward III (1327-1377). The emblem of the order is a blue garter with the motto 'Honi soit qui mal y pense.'

V.v.112. yokes. Alluding to the antlers on Falstaff's head, which bore some resemblance to the projections on the top of ox-yokes.

V.v.159, 160. Ignorance . . . me. 'Ignorance has sounded me,' or 'got to the bottom of me."

The Text of the Present Edition

The text of the present volume is, by permission of the Oxford University Press, that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig, except for the following deviations:

1. In accordance with the plan of this series, the stage-directions of the First Folio have been preserved so far as possible. Modern additions to these are enclosed in square brackets, and passages of the text found only in the Quarto are similarly marked.

2. A few unimportant changes have been made in punctuation and the spelling of a few words has been normalized, as anything for any thing, Gloucester, Gloucestershire for Gloster, Glostershire, lantern for lanthorn, mussel-shell for muscle-shell, œillades for œilliades, Poins for Pointz, till for 'till, villainy, villainous for villany, villanous, warlike for war-like.

3. The following changes in punctuation or wording have been made, all of them being reversions to the readings of the Folio. The readings of the present edition precede the colon and Craig's follow in each case:

I.iv.20	Cain-coloured: cane-coloured (Folio Caine-colourd)
II.i.88	look where: look, where
II.ii.17	Pickt-hatch: Picht-hatch
II.iii.74	Cried game;: Cried I aim? (Folio Cried-game,)
III.i.84	Gaul: Guallia (Folio Gaule)
III.iii.87	in Windsor: of Windsor
III.v.57	sped: how sped
III.v.127	one: me
IV.i.9	let: get
IV.i.40	Hang-hog: Hang hog

IV.i.57 horum;: horum?
IV.i.59 of: and
IV.ii.16 lines: lunes
IV.ii.109 Mistress Ford; Mistress Ford,: Mistress Ford;
IV.ii.163 his: her
IV.v.24 master: Master
IV.v.44 sir: like: Sir Tike;
IV.vi.17 scene: scare
V.iii.9 heart-break: heart break (Folio hearte-break)
V.v.49 Raise: Rein
V.v.51 as: that

Twelfth Night or What You Will

Edited by
WILLIAM P. HOLDEN

Dramatis Personae

ORSINO, DUKE OF ILLYRIA
SEBASTIAN, Brother to Viola
ANTONIO, Sea Captain, Friend to Sebastian
A SEA CAPTAIN, Friend to Viola
VALENTINE, CURIO } Gentlemen attending on the Duke
SIR TOBY BELCH, Kinsman of Olivia
SIR ANDREW AGUECHEEK, Suitor of Olivia
MALVOLIO, Steward to Olivia
FABIAN, an Attendant to Olivia

THE CLOWN FESTE, Olivia's Fool

OLIVIA, a Countess
VIOLA, in love with the Duke; Sister to Sebastian
MARIA, Olivia's Gentlewoman

LORDS, A PRIEST, SAILORS, OFFICERS,
MUSICIANS, AND OTHER ATTENDANTS

SCENE—Illyria and the coast nearby.

Twelfth Night

Introduction

Text and Date

The earliest text of Twelfth Night, that of the First Folio (1623), is excellent: the spelling and punctuation are generally clear, and the lines offer few difficulties of meaning. The compositor has several times encountered words or passages which he did not understand, such as staniel (II.5.106) and pavin (V.1.199), and he fails to realize that Malvolio is reading from a letter in II.5.127 ff. The text appears to have been set up from a particularly accurate and complete promptbook; this conclusion is supported by the survival of a number of careful instructions: 'Enter Viola and Malvolio at several doors' (II.2.1), and 'Malvolio within' (IV.2), both of which indicate the construction and employment of the stage on which the play would have been produced. In addition the scene divisions, entrances, and exits are unusually complete. The copy is in all ways among the best of Shakespeare's plays.

John Manningham from the Middle Temple recorded in his diary for February 2, 1602, a performance which he had seen:

> At our feast wee had a play called "Twelve Night, or What you Will," much like the Commedy of Errores, or Menechmi in Plautus, but most like and neere to that in Italian called Inganni . . .

Within the play itself, the evidence supports Manningham. The song 'O Mistress Mine' (II.3.34 ff.) was printed in 1509 in Morley's Consort Lessons; and 'Corydon's Farewell to Phyllis,' from which Sir Toby sings the first line (II.3.91), appeared in Jones' First Booke of Songes in 1600. Fabian's 'pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy' (II.5.160) seems to be a reflection of rumors of the moment concerning the fabulous wealth of the shah of Persia; the stories had started with the published report of Sir Robert Shirley's trip to Persia in 1599. The 'icicle on a Dutchman's beard' (III.2.24) sounds like a reference to the Arctic voyages of Barentz, an account of which was entered in the Stationers' Register in 1598. The 'new map with the augmentation of the Indies' (III.2.69) seems to have been Edward Wright's, done in 1600; Wright used the Mercator projection (Maria's lines), then new to England. Finally, Valentino Orsino, duke of Bracciano, visited the English court in January 1600; and the Lord Chamberlain's men (Shakespeare's company) performed before the court on January 6, or Twelfth Night. The presence of Orsino's name in the play suggests that the first performance may have been on Twelfth Night 1600.

However, it appears that the text underwent revisions of an undetermined extent in the years immediately after 1600. In 1606 a statue was passed against the profane use of God's name on the stage; and Jove occurs in a number of places where 'God' would be much more natural. Sir Toby's 'Jove bless thee, Master Parson' (IV.2.10) is extremely strained; indeed, it sounds as though the revisions were intended to make the rule on profanity ridiculous. And Malvolio's 'Jove, not I, is the doer of this' (III.4.78) is inappropriate to the steward's character. Again, there is an indication of revision when the Duke asks Cesario to sing (II.4.2) and is told that Feste the Jester is not there. The song was probably first assigned to Cesario and, in a later performance, to Feste; the revisions of the script did not include the elimination of the old speech in which the Duke asked Cesario to sing.

Sources of the Play

The romantic plot of Twelfth Night—the story of the Duke Orsino, Olivia, and Viola—is derived from a large number of sources; it is not possible to name a single direct ancestor. H. H. Furness' variorum edition (1901) and Morton Luce's Rich's 'Apolonius and Silla' (1912) contain the most complete accounts of the versions, dramatic and nondramatic, from which Shakespeare might have drawn.

Shakespeare's immediate source for the narrative is unknown, not through lack of an earlier telling but because of the multiplicity of versions, a number of which seem to have furnished him with various details, ranging from bits of narrative to names of characters and, possibly, verbal elements for his lines. The mention, quoted above, in Manningham's diary of 'that in Italian called Inganni' is extremely ambiguous: he may have been referring to a single play which he mistakenly regarded as the immediate source of Twelfth Night; he may have been referring to a group of plays loosely known as the Inganni; or he may simply have been referring to the common dramatic theme of the inganni, that is 'deceits' or 'tricks.' Finally, it is possible that he confused the word inganni with ingannati, 'deceived,' 'tricked.' There are three Italian plays with the name Gl' Inganni: the authors and the dates of printing are Nicolo Secchi, 1562; Curzio Gonzaga, 1592; and Domico Cornaccini, 1604. All three have plots which resemble the central plot of Twelfth Night, but it is unlikely that they are Shakespeare's sources. It might be noted that Gonzaga's play does have the name Cesare for the lady in disguise. The date of printing of the Carnaccini would perhaps have made it too late.

The probability is much greater that Shakespeare got elements for his story of the Duke Orsino in love with the Countess Olivia, and Viola, the disguised page in love with, and in the service of, the Duke, from the anonymous play, Gl' Ingannati. The title is sufficiently close to Manningham's Inganni. Gl' Ingannati was first acted in 1531 and was published six years later as part of the volume Il Sacrificio, a collection of assorted works dedicated to faithless mistresses and written by members of a Sienese literary coterie, the Intronati. One of the deserted lovers is mentioned by name, Agnol Malevoli, which might have suggested either Malvolio or Aguecheek. The action of Gl' Ingannati includes a brother and sister who look alike, and a trick of disguise by means of which the sister remains unknown near the man she loves. The ending is comic, with the proper transfer of affections and the solving of the mystery of the brother and sister. Among the characters there are a pretentious pedant, a dupe, and a nurse, possibly suggestions for Malvolio, Sir Andrew, and Maria. The lady in disguise takes the name of Fabio, certainly close to Shakespeare's Fabian, and in the prologue there is a mention of 'la notte di Beffana' or Twelfth Night. In short, the resemblances between the two plays are too numerous to allow the dismissal of Gl' Ingannati as a remote antecedent of Twelfth Night.

However, the connection between the two is not compelling simply because there existed in Italian, French, and English a number of versions of the same story; and Shakespeare is known to have been familiar with other writings of the authors of several of the versions. He had read, for example, the prose stories of Geraldo Cinthio, and in his Hecatommithi (1565) there is a retelling of the plot Gl' Ingannati. Cinthio begins his version with a shipwreck, an event added to the dramatic version, and Shakespeare takes over the shipwreck, probably not directly, in Twelfth Night. Story 36 of the second part of Matteo Bandello's Novelle (1554) is again the story of the lady in love who disguises herself as a man, and of her brother who looks like her. Bandello has changed the names, but the narrative remains that of Gl' Ingannati. In Bandello there may be some verbal anticipations of Shakespeare. For instance, 'L'amoroso verme voracement con grandissimo cordoglio rodeva il cuore' perhaps suggest Viola's 'But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud, Feed on her damask cheek' (II.4.121). However, verbal similarities prove little about Bandello as a source for Shakespeare, since he is known to have been familiar with a French translation of Bandello. In François de Belleforest's Histoires Tragiques, vol. 4 (1570), there is another version of Bandello's retelling of Gl' Ingannati; and in the same collection there are other narratives which Shakespeare used for his plots. Belleforest keeps the names of the characters from Bandello, but omits and adds details to point up his narrative.

A number of other rewritings of Gl' Ingannati, all less notable, survive. Shakespeare may have been acquainted with the French play by Charles Estienne, Les Abusés (1543); but it is more probable that Shakespeare saw or knew about the production of a Latin adaptation, Lælia, presented at Queens' College, Cambridge, about 1595. Two Spanish plays are similar to Gl' Ingannati. They are Los Engañados (1567) by Lope de Rueda and the anonymous and undated La Española de Florencia.

But the version of Gl' Ingannati most easily available to Shakespeare was an English retelling in a collection of prose narratives by Barnabie Riche, Riche his Farewell to Militarie Profession (1581). The story, the second in the volume, is titled 'The Historie of Apolonius and Silla.'

In Cyprus the young and noble Silla fell in love with the Duke Apolonius, a guest of her father. Apolonius did not return her love and went to his home, Constantinople. Silla determined to follow him; accompanied by her devoted servant Pedro, who passed as her brother, she boarded a ship. The voyage ended in a shipwreck; all were lost except Silla, but she was thus freed from the unwelcome love-making of the captain. Silla saved her life by clinging to a chest which turned out to be filled with the captain's clothing and money. So she dressed herself as a man, called herself Silvio, the name of her brother with whom she was identical in appearance, and went unknown into the service of the Duke Apolonius in Constantinople. He sent her a number of times as messenger to the widow Julina with whom he was in love. Julina refused the attentions of the Duke, but fell in love with the young man Silvio and confessed her love to him. Meantime, the real Silvio, the brother of Silla in disguise, had arrived in Constantinople in search of his sister. Julina saw him, mistook him for the servant, and was betrothed to him; but he then left still in search of his sister. Julina presently found that she was to have a child by him.

When Apolonius learned that his servant Silvio had seduced Julina he threw Silvio in a dungeon. Later Apolonius attempted to compel Silvio to marry Julina; but Silvio revealed to Julina the disguise and her (Silla's) love for Apolonius. Having heard the story from Julina, Apolonius decided that he was really in love with Silla and they were married. The story of their love got to the brother Silvio, and he returned to Constantinople to see his sister. Apolonius took the real Silvio to Julina and they were married.

In Riche's version, a prose tale centered on narrative, there is very little characterization, and the events move with a looseness which would be impossible for the stage. Shakespeare has added details of character and a tighter plot to produce from the leisurely 'history' a dramatic unit of swiftness and point. In essence, the narrative consists of two combined themes of deception. The first is the story of the siblings who look alike and who cause a series of ironic complications on the stage until the final scene in which they appear together and solve the mystery for the other characters in the play. (The audience is at no point mystified.) This device Latin comedy had taken from Greek, and Shakespeare had used it in The Comedy of Errors. The second device, the trick of the lady in disguise as a man and serving her beloved without his knowledge, Shakespeare had used in Two Gentlemen of Verona. Within the more complex pattern of the narrative of Gl' Ingannati (and Riche's retelling), the two themes of deception are combined; in addition, the beloved of the lady in disguise loves another woman and sends his page, really the lady who loves him, as a messenger to his lady. Thinking the page is a man, the woman falls in love with him. Finally, the complications are resolved and the page, revealed as a woman, wins the love of her master. Both the trick of disguise and the shift in sex were peculiarly plausible to the Shakespearean audience, accustomed to boy-actors in female roles.

No source is known for the comic subplot of Malvolio and his tormentors, Maria, Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, Feste, and Fabian. But the subplot has pleased audiences more than the main plot; and the play has been known commonly by the false title of Malvolio. The two plots are connected by more than mere events. Both hinge upon the original theme of Gl' Ingannati, 'the deceived.' If the lover, the Duke Orsino, is deceived, so is the lover, Malvolio; and so are, in one way or another, most of the other characters of the play.

Act First ❧ Scene First

Enter Orsino, Duke of Illyria, Curio, and other Lords.

Duke. If music be the food of love, play on!
Give me excess of it, that surfeiting,
The appetite may sicken and so die.
That strain agen! It had a dying fall;
O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet sound
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing and giving odor. Enough, no more;
'Tis not so sweet now as it was before.
O spirit of love, how quick and fresh art thou,
That notwithstanding thy capacity,
Receiveth as the sea. Nought enters there,
Of what validity and pitch soe'er,
But falls into abatement and low price
Even in a minute. So full of shapes is fancy
That it alone is high fantastical.
Curio. Will you go hunt, my lord?
Duke. What, Curio?
Curio. The hart.
Duke. Why, so I do, the noblest that I have.
O, when mine eyes did see Olivia first,
Methought she purg'd the air of pestilence.
That instant was I turn'd into a hart,
And my desires like fell and cruel hounds
Ere since pursue me. How now, what news from her?

Enter Valentine.

Valentine. So please my lord, I might not be admitted,
But from her handmaid do return this answer:
The element itself, till seven years' heat,
Shall not behold her face at ample view;
But like a cloistress she will veiled walk,
And water once a day her chamber round
With eye-offending brine: all this to season
A brother's dead love, which she would keep fresh
And lasting in her sad remembrance.
Duke. O, she that hath a heart of that fine frame
To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
How will she love when the rich golden shaft
Hath kill'd the flock of all affections else
That live in her; when liver, brain, and heart,
These sovereign thrones, are all supplied and fill'd,
Her sweet perfections, with one self king.
Away before me to sweet beds of flow'rs;
Love-thoughts lie rich when canopied with bow'rs. Exeunt.

1–3 If music . . . so die; cf. n. 4 agen: again fall: cadence, rhythm 5 sound: both the sound of music and of the wind 9–14 O spirit . . . in a minute; cf. n. 9 quick: alive 12 pitch: high point of a falcon's flight 14 Even: monosyllabic shapes: figures, forms fancy: imagination, the mind of the lover; cf. n. 15 high fantastical: highly changeable and imaginative 18 hart: the adult male deer 19 the noblest; cf. n. 21 Methought: it seemed to me 22 hart: possibly a pun on 'heart'; cf. n. 23 fell: savage, fierce 24 Ere: e'er, ever 25 might not: could not 27 element: sky heat the course of the sun 29 cloistress: nun in a convent 31 eye-offending brine: the salt tears irritate the eye to season: both 'to spice' and 'to preserve' 33 remembrance: probably four syllables 34 frame: construction 36 golden shaft: Cupid's golden arrow brings love; cf. n. 37 else: other 38 liver, brain, and heart: supposed centers of love, thought, and emotion, respectively 40 one self king: one and the same person, her husband

❧ Scene Second ❧

Enter Viola, a Captain, and Sailors.

Viola. What country, friends, is this?
Captain. This is Illyria, lady.
Viola. And what should I do in Illyria?
My brother he is in Elysium.
Perchance he is not drown'd. What think you sailors?
Captain. It is perchance that you yourself were sav'd.
Viola. O my poor brother, and so perchance may he be!
Captain. True, madam, and to comfort you with chance,
Assure yourself, after our ship did split,
When you, and those poor number sav'd with you,
Hung on our driving boat, I saw your brother,
Most provident in peril, bind himself
(Courage and hope both teaching him the practice)
To a strong mast that liv'd upon the sea:
Where, like Arion on the dolphin's back,
I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves
So long as I could see.
Viola. For saying so, there's gold.
Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,
Whereto thy speech serves for authority
The like of him. Know'st thou this country?
Captain. Ay, madam, well, for I was bred and born
Not three hours' travel from this very place.
Viola. Who governs here?
Captain. A noble duke in nature as in name.
Viola. What is his name?
Captain. Orsino.
Viola. Orsino. I have heard my father name him.
He was a bachelor then.
Captain. And so is now, or now so very late:
For but a month ago I went from hence,
And then 'twas fresh in murmur (as you know
What great ones do, the less will prattle of)
That he did seek the love of fair Olivia.
Viola. What's she?
Captain. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count
That died some twelvemonth since; then leaving her
In the protection of his son, her brother,
Who shortly also died; for whose dear love,
They say, she hath abjur'd the sight
And company of men.
Viola. O that I serv'd that lady,
And might not be deliver'd to the world
Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,
What my estate is.
Captain. That were hard to compass,
Because she will admit no kind of suit,
No, not the Duke's.
Viola. There is a fair behavior in thee, Captain,
And though that nature with a beauteous wall

3 Illyria: on the east coast of the Adriatic 4 Elysium: heaven (Greek mythology) cf. n. 8 chance: what may have happened 11 driving: 'driving before the wind' or 'drifting' 12 provident: foreseeing and thrifty 14 liv'd: survived by floating 15 Arion: F Orion; cf. n. 19 unfoldeth to my hope: reveals itself so as to give me hope (for my brother) 21 the like: the same escape country: probably three syllables 22 bred: conceived 32 'twas fresh in murmur: there was a current rumor 35 What's she: 'who's she' and 'what sort of person is she' 43 deliver'd: given over to, disclosed, revealed; cf. n. 44 Till . . . mellow: till I had arranged my own proper opportunity (to disclose) 45 estate: position in society to compass: to achieve 49 behavior: both 'conduct' and 'appearance' 50 though that: though

Doth oft close in pollution, yet of thee
I will believe thou hast a mind that suits
With this thy fair and outward character.
I prethee (and I'll pay thee bounteously)
Conceal me what I am, and be my aid
For such disguise as haply shall become
The form of my intent. I'll serve this Duke,
Thou shalt present me as an eunuch to him;
It may be worth thy pains. For I can sing,
And speak to him in many sorts of music
That will allow me very worth his service.
What else may hap, to time I will commit;
Only shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Captain. Be you his eunuch, and your mute I'll be;
When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see.

Viola. I thank thee. Lead me on. Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter Sir Toby and Maria.

Toby. What a plague means my niece to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Maria. By my troth, Sir Toby, you must come in earlier a nights. Your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

Toby. Why, let her except before excepted.

Maria. Ay, but you must confine yourself within the modest limits of order.

Toby. Confine? I'll confine myself no finer than I am. These clothes are good enough to drink in, and so be these boots too. And they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.

Maria. That quaffing and drinking will undo you. I heard my lady talk of it yesterday, and of a foolish knight that you brought in one night here to be her wooer.

Toby. Who? Sir Andrew Aguecheek?

Maria. Ay, he.

Toby. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Maria. What's that to th' purpose?

Toby. Why, he has three thousand ducats a year.

Maria. Ay, but he'll have but a year in all these ducats. He's a very fool and a prodigal.

Toby. Fie that you'll say so! He plays o' th' viol-de-gamboys and speaks three or four languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

Maria. He hath indeed, almost natural. For besides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreler; and but that he hath the gift of a coward to allay the gust he hath in quarreling, 'tis thought among the prudent he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Toby. By this hand, they are scoundrels and substractors that say so of him. Who are they?

Maria. They that add, moreover, he's drunk nightly in your company.

Toby. With drinking healths to my niece. I'll drink to her as long as there is a passage in my throat and drink in Illyria. He's a coward and a coistrel that will not drink to my niece till his brains turn o' th' toe like a parish top. What, wench? Castiliano vulgo; for here comes Sir Andrew Agueface.

Enter Sir Andrew.

Andrew. Sir Toby Belch. How now, Sir Toby Belch?

Toby. Sweet Sir Andrew.

Andrew. Bless you, fair shrew.

Maria. And you too, sir.

Toby. Accost, Sir Andrew, accost.

Andrew. What's that?

Toby. My niece's chambermaid.

Andrew. Good Mistress Accost, I desire better acquaintance.

Maria. My name is Mary, sir.

Andrew. Good Mistress Mary Accost.

Toby. You mistake, knight. 'Accost' is front her, board her, woo her, assail her.

Andrew. By my troth I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of 'accost'?

Maria. Fare you well, gentlemen.

Toby. And thou let part so, Sir Andrew, would thou mightst never draw sword agen.

Andrew. And you part so, mistress, I would I might never draw sword agen. Fair lady, do you think you have fools in hand?

Maria. Sir, I have not you by th' hand.

Andrew. Marry, but you shall have, and here's my hand.

Maria. Now, sir, thought is free. I pray you bring your hand to th' butt'ry bar and let it drink.

Andrew. Wherefore, sweetheart? What's your metaphor?

Maria. It's dry, sir.

Andrew. Why, I think so. I am not such an ass but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

Maria. A dry jest, sir.

Andrew. Are you full of them?

Maria. Ay, sir, I have them at my fingers' ends. Marry, now I let go your hand, I am barren. Exit.

Toby. O knight, thou lack'st a cup of canary. When did I see thee so put down?

Andrew. Never in your life, I think, unless you see canary put me down. Methinks sometimes I have no more wit than a

53 character: personal appearance 54 I prethee: I prithee, I pray thee 57 The form of my intent: my outward purpose 61 allow me . . . service: make me very worth while as his servant 63 to my wit: in accordance with my cleverness; cf. n. 64 mute: silent servant (in contrast with Viola as the sexless servant) 3 by my troth: truly 4 a nights: of nights cousin: used loosely for 'kinsman,' 'cousin,' 'aunt,' 'nephew,' 'niece' 6 except before excepted: object uselessly to what I do; cf. n. 7 modest: decent, restrained order: good conduct 9 finer: 'tighter' and 'better,' both of clothing and conduct, with a quibble on 'confine' 10 be: a regular plural 11 And: if; cf. n. 13 undo: ruin 18 tall: both 'tall' and 'brave' (ironically of Sir Andrew) 20 ducats: an Italian coin; cf. n. 22 very: true, genuine 23 viol-de-gamboys: 'leg-viola,' predecessor of the violincello (Italian, viola da gamba) 24, 25 without book: by memory 26 almost natural: almost like a fool; cf. n.

28 gust . . .: in taste . . . for 30 substractors: detractors, calumniators 32 nightly: 'nightly' and possibly 'knightly,' 'like a knight' 36 coistrel: a groom, a base fellow 37 parish top: cf. n. 38 wrench: young girl; cf. n. Castiliano vulgo; cf. n. Agueface: pale and thin-faced. Ague, an acute fever, commonly malaria 40 Sweet: 'dear,' a conventional form of address 41 shrew: a scolding man or woman 43–48 Accost . . . Accost; cf. n. 46 Andrew: F Ma [ria] 48 Mistress Mary Accost: F mistris Mary, accost 49 front her: face her board: 'to greet'; but also 'to go on board,' as of a ship (French, aborder) 51 By my troth: truly undertake: in the literal as well as the figurative sense 54 And thou let part so: if you let her go thus 57 agen: again 56 And: if 57, 58 fools in hand: fools to do business with 60 Marry: originally 'the Virgin Mary,' but here a mild oath, 'indeed,' 'to be sure' 62 butt'ry bar; cf. n. it: your hand, i.e. 'Have a drink' 64 It's dry, sir; cf. n. 70 barren: barren of jokes 71 canary: a sweet wine from the Canary Islands 72 put down: discomforted 74 methinks: it seems to me 74, 75 no more wit than a Christian: no more intelligence than the average man

Christian or an ordinary man has. But I am a great eater of beef and I believe that does harm to my wit.

Toby. No question.

Andrew. And I thought that, I'd forswear it. I'll ride home tomorrow, Sir Toby.

Toby. Pourquoi, my dear knight?

Andrew. What is 'pourquoi'? Do, or not do? I would I had bestowed that time in the tongues that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting. O, had I but followed the arts!

Toby. Then hadst thou had an excellent head of hair.

Andrew. Why, would that have mended my hair?

Toby. Past question, for thou seest it will not curl by nature.

Andrew. But it becomes me well enough, does't not?

Toby. Excellent. It hangs like flax on a distaff; and I hope to see a huswife take thee between her legs and spin it off.

Andrew. Faith, I'll home tomorrow, Sir Toby. Your niece will not be seen, or if she be, it's four to one she'll none of me. The Count himself here hard by woos her.

Toby. She'll none o' th' Count. She'll not match above her degree, neither in estate, years, nor wit; I have heard her swear't. Tut, there's life in't, man.

Andrew. I'll stay a month longer. I am a fellow o' th' strangest mind i' th' world. I delight in masques and revels sometimes altogether.

Toby. Art thou good at these kick-chawses, knight?

Andrew. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be, under the degree of my betters, and yet I will not compare with an old man.

Toby. What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?

Andrew. Faith, I can cut a caper.

Toby. And I can cut the mutton to't.

Andrew. And I think I have the back-trick simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

Toby. Wherefore are these things hid? Wherefore have these gifts a curtain before 'em? Are they like to take dust, like Mistress Mall's picture? Why dost thou not go to church in a galliard and come home in a coranto? My very walk should be a jig. I would not so much as make water but in a sink-a-pace. What dost thou mean? Is it a world to hide virtues in? I did think by the excellent constitution of thy leg, it was form'd under the star of a galliard.

Andrew. Ay, 'tis strong, and it does indifferent well in a dam'd color'd stock. Shall we sit about some revels?

Toby. What shall we do else? Were we not born under Taurus?

Andrew. Taurus? That's sides and heart.

Toby. No, sir; it is legs and thighs. Let me see thee caper. Ha, higher; ha, ha, excellent! Exeunt.

75, 76 great . . . wit; cf. n. wit: intellect, mind 78 And: if 80 Pourquoi: why (French) 83 bear-baiting; cf. n. the arts: liberal learning such as languages 85 mended: improved 86 curl by nature: F coole my nature; cf. n. 87 becomes me: F becoms we 88 like flax on a distaff: like straight strings of flax on a stick used in spinning 89 huswife: housewife, pronounced 'huzzif' 93 hard by: near by 95 degree: position in society estate: fortune 99 altogether: in all respects 100 kick-chawses: trifles (French, quelque chose) 101, 102 under the degree of my betters: except of a social rank higher than mine 102, 103 an old man: probably 'an experienced person' 104 galliard: a quick dance in triple time 105 caper: a frolicsome leap; also a spice used with mutton 107 back-trick: a step backward in a dance; cf. n. 110 like: likely take: collect 111 Mistress Mall's picture: any woman's portrait; cf. n. 112 coranto: a swift running dance (French courante*)* should: would 113 sink-a-pace: a rapid dance of five steps (French cinque-pas). cf. n. 116 under the star of a galliard: i.e. under a dancing star 118 dam'd color'd; cf. n. stock: stocking sit: set; cf. n. 121 Taurus: the bull, one of the signs of the Zodiac; cf. n. That's sides: F That sides

Scene Fourth

Enter Valentine, and Viola in man's attire.

Valentine. If the Duke continue these favors towards you, Cesario, you are like to be much advanc'd. He hath known you but three days and already you are no stranger.

Viola. You either fear his humor or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love. Is he inconstant, sir, in his favors?

Valentine. No, believe me.

Enter Duke, Curio, and Attendants.

Viola. I thank you. Here comes the Count.

Duke. Who saw Cesario, ho?

Viola. On your attendance, my lord, here.

Duke. Stand you awhile aloof. Cesario,
Thou know'st no less but all. I have unclasp'd
To thee the book even of my secret soul.
Therefore, good youth, address thy gait unto her;
Be not denied access, stand at her doors,
And tell them there thy fixed foot shall grow
Till thou have audience.

Viola. Sure, my noble lord,
If she be so abandon'd to her sorrow
As it is spoke, she never will admit me.

Duke. Be clamorous and leap all civil bounds
Rather than make unprofited return.

Viola. Say I do speak with her, my lord, what then?

Duke. O, then unfold the passion of my love;
Surprise her with discourse of my dear faith;
It shall become thee well to act my woes.
She will attend it better in thy youth
Than in a nuncio's of more grave aspect.

Viola. I think not so, my lord.

Duke. Dear lad, believe it;
For they shall yet belie thy happy years
That say thou art a man. Diana's lip
Is not more smooth and rubious; thy small pipe
Is as the maiden's organ, shrill and sound,
And all is semblative a woman's part.
I know thy constellation is right apt
For this affair. Some four or five attend him,
All if you will; for I myself am best
When least in company. Prosper well in this,
And thou shalt live as freely as thy lord
To call his fortunes thine.

Viola. I'll do my best
To woo your lady: [Aside.] yet a barful strife!
Whoe'er I woo, myself would be his wife. Exeunt.

4 his humor or my negligence: his changeableness or my neglect (as a servant) 11 you: all except Cesario 12 no less but all: everything 13 even: monosyllabic 14 address thy gait: direct thy steps 15 access: stressed — ⏑ doors; cf. n. 21 clamorous: noisy civil: polite 22 unprofited: unproductive 25 surprise: to overcome suddenly (French surprendre*)* dear: 'extreme,' commonly used as an intensive 28 nuncio's: messenger's aspect: stressed — ⏑ 33 rubious: ruby red pipe: throat 34 sound: clear 35 semblative a woman's part: like a woman's actions a: possibly 'of a' 36 thy constellation: thy nature; cf. n. apt: suited 37 him: Cesario (on his visit to Olivia) 40 freely: without restriction 43 a barful strife: a conflict full of hindrances 43, 44 woo . . . woo . . .: would a verbal quibble; cf. n.

Scene Fifth

Enter Maria and Clown.

Maria. Nay, either tell me where thou hast been, or I will not open my lips so wide as a bristle may enter in way of thy excuse. My lady will hang thee for thy absence.

Clown. Let her hang me. He that is well hang'd in this world needs to fear no colors.

Maria. Make that good.

Clown. He shall see none to fear.

Maria. A good lenten answer. I can tell thee where the saying was born, of 'I fear no colors.'

Clown. Where, good Mistress Mary?

Maria. In the wars; and that may you be bold to say in your foolery.

Clown. Well, God give them wisdom that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.

Maria. Yet you will be hang'd for being so long absent, or to be turn'd away. Is not that as good as a hanging to you?

Clown. Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage; and for turning away, let summer bear it out.

Maria. You are resolute then?

Clown. Not so neither; but I am resolv'd on two points.

Maria. That if one break, the other will hold; or if both break, your gaskins fall.

Clown. Apt, in good faith; very apt. Well, go thy way. If Sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eve's flesh as any in Illyria.

Maria. Peace, you rogue; no more o' that. Here comes my lady. Make your excuse wisely, you were best. [Exit.]

Enter Lady Olivia with Malvolio.

Clown. Wit, and't be thy will, put me into good fooling. Those wits that think they have thee do very oft prove fools; and I that am sure I lack thee may pass for a wise man. For what says Quinapalus? 'Better a witty fool than a foolish wit.' God bless thee, lady.

Olivia. Take the fool away.

Clown. Do you not hear, fellows? Take away the lady.

Olivia. Go to, y'are a dry fool. I'll no more of you. Besides, you grow dishonest.

Clown. Two faults, madonna, that drink and good counsel will amend. For give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry. Bid the dishonest man mend himself: if he mend, he is no longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the botcher mend him. Anything that's mended is but patch'd; virtue that transgresses is but patch'd with sin, and sin that amends is but patch'd with virtue. If that this simple syllogism will serve, so; if it will not, what remedy? As there is no true cuckold but calamity, so beauty's a flower. The lady bade take away the fool; therefore I say again, take her away.

Olivia. Sir, I bade them take away you.

Clown. Misprison in the highest degree. Lady, cucullus non facit monachum. That's as much to say as, I wear not motley in my brain. Good madonna, give me leave to prove you a fool.

Olivia. Can you do it?

Clown. Dexteriously, good madonna.

Olivia. Make your proof.

Clown. I must catechize you for it, madonna. Good my mouse of virtue, answer me.

Olivia. Well, sir, for want of other idleness, I'll bide your proof.

Clown. Good madonna, why mourn'st thou?

Olivia. Good fool, for my brother's death.

Clown. I think his soul is in hell, madonna.

Olivia. I know his soul is in heaven, fool.

Clown. The more fool, madonna, to mourn for your brother's soul, being in heaven. Take away the fool, gentlemen.

Olivia. What think you of this fool, Malvolio? Doth he not mend?

Malvolio. Yes, and shall do till the pangs of death shake him. Infirmity that decays the wise doth ever make the better fool.

Clown. God send you, sir, a speedy infirmity for the better increasing your folly. Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no fox, but he will not pass his word for twopence that you are no fool.

Olivia. How say you to that, Malvolio?

Malvolio. I marvel your ladyship takes delight in such a barren rascal. I saw him put down the other day with an ordinary fool that has no more brain than a stone. Look you now, he's out of his guard already. Unless you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gagg'd. I protest I take these wise men that crow so at these set kind of fools no better than the fools' zanies.

Olivia. O, you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, and taste with a distemper'd appetite. To be generous, guiltless, and of free disposition, is to take those things for bird-bolts that you deem cannon bullets. There is no slander in an allow'd fool, though he do nothing but rail; nor no railing in a known discreet man, though he do nothing but reprove.

Clown. Now Mercury endue thee with leasing, for thou speak'st well of fools.

Enter Maria.

Maria. Madam, there is at the gate a young gentleman much desires to speak with you.

Olivia. From the Count Orsino, is it?

Maria. I know not, madam. 'Tis a fair young man and well attended.

Olivia. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Maria. Sir Toby, madam, your kinsman.

5 to fear no colors: 'to fear nothing,' proverbial; cf. n. 8 lenten: thin, poor 13, 14 Well, God . . . talents; Cf. n. 18 for: away; Cf. n. let summer bear it out: let the warm weather make it (the loss of my job) endurable 22 if one [point] break: 'point' in the argument and 'points' as a string used to hold up breeches 23 gaskins: loose breeches 25, 26 If Sir Toby . . . Illyria; Cf. n. 28 you were best: it would be best for you 29 and't: if it 32 Quinapalus: an invention of the Clown 36 Go to: go away, cease dry: 'barren,' 'unfruitful,' rather than 'ironical' 37 dishonest: unreliable (because he has been absent) 38 madonna: my lady (Italian mia donna) 39 dry: 'thirsty' and 'barren' 41 botcher: a mender, especially a tailor or cobbler who does repairs 42–45 Anything . . . virtue; cf. n. 45, 46 As there . . . flower; cf. n.

49 Misprison: mistake cucullus . . . monachum: the cowl doesn't make the monk 50 motley: clothing of a mixed color, worn by stage fools; cf. n. 54 Dexteriously: variant of 'dexterously' 56, 57 Good my mouse: 'my good mouse'; 'mouse' was a common term of endearment 67 mend: get better as to his jokes 68 shall do: shall become more foolish 77 barren: empty (of wit) put down . . . with: defeated . . . by 79 out of his guard: without an answer of wit 79, 80 minister occasion: give opportunity or opening 81 set kind: conventional sort 82 zanies; cf. n. 83 of: with 84 distemper'd: ill, unhealthy 85 bird-bolts: blunt-headed arrows for shooting birds 86 no slander in an allow'd fool; cf. n. 89 Mercury: Mercury was full of guile and tricks endue: supply with leasing: lying

Olivia. Fetch him off, I pray you. He speaks nothing but madman. Fie on him [Exit Maria.] Go you, Malvolio. If it be a suit from the Count, I am sick or not at home. What you will, to dismiss it. (Exit Malvolio.) Now you see, sir, how your fooling grows old and people dislike it.

Clown. Thou hast spoke for us, madonna, as if thy eldest son should be a fool; whose scull Jove cram with brains, for here he comes.

Enter Sir Toby.

One of thy kin has a most weak pia mater.

Olivia. By mine honor, half drunk. What is he at the gate, cousin?

Toby. A gentleman.

Olivia. A gentleman? What gentleman?

Toby. 'Tis a gentleman here. A plague o' these pickle-herring! How now, sot?

Clown. Good Sir Toby.

Olivia. Cousin, cousin, how have you come so early by this lethargy?

Toby. Lechery, I defy lechery. There's one at the gate.

Olivia. Ay, marry, what is he?

Toby. Let him be the divel and he will, I care not. Give me faith, say I. Well, it's all one. Exit.

Olivia. What's a drunken man like, fool?

Clown. Like a drown'd man, a fool, and a madman. One draught above heat makes him a fool, the second mads him, and a third drowns him.

Olivia. Go, thou, and seek the crowner, and let him sit o' my coz; for he's in the third degree of drink: he's drown'd. Go look after him.

Clown. He is but mad yet, madonna, and the fool shall look to the madman. [Exit.]

Enter Malvolio.

Malvolio. Madam, yond young fellow swears he will speak with you. I told him you were sick; he takes on him to understand so much and therefore comes to speak with you. I told him you were asleep; he seems to have a foreknowledge ofthat too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, lady? He's fortified against any denial.

Olivia. Tell him he shall not speak with me.

Malvolio. Has been told so; and he says he'll stand at your door like a sheriff's post and be the supporter to a bench, but he'll speak with you.

Olivia. What kind o' man is he?

Malvolio. Why, of mankind.

Olivia. What manner of man?

Malvolio. Of very ill manner. He'll speak with you, will you or no.

Olivia. Of what personage and years is he?

Malvolio. Not yet old enough for a man nor young enough for a boy: as a squash is before 'tis a pescod, or a codling when 'tis almost an apple. 'Tis with him in standing water, between boy and man. He is very well favor'd and he speaks very shrewishly. One would think his mother's milk were scarce out of him.

Olivia. Let him approach. Call in my gentlewoman.

Malvolio. Gentlewoman, my lady calls. Exit.

Enter Maria.

Olivia. Give me my veil; come, throw it o'er my face. We'll once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Enter Viola.

Viola. The honorable lady of the house, which is she?

Olivia. Speak to me; I shall answer for her. Your will?

Viola. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty. I pray you tell me if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her. I would be loath to cast away my speech, for besides that it is excellently well penn'd, I have taken great pains to con it. Good beauties, let me sustain no scorn. I am very comptible, even to the least sinister usage.

Olivia. Whence came you, sir?

Viola. I can say little more than I have studied, and that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modest assurance if you be the lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Olivia. Are you a comedian?

Viola. No, my profound heart; and yet (by the very fangs of malice I swear) I am not that I play. Are you the lady of the house?

Olivia. If I do not usurp myself, I am.

Viola. Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp yourself; for what is yours to bestow is not yours to reserve. But this is from my commission. I will on with my speech in your praise and then show you the heart of my message.

Olivia. Come to what is important in't. I forgive you the praise.

Viola. Alas, I took great pains to study it, and 'tis poetical.

Olivia. It is the more like to be feigned; I pray you keep it in. I heard you were saucy at my gates, and allow'd your approach rather to wonder at you than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone; if you have reason, be brief. 'Tis not that time of moon with me to make one in skipping a dialogue.

Maria. Will you hoist sail, sir? Here lies your way.

Viola. No, good swabber; I am to hull here a little longer. Some mollification for your giant, sweet lady. Tell me your mind; I am a messenger.

Olivia. Sure you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the courtesy of it is so fearful. Speak your office.

99 madman: like a lunatic 102 old: stale 104 should be: were going to be (in the future) 105 he: Sir Toby, drunk 106 pia mater: innermost membrane enveloping the brain 107 What: 'what' and 'who' 111 A plague; cf. n. 112 sot: fool, clown 114 Cousin: loosely for 'kinsman' or 'uncle' 115 lethargy: torpor (of drunkenness) 117 marry: to be sure 118 divel: devil and: if 119 faith: to resist the devil it's all one: no difference 121, 122 One draught above heat: one drink above the amount to make him normally warm 124 crowner: variant of 'coroner' 124, 125 sit o' my coz: hold an inquest on my cousin or kinsman (Sir Toby) 130 on him: upon himself 136 Has: he has (from 'h' has') 137 sheriff's post . . . supporter to a bench; cf. n.

146 squash: unripe pea pod pescod: peascod, ripe pea pod codling: unripe apple 147 standing water: the tide at ebb or flood when it flows neither way 148 well favor'd: of good appearance or face 149 shrewishly: irritably SD Enter Viola: F Enter Violena; cf. n. (SD is used throughout to indicate stage direction.) 158 if this be; cf. n. 161 con: learn, memorize sustain: endure, receive (from you) 162 comptible: spelling variant of 'countable' (sensitive) the least sinister usage: the least hostile treatment 166 modest: moderate 168 comedian: actor 169 my profound heart; cf. n. 169, 170 the very fangs of malice: the very worst reports and rumors about me 173 you do usurp yourself: i.e. you should be married 175 from: in addition to, outside 177 forgive you: excuse you (from delivering) 183 reason: sanity 183–85 'Tis not that time . . . dialogue; cf. n. 186 Here lies your way: i.e. go 187 swabber: minor officer in charge of cleaning a ship to hull: to float without sail 188 giant: (guarding) monster; cf. n. 191 when the courtesy of it is so fearful: when the manner of delivering it is so frightening office: message, business

Viola. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no overture of war, no taxation of homage. I hold the olive in my hand. My words are as full of peace as matter.

Olivia. Yet you began rudely. What are you? What would you?

Viola. The rudeness that hath appear'd in me have I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maidenhead: to your ears, divinity; to any other's, profanation.

Olivia. Give us the place alone; we will hear this divinity. [Exit Maria.] Now, sir, what is your text?

Viola. Most sweet lady.

Olivia. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said of it. Where lies your text?

Viola. In Orsino's bosom.

Olivia. In his bosom? In what chapter of his bosom?

Viola. To answer by the method, in the first of his heart.

Olivia. O, I have read it; it is heresy. Have you no more to say?

Viola. Good madam, let me see your face.

Olivia. Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? You are now out of your text; but we will draw the curtain and show you the picture. [Unveils.] Look you, sir, such a one I was this present. Is't not well done?

Viola. Excellently done, if God did all.

Olivia. 'Tis in grain, sir; 'twill endure wind and weather.

Viola. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white,
Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on.
Lady, you are the cruel'st she alive
If you will lead these graces to the grave,
And leave the world no copy.

Olivia. O, sir, I will not be so hardhearted. I will give out divers schedules of my beauty. It shall be inventoried and every particle and utensil label'd to my will: as, item, two lips indifferent red; item, two grey eyes, with lids to them; item, one neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?

Viola. I see you what you are; you are too proud;
But if you were the divel, you are fair.
My lord and master loves you. O, such love
Could be but recompens'd though you were crown'd
The nonpareil of beauty.

Olivia. How does he love me?

Viola. With adorations, fertill tears,
With groans that thunder love, with sighs of fire.

Olivia. Your lord does know my mind; I cannot love him.
Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him noble,
Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth;
In voices well divulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant,
And in dimension and the shape of nature
A gracious person. But yet I cannot love him.
He might have took his answer long ago.

Viola. If I did love you in my master's flame,
With such a suff'ring, such a deadly life,
In your denial I would find no sense;
I would not understand it.

Olivia. Why, what would you?

Viola. Make me a willow cabin at your gate
And call upon my soul within the house;
Write loyal cantons of contemned love
And sing them loud even in the dead of night;
Hallow your name to the reverberate hills
And make the babbling gossip of the air
Cry out 'Olivia.' O, you should not rest
Between the elements of air and earth
But you should pity me.

Oliva. You might do much.
What is your parentage?

Viola. Above my fortunes, yet my state is well. I am a gentleman.

Olivia. Get you to your lord.
I cannot love him. Let him send no more
Unless, perchance, you come to me again
To tell me how he takes it. Fare you well.
I thank you for your pains. Spend this for me.

Viola. I am no fee'd post, lady; keep your purse;
My master, not myself, lacks recompense.
Love make his heart of flint that you shall love;
And let your fervor, like my master's, be Plac'd in contempt. Farewell, fair cruelty. Exit.

Olivia. 'What is your parentage?'
'Above my fortunes, yet my state is well.
I am a gentleman.' I'll be sworn thou art.
Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit
Do give thee fivefold blazon. Not too fast; soft, soft;
Unless the master were the man. How now?
Even so quickly may one catch the plague?
Methinks I feel this youth's perfections
With an invisible and subtle stealth
To creep in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.
What ho, Malvolio!

Enter Malvolio.

Malvolio. Here, madam, at your service.

Olivia. Run after that same peevish messenger
The County's man. He left this ring behind him,
Would I or not. Tell him I'll none of it.
Desire him not to flatter with his lord
Nor hold him up with hopes. I am not for him.
If that the youth will come this way tomorrow,
I'll give him reasons for't. Hie thee, Malvolio.

Malvolio. Madam, I will. Exit.

Olivia. I do I know not what, and fear to find
Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind.

193 taxation of homage: demand or assessment for submission 194 matter: meaning, significance 195 What are you: who are you 198 my entertainment: my reception 199 maidenhead: chastity divinity: a holy message (of love) 208 the method: the formal summary of contents 214 out of your text: off your assigned subject 216 this present: a minute ago 219 in grain: fast dyed; cf. n. 220 blent: blended 221 cunning: skillful 226 schedules: listings 227 utensil: article label'd to: added to item: namely; cf. n. 232 divel: devil 237 fertill tears: fertile tears, abundant tears 242 In voices well divulg'd, free: in public opinion well reported, generous 243 dimension: figure, form of body 244 gracious: graceful

247 deadly life: life which is like death 251 willow: a symbol of grief for unrequited love cabin: hut 253 cantons: variant of 'cantos,' 'songs' contemned: condemned, rejected 254 even: monosyllabic 255 Hallow: 'halloa,' 'call out,' and 'make holy' 256 babbling gossip: echo 262 state: condition, social position 269 fee'd post: messenger to be paid or tipped 271 Love make: may love make that: the antecedent is his (of him) 273 Plac'd in contempt: scorned 276 thou art: cf. n. 278 blazon: a shield or coat of arms in heraldry 279 Unless the master were the man: unless Orsino were Cesario 287 County's: 'Count's' or 'Duke's'; F Countes cf. n. 289 to flatter with: to encourage 295 Mine eye . . . mind: cf. n.

Fate, show thy force: ourselves we do not owe.
What is decreed must be, and be this so. [Exit.]

Finis, Actus primus.

Act Second

Scene First

Enter Antonio and Sebastian.

Antonio. Will you stay no longer? Nor will you not that I go with you?

Sebastian. By your patience, no. My stars shine darkly over me; the malignancy of my fate might perhaps distemper yours. Therefore I shall crave of you your leave that I may bear my evils alone. It were a bad recompense for your love to lay any of them on you.

Antonio. Let me yet know of you whither you are bound.

Sebastian. No, sooth, sir. My determinate voyage is mere extravagancy. But I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modesty that you will not extort from me what I am willing to keep in; therefore it charges me in manners the rather to express myself. You must know of me then, Antonio, my name is Sebastian, which I call'd Roderigo. My father was that Sebastian of Messaline whom I know you have heard of. He left behind him myself and a sister, both born in an hour. If the heavens had been pleas'd, would we had so ended. But you, sir, alter'd that, for some hour before you took me from the breach of the sea was my sister drown'd.

Antonio. Alas the day!

Sebastian. A lady, sir, though it was said she much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful. But though I could not with such estimable wonder overfar believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publish her: she bore a mind that envy could not but call fair. She is drown'd already, sir, with salt water, though I seem to drown her remembrance again with more.

Antonio. Pardon me, sir, your bad entertainment.

Sebastian. O good Antonio, forgive me your trouble.

Antonio. If you will not murther me for my love, let me be your servant.

Sebastian. If you will not undo what you have done, that is, kill him whom you have recover'd, desire it not. Fare ye well at once. My bosom is full of kindness; and I am yet so near the manners of my mother that, upon the least occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me. I am bound to the Count Orsino's court. Farewell. Exit.

Antonio. The gentleness of all the gods go with thee.
I have many enemies in Orsino's court,
Else would I very shortly see thee there.
But come what may, I do adore thee so
That danger shall seem sport and I will go. Exit.

296 owe: possess, own, control 1 Nor . . . not; cf. n. 3 patience: allowance, leave 3, 4 My stars . . . distemper yours; cf. n. 9 sooth: truly determinate: determined upon 10 extravagancy: an extravagant fancy touch: feeling 12 it charges me in manners: I am compelled in good manners 15 Messaline: perhaps Mitylene, but identification is unnecessary 16 in an hour: in the same hour 19 the breach of the sea: the breaking waves, usually on a coast 23 with such estimable wonder: with so much admiring wonder (for her) 24 publish: declare, describe publicly 28 your bad entertainment: the poor hospitality I have given you 29 your trouble: for causing you trouble 30 murther me for my love: i.e. kill me by leaving me for: in reward for 33 recover'd: saved 38 gentleness: kindliness

Scene Second

Enter Viola and Malvolio at several doors.

Malvolio. Were not you ev'n now with the Countess Olivia?

Viola. Even now, sir. On a moderate pace I have since arriv'd but hither.

Malvolio. She returns this ring to you, sir. You might have saved me my pains to have taken it away yourself. She adds, moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance she will none of him. And one thing more, that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your lord's taking of this. Receive it so.

Viola. She took the ring of me. I'll none of it.

Malvolio. Come, sir, you peevishly threw it to her; and her will is, it should be so return'd. If it be worth stooping for, there it lies, in your eye; if not, be it his that finds it. Exit.

Viola. I left no ring with her. What means this lady?
Fortune forbid my outside have not charmed her.
She made good view of me; indeed, so much
That methought her eyes had lost her tongue,
For she did speak in starts distractedly.
She loves me sure; the cunning of her passion
Invites me in this churlish messenger.
None of my lord's ring? Why, he sent her none.
I am the man. If it be so, as 'tis,
Poor lady, she were better love a dream.
Disguise, I see thou art a wickedness
Wherein the pregnant enemy does much.
How easy is it for the proper false
In women's waxen hearts to set their forms.
Alas, O, frailty is the cause, not we,
For such as we are made, if such we be.
How will this fadge? My master loves her dearly;
And I (poor monster) fond as much on him;
And she (mistaken) seems to dote on me.
What will become of this? As I am man,
My state is desperate for my master's love.
As I am woman (now alas the day!),
What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe?
O Time, thou must untangle this, not I;
It is too hard a knot for me t' untie. [Exit]

Scene Third

Enter Sir Toby and Sir Andrew.

Toby. Approach, Sir Andrew. Not to be abed after midnight is to be up betimes, and diluculo surgere, thou know'st.

Andrew. Nay, by my troth, I know not; but I know to be up late is to be up late.

SD Enter . . . at several doors; cf. n. 2 On a moderate pace: at a moderate walking pace 5 to have taken it: if you had taken it 6, 7 a desperate assurance she will none of him: an extreme assurance leaving no hope that she will have any part of him 7, 8 so hardy to come: so venturesome as to come 15 not: emphatic negative attached to forbid 16 made good view of me: looked favorably at me 17 methought: it seemed to me her eyes had lost her tongue: what she saw had caused her to lose her tongue 19 cunning: craftiness 20 in: through 25 pregnant enemy: strong enemy; cf. n. 26 the proper false: i.e. those who appear to be respectable and genuine but are deceivers 27 forms: 'impressions' as of a seal, and 'appearance' 28, 29 Alas . . . such we be; cf. n. 30 fadge: fit, be suitable 31 monster: because of both sexes fond: dote 34 desperate: pronounced 'desp'rate' 36 thriftless: unprofitable 2 betimes: early diluculo surgere: to get up at dawn; F Deliculo cf. n. 3 by my troth: truly

Toby. A false conclusion; I hate it as an unfill'd can. To be up after midnight and to go to bed then, is early; so that to go to bed after midnight is to go to bed betimes. Does not our lives consist of the four elements?

Andrew. Faith, so they say; but I think it rather consists of eating and drinking.

Toby. Th' art a scholar. Let us therefore eat and drink. Marian, I say, a stoup of wine.

Enter Clown.

Andrew. Here comes the fool, i' faith.

Clown. How now, my hearts? Did you never see the picture of We Three?

Toby. Welcome, ass. Now let's have a catch.

Andrew. By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast. I had rather than forty shillings I had such a leg and so sweet a breath to sing as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night when thou spok'st of Pigrogromitus, of the Vapians passing the equinoctial of Queubus. 'Twas very good, i' faith. I sent thee sixpence for thy leman. Hadst it?

Clown. I did impeticos thy gratillity, for Malvolio's nose is no whipstock. My lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle-ale houses.

Andrew. Excellent. Why, this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now a song.

Toby. Come on, there is sixpence for you. Let's have a song.

Andrew. There's a testril of me too. If one knight give a ———

Clown. Would you have a love song, or a song of good life?

Toby. A love song, a love song.

Andrew. Ay, ay. I care not for good life.

Clown sings.

O mistress mine, where are you roaming?
O, stay and hear, your true love's coming,
That can sing both high and low.
Trip no further, pretty sweeting;
Journeys end in lovers meeting,
Every wise man's son doth know.

Andrew. Excellent good, i' faith.

Toby. Good, good.

Clown [sings].

What is love? 'Tis not hereafter;
Present mirth hath present laughter;
What's to come is still unsure.
In delay there lies no plenty;
Then come kiss me, sweet and twenty:
Youth's a stuff will not endure.

Andrew. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.

Toby. A contagious breath.

Andrew. Very sweet and contagious, i' faith.

Toby. To hear by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion. But shall we make the welkin dance indeed? Shall we rouse the night owl in a catch that will draw three souls out of one weaver? Shall we do that?

Andrew. And you love me, let's do't. I am dog at a catch.

Clown. By'r Lady, sir, and some dogs will catch well.

Andrew. Most certain. Let our catch be 'Thou knave.'

Clown. 'Hold thy peace, thou knave,' knight? I shall be constrain'd in't to call thee knave, knight.

Andrew. 'Tis not the first time I have constrained one to call me knave. Begin, fool. It begins, 'Hold thy peace.'

Clown. I shall never begin if I hold my peace.

Andrew. Good, i' faith; come, begin.

Catch sung. Enter Maria.

Maria. What a caterwauling do you keep here? If my lady have not call'd up her steward Malvolio and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Toby. My lady's a Catayan, we are politicians, Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsey, and [Sings.] 'Three merry men be we.' Am not I consanguineous? Am I not of her blood? Tilly vally, lady [Sings.], 'There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady.'

Clown. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

Andrew. Ay, he does well enough if he be dispos'd, and so do I too. He does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

Toby. [Sings.] 'O the twelfe day of December.'

Maria. For the love o' God, peace.

Enter Malvolio.

Malvolio. My masters, are you mad? Or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to gabble like tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an alehouse of my lady's house, that ye squeak out your coziers' catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in you?

Toby. We did keep time, sir, in our catches. Sneck up.

Malvolio. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My lady bade me tell you that though she harbors you as her kinsman, she's nothing allied to your disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemeanors, you are welcome to the house. If not, and it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

Toby. [Sings.] 'Farewell, dear heart, since I must needs be gone.'

Maria. Nay, good Sir Toby.

Clown. [Sings.] 'His eyes do show his days are almost done.'

5 can: metal vessel for holding liquor 7, 8 Does not . . . elements; cf. n. 12 stoup: a drinking vessel 14 hearts: a term of endearment 14, 15 the picture of We Three; cf. n. 16 a catch: a musical round in which one singer 'catches' at the words of another 17 breast: lungs, hence voice in singing 19, 20 gracious: graceful, elegant 20, 21 Pigrogomitus . . . Queubus: the names are meaningless 22 leman: sweetheart 23–25 I did impeticos thy gratillity . . . bottle-ale houses; cf. n. 29 testril: diminutive of 'tester,' 'sixpence' of: from 30 give a ———: F give a 31 good life: virtuous living 34 O mistress mine; cf. n. 45 still: always 47 sweet and twenty: 'sweet and twenty times sweet' or 'sweet and twenty years old' 50 A contagious breath: 'a catchy voice or tune,' also 'a bad breath'

52 To hear . . . contagion; cf. n. 53 the welkin: the sky 54 a catch: a round (of singing) 54, 55 draw three souls out of one weaver; cf. n. 56 And: if I am dog at a catch: I am an expert at a round (of singing) 57 By'r Lady: 'by our Lady' (the Virgin Mary), a petty oath 58 'Thou knave'; cf. n. 65 caterwauling: the cry of the cat at rutting time 68 Catayan: person of no account, scoundrel politicians: Statesmen concerned with important question cf. n. 69 a Peg-a-Ramsey: probably 'a lewd, coarse person'; cf. n. 'Three merry men be we'; cf. n. 70 consanguineous: related Tilly vally; nonsense 71 'There dwelt a man'; cf. n. 72 Beshrew me: 'curse me,' a mild oath 75 natural: 'naturally,' but also 'a fool' 'like a fool' 76 'O the twelfe day of December'; cf. n. twelfe: twelfth 79 wit: sense honesty: respectability 81 coziers' catches: cobblers' musical rounds 82 mitigation or remorse: lessening or regret 82 respect of: respect for 84 Sneck up: snick up, go hang 85 round: plain 89 and: if 91 'Farewell, dear heart'; cf. n.

Malvolio. Is't even so?

Toby. [Sings.] 'But I will never die.'

Clown. Sir Toby, there you lie.

Malvolio. This is much credit to you.

Toby. [Sings.] 'Shall I bid him go?'

Clown. [Sings.] 'What and if you do?'

Toby. [Sings.] 'Shall I bid him go, and spare not?'

Clown. [Sings.] 'O, no, no, no, no, you dare not.'

Toby. Out o' tune, sir? Ye lie. Art any more than a steward? Dost thou think because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?

Clown. Yes, by St. Anne, and ginger shall be hot i' th' mouth too.

Toby. Th' art i' th' right. Go, sir, rub your chain with crumbs. A stoup of wine, Maria.

Malvolio. Mistress Mary, if you priz'd my lady's favor at anything more than contempt, you would not give means for this uncivil rule. She shall know of it, by this hand. Exit.

Maria. Go shake your ears.

Andrew. 'Twere as good a deed as to drink when a man's ahungry, to challenge him the field and then to break promise with him and make a fool of him.

Toby. Do't, knight. I'll write thee a challenge; or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Maria. Sweet Sir Toby, be patient for tonight. Since the youth of the Count's was today with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For Monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him. If I do not gull him into a nayword and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed. I know I can do it.

Toby. Possess us, possess us. Tell us something of him.

Maria. Marry, sir, sometimes he is a kind of Puritan.

Andrew. O, if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog.

Toby. What, for being a Puritan? Thy exquisite reason, dear knight.

Andrew. I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason good enough.

Maria. The div'l a Puritan that he is, or anything constantly but a time-pleaser, an affection'd ass, that cons state without book and utters it by great swarths. The best persuaded of himself, so cramm'd (as he thinks) with excellencies that it is his grounds of faith that all that look on him love him; and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

Toby. What wilt thou do?

Maria. I will drop in his way some obscure epistles of love wherein by the color of his beard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the expressure of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personated. I can write very like my lady your niece; on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands.

98 there you lie: you are a liar 101 and if: if 106 cakes and ale; cf. n. 107 St. Anne; cf. n. ginger; cf. n. 109, 110 rub your chain with crumbs; cf. n. a stoup: a cup 112 give means: i.e. bring the wine 113 uncivil rule: disorderly revel by this hand: a mild exclamation 114 Go shake your ears: i.e. you are an ass 115 as good a deed as to drink; cf. n. 116 to challenge him the field: to challenge him to the field of battle 120 Sweet: dear 123 gull: trick a nayword: a byword; F an ayword 124 recreation: 'pastime' or 'amusement' 126 Possess us: give us the facts 127 Marry: indeed a kind of Puritan; cf. n. 133 div'l: devil 134 a time-pleaser: a sycophant, a toady affection'd: affected cons state without book: studies and learns a stately manner by heart 135 swarths: quantities; cf. n. The best persuaded by himself: the highest opinion of himself 137 grounds of faith: firm belief 143 expressure: expression 144 personated: represented 146 distinction of our hands: difference in our handwritings

Toby. Excellent. I smell a device.

Andrew. I have't in my nose too.

Toby. He shall think by the letters that thou wilt drop that they come from my niece, and that she's in love with him.

Maria. My purpose is indeed a horse of that color.

Andrew. And your horse now would make him an ass.

Maria. Ass, I doubt not.

Andrew. O, 'twill be admirable.

Maria. Sport royal, I warrant you. I know my physic will work with him. I will plant you two and let the fool make a third, where he shall find the letter. Observe his construction of it. For this night, to bed and dream on the event. Farewell. Exit.

Toby. Good night, Penthesilea.

Andrew. Before me, she's a good wench.

Toby. She's a beagle true bred, and one that adores me. What o' that?

Andrew. I was ador'd once too.

Toby. Let's to bed, knight. Thou hadst need send for more money.

Andrew. If I cannot recover your niece, I am a foul way out.

Toby. Send for money, knight. If thou hast her not i' th' end, call me Cut.

Andrew. If I do not, never trust me, take it how you will.

Toby. Come, come; I'll go burn some sack. 'Tis too late to go to bed now. Come, knight; come, knight. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and others.

Duke. Give me some music. Now good morrow, friends.
Now, good Cesario, but that piece of song,
That old and anticke song we heard last night.
Methought it did relieve my passion much,
More than light airs and recollected terms
Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times.
Come, but one verse.

Curio. He is not here, so please your lordship, that should sing it.

Duke. Who was it?

Curio. Feste the jester, my lord, a fool that the Lady Olivia's father took much delight in. He is about the house.

Duke. Seek him out, and play the tune the while. [Exit Curio.] Music plays.
Come hither, boy. If ever thou shalt love,
In the sweet pangs of it remember me;
For such as I am, all true lovers are,
Unstaid and skittish in all motions else
Save in the constant image of the creature
That is belov'd. How dost thou like this tune?

153 Ass: both 'ass' and 'as' 155 physic: 'medicine' in the sense of 'cure' for Malvolio's conceit 156, 157 let the fool make a third; cf. n. he: Malvolio 157 construction: interpretation 158 the event: the outcome 159 Penthesilea: Queen of the Amazons (ironically) 160 Before me: I swear by myself 161 a beagle: a small rabbit hound 166 recover: 'win,' 'gain,' possibly with the legal force of 'gain title to' a foul way out: miserably out of money 169 Cut: a horse with a short tail 171 burn some sack: warm some sherry 1 morrow: morning 3 anticke: antique, old-fashioned (stressed ⏑ — —) 5 recollected: studied, learned 18 in all motions else: in all other emotions or feelings

Viola. It gives a very echo to the seat
Where love is thron'd.
Duke. Thou dost speak masterly.
My life upon't, young though thou art, thine eye
Hath stay'd upon some favor that it loves.
Hath it not, boy?
Viola. A little, by your favor.
Duke. What kind of woman is't?
Viola. Of your complexion.
Duke. She is not worth thee then. What years, i' faith?
Viola. About your years, my lord.
Duke. Too old, by heaven. Let still the woman take
An elder than herself; so wears she to him,
So sways she level in her husband's heart.
For, boy, however we do praise ourselves,
Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn,
Than women's are.
Viola. I think it well, my Lord.
Duke. Then let thy love be younger than thyself,
Or thy affection cannot hold the bent;
For women are as roses whose fair flow'r,
Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.
Viola. And so they are; alas, that they are so.
To die, even when they to perfection grow.

Enter Curio and Clown.

Duke. O fellow, come, the song we had last night.
Mark it, Cesario; it is old and plain.
The spinsters and the knitters in the sun,
And the free maids that weave their thread with bones,
Do use to chant it. It is silly sooth,
And dallies with the innocence of love
Like the old age.
Clown. Are you ready, sir?
Duke. I prethee sing. Music.

The Song

Come away, come away, death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid.
Fie, away; fie, away, breath;
I am slain by a fair cruel maid.
My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
O, prepare it.
My part of death, no one so true
Did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower sweet
On my black coffin let there be strown.
Not a friend, not a friend greet
My poor corpse, where my bones shall be thrown.
A thousand thousand sighs to save,
Lay me, O, where
Sad true lover never find my grave,
To weep there.

Duke. There's for thy pains.
Clown. No pains, sir. I take pleasure in singing, sir.
Duke. I'll pay thy pleasure then.
Clown. Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid one time or another.
Duke. Give me now leave to leave thee.
Clown. Now the melancholy god protect thee, and the tailor make thy doublet of changeable taffeta, for thy mind is a very opal. I would have men of such constancy put to sea, that their business might be everything, and their intent everywhere; for that's it that always makes a good voyage of nothing. Farewell. Exit.
Duke. Let all the rest give place.
[Exeunt Curio and Attendants.]
Once more, Cesario,
Get thee to yond same sovereign cruelty.
Tell her my love, more noble than the world,
Prizes not quantity of dirty lands.
The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her,
Tell her I hold as giddily as fortune.
But 'tis that miracle and queen of gems
That nature pranks her in, attracts my soul.
Viola. But if she cannot love you, sir.
Duke. I cannot be so answer'd.
Viola. Sooth, but you must.
Say that some lady, as perhaps there is,
Hath for your love as great a pang of heart
As you have for Olivia. You cannot love her.
You tell her so. Must she not then be answer'd?
Duke. There is no woman's sides
Can bide the beating of so strong a passion
As love doth give my heart; no woman's heart
So big to hold so much; they lack retention.
Alas, their love may be call'd appetite,
No motion of the liver, but the palate
That suffer surfeit, cloyment, and revolt.
But mine is all as hungry as the sea
And can digest as much; make no compare
Between that love a woman can bear me
And that I owe Olivia.
Viola. Ay, but I know.
Duke. What dost thou know?
Viola. Too well what love women to men may owe.
In faith, they are as true of heart as we.
My father had a daughter lov'd a man
As it might be perhaps, were I a woman,
I should your lordship.
Duke. And what's her history?
Viola. A blank, my lord. She never told her love,
But let concealment like a worm i' th' bud,

21 the seat: the heart 23 masterly: in an experienced manner 25 favor: 'face'; in l. 25 Viola puns on 'favor' 32 still: always 33 so wears she to him: so she adapts herself to him 34 so sways she level: so she keeps constant her husband's love 36 Our fancies: men's loves 37 worn: worn out; cf. n. 41 hold the bent: 'keep the intensity,' as in a bent bow; or 'hold the direction' 45 even: monosyllabic 48 spinsters: spinners 49 free: happy, carefree weave their thread with bones: make bone or thread lace with bone bobbins 50 Do use to: are accusomsed to silly sooth: simple truth 51 dallies with: treats lightly of 52 the old age: the former times (of virtue) 54 I prethee: I pray thee 56 Come away: 'come away from there,' i.e. 'come here' 57 cypress: a coffin of cypress wood, boughs of cypress, or thin black cloth (all associated with mourning) 58 Fie, away: fie, go away; cf. n. 60 yew: the yew tree, associated with mourning 62, 63 My part . . . share it: cf. n.

75 pleasure will be paid: indulgence exacts its penalty; cf. n. 78 the melancholy: god; cf. n. 79 doublet: a closely fitted jacket taffeta: a thin silk cloth 80 opal: a semiprecious stone of changeable color 80–82 I would have . . . voyage of nothing: Cf. n. 84 give place: leave 86 sovereign cruelty: supremely cruel person (Olivia) 88 dirty: 'made of earth or dirt' and 'filthy' 89 parts: possessions, attributes fortune: luck, chance 90 giddily: lightly 92 pranks her in: decks her or dresses her in 94 I cannot: F It cannot; Cf. n. 95 Sooth: truly 100, 101 woman's sides Can bide: Cf. n. bide: withstand, endure 103 they lack retention: women lack the capacity of retaining 105, 106 No motion . . . and revolt; Cf. n. 114 owe: have toward; so also l. 110

Feed on her damask cheek. She pin'd in thought;
And with a green and yellow melancholy,
She sat like Patience on a monument,
Smiling at grief. Was not this love indeed?
We men may say more, swear more; but indeed
Our shows are more than will; for still we prove
Much in our vows, but little in our love.
Duke. But died thy sister of her love, my boy?
Viola. I am all the daughters of my father's house,
And all the brothers too; and yet I know not.
Sir, shall I to this lady?
Duke. Ay, that's the theme.
To her in haste. Give her this jewel. Say
My love can give no place, bide no denay. Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

Toby. Come thy ways, Signior Fabian.
Fabian. Nay, I'll come. If I lose a scruple of this sport, let me be boil'd to death with melancholy.
Toby. Wouldst thou not be glad to have the niggardly rascally sheep-biter come by some notable shame?
Fabian. I would exult, man. You know he brought me out o' favor with my lady about a bear-baiting here.
Toby. To anger him we'll have the bear again; and we will fool him black and blue, shall we not, Sir Andrew?
Andrew. And we do not, it is pity of our lives.

Enter Maria.

Toby. Here comes the little villain. How now, my metal of India?
Maria. Get ye all three into the box tree. Malvolio's coming down this walk. He has been yonder i' the sun practicing behavior to his own shadow this half hour. Observe him, for the love of mockery; for I know this letter will make a contemplative idiot of him. Close, in the name of jesting. [The others hide.] Lie thou there, [Throws down a letter.] for here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling. Exit.

Enter Malvolio.

Malvolio. 'Tis but fortune, all is fortune. Maria once told me she did affect me; and I have heard herself come thus near, that should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides, she uses me with a more exalted respect than anyone else that follows her. What should I think on't?
Toby. Here's an overweening rogue.
Fabian. O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey cock of him. How he jets under his advanc'd plumes!
Andrew. 'Slight, I could so beat the rogue.
Toby. Peace, I say.
Malvolio. To be Count Malvolio.
Toby. Ah, rouge!
Andrew. Pistol him, pistol him.
Toby. Peace, peace.
Malvolio. There is example for't. The Lady of the Strachy married the yeoman of the wardrobe.
Andrew. Fie on him, Jezebel.
Fabian. O, peace! Now he's deeply in. Look how imagination blows him.
Malvolio. Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state.
Toby. O, for a stonebow to hit him in the eye!
Malvolio. Calling my officers about me, in my branch'd velvet gown; having come from a day bed, where I have left Olivia sleeping.
Toby. Fire and brimstone!
Fabian. O, peace, peace!
Malvolio. And then to have the humor of state; and after a demure travel of regard—telling them I know my place, as I would they should do theirs—to ask for my kinsman Toby.
Toby. Bolts and shackles!
Fabian. O, peace, peace, peace, now, now!
Malvolio. Seven of my people with an obedient start make out for him. I frown the while, and perchance wind up my watch, or play with my— some rich jewel. Toby approaches; curtsies there to me.
Toby. Shall this fellow live?
Fabian. Though our silence be drawn from us with cars, yet peace.
Malvolio. I extend my hand to him thus, quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of control.
Toby. And does not Toby take you a blow o' the lips then?
Malvolio. Saying, 'Cousin Toby, my fortunes having cast me on your niece, give me this prerogative of speech.'
Toby. What, what?
Malvolio. 'Your must amend your drunkenness.'
Toby. Out, scab.
Fabian. Nay, patience, or we break the sinews of our plot.
Malvolio. 'Besides, you waste the treasure of your time with a foolish knight.'
Andrew. That's me, I warrant you.
Malvolio. 'One Sir Andrew.'
Andrew. I knew 'twas I, for many do call me fool.
Malvolio. What employment have we here?
[Takes up the letter.]
Fabian. Now is the woodcock near the gin.
Toby. O, peace, and the spirit of humors intimate reading aloud to him.
Malvolio. By my life, this is my lady's hand. These be

121 damask: of variegated color, here pink and white as of a damask rose 122–124 And with . . . smiling at grief; Cf. n. 126 Our shows . . . will; Cf. n. still 134 can give no place: cannot yield denay: denial 1 Come thy ways: come along on your way 2 a scruple: a bit; Cf. n. 3 let me . . . melancholy; Cf. n. 5 sheep-biter: a dog that bites sheep, a sneaking fellow 6, 7 You know . . . a bear-baiting here; Cf. n. 10 And: if 11, 12 my metal of India: my golden one; Cf. n. 14, 15 behavior: elegant conduct 16, 17 make a contemplative idiot of him: fill him with idiotic thoughts 17 Close: hide 19 trout . . . tickling; Cf. n. 21 she did affect me: Olivia was inclined to love me 22 complexion: personality, temperament; Cf. n. 24 follows her: is in her service 27 jets under his advanc'd plumes: struts under his stiffened feathers 28 'Slight: 'by God's light,' a mild oath

29 Toby; Cf. n. 32 Pistol him: shoot him 34 The Lady of the Strachy; Cf. n. 35 the yeoman of the wardrobe: the servant in charge of the clothing and linen of a noble family 36 Fie on him, Jezebel; Cf. n. 38 blows him: puffs him up 40 state: dignity, seat of state 41 a stonebow: a crossbow or catapult for shooting stones 42 branch'd: embroidered with figures of branches or flowers 43 a day bed: a couch 47 the humor of state: the manner and disposition of authority 48 a demure travel of regard: a grave survey of observation; Cf. n. 49, 50 my kinsman Toby: Malvolio omits the title 'Sir' 53, 54 make out: go out 55 my— some rich: F my some rich; Cf. n. 58 with cars: by force, by terrible violence; Cf. n. 61 control: authority 62 take you: give you 67 Out, scab: away, scurvy fellow 74 employment: affair, matter 75 woodcock . . . gin: gin snare, trap 76, 77 the spirit . . . to him; Cf. n.

her very C's,, her U's, and her T's, and thus makes she her great P's. It is in contempt of question her hand.

Andrew. Her C's, her U's, and her T's; why that?

Malvolio. [Reads.] 'To the unknown belov'd, this, and my good wishes.' Her very phrases. By your leave, wax. Soft. And the impressure her Lucrece, with which she uses to seal. 'Tis my lady. To whom should this be?

Fabian. This wins him, liver and all.

Malvolio. [Reads.]

Jove knows I love,
But who?
Lips, do not move,
No man must know.

'No man must know.' What follows? The numbers alter'd. 'No man must know.' If this should be thee, Malvolio?

Toby. Marry, hang thee, brock.

Malvolio. [Reads.]

I may command where I adore,
But silence like a Lucrece knife,
With bloodless stroke my heart doth gore.
M. O. A. I. doth sway my life.

Fabian. A fustian riddle.

Toby. Excellent wench, say I.

Malvolio. 'M. O. A. I. doth sway my life.' Nay, but first let me see, let me see, let me see.

Fabian. What dish o' poison has she dress'd him!

Toby. And with what wing the staniel checks at it!

Malvolio. 'I may command where I adore.' Why, she may command me: I serve her; she is my lady. Why, this is evident to any formal capacity. There is no obstruction in this. And the end; what should that alphabetical position portend? If I could make that resemble something in me? Softly. 'M. O. A. I.'

Toby. O, ay, make up that. He is now at a cold scent.

Fabian. Sowter will cry upon't for all this, though it be as rank as a fox.

Malvolio. M., Malvolio, Why, that begins my name.

Fabian. Did not I say he would work it out? The cur is excellent at faults.

Malvolio. M. But then there is no consonancy in the sequel. That suffers under probation. A should follow, but O does.

Fabian. And O shall end, I hope.

Toby. Ay, or I'll cudgel him and make him cry O.

Malvolio. And then I comes behind.

Fabian. Ay, and you had any eye behind you, you might see more detraction at your heels than fortunes before you.

Malvolio. 'M. O. A. I.' This simulation is not as the former; and yet to crush this a little, it would bow to me, for every one of these letters are in my name. Soft, here follows prose.

[Reads.] 'If this fall into thy hand, revolve. In my stars I am above thee, but be not afraid of greatness. Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon 'em. Thy fates open their hands; let thy blood and spirit embrace them; and to inure thyself to what thou art like to be, cast thy humble slough and appear fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants. Let thy tongue tang arguments of state. Put thyself into the trick of singularity. She thus advises thee that sighs for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings and wish'd to see thee ever cross-garter'd. I say remember; go to; thou art made if thou desir'st to be so. If not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch Fortune's fingers. Farewell. She that would alter services with thee,

'The Fortunate-Unhappy.'

Daylight and champian discovers not more. This is open, I will be proud, I will read politic authors, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off gross acquaintance, I will be point devise, the very man. I do not now fool myself to let imagination jade me; for every reason excites to this, that my lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late; she did praise my leg being cross-garter'd; and in this she manifests herself to my love, and with a kind of injunction drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my stars, I am happy. I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings and cross-garter'd, even with the swiftness of putting on. Jove and my stars be praised. Here is yet a postscript.

[Reads.] 'Thou canst not choose but know who I am. If thou entertain'st my love, let it appear in thy smiling. Thy smiles become thee well. Therefore in my presence still smile, dear my sweet, I prethee.' Jove, I thank thee. I will smile, I will do everything that thou wilt have me. Exit.

Fabian. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.

Toby. I could marry this wench for this device.

Andrew. So could I too.

Toby. And ask no other dowry with her but such another jest.

Enter Maria.

Andrew. Nor I neither.

Fabian. Here comes my noble gull-catcher.

Toby. Wilt thou set thy foot o' my neck?

Andrew. Or o' mine either?

Toby. Shall I play my freedom at tray-trip and become thy bondslave?

Andrew. I' faith, or I either?

79, 80 her very C's ... P's in contempt of question: beyond question 83 By your leave, wax; Cf. n. Soft: careful, slow 84 uses: is accustomed to 86 liver: the seat of passion 91 The numbers alter'd: the meters or accents of verse altered 93 brock: badger 98 fustian: ridiculously lofty; Cf. n. 99 Excellent wench: clever girl (of Maria) 102 What: what a dress'd: prepared 103 And with ... at it; Cf. n. staniel: an inferior hawk; F Stallion 106 formal capacity: normal intellect obstruction: difficulty 107 what should: what would position: order 109 Softly: easily, carefully 110 make up that: put that together a cold scent: an old and difficult trail, a false trail 111, 112 Sowter ... fox; Cf. n. 115 faults: gaps or breaks in the scent; Cf. n. 116, 117 But then ... probation; Cf. n. 119 And O shall end; Cf. n. 122 and: if any eye behind you; Cf. n. 123 more detraction at your heels: more loss of face and humiliation coming directly after you 124 simulation: puzzle, hidden meaning

125 and yet ... bow to me; Cf. n. 126 Soft: carefully, slowly 127 revolve: think, consider my stars: my fate, my position 128 born: F become 129 achieve: F atcheeves Cf. n. 131 inure: get used to like: likely 132 cast ... fresh; Cf. n. 133 tang: sound with, echo with; Cf. n. 134 singularity: eccentricity 136 cross-garter'd; Cf. n. 137 go to: go on 140 alter services: exchange positions; Cf. n. 140–142 thee,/'The Fortunate-Unhappy.'/Daylight: F thee, the fortunate unhappy daylight; Cf. n. 142 champian: variant of 'champaign,' 'open country' 143 politic authors: writers on government; F polliticke; Cf. n. baffle: to subject (especially a knight) to disgrace 144 point devise: perfectly correct 146 jade me: befool me 148 in this: in this letter 151 strange: aloof stout: brave, proud 152 Jove; Cf. n. 156 still: always 157 dear: F deero I prethee: I pray thee 160 the Sophy: the shah of Persia; Cf. n. 165 Nor I neither: an emphatic negative 166 gull-catcher: one who catches gulls; gulls are persons easily tricked; compare 'gullible' 167 Wilt ... neck; Cf. n. 169 play: gamble tray-trip: a game of dice

Toby. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream that when the image of it leaves him, he must run mad.

Maria. Nay, but say true, does it work upon him?

Toby. Like aqua-vite with a midwife.

Maria. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my lady. He will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a color she abhors; and cross-garter'd, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholy as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt. If you will see it, follow me.

Toby. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent divel of wit.

Andrew. I'll make one too. Exeunt.

Finis, Actus secundus.

Act Third ❧ Scene First

Enter Viola and Clown.

Viola. Save thee, friend, and thy music. Dost thou live by thy tabor?

Clown. No, sir, I live by the church.

Viola. Art thou a churchman?

Clown. No such matter, sir. I do live by the church; for I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the church.

Viola. So thou mayst say the king lies by a beggar, if a beggar dwell near him; or the church stands by thy tabor, if thy tabor stand by the church.

Clown. You have said, sir. To see this age! A sentence is but a chev'ril glove to a good wit. How quickly the wrong side may be turn'd outward!

Viola. Nay, that's certain. They that dally nicely with words may quickly make them wanton.

Clown. I would therefore my sister had had no name, sir.

Viola. Why, man?

Clown. Why, sir, her name's a word, and to dally with that word might make my sister wanton. But indeed words are very rascals since bonds disgrac'd them.

Viola. Thy reason, man?

Clown. Troth, sir, I can yield you none without words, and words are grown so false I am loath to prove reason with them.

Viola. I warrant thou art a merry fellow and car'st for nothing.

Clown. Not so, sir; I do care for something; but in my conscience, sir, I do not care for you. If that be to care for nothing, sir, I would it would make you invisible.

Viola. Art not thou the Lady Olivia's fool?

Clown. No, indeed, sir. The Lady Olivia has no folly. She will keep no fool, sir, till she be married; and fools are as like husbands as pilchers are to her-rings, the husbands the bigger. I am indeed not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

Viola. I saw thee late at the Count Orsino's.

Clown. Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb like the sun: it shines everywhere. I would be sorry, sir, but the fool should be as oft with your master as with my mistress. I think I saw your wisdom there.

Viola. Nay, and thou pass upon me, I'll no more with thee. Hold, there's expenses for thee. [Gives a coin.]

Clown. Now Jove in his next commodity of hair send thee a beard.

Viola. By my troth, I'll tell thee, I am almost sick for one, though I would not have it grow on my chin. Is thy lady within?

Clown. Would not a pair of these have bred, sir?

Viola. Yes, being kept together and put to use.

Clown. I would play Lord Pandarus of Phrygia, sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troilus.

Viola. I understand you, sir. 'Tis well begg'd. [Gives another coin.]

Clown. The matter, I hope, is not great, sir, begging but a beggar: Cressida was a beggar. My lady is within, sir. I will conster to them whence you come. Who you are and what you would are out of my welkin. I might say 'element' but the word is overworn. Exit.

Viola. This fellow is wise enough to play the fool,
And to do that well craves a kind of wit.
He must observe their mood on whom he jests,
The quality of persons, and the time;
Not, like the haggard, check at every feather
That comes before his eye. This is a practice
As full of labor as a wise man's art;
For folly that he wisely shows is fit;
But wise men, folly-fall'n, quite taint their wit.

Enter Sir Toby and [Sir] Andrew.

Toby. Save you, gentleman.

Viola. And you, sir.

Andrew. Dieu vous garde, monsieur.

Viola. Et vous aussi. Vostre serviteur.

Andrew. I hope, sir, you are, and I am yours.

Toby. Will you encounter the house? My niece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Viola. I am bound to your niece, sir; I mean, she is the list of my voyage.

Toby. Taste your legs, sir; put them to motion.

Viola. My legs do better understand me, sir, than I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legs.

175 aqua-vite: any distilled liquor (Latin aqua vitae, 'water of life'); Cf. n. 182 a notable contempt: a state of being particularly despised (by Olivia) 183 Tartar: Tartarus the section of hell reserved for the most evil (Roman mythology) divel: devil 185 I'll make one too: I'll go along too 1 Save thee: God save thee live by: make a living by 3 tabor: drum (which the stage clown commonly carried) 8 king: F kings lies by: dwells by 11 A sentence: any unit of meaning 12 a chev'ril glove: a kid glove 14 dally nicely: play foolishly or fastidiously 15 wanton: capricious, unmanageable 20 wanton: lascivious, lewd; Cf. n. 21 since bonds disgrac'd them; Cf. n. 23 Troth: truly 24 to prove reason: to test rightness 26, 27 car'st for nothing: you never worry

34 pilchers: pilchards, small fish related to the herrring 36 late: lately 37 the orb: the world 38 I would; Cf. n. 40 your wisdom; Cf. n. 41 and thou pass upon me: if you thrust at me (with your jokes) 42 expenses: reimbursement 43 Jove in his next commodity of hair: Jove when he next sends a lot or assignment of hair 48 these: these coins 49 put to use: loaned at interest 50, 51 Pandarus . . . Cressida . . . Troilus; Cf. n. 54 Cressida was a beggar; Cf. n. 55 conster: construe, explain 56 welkin: sky element: both 'sky' and 'element' in the modern sense 59 craves a kind of wit: demands a kind of intelligence 62 Not, like: F And like the haggard: the untrained hawk check at every feather: forsake her quarry for other game 63 practice: skill 65 fit: suitable 66 wise men: F wisemens folly-fall'n: when they have fallen into folly 67 Save you: God save you 69, 70 Dieu . . . serviteur: God protect you, sir . . . And you also. Your servant (French) 72 encounter: meet, i.e. go into; Cf. n. 73 if your trade be to her: if your business concern her 74 bound: to bound for list: limit, end 76 Taste: try 77 understand: both 'comprehend' and 'stand under'

Toby. I mean, to go, sir, to enter.
Viola. I will answer you with gait and entrance; but we are prevented.

Enter Olivia and Gentlewoman [Maria].

Most excellent accomplish'd lady, the heavens rain odors on you!
Andrew. [Aside.] That youth's a rare courtier. 'Rain odors.' Well!
Viola. My matter hath no voice, lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear.
Andrew. [Aside.] 'Odors,' 'pregnant,' and 'vouchsafed.' I'll get 'em all three already.
Olivia. Let the garden door be shut and leave me to my hearing. [Exeunt Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Maria.] Give me your hand, sir.
Viola. My duty, madam, and most humble service.
Olivia. What is your name?
Viola. Cesario is your servant's name, fair princess.
Olivia. My servant, sir? 'Twas never merry world
Since lowly feigning was call'd compliment.
Y' are servant to the Count Orsino, youth.
Viola. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours.
Your servant's servant is your servant, madam.
Olivia. For him, I think not on him; for his thoughts,
Would they were blanks, rather than fill'd with me.
Viola. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts
On his behalf.
Olivia. O, by your leave, I pray you.
I bade you never speak again of him;
But would you undertake another suit,
I had rather hear you to solicit that
Than music from the spheres.
Viola. Dear lady.
Olivia. Give me leave, beseech you. I did send,
After the last enchantment you did here,
A ring in chase of you. So did I abuse
Myself, my servant, and, I fear me, you.
Under your hard construction must I sit,
To force that on you in a shameful cunning
Which you knew none of yours. What might you think?
Have you not set mine honor at the stake
And baited it with all th' unmuzzled thoughts
That tyrannous heart can think? To one of your receiving
Enough is shown; a cypress, not a bosom,
Hides my heart. So let me hear you speak.
Viola. I pity you.
Olivia. That's a degree to love.
Viola. No, not a grize; for 'tis a vulgar proof
That very oft we pity enemies.
Olivia. Why then methinks 'tis time to smile agen.
O world, how apt the poor are to be proud!
If one should be a prey, how much the better
To fall before the lion than the wolf! Clock strikes.
The clock upbraids me with the waste of time.
Be not afraid, good youth; I will not have you.
And yet when wit and youth is come to harvest,
Your wife is like to reap a proper man.
There lies your way, due west.
Viola. Then westward ho!
Grace and good disposition attend your ladyship.
You'll nothing, madam, to my lord by me?
Olivia. Stay.
I prethee tell me what thou think'st of me.
Viola. That you do think you are not what you are.
Olivia. If I think so, I think the same of you.
Viola. Then think you right. I am not what I am.
Olivia. I would you were as I would have you be.
Viola. Would it be better, madam, than I am?
I wish it might, for now I am your fool.
Olivia. O, what a deal of scorn looks beautiful
In the contempt and anger of his lip!
A murd'rous guilt shows not itself more soon
Than love that would seem hid: love's night is noon.
Cesario, by the roses of the spring,
By maidhood, honor, truth, and everything,
I love thee so, that maugre all thy pride,
Nor wit nor reason can my passion hide.
Do not extort thy reasons from this clause,
For that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause.
But rather reason thus with reason fetter:
Love sought is good, but given unsought is better.
Viola. By innocence I swear and by my youth,
I have one heart, one bosom, and one truth,
And that no woman has, nor never none
Shall mistress be of it, save I alone.
And so adieu, good madam. Never more
Will I my master's tears to you deplore.
Olivia. Yet come again; for thou perhaps mayst move
That heart which now abhors, to like his love. Exeunt.

Scene Second

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

Andrew: No, faith, I'll not stay a jot longer.
Toby. Thy reason, dear venom; give thy reason.
Fabian. You must needs yield your reason, Sir Andrew.
Andrew. Marry, I saw your niece do more favors to the Count's servingman than ever she bestow'd upon me. I saw't i' th' orchard.
Toby. Did she see the while, old boy? Tell me that.
Andrew. As plain as I see you now.
Fabian. This was a great argument of love in her toward you.

80 gait: walking; F gate; Cf. n. 81 prevented: anticipated 82 excellent: excellently 86 hath no voice: can be told no one 87 pregnant: receptive vouchsafed: graciously given 89 already: fully prepared (for my future use). all ready 96, 97 'Twas never . . . compliment; Cf. n. 99 yours: your servant (in love) his: his servant 102 blanks: blank thoughts 103 to whet: to sharpen (particularly by rubbing) 108 I had: pronounced 'I'd' 109 music from the spheres; Cf. n. 111 beseech: I beseech 112 enchantment: magic of making me love you here: F heare 113 abuse: deceive 115 construction: interpretation (of my character) 116, 117 To force . . . none of yours; Cf. n. 118, 119 at the stake . . . unmuzzled thoughts; Cf. n. baited it: harassed it 120 your receiving: your receptive capacity; Cf. n. 121 a cypress: a transparent black cloth used in sign of mourning 122 Hides . . . speak; Cf. n. 125 a grize: a grece, a flight of steps, a degree a vulgar proof: a common experience 127 'tis time to smile agen; Cf. n.

130 the lion . . . the wolf; Cf. n. 134 proper: worthy, handsome 135, 136 due west. Then westword ho; Cf. n. 137 disposition: frame of mind 141, 142 That you do think . . . the same of you; Cf. n. 146 I am your fool: you make a fool of me 147 what a deal: what a great deal 150 love's night is noon: love makes itself plain 153 maugre: despite 154 Nor . . . nor: neither . . . nor 155–158 Do not extort . . . better; Cf. n. 161 nor never none: nor ever one 166 his: the Duke's 2 venom: venomous person; Cf. n. 4 Marry: to be sure 6 orchard: probably 'garden' in the modern sense; Cf. n. 7 see: watch; Cf. n.

Andrew. 'Slight. Will you make an ass o' me?

Fabian. I will prove it legitimate, sir, upon the oaths of judgment and reason.

Toby. And they have been grand-jurymen since before Noah was a sailor.

Fabian. She did show favor to the youth in your sight only to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valor, to put fire in your heart and brimstone in your liver. You should then have accosted her; and with some excellent jests, fire-new from the mint, you should have bang'd the youth into dumbness. This was look'd for at your hand, and this was balk'd. The double gilt of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sail'd into the north of my lady's opinion where you will hang like an icicle on a Dutchman's beard, unless you do redeem it by some laudable attempt either of valor or policy.

Andrew. And't be any way, it must be with valor, for policy I hate. I had lief be a Brownist as a politician.

Toby. Why then, build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valor. Challenge me the Count's youth to fight with him; hurt him in eleven places. My niece shall take note of it; and assure thyself there is no love broker in the world can more prevail in man's commendation with woman than report of valor.

Fabian. There is no way but this, Sir Andrew.

Andrew. Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?

Toby. Go, write it in a martial hand. Be curst and brief. It is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent and full of intention. Taunt him with the license of ink. If thou thou'st him some thrice, it shall not be amiss; and as many lies as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware of England, set 'em down, go about it. Let there be gall enough in thy ink, though thou write with a goose-pen, no matter. About it!

Andrew. Where shall I find you?

Toby. We'll call thee at the cubiculo. Go.

Exit Sir Andrew.

Fabian. This is a dear manikin to you, Sir Toby.

Toby. I have been dear to him, lad, some two thousand strong or so.

Fabian. We shall have a rare letter from him; but you'll not deliver 't.

Toby. Never trust me then; and by all means stir on the youth to an answer. I think oxen and wainropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were open'd and you find so much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a flea, I'll eat the rest of th' anatomy.

Fabian. And his opposite, the youth, bears in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter Maria.

Toby. Look where the youngest wren of mine comes.

Maria. If you desire the spleen and will laugh yourselves into stitches, follow me. Yond gull Malvolio is turned heathen, a very renegatho; for there is no Christian that means to be saved by believing rightly can ever believe such impossible passages of grossness. He's in yellow stockings.

Toby. And cross-garter'd?

Maria. Most villainously, like a pedant that keeps a school i' th' church. I have dogg'd him like his murtherer. He does obey every point of the letter that I dropp'd to betray him. He does smile his face into more lines than is in the new map with the augmentation of the Indies. You have not seen such a thing as 'tis. I can hardly forbear hurling things at him. I know my lady will strike him. If she do, he'll smile and tak't for a great favor.

Toby. Come bring us, bring us where he is. Exeunt omnes.

Scene Three

Enter Sebastian and Antonio.

Sebastian. I would not by my will have troubled you,
But since you make your pleasure of your pains,
I will no further chide you.

Antonio. I could not stay behind you. My desire
(More sharp than filed steel) did spur me forth;
And not all love to see you (though so much
As might have drawn one to a longer voyage)
But jealousy what might befall your travel,
Being skilless in these parts; which to a stranger,
Unguided and unfriended, often prove
Rough and unhospitable. My willing love,
The rather by these arguments of fear,
Set forth in your pursuit.

Sebastian. My kind Antonio,
I can no other answer make but thanks,
And thanks; and ever oft good turns
And shuffl'd off with such uncurrent pay.
But were my worth, as is my conscience, firm,
You should find better dealing. What's to do?
Shall we go see the relics of this town?

Anotonio. Tomorrow, sir. Best first go see your lodging?

Sebastian. I am not weary and 'tis long to night.
I pray you let us satisfy our eyes
With the memorials and the things of fame
That do renown this city.

Antonio. Would you'ld pardon me.
I do not without danger walk these streets.
Once in a sea fight 'gainst the Count his galleys
I did some service of such note indeed
That, were I tane here, it would scarce be answer'd.

Sebastian. Belike you slew great number of his people.

Antonio. Th' offence is not of such a bloody nature,
Albeit the quality of the time and quarrel
Might well have given us bloody argument.

12 'Slight: 'God's light,' an oath 13 legitimate: legitimately, logically 14 grand-jurymen: competent to judge evidence 17 dormouse: i.e. sleepy; Cf. n. 18 brimstone in your liver: make your liver hot 19 fire-new: brand-new 21 balk'd: missed 22 double gilt; Cf. n. 24 an icicle on a Dutchman's beard; Cf. n. 26 And't: if it 27 Brownist; Cf. n. 28, 29 build me ... Challenge me: ethical datives 36 curst: perversely cross 38 with the license of ink: with all the excessive liberty that written language allows 38, 39 If thou thou'st him: if you call him 'thou'; Cf. n. 41 the bed of Ware; Cf. n. 42 gall; Cf. n. 43 goose-pen; Cf. n. 45 the cubiculo: the sleeping chamber (Latin in cubiculo) 46 dear manikin: dear little man; Cf. n. 47 dear: expensive 52 wainropes: wagon ropes hale: haul 54 blood in his liver: i.e. courage; Cf. n. 58 youngest wren of mine; Cf. n. 59 If you desire the spleen; Cf. n.

60 gull: dupe 61 renegatho: renegade; Cf. n. 63 passages of grossness: statements (in the letter) of exaggerated misinformation 65 pedant: schoolteacher 66 murtherer: variant form of 'murderer' 69 new map ... Indies; Cf. n. 6 all love: extreme desire 8 jealousy: solicitude 9 skilless in: without knowledge of 16 And thanks ... turns; Cf. n. 17 shuffl'd off: set aside, discounted uncurrent: valueless as currency (i.e. 'thanks') 18 my worth: the money I have my conscience: my conscience concerning your favors 20 relics: monuments 28 the Count his galleys: the Count's galleys 30 tane: taken it would scarce be answer'd: it would be difficult to explain away 31 Belike: perhaps 33 Albeit: although

It might have since been answer'd in repaying
What we took from them, which for traffic's sake
Most of our city did. Only myself stood out;
For which, if I be lapsed in this place,
I shall pay dear.

Sebastian. Do not then walk too open.

Antonio. It doth not fit me. Hold, sir, here's my purse.
In the south suburbs at the Elephant
Is best to lodge. I will bespeak our diet,
Whiles you beguile the time and feed your knowledge
With viewing of the town. There shall you have me.

Sebastian. Why I your purse?

Antonio. Haply your eye shall light upon some toy
You have desire to purchase; and your store
I think is not for idle markets, sir.

Sebastian. I'll be your purse-bearer and leave you for
An hour.

Antonio. To th' Elephant.

Sebastian. I do remember. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Enter Olivia and Maria.

Olivia. I have sent after him; he says he'll come.
How shall I feast him? What bestow of him?
For youth is bought more oft than begg'd or borrow'd.
I speak too loud. Where's Malvolio? He is sad and civil,
And suits well for a servant with my fortunes.
Where is Malvolio?

Maria. He's coming, madam, but in very strange manner.
He is sure possess'd, madam.

Olivia. Why, what's the matter? Does he rave?

Maria. No, madam, he does nothing but smile. Your ladyship were best to have some guard about you if he come,
for sure the man is tainted in's wits.

Olivia. Go call him hither.

Enter Malvolio.

I am as mad as he,
If sad and merry madness equal be.
How now, Malvolio?

Malvolio. Sweet lady, ho, ho!

Olivia. Smil'st thou?
I sent for thee upon a sad occasion.

Malvolio. Sad lady, I could be sad. This does make some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gartering; but what of that? If it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true sonnet is, 'Please one and please all.'

Olivia. Why, how doest thou, man? What is the matter with thee?

Malvolio. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs.
It did come to his hands, and commands shall be executed.
I think we do know the sweet Roman hand.

Olivia. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?

Malvolio. To bed? Ay, sweetheart, and I'll come to thee.

Olivia. God comfort thee. Why dost thou smile so and kiss thy hand so oft?

Maria. How do you, Malvolio?

Malvolio. At your request? Yes, nightingales answer daws.

Maria. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady?

Malvolio. 'Be not afraid of greatness.' 'Twas well writ.

Olivia. What mean'st thou by that, Malvolio?

Malvolio. 'Some are born great.'

Olivia. Ha?

Malvolio. 'Some achieve greatness.'

Olivia. What say'st thou?

Malvolio. 'And some have greatness thrust upon them.'

Olivia. Heaven restore thee.

Malvolio. 'Remember who commended thy yellow stockings.'

Olivia. Thy yellow stockings?

Malvolio. 'And wish'd to see thee cross-garter'd.'

Olivia. Cross-garter'd?'

Malvolio. 'Go to, thou art made, if thou desir'st to be so.'

Olivia. Am I made?

Malvolio. 'If not, let me see thee a servant still.'

Olivia. Why, this is very midsummer madness.

Enter Servant.

Servant. Madam, the young gentleman of the Count
Orsino's is return'd. I could hardly entreat him back. He attends your ladyship's pleasure.

Olivia. I'll come to him. [Exit Servant.] Good Maria, let this fellow be look'd to. Where's my cousin Toby? Let some of my people have a special care of him. I would not have him miscarry for the half of my dowry.

Exit [Olivia with Maria].

Malvolio. O, ho, do you come near to me now? No worse man than Sir Toby to look to me. This concurs directly with the letter. She sends him on purpose that I may appear stubborn to him, for she incites me to that in the letter. 'Cast
thy humble slough,' says she. 'Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants. Let thy tongue tang with arguments of state. Put thyself into the trick of singularity.' And consequently sets down the manner how: as, a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some sir of note, and so forth. I have lim'd her, but it is Jove's doing and Jove make me thankful. And when she went away now, 'Let this fellow be look'd to.' Fellow? Not 'Malvolio,' nor after my degree, but 'fellow.' Why, everything adheres togither, that no dram of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or unsafe circumstance—what can be said? Nothing that can be, can come between me and the full prospect of my hopes.
Well, Jove, not I, is the doer of this and he is to be thanked.

36 for traffic's sake: for trade's sake 38 lapsed: pounced upon as an offender 42 the Elephant: A London inn sign; Cf. n. 47 some toy: some trifle 48 store: store of money 49 idle markets: useless purchasings 2 of him: on him (Cesario) 4 sad and civil: serious and sedate 8 possess'd: possessed by the devil 12 in's: in his 15 sad: serious 20 sad: 'unhappy' and 'uncomfortable' 21 this cross-gartering: cf. n. 23 sonnet: any short poem 'Please one and please all': cf. n. 24 Olivia. Why, how: F. Mal. Why how

28 Roman hand: the Italian style, like modern handwriting; cf. n. 34 At your request . . . daws: cf. n. 50 Go to: go on made: cf. n. 53 midsummer madness: cf. n. 59, 60 miscarry: come to harm 64, 65 stubborn: hard, stiff, rigid 67 tang with: sound with, echo with; F langer with; cf. n. 68–70 And consequently . . . and so forth: cf. n. 69 sad: serious 70 the habit of some sir: the clothing of some gentleman 71 lim'd: caught; cf. n. 72 fellow: probably in the sense of 'companion,' not as Olivia uses it in addressing an inferior 73 degree: position 74 togither: together dram: one-eighth fluid ounce scruple: both 'doubt' and 'one twenty-fourth of an ounce' (apothecaries' weight) 75 incredulous: incredible

Enter [Sir] Toby, Fabian, and Maria.

Toby. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity? If all the divels of hell be drawn in little and Legion himself possess'd him, yet I'll speak to him.

Fabian. Here he is, here he is. How is't with you, sir? How is't with you, man?

Malvolio. Go off, I discard you. Let me enjoy my private. Go off.

Maria. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him. Did I not tell you? Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have a care of him.

Malvolio. Ah, ha, does she so?

Toby. Go to, go to; peace, peace; we must deal gently with him. Let me alone. How do you, Malvolio? How is't with you? What, man, defy the divel? Consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Malvolio. Do you know what you say?

Maria. La you, and you speak ill of the divel, how he takes it at heart. Pray God he be not bewitch'd.

Fabian. Carry his water to th' wise woman.

Maria. Marry, and it shall be done tomorrow morning if I live. My lady would not lose him for more than I'll say.

Malvolio. How now, mistress?

Maria. O Lord.

Toby. Prethee, hold thy peace. This is not the way. Do you not see you move him? Let me alone with him.

Fabian. No way but gentleness; gently, gently. The fiend is rough and will not be roughly us'd.

Toby. Why, how now my bawcock? How dost thou, chuck?

Malvolio. Sir.

Toby. Ay, biddy, come with me. What, man, 'tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan. Hang him, foul collier!

Maria. Get him to say his prayers; good Sir Toby, get him to pray.

Malvolio. My prayers, minx?

Maria. No, I warrant you, he will not hear of godliness.

Malvolio. Go hang yourselves all. You are idle shallow things. I am not of your element. You shall know more hereafter. Exit.

Toby. Is't possible?

Fabian. If this were play'd upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.

Toby. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.

Maria. Nay, pursue him now, lest the device take air and taint.

Fabian. Why, we shall make him mad indeed.

Maria. The house will be the quieter.

Toby. Come, we'll have him in a dark room and bound. My niece is already in the belief that he's mad. We may carry it thus for our pleasure and his penance, till our very pastime, tired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him; at which time we will bring the device to the bar and crown thee for a finder of madmen. But see, but see.

Enter Sir Andrew.

Fabian. More matter for a May morning.

Andrew. Here's the challenge; read it. I warrant there's vinegar and pepper in't.

Fabian. Is't so saucy?

Andrew. Ay, is't? I warrant him. Do but read.

Toby. Give me. [Reads.] 'Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow.'

Fabian. Good and valiant.

Toby. [Reads.] 'Wonder not nor admire not in thy mind why I do call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for't.'

Fabian. A good note that keeps you from the blow of the law.

Toby. [Reads.] 'Thou com'st to the Lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly. But thou liest in thy throat; that is not the matter I challenge thee for.'

Fabian. Very brief and to exceeding good sense—less.

Toby. [Reads.] 'I will waylay thee going home; where if it be thy chance to kill me—'

Fabian. Good.

Toby. [Reads.] 'Thou kill'st me like a rogue and a villain.'

Fabian. Still you keep o' th' windy side of the law. Good.

Toby. [Reads.] 'Fare thee well, and God have mercy upon one of our souls. He may have mercy upon mine, but my hope is better, and so look to thyself. Thy friend as thou usest him, and thy sworn enemy,

'Andrew Aguecheek.'

If this letter move him not, his legs cannot. I'll give't him.

Maria. You may have very fit occasion for't. He is now in some commerce with my lady and will by and by depart.

Toby. Go, Sir Andrew. Scout me for him at the corner of the orchard like a bumbaily. So soon as ever thou seest him, draw; and as thou draw'st, swear horrible; for it comes to pass oft that a terrible oath with a swaggering accent sharply twang'd off, gives manhood more approbation then ever proof itself would have earn'd him. Away.

Andrew. Nay, let me alone for swearing. Exit.

Toby. Now will not I deliver his letter; for the behavior of the young gentleman gives him out to be of good capacity and breeding; his employment between his lord and my niece confirms no less. Therefore this letter, being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth. He will find it comes from a clodpoll. But, sir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth, set upon Aguecheek a notable report of valor, and drive the gentleman (as I know his youth will aptly receive it) into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and impetuosity. This will so fright them both that they will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices.

Enter Olivia and Viola.

Fabian. Here he comes with your niece. Give them way till he take leave, and presently after him.

80 drawn in little: brought in a small space; cf. n. Legion; cf. n. 82, 83 How is't with you, man?; cf. n. 84 private: privacy 90 Go to: go on 95 La: Oh! and: if 96 bewitch'd; cf. n. 97 Carry ... woman; cf. n. 102 Prethee: I pray thee 106 bawcock: good fellow (French beau coq) 107 chuck: chick 109 biddy: chicken 110 gravity: dignity cherry-pit: a child's game; cf. n. collier: coal peddler; cf. n. 115 idle: empty, trifling 121 genius: nature 123 take air and taint: be exposed and thus contaminated 126 in a dark room and bound; cf. n. 127, 128 carry it: carry the trick on 130 the bar: the bar of judgment

132 matter for a May morning: material for a May-day comedy 135 saucy: a quibble on 'spicy' and 'impudent' or 'sharp' 136 Ay, is't? F I, ist? 138 scurvy: scabby, dirty 142, 143 A good note ... law; cf. n. 153 windy: windward, safe 155, 156 my hope: my hope of winning 160 You may: F Yon may for't: F fot't 161 by and by: immediately, soon 162 me: ethical dative 163 orchard: probably 'garden' bumbaily: bumbailiff, an agent employed in making arrests 166 approbation: confirmation proof: testing 168 let me alone: leave that (swearing) to me 174 a clodpoll: a clod-head, a fool 179 cockatrices: basilisks; cf. n. 180 Give them way: give them privacy, let them alone 181 presently: immediately

Toby. I will meditate the while upon some horrid message for a challenge. [Exeunt Sir Toby, Fabian, and Maria.]

Olivia. I have said too much unto a heart of stone,
And laid mine honor too unchary on't.
There's something in me that reproves my fault;
But such a headstrong potent fault it is
That it but mocks reproof.

Viola. With the same havior that your passion bears,
Goes on my master's griefs.

Olivia. Here, wear this jewel for me; 'tis my picture.
Refuse it not; it hath no tongue to vex you.
And I beseech you come again tomorrow.
What shall you ask of me that I'll deny,
That honor, sav'd, may upon asking give?

Viola. Nothing but this: your true love for my master.

Olivia. How with mine honor may I give him that
Which I have given to you?

Viola. I will acquit you.

Olivia. Well, come again tomorrow. Fare thee well. A fiend like thee might bear my soul to hell. [Exit.]

Enter [Sir] Toby and Fabian.

Toby. Gentleman, God save thee.

Viola. And you, sir.

Toby. That defense thou hast, betake thee to't. Of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not; but thy intercepter, full of despite, bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orchard end. Dismount thy tuck, be yare in thy preparation; for thy assailant is quick, skillful, and deadly.

Viola. You mistake, sir. I am sure no man hath any quarrel to me. My remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offense done to any man.

Toby. You'll find it otherwise, I assure you. Therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your guard; for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath can furnish man withal.

Viola. I pray you, sir, what is he?

Toby. He is knight dubb'd with unhatch'd rapier and on carpet consideration, but he is a divel in private brawl. Souls and bodies hath he divorc'd three; and his incensement at this moment is so implacable that satisfaction can be none but by pangs of death and sepulcher. 'Hob, nob' is his word. 'Give't or take't.'

Viola. I will return again into the house and desire some conduct of the lady. I am no fighter. I have heard of some kind of men that put quarrels purposely on others to taste their valor. Belike this is a man of that quirk.

Toby. Sir, no. His indignation derives itself out of a very competent injury; therefore get you on and give him his desire. Back you shall not to the house, unless you undertake that with me which with as much safety you might answer him. Therefore on, or strip your sword stark naked; for meddle you must, that's certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

185 unchary on't: carelessly on it (the heart of stone) 189 havior: behavior 190 Goes . . . griefs: my master's grieving love for you goes on; cf. n. 191 jewel: any ornament or trinket; here perhaps 'locket' 195 honor, sav'd: honor preserved 204 betake thee to't: F betake the too't 206 despite: scorn, defiance 207 Dismount thy tuck: take out thy rapier yare: quick 215 withal: with 217 with unhatch'd rapier . . . carpet consideration; cf. n. 221 Hob, nob: have or have not, give or take 224 conduct: protective escort 226 Belike: probably, possibly quirk: peculiarity 228 competent injury: sufficiently serious injury; F competent 229, 230 unless you undertake . . . answer him; cf. n. 231 meddle: engage (in the fight) 232 forswear to wear iron: repudiate on oath (your right) to wear a sword

Viola. This is as uncivil as strange. I beseech you, do me this courteous office, as to know of the knight what my offense to him is. It is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

Toby. I will do so. Signior Fabian, stay you by this gentleman till my return. Exit Toby.

Viola. Pray you, sir, do you know of this matter?

Fabian. I know the knight is incens'd against you, even to a mortal arbitrement; but nothing of the circumstance more.

Viola. I beseech you, what manner of man is he?

Fabian. Nothing of that wonderful promise, to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valor. He is indeed, sir, the most skillful, bloody, and fatal opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria. Will you walk towards him? I will make your peace with him if I can.

Viola. I shall be much bound to you for't. I am one that had rather go with sir priest than sir knight. I care not who knows so much of my mettle. Exeunt.

Enter [Sir] Toby and [Sir] Andrew.

Toby. Why, man, he's a very divel; I have not seen such a firago. I had a pass with him, rapier, scabbard, and all, and he gives me the stuck-in with such a mortal motion that it is inevitable; and on the answer he pays you as surely as your feet hits the ground they step on. They say he has been fencer to the Sophy.

Andrew. Pox on't, I'll not meddle with him.

Toby. Ay, but he will not now be pacified. Fabiran can scarce hold him yonder.

Andrew. Plague on't, and I thought he had been valiant and so cunning in fence, I'd have seen him damn'd ere I'd have challeng'd him. Let him let the matter slip, and I'll give him my horse, grey Capilet.

Toby. I'll make the motion. Stand here; make a good show on't. This shall end without the perdition of souls. [Aside.] Marry, I'll ride your horse as well as I ride you.

Enter Fabian and Viola.

I have his horse to take up the quarrel. I have persuaded him the youth's a divel.

Fabian. He is as horribly conceited of him, and pants and looks pale as if a bear were at his heels.

Toby. There's no remedy, sir. He will fight with you for's oath sake. Marry, he hath better bethought him of his quarrel, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of. Therefore draw for the supportance of his vow. He protests he will not hurt you.

Viola. [Aside.] Pray God defend me! A little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man.

Fabian. Give ground if you see him furious.

Toby. Come, Sir Andrew, there's no remedy. The gentleman will for his honor's sake have one bout with you. He cannot 234 to know of the knight: to find out from the knight 241 mortal arbitrement: deadly settlement 244 proof: testing 250 sir priest: i.e. 'dominus,' a common title of address for the clergy 251 mettle: quality of temperament 253 firago: virago; cf. n. pass: bout 254 the stuck-in: the thrust or lunge 255 the answer: the return hit 256 hits; cf. n. 257 the Sophy: the shah of Persia 258 Pox on't: the plague on it; cf. n. 261 and: if 264 Capilet; cf. n. 266 the perdition of souls: i.e. killing 268 to take up: to settle 270 He is as horribly conceited of him: he is imagining all sorts of dreadful things about him 272 for's: for his 275 supportance: keeping

by the duello avoid it; but he has promised me as he is a gentleman and a soldier, he will not hurt you. Come on, to't.

Andrew. Pray God he keep his oath! [Draws.]

Enter Antonio.

Viola. I do assure you 'tis against my will. [Draws.]

Antonio. Put up your sword. If this young gentleman
Have done offense, I take the fault on me;
If you offend him, I for him defy you.

Toby. You, sir? Why, what are you?

Antonio. [Draws.] One, sir, that for his love dares yet do more
Than you have heard him brag to you he will.

Toby. Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you. [Draws.]

Enter Officers.

Fabian. O good Sir Toby, hold. Here come the officers.

Toby. [To Antonio.] I'll be with you anon.

Viola. [To Sir Andrew.] Pray, sir, put your sword up, if you please.

Andrew. Marry, will I, sir; and for that I promis'd you, I'll be as good as my word. He will bear you easily and reins well.

1 Officer. This is the man; do thy office.

2 Officer. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit
Of Count Orsino.

Antonio. You do mistake me, sir.

1 Officer. No, sir, no jot. I know your favor well,
Though now you have no sea cap on your head.
Take him away. He knows I know him well.

Antonio. I must obey. [To Viola.] This comes with seeking you.
But there's no remedy; I shall answer it.
What will you do, now my necessity
Makes me to ask you for my purse? It grieves me
Much more for what I cannot do for you
Than what befalls myself. You stand amaz'd,
But be of comfort.

2 Officer. Come, sir, away.

Antonio. I must entreat of you some of that money.

Viola. What money, sir?
For the fair kindness you have show'd me here,
And part being prompted by your present trouble,
Out of my lean and low ability
I'll lend you something. My having is not much;
I'll make division of my present with you.
Hold, there's half my coffer.

Antonio. Will you deny me now?
Is't possible that my deserts to you
Can lack persuasion? Do not tempt my misery,
Lest that it make me so unsound a man
As to upbraid you with those kindnesses
That I have done for you.

Viola. I know of none,
Nor know I you by voice or any feature.
I hate ingratitude more in a man
Than lying, vainness, babbling drunkenness,
Or any taint of vice whose strong corruption
Inhabits our frail blood.

Antonio. O heavens themselves!

2 Officer. Come, sir, I pray you go.

Antonio. Let me speak a little. This youth that you see here
I snatch'd one half out of the jaws of death;
Reliev'd him with such sanctity of love;
And to his image which methought did promise
Most venerable worth, did I devotion.

1 Officer. What's that to us? The time goes by. Away.

Antonio. But O, how vild an idol proves this god!
Thou hast, Sebastian, done good feature shame.
In nature there's no blemish but the mind.
None can be called deform'd but the unkind.
Virtue is beauty; but the beauteous evil
Are empty trunks, o'erflourish'd by the devil.

1 Officer. The man grows mad; away with him. Come, come, sir.

Antonio. Lead me on. Exit [with Officers.]

Viola. Methinks his words do from such passion fly
That he believes himself; so do not I.
Prove true, imagination, O, prove true,
That I, dear brother, be now tane for you!

Toby. Come hither, knight; come hiter, Fabian.
We'll whisper o'er a couplet or two of most sage saws.

Viola. He nam'd Sebastian. I my brother know
Yet living in my glass. Even such and so
In favor was my brother, and he went
Still in this fashion, color, ornament,
For him I imitate. O, if it prove,
Tempests are kind, and salt waves fresh in love! [Exit.]

Toby. A very dishonest paltry boy, and more a coward than a hare. His dishonesty appears in leaving his friend here in necessity and denying him; and for his cowardship, ask Fabian.

Fabian. A coward, a most devout coward; religious in it.

Andrew. 'Slid, I'll after him again and beat him.

Toby. Do; cuff him soundly, but never draw thy sword.

Andrew. And I do not.

Fabian. Come, let's see the event.

Toby. I dare lay any money 'twill be nothing yet. Exeunt.

[Finis, Actus tertius.]

Act Fourth ❧ Scene First

Enter Sebastian and Clown.

Clown. Will you make me believe that I am not sent for you?

282 the duello: the rules of polite dueling; cf. n. 293 an undertaker: one who takes up a challenge 295 anon: presently 298 and for that: and for the horse 299 reins: F raines 305 favor: face 314 amaz'd: 'dazed,' stronger than in modern usage 320 part: in part 322 My having: what I have 323 my present: what I have now 324 my coffer: my money 326 my deserts to you: what you owe me 327 persuasion: the power to persuade

334 vainness: 'uselessness' or 'personal conceit' 342 image: appearance; cf. n. 343 venerable: worthy of veneration 345 vild: vile; cf. n. 348 unkind: 'cruel' and 'unnatural' 349 beauteous evil: evil beautiful in appearance 350 empty trunks, o'erflourish'd: empty bodies covered with blossoms or vendure; cf. n. 354 fly: come violently 355 so do not I: 'I do not believe him,' and 'I do not believe myself' (in the hope that my brother is alive) 357 tane: taken 359 sage saws: wise sayings 361 Yet living in my glass: i.e. whenever I look in the mirror 362 favor: face 363 still: always 364 For: because it: that he is alive 366 dishonest: dishonorable 367 hare: cf. n. 370 'Slid: 'God's lid' (eyelid); a mild oath 372 And: if 373 the event: the result, the outcome 374 yet: nevertheless Exeunt: F. Exit.

Sebastian. Go to, go to, thou art a foolish fellow. Let me be clear of thee.

Clown. Well held out, i' faith. No, I do not know you; nor I am not sent to you by my lady to bid you come speak with her; nor your name is not Master Cesario; nor this is not my nose neither. Nothing that is so is so.

Sebastian. I prethee vent thy folly somewhere else. Thou know'st not me.

Clown. Vent my folly! He has heard that word of some great man and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly! I am afraid this great lubber the world will prove a cockney. I prethee now ungird thy strangeness, and tell me what I shall vent to my lady? Shall I vent to her that thou art coming?

Sebastian. I prethee, foolish Greek, depart from me. There's money for thee. If you tarry longer, I shall give worse payment.

Clown. By my troth, thou hast an open hand. These wise men that give fools money get themselves a good report, after fourteen years' purchase.

Enter [Sir] Andrew, [Sir] Toby, and Fabian.

Andrew. Now, sir, have I met you again. There's for you. [Strikes Sebastian.]

Sebastian. Why, there's for thee, and there, and there. Are all the people mad? [Beats Sir Andrew.]

Toby. Hold, sir, or I'll throw your dagger o'er the house. [Holds Sebastian.]

Clown. This will I tell my lady straight. I would not be in some of your coats for twopence. [Exit.]

Toby. Come on, sir; hold.

Andrew. Nay, let him alone. I'll go another way to work with him. I'll have an action of battery against him if there be any law in Illyria. Though I stroke him first, yet it's no matter for that.

Sebastian. Let go thy hand.

Toby. Come, sir, I will not let you go. Come, my young soldier, put up your iron. You are well flesh'd. Come on.

Sebastian. I will be free from thee. [Frees himself.]
What wouldst thou now?
If thou dar'st tempt me further, draw thy sword. [Draws.]

Toby. What, what? Nay then, I must have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you. [Draws.]

Enter Olivia.

Olivia. Hold, Toby. On thy life I charge thee, hold.

Toby. Madam.

Olivia. Will it be ever thus? Ungracious wretch,
Fit for the mountains and the barbarous caves,
Where manners ne'er were preach'd. Out of my sight.
Be not offended, dear Cesario.
Rudesby, be gone. [Exeunt Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.]
I prethee, gentle friend,
Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway
In this uncivil and unjust extent
Against thy peace. Go with me to my house,
And hear thou there how many fruitless pranks
This ruffian hath botch'd up, that thou thereby
Mayst smile at this. Thou shalt not choose but go.
Do not deny. Beshrew his soul for me.
He started one poor heart of mine, in thee.

Sebastian. What relish is in this? How runs the stream?
Or am I mad, or else this is a dream
Let fancy still my sense in Lethe steep;
If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep.

Olivia. Nay, come, I prethee. Would thou'dst be rul'd by me?

Sebastian. Madam, I will.

Olivia. O, say so, and so be. Exeunt.

Scene Second

Enter Maria and Clown.

Maria. Nay, I prethee put on this gown and this beard. Make him believe thou art Sir Topas the curate. Do it quickly. I'll call Sir Toby the whilst. [Exit.]

Clown. Well, I'll put it on, and I will dissemble myself in't, and I would I were the first that ever dissembled in such a gown. I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor lean enough to be thought a good student; but to be said an honest man and a good housekeeper goes as fairly as to say a careful man and a great scholar. The competitors enter.

Enter [Sir] Toby [and Maria].

Toby. Jove bless thee, Master Parson.

Clown. Bonos dies, Sir Toby; for as the old hermit of Prague that never saw pen and ink very wittily said to a niece of King Gorboduc, 'That that is is'; so I being Master Parson, am Master Parson. For what is 'that' but that? And 'is' but is?

Toby. To him, Sir Topas.

Clown. What ho, I say. Peace in this prison.

Toby. The knave counterfeits well; a good knave.

Malvolio within.

Malvolio. Who calls there?

Clown. Sir Topas the curate, who comes to visit Malvolio the lunatic.

Malvolio. Sir Topas, Sir Topas, good Sir Topas, go to my lady.

Clown. Out, hyperbolical fiend! How vexest thou this man? Talkest thou nothing but of ladies?

Toby. Well said, Master Parson.

Malvolio. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged; good Sir Topas, do not think I am mad. They have laid me here in hideous darkness.

3 Go to: go on 5 held out: kept up, continued 9 I prethee: I pray thee 13 lubber: lout a cockney: an affected, foppish person; cf. n. 14 ungird thy strangeness: let loose thy strange manner 16 Greek: 'merry companion' or 'unintelligible speaker' 21 after fourteen years' purchase: at a high price; cf. n. 32 action of battery: a suit at law for beating (me) 33 stroke: struck 37 You are well flesh'd: you have had a good taste; cf. n. 42 malapert: impudent 49 Rudesby: unmannerly fellow 51 fair: just sway: rule 52 uncivil: uncivilized extent: probably 'display,' possibly 'assault'

57 Beshrew: curse 58 started: startled heart: 'heart' or 'hart'; cf. n. 59 relish: taste 60 Or . . . or either . . . or 61 Lethe: the river of forgetfulness in the underworld (Greek mythology) 62 still: always 2 Sir: common title of address for the clergy Topas; cf. n. 3 the whilst: meanwhile 4 dissemble: disguise 6 the function: the function of a cleric 7 student: student 8 a good housekeeper: one who lives well 9 the competitors: the associates 11 Bonos dies: good day (a pretense at ecclesiastical Latin) 11 the old hermit of Prague: probably the clown's invention 12, 13 King Gorboduc; cf. n. 17 knave: boy, fellow SD Malvolio within; cf. n. 23 hyperbolical: enormous

Clown. Fie, thou dishonest Satan. I call thee by the most modest terms, for I am one of those gentle ones that will use the divel himself with courtesy. Say'st thou that house is dark?

Malvolio. As hell, Sir Topas.

Clown. Why, it hath bay windows transparent as barricadoes, and the clear stores toward the south north are as lustrous as ebony. And yet complainest thou of obstruction?

Malvolio. I am not mad, Sir Topas; I say to you this house is dark.

Clown. Madman, thou errest. I say there is no darkness but ignorance, in which thou art more puzzl'd than the Egyptians in their fog.

Malvolio. I say this house is as dark as ignorance, though ignorance were as dark as hell; and I say there was never man thus abus'd. I am no more mad than you are; make the trial of it in any constant question.

Clown. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning wild fowl?

Malvolio. That the soul of our grandam might happily inhabit a bird.

Clown. What think'st thou of his opinion?

Malvolio. I think nobly of the soul and no way approve his opinion.

Clown. Fare thee well. Remain thou still in darkness. Thou shalt hold th' opinion of Pythagoras ere I will allow of thy wits, and fear to kill a woodcock, lest thou dispossess the soul of thy grandam. Fare thee well.

Malvolio. Sir Topas, Sir Topas.

Toby. My most exquisite Sir Topas.

Clown. Nay, I am for all waters.

Maria. Thou mightst have done this without thy beard and gown. He sees thee not.

Toby. To him in thine own voice, and bring me word how thou find'st him. [To Maria.] I would we were well rid of this knavery. If he may be conveniently deliver'd, I would he were; for I am now so far in offense with my niece that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport to the upshot. [To the Clown.] Come by and by to my chamber. Exit [with Maria.]

Clown. [Sings.]

Hey Robin, jolly Robin
Tell me how thy lady does.

Malvolio. Fool.

Clown. 'My lady is unkind, perdie.'

Malvolio. Fool.

Clown. 'Alas, why is she so?'

Malvolio. Fool, I say.

Clown. 'She loves another.' Who calls, ha?

Malvolio. Good fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at my hand, help me to a candle, and pen, ink, and paper. As I am a gentleman, I will live to be thankful to thee for't.

Clown. Master Malvolio?

Malvolio. Ay, good fool.

Clown. Alas, sir, how fell you besides your five wits?

Malvolio. Fool, there was never man so notoriously abus'd. I am as well in my wits, fool, as thou art.

Clown. But as well: then you are mad indeed, if you be no better in your wits than a fool.

Malvolio. They have here propertied me; keep me in darkness, send ministers to me, asses, and do all they can to face me out of my wits.

Clown. Advise you what you say. The minister is here. Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens restore. Endeavor thyself to sleep, and leave thy vain bibble babble.

Malvolio. Sir Topas.

Clown. Maintain no words with him, good fellow. Who, I, sir? Not I, sir. God buy you, good Sir Topas. Marry, amen. I will, sir, I will.

Malvolio. Fool, fool, fool, I say.

Clown. Alas, sir, be patient. What say you, sir? I am shent for speaking to you.

Malvolio. Good fool, help me to some light and some paper. I tell thee I am as well in my wits as any man in Illyria.

Clown. Well-a-day, that you were, sir.

Malvolio. By this hand, I am. Good fool, some ink, paper, and light; and convey what I will set down to my lady. It shall advantage thee more than ever the bearing of letter did.

Clown. I will help you to't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed? Or do you but counterfeit?

Malvolio. Believe me, I am not; I tell thee true.

Clown. Nay, I'll ne'er believe a madman till I see his brains. I will fetch you light and paper and ink.

Malvolio. Fool, I'll requite it in the highest degree. I prethee be gone.

Clown. [Sings.]

I am gone, sir,
And anon, sir,
I'll be with you again,
In a trice,
Like to the old Vice,
Your need to sustain.
Who with dagger of lath,
In his rage and his wrath,
Cries 'Ah, ha,' to the devil.
Like a mad lad,
'Pare thy nails, dad.'
Adieu, goodman devil. Exit.

Scene Third

Enter Sebastian.

Sebastian. This is the air; that is the glorious sun;
This pearl she gave me, I do feel't and see't;
And though 'tis wonder that enwraps me thus,
Yet 'tis not madness. Where's Antonio then?

29 dishonest: dishonorable 30 modest: moderate 31 house: 'house' and 'darkened room' 34, 35 barricadoes: barricades clear stores: clerestories, the upper part of a church or building with a series of windows 40, 41 the Egyptians in their fog; cf. n. 45 constant: consistent 46 Pythagoras; cf. n. 48 happily: haply, by chance 59 for all waters: good for any trade, occupation 64 deliver'd: let out 66 this sport to the upshot: this sport to the outcome; cf. n. to: F omits 67 by and by: immediately 68 Hey Robin; cf. n. 71 perdie: certainly (French par dieu)

81 how fell you besides: how fell you out of five wits; cf. n. 86 propertied me: made me a property, a mere thing 87 face me out of my wits: impudently claim that I am mad 89 Advise you: be careful of 94 God buy you: good-by; cf. n. Marry; cf. n. 97 shent: reproved 101 Well-a-day: woe, alas 104 advantage: be of advantage to 113 anon: straightway, at once 112–114 I am gone, sir . . . again; cf. n. 116–122 Like to the old Vice . . . 'Pare thy nails, dad'; cf. n. 123 Adieu, goodman devil; cf. n.

I could not find him at the Elephant;
Yet there he was, and there I found this credit
That he did range the town to seek me out.
His counsel now might do me golden service;
For though my soul disputes well with my sense
That this may be some error, but no madness,
Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune
So far exceed all instance, all discourse,
That I am ready to distrust mine eyes
And wrangle with my reason that persuades me
To any other trust but that I am mad,
Or else the lady's mad. Yet if 'twere so,
She could not sway her house, command her followers,
Take and give back affairs and their dispatch
With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing
As I perceive she does. There's something in't
That is deceivable. But here the lady comes.

Enter Olivia and Priest.

Olivia. Blame not this haste of mine. If you mean well,
Now go with me and with this holy man
Into the chantry by. There before him
And underneath that consecrated roof,
Plight me the full assurance of your faith,
That my most jealious and too doubtful soul
May live at peace. He shall conceal it
Whiles you are willing it shall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keep
According to my birth. What do you say?

Sebastian. I'll follow this good man and go with you
And having sworn truth, ever will be true.

Olivia. Then lead the way, good father; and heavens so shine
That they may fairly note this act of mine. Exeunt.

Finis, Actus quartus.

Act Fifth ❧ Scene First

Enter Clown and Fabian.

Fabian. Now as thou lov'st me, let me see his letter.

Clown. Good Master Fabian, grant me another request.

Fabian. Anything.

Clown. Do not desire to see this letter.

Fabian. This is to give a dog and in recompense desire my dog again.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and Lords.

Duke. Belong you to the Lady Olivia, friends?

Clown. Ay, sir, we are some of her trappings.

Duke. I know thee well. How doest thou, my good fellow?

Clown. Truly, sir, the better for my foes and the worse for my friends.

Duke. Just the contrary: the better for thy friends.

Clown. No, sir, the worse.

Duke. How can that be?

Clown. Marry, sir, they praise me and make an ass of me; now my foes tell me plainly I am an ass. So that by my foes, sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself, and by my friends I am abused. So that conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why then, the worse for my friends and the better for my foes.

Duke. Why, this is excellent.

Clown. By my troth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.

Duke. Thou shalt not be the worse for me. There's gold.

Clown. But that it would be double dealing, sir, I would you could make it another.

Duke. O, you give me ill counsel.

Clown. Put your grace in your pocket, sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Duke. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double dealer. There's another.

Clown. Primo, secundo, tertio is a good play, and the old saying is 'The third pays for all.' The triplex, sir, is a good tripping measure; or the bells of St. Bennet, sir, may put you in mind, one, two, three.

Duke. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw. If you will let your lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clown. Marry, sir, lullaby to your bounty till I come agen. I go, sir; but I would not have you to think that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness. But as you say, sir, let your bounty take a nap; I will awake it anon. Exit.

Enter Antonio and Officers.

Viola. Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue me.

Duke. That face of his I do remember well.
Yet when I saw it last, it was besmear'd
As black as Vulcan in the smoke of war.
A baubling vessel was he captain of,
For shallow draught and bulk unprizable,
With which such scathful grapple did he make
With the most noble bottom of our fleet
That very envy and the tongue of loss
Cried fame and honor on him. What's the matter?

1 Officer. Orsino, this is that Antonio
That took the Phoenix and her fraught from Candy;
And this is he that did the Tiger board
When your young nephew Titus lost his leg.
Here in the streets, desperate of shame and state,
In private brabble did we apprehend him.

Viola. He did me kindness, sir, drew on my side;
But in conclusion put strange speech upon me.

6 this credit: this report believed 9 my soul disputes well with my sense: my mind agrees well with my senses 12 instance: example discourse: logic, reason 14 wrangle: dispute 17 sway: rule 18 dispatch: management 21 deceivable: deceptive 24 the chantry by: the chapel near by; cf. n. 26 Plight me . . . your faith; cf. n. 27 jealious: jealous 29 Whiles: until note: notice 30 What time: at which time 31 my birth: my station 5 This is to give a dog: cf. n. 8 trappings: train, attendants 9 doest; cf. n.

18 abused: 'deceived' and 'wronged' 18–20 So that conclusions . . . for my foes; cf. n. 25 But that: but for the fact that double dealing: both 'double giving' and 'deceit' 28 grace: both 'Duke' and 'generosity' 32 Primo, secundo, tertio; cf. n. 33 'The third pays for all'; cf. n. triplex: triple time in music 34 St. Bennet: St. Benedict; cf. n. 37 throw: throw of the dice 46 Vulcan: Roman god of fire and patron of metal workers 47 a baubling vessel: a trifling vessel, an unimportant ship 48 unprizable: incapable of being valued, worthless 49 scathful: harmful 50 bottom: ship 51 very: even loss: those losing the battle 54 fraught: cargo Candy: 'Candia' and 'Crete' 57 desperate of shame and state: reckless of shame and of his condition 58 brabble: brawl 59 drew: drew his sword 60 put strange speech upon me: spoke to me strangely

I know not what 'twas but distraction.
Duke. Notable pirate, thou salt-water thief,
What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies
Whom thou in terms so bloody and so dear
Hast made thine enemies?
Antonio. Orsino, noble sir,
Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you give me.
Antony never yet was thief or pirate,
Though I confess, on base and ground enough,
Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither.
That most ingrateful boy there by your side
From the rude sea's enrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeem. A wrack past hope he was.
His life I gave him and did thereto add
My love without retention or restraint,
All his in dedication. For his sake
Did I expose myself (pure for his love)
Into the danger of this adverse town;
Drew to defend him when he was beset;
Where being apprehended, his false cunning
(Not meaning to partake with me in danger)
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,
And grew a twenty years removed thing
While one would wink; denied me mine own purse,
Which I had recommended to his use
Not half an hour before.
Viola. How can this be?
Duke. When came he to this town?
Antonio. Today, my lord; and for three months before,
No intrim, not a minute's vacancy,
Both day and night did we keep company.

Enter Olivia and Attendants.

Duke. Here comes the countess; now heaven walks on earth.
But for thee, fellow: fellow, thy words are madness.
Three months this youth hath tended upon me,
But more of that anon. Take him aside.
Olivia. What would my lord, but that he may not have,
Wherein Olivia may seem serviceable?
Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.
Viola. Madam.
Duke. Gracious Olivia.
Olivia. What do you say, Cesario? Good my lord.
Viola. My lord would speak; my duty hushes me.
Olivia. If it be ought to the old tune, my lord,
It is as fat and fulsome to mine ear
As howling after music.
Duke. Still so cruel?
Olivia. Still so constant, lord.
Duke. What, to perverseness? You uncivil lady,
To whose ingrate and unauspicious altars
My soul the faithfull'st off'rings have breath'd out
That e'er devotion tender'd. What shall I do?
Olivia. Even what it please my lord, that shall become him.

Duke. Why should I not (had I the heart to do it),
Like to th' Egyptian thief at point of death,
Kill what I love? (A savage jealousy
That sometimes savors nobly.) But hear me this:
Since you to nonregardance cast my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument
That screws me from my true place in your favor,
Live you the marble-breasted tyrant still.
But this your minion, whom I know you love,
And whom, by heaven I swear, I tender dearly,
Him will I tear out of that cruel eye
Where he sits crowned in his master's spite.
Come, boy, with me. My thoughts are ripe in mischief.
I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love,
To spite a ravin's heart within a dove. [Going.]
Viola. And I most jocund, apt, and willingly,
To do you rest a thousand deaths would die. [Following.]
Olivia. Where goes Cesario?
Viola. After him I love
More than I love these eyes, more than my life,
More by all mores than ere I shall love wife.
If I do feign, you witnesses above
Punish my life for tainting of my love.
Olivia. Ay me detested! How am I beguil'd!
Viola. Who does beguile you? Who does do you wrong?
Olivia. Hast thou forgot thyself? Is it so long?
Call forth the holy father. [Exit an Attendant.]
Duke. [To Viola.] Come, away.
Olivia. Whither, my lord? Cesario, husband, stay.
Duke. Husband?
Olivia. Ay, husband. Can he that deny?
Duke. Her husband, sirrah?
Viola. No, my lord, not I.
Olivia. Alas, it is the baseness of thy fear
That makes thee strangle thy propriety.
Fear not, Cesario; take thy fortunes up;
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art
As great as that thou fear'st.

Enter Priest.

O welcome, father!
Father, I charge thee by thy reverence
Here to unfold—though lately we intended
To keep in darkness what occasion now
Reveals before 'tis ripe—what thou dost know
Hath newly pass'd between this youth and me.
Priest. A contract of eternal bond of love,
Confirm'd by mutual joinder of your hands,
Attested by the holy close of lips,
Strength'ned by interchangement of your rings;
And all the ceremony of this compact
Seal'd in my function, by my testimony;
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my grave
I have travel'd but two hours.
Duke. O thou dissembling cub, what will thou be

62 distraction: madness 63 thief: 'robber,' a strong word 65 dear: costly, cf. n. 74 wrack: wreck 78 pure: purely, only 79 adverse: hostile 83 to face me out of his acquaintance: shamelessly to pretend not to know me 84, 85 And grew . . . would wink; cf. n. 86 had recommended: had given in charge, had urged 90 three months; cf. n. 91 intrim: interim 97 but that he may not have: except what he may not have (my love) 105 fat: superabundant, unnecessary fulsome: offensive to the taste 110 ingrate: ungrateful unauspicious: unpropitious 111 My soul . . . have breath'd; cf. n. 113 Even monosyllabic

115 th' Egyptian thief; cf. n. 118 nonregardance: neglect, lack of regard 122 minion: favorite 123 tender: hold 125 in his master's spite: despite his master 129 apt: properly 130 To do you rest: to give you peace 134 mores: customs 136 for tainting: for corrupting (by feigning) 142 husband; cf. n. 145 sirrah: 'sir'; the form is familiar or contemptuous 148 thy propriety: thy identity 151 that thou fear'st: i.e. the Duke

When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case?
Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow
That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow?
Farewell, and take her; but direct thy feet
Where thou and I henceforth may never meet.
Viola. My lord, I do protest.
Olivia. O, do not swear.
Hold little faith, though thou hast too much fear.

Enter Sir Andrew.

Andrew. For the love of God, a surgeon. Send one presently to Sir Toby.
Olivia. What's the matter?
Andrew. H'as broke my head across and has given Sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too. For the love of God, your help. I had rather than forty pound I were at home.
Olivia. Who has done this, Sir Andrew?
Andrew. The Count's gentleman, one Cesario. We took him for a coward, but he's the very divel incardinate.
Duke. My gentleman Cesario?
Andrew. Od's lifelings, here he is. You broke my head for nothing, and that that I did, I was set on to do't by Sir Toby.
Viola. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt you.
You drew your sword upon me without cause,
But I bespake you fair and hurt you not.

Enter [Sir] Toby and Clown.

Andrew. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me. I think you set nothing by a bloody coxcomb. Here comes Sir Toby halting; you shall hear more. But if he had not been in drink, he would have tickl'd you othergates than he did.
Duke. How now, gentleman? How is't with you?
Toby. That's all one. Has hurt me, and there's th' end on't. Sot, didst see Dick Surgeon, sot?
Clown. O, he's drunk, Sir Toby, an hour agone. His eyes were set at eight i' th' morning.
Toby. Then he's a rogue and a passy measures pavin. I hate a drunken rogue.
Olivia. Away with him! Who hath made this havoc with them?
Andrew. I'll help you, Sir Toby, because we'll be dress'd together.
Toby. Will you help an ass-head and a coxcomb and a knave, a thin-fac'd knave, a gull?
Olivia. Get him to bed and let his hurt be look'd to.
[Exeunt Clown, Fabian, Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.]

Enter Sebastian.

Sebastian. I am sorry, madam, I have hurt your kinsman;
But had it been the brother of my blood,
I must have done no less with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that
I do perceive it hath offended you.
Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows
We made each other but so late ago.
Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons,
A natural perspective, that is and is not.
Sebastian. Antonio, O my dear Antonio,
How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me
Since I have lost thee!
Antonio. Sebastian are you?
Sebastian. Fear'st thou that, Antonio?
Antonio. How have you made division of yourself?
An apple cleft in two is not more twin
Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?
Olivia. Most wonderful.
Sebastian. Do I stand there? I never had a brother;
Nor can there be that deity in my nature
Of here and everywhere. I had a sister
Whom the blind waves and surges have devour'd.
Of charity, what kin are you to me?
What countryman? What name? What parentage?
Viola. Of Messaline; Sebastian was my father;
Such a Sebastian was my brother too.
So went he suited to his watery tomb.
If spirits can assume both form and suit,
You come to fright us.
Sebastian. A spirit I am indeed,
But am in that dimension grossly clad,
Which from the womb I did participate.
Were you a woman, as the rest goes even,
I should my tears let fall upon your cheek
And say, 'Thrice welcome, drowned Viola!'
Viola. My father had a mole upon his brow.
Sebastian. And so had mine.
Viola. And died that day when Viola from her birth
Had numb'red thirteen years.
Sebastian. O, that record is lively in my soul!
He finished indeed his mortal act
That day that made my sister thirteen years.
Viola. If nothing lets to make us happy both
But this my masculine usurp'd attire,
Do not embrace me till each circumstance
Of place, time, fortune do cohere and jump
That I am Viola; which to confirm,
I'll bring you to a captain in this town,
Where lie my maiden weeds; by whose gentle help
I was preserv'd to serve this noble Count.
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath been between this lady and this lord.
Sebastian. [To Olivia.] So comes it, lady, you have been mistook.
But nature to her bias drew in that.
You would have been contracted to a maid,
Nor are you therein, by my life, deceiv'd;
You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

167 a grizzle: gray hair case: sheath or skin, particularly of a fox 169 trip: trickery; cf. n. 174 Hold little faith: keep a little faith 176 presently: at once 178 H'as: he has 179 coxcomb: head 183 incardinate: possibly a quibble on 'incarnate,' 'in the flesh,' and 'incardinate,' 'like a cardinal'; cf. n. 185 Od's lifelings: 'God's little lives'; a mild oath 189 bespake you fair: spoke to you politely 192 halting: limping 193 othergates: otherwise 195 That's all one: it makes no difference 196 sot: 'fool'; possibly 'habitual drinker' 197 agone: ago 198 set: 'fixed' or 'gone down,' i.e. 'closed' 199 passy measures pavin: an eight-bar double-slow dance; F. panyn; cf. n. 201 havoc: cf. n. 203–4 be dress'd: have our wounds dressed 205 a coxcomb: a simpleton 206 a gull: a dupe 211 with wit and safety: with intelligent regard for my safety

212 a strange regard: an estranged look 216 habit: dress 217 A natural perspective, that is and is not; cf. n. 229 Of here and everywhere: of omnipresence 231 Of charity: in kindness 235 suited: dressed 236 suit: dress 239 dimension: form - grossly: materially, in the flesh 240 participate: partake, inherit 241 as the rest goes even; cf. n. 248 record: memory (stressed — ⏑ ⏑) 251 lets: hinders; cf. n. 254 jump: agree completely 257 weeds: clothes 263 But nature to her bias drew in that; cf. n. 266 a maid: i.e. a chaste man

Duke. Be not amaz'd; right noble is his blood.
If this be so, as yet the glass seems true,
I shall have share in this most happy wrack.
[To Viola.] Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times
Thou never should'st love woman like to me.
Viola. And all those sayings will I over swear
And all those swearings keep as true in soul
As doth that orbed continent the fire
That severs day from night.
Duke. Give me thy hand
And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds.
Viola. The captain that did bring me first on shore
Hath my maid's garments. He upon some action
Is now in durance at Malvolio's suit,
A gentleman and follower of my lady's.
Olivia. He shall enlarge him. Fetch Malvolio hither.
And yet alas, now I remember me,
They say, poor gentleman, he's much distract.

Enter Clown, with a letter, and Fabian.

A most extracting frenzy of mine own
From my remembrance clearly banish'd his.
How does he, sirrah?
Clown. Truly, madam, he holds Belzebub at the stave's end as well as a man in his case may do. Has here writ a letter to you. I should have given't you today morning. But as a madman's epistles are no gospels, so it skills not much when they are deliver'd.
Olivia. Open't and read it.
Clown. Look then to be well edified, when the fool delivers the madman. [Reads.] 'By the Lord, madam.'
Olivia. How now, art thou mad?
Clown. No, madam, I do but read madness. And your ladyship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow vox.
Olivia. Prethee read i' thy right wits.
Clown. So I do, madonna; but to read his right wits is to read thus. Therefore, perpend, my princess, and give ear.
Olivia. [To Fabian.] Read it you, sirrah.
Fabian. (Reads.) 'By the Lord, madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it. Though you have put me into darkness and given your drunken cousin rule over me, yet have I the benefit of my senses as well as your ladyship. I have your own letter that induced me to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not but to do myself much right, or you much shame. Think of me as you please. I leave my duty a little unthought of, and speak out of my injury.
'The Madly Us'd Malvolio.'
Olivia. Did he write this?
Clown. Ay, madam.
Duke. This savors not much of distraction.
Olivia. See him deliver'd, Fabrian; bring him hither.
[Exit Fabian.]
My lord, so please you, these things further thought on,
To think me as well a sister as a wife,
One day shall crown th' alliance on't, so please you,
Here at my house and at my proper cost.
Duke. Madam, I am most apt t'embrace your offer.
[To Viola.] Your master quits you; and for your service done him,
So much against the mettle of your sex,
So far beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you call'd me master for so long,
Here is my hand; you shall from this time be
Your master's mistress.
Olivia. A sister; you are she.

Enter [Fabian with] Malvolio.

Duke. Is this the madman?
Olivia. Ay, my lord, this same.
How now, Malvolio?
Malvolio. Madam, you have done me wrong,
Notorious wrong.
Olivia. Have I, Malvolio? No.
Malvolio. Lady, you have. Pray you peruse that letter.
You must not now deny it is your hand.
Write from it if you can, in hand or phrase,
Or say 'tis not your seal, not your invention.
You can say none of this. Well, grant it then;
And tell me in the modesty of honor,
Why you have given me such clear lights of favor,
Bade me come smiling and cross-garter'd to you,
To put on yellow stockings and to frown
Upon Sir Toby and the lighter people;
And, acting this in an obedient hope,
Why have you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,
Kept in a dark house, visited by the priest,
And made the most notorious geck and gull
That e'er invention play'd on? Tell me why?
Olivia. Alas, Malvolio, this is not my writing,
Though I confess much like the character;
But out of question, 'tis Maria's hand.
And now I do bethink me, it was she
First told me thou wast mad; then cam'st in smiling,
And in such form which here were presuppos'd
Upon thee in the letter. Prethee be content.
This practice hath most shrewdly pass'd upon thee;
But when we know the grounds and authors of it,
Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and the judge
Of thine own cause.
Fabian. Good madam, hear me speak,
And let no quarrel nor no brawl to come,
Taint the condition of this present hour,
Which I have wond'red at. In hope it shall not,
Most freely I confess myself and Toby
Set this device against Malvolio here,
Upon some stubborn and uncourteous parts
We had conceiv'd against him. Maria writ

267 amaz'd: dazed 268 the glass: the perspective glass of 1.217 above 269 wrack: wreck (the shipwreck) 272 over swear: swear over again 274 orbed: continent; cf. n. 279 some action: some legal charge 280 in durance: imprisoned 282 enlarge him: free him 284 distract: distracted, insane 285 extracting: distracting 286 his: my remembrance of him (Malvolio) 287 sirrah: 'sir,' used to an inferior 288 he hold Belzebub at the stave's end: he hold the devil off; cf. n. 291 it skills not much: not much it makes not much difference 297 And: if 298 vox: 'voice', i.e. a loud voice or the voice of a madman. 300 madonna: my lady 301 perpend: ponder, consider 309, 310 I leave . . . my injury: cf. n.

317 a sister: i.e. a sister-in-law 319 proper cost: own expense 320 apt: prone to, ready 321 quits you: releases you 323 mettle: quality of temperament 337 from it: differently from it 340 in the modesty of honor: with regard for the propriety of (your) honor 344 lighter: lesser 345 acting: refers to Malvolio 348 geck: fool, dupe gull: dupe 355, 356 presuppos'd Upon thee: put upon you beforehand 357 shrewdly pass'd upon thee: maliciously been put upon you 362 nor no: 'nor,' an emphatic negative 367 Upon: on account of stubborn: haughty parts: personal attributes, characteristics

The letter at Sir Toby's great importance,
In recompense whereof he hath married her.
How with a sportful malice it was follow'd
May rather pluck on laughter than revenge,
If that the injuries be justly weigh'd
That have on both sides pass'd.

Olivia. Alas poor fool, how have they bafflʼd thee!

Clown. Why, 'some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrown upon them.' I was one, sir, in this interlude, one Sir Topas, sir; but that's all one. 'By the Lord, fool, I am not mad.' But do you remember, 'Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal? And you smile not, he's gagg'd'? And thus the whirligig of time brings in his revenges.

Malvolio. I'll be reveng'd on the whole pack of you!

[Exit.]

Olivia. He hath been most notoriously abus'd.

Duke. Pursue him and entreat him to a peace.
He hath not told us of the captain yet.
When that is known and golden time convents,
A solemn combination shall be made
Of our dear souls. Meantime, sweet sister,
We will not part from hence. Cesario, come
(For so you shall be while you are a man);
But when in other habits you are seen,
Orsino's mistress and his fancy's queen.

Exeunt [all but the Clown].

Clown sings.

When that I was and a little tiny boy,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
A foolish thing was but a toy,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came to man's estate,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
'Gainst knaves and thieves men shut their gate,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came, alas, to wive,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
By swaggering could I never thrive,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came unto my beds,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
With tosspots still had drunken heads,
For the rain it raineth every day.

A great while ago the world begun,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain:
But that's all one, our play is done,
And we'll strive to please you every day.

[Exit.]

FINIS

369 importance: importunity 371 it: the plot 372 pluck on: draw on, urge on 375 bafflʼd thee: disgraced you publicly 378 interlude: an early form of dramatic comedy or entertainment 381 And: if whirligig: circling course 386 the captain: Antonio, in jail 387 convents: comes together, suits 392 habits: clothing

394–413 When that I was . . . to please you every day; cf. n. 394 and a: the and is superfluous; cf. n. tiny: F. tine 398–408 But when I came to man's estate . . . With tosspots still had drunken heads; cf. n. 395, 399, 403 With hey, ho, the wind and the rain; F. with hey ho, etc. 397, 401, 405 For the rain it raineth every day; F. for the raine, etc. 411 With hey, ho, the wind and the rain; F. hey hot, etc. 414 And we'll strive to please you every day; cf. n.

Notes

[The Actors' . . . nearby]: A list of characters and the location of the scene do not appear in the First Folio. Rowe (1709) first gave the characters. Both the names Orsino and Valentine appear to have been suggested by a visit of Don Valentino Orsino, Duke of Bracciano, to the English Court in January 1600. Tradition and, less certainly, the text, make Sir Toby the uncle of Olivia. The name of Feste the clown is the contemporary form of feast, celebration, and is thus related to the title of the play.

Twelfth Night or What You Will. The Folio spells the title 'twelfe,' the old form and pronunciation of the ordinal. Twelfth Night is the night of Epiphany, January 6, the twelfth day after Christmas. Traditionally commemorating the Magi and the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles, the holiday marked the end of the Christmas festivities. The title may mean that the play was written for one particular Twelfth Night celebration, perhaps at court, or that the spirit of the play is consonant with the Christmas holidays. 'What You Will' simply enforces the air of lightness of 'Twelfth Night.'

I.i.1–3. If music . . . so die. If music is the food for love, play on to excess so that love's appetite for music, having too much, may sicken and die. It is most improbable that the Duke is wishing that his love for Olivia may also die.

I.i.9–14. O spirit . . . in a minute. O spirit of love, how alive and fresh you are in that, despite your power of receiving, you still devour things as does the sea. Nothing goes into love of whatever value and high esteem but that it falls into belittlement and low value at once. The central idea of the passage is the leveling power of love.

I.i.14. fancy. In Shakespearean English the term has a number of meanings and is most commonly used in psychology and esthetics. The most probable meaning here is the imagination or the mind of the man in love.

I.i.19. the noblest. His nobest hart (deer) and 'heart,' Olivia.

I.i.22. hart. A second pun on hart and 'heart.' The specific reference is to the story of Acteon who saw Diana bathing naked. As punishment, she transformed him into a hart and pursued him to his death with his own hounds. Shakespeare's most probable source is Ovid's Metamorphoses, Bk. 3, ll. 143–252 (Loeb ed.).

I.i.36. golden shaft. Cupid had two arrows; one was of gold, had a sharp point, and kindled love; the other was of lead, had a blunt point, and brought dislike. See the Metamorphoses, Bk. I,ll. 469–71 (Loeb ed.).

I.ii.4. Elysium. Viola picks a word that sounds like 'Illyria.'

I.ii.15. Arion. Orion of the Folio is either a phonetic spelling or a misreading of Shakespeare, the copyist, or the printer. The lines closely follow Ovid's account in the Fasti, 2, 113–16 (Loeb ed.). Arion, a bard on a voyage, jumped overboard to escape the sailors who would have murdered him for his money. A dolphin offered his back, and thereon the poet paid for his passage by playing on his lyre.

I.ii.43. delivered. Viola does not wish to be delivered or disclosed to the world; she is an unprotected woman in a strange country and she will remain in disguise until an opportune time for revealing her name and proper position in society.

I.ii.63. to my wit. The word has a large number of meanings in Shakespearean English. Here 'cleverness,' 'resourcefulness,' and 'intelligence' are the most probable synonyms.

I.iii.6. except before excepted. The legalism, exceptis excipiendis, 'those things expected which have been excepted,' was a phrase commonly employed in the writing of leases and allowed for conditions which had already been set up prior to the writing of the lease.

I.iii.11. And. Alternate form of 'an,' to mean 'if.' 'And' with this meaning is the standard spelling of the First Folio. 'An' is more common before 1600.

I.iii.20. ducat. The silver ducat of Italy was worth about 3*s.* 6*d.* in Shakespeare's time.

I.iii.26. almost natural. A natural is an idiot. Maria is punning on the word.

I.iii.37. parish top. Townships and parishes kept large tops which were made to spin by being whipped with eel skins. The origin of the practice may be in religious ritual; at any rate, there was communal top-spinning. See Alice B. Gomme's The Traditional Games of England (2 vols. 1894, 1898), 2, 301–3. Evidence does not support Steevens' statement that the purpose of the top was 'that the peasants might be kept warm by exercise, and out of mischief, while they could not work.' Nares' Glossary (ed. 1859) lists references but without confirmation of Steevens.

I.iii.38. wench. The use here is familiar, not derogatory.

I.iii.38. Castiliano, vulgo. The exact meaning is unknown. Sir Toby wants Maria to be soberly polite to Sir Andrew. The Castilian people had a special reputation for politeness. Hanmer emended the phrase to Castiliano volto, which he glosses 'her most civil and worthy looks.'

I.iii.43–48. Accost . . . Accost. Sir Toby tells Sir Andrew to greet Maria; Sir Andrew does not know the meaning of accost and thinks it is Maria's name. Maria is a chambermaid (1. 45) only in the sense of 'lady-in-waiting' to Olivia.

I.iii.62. butt'ry bar. The buttery bar was the bar, usually in the cellar, where the butts or barrels of liquor were stored. The word is unrelated to 'butter.'

I.iii.64. It's dry, sir. Maria begins a series of puns with several meanings for dry, namely, 'witty,' 'in need of a drink,' and 'impotent' or 'old.' A moist hand was believed to be a sign of youth and of liberality in money and love. Sir Andrew misses the point, but Maria continues the pun with 'at my fingers' ends' and 'I am barren.'

I.iii.75, 76. great . . . wit. The Englishman's diet was traditionally heavy and the quantity of beef in it was supposed to make him dull-witted.

I.iii.83. bear-baiting. An amusement in which a bear was tied or chained to a stake and unmuzzled dogs were set on it. The sport was extremely popular among all classes and was commonly carried on in the theaters.

I.iii.86. curl by nature. Sir Toby is punning on 'art' as opposed to 'nature' and probably on 'tongs' (curling tongs) and 'tongues' in 1. 82.

I.iii.107. back-trick. Minor verbal quibbles of an obscene sort probably occur in caper, mutton, and back-trick.

I.iii.111. Mistress Mall's picture. Attempts to identify Mall as Maria or as Mall Catpurse, the criminal Mary Frith, born probably about 1584, are not convincing.

I.iii.113. sink-a-pace. The obvious pun on the word depends on 'make water.'

I.iii.118. dam'd color'd. There is no satisfactory explanation of the phrase. Rowe's emendation, flame-color'd, is commonly accepted. There is the possibility that dam'd may mean 'dark' or 'black.'

I.iii.118. sit. The two verbs 'sit' and 'set' were confused in Shakespearean as in modern English. 'Sit' is from Old English sittan; 'set' is from Old English settan.

I.iii.121. Taurus. The twelve signs of the Zodiac, named after astral constellations and related to time, were supposed to govern various parts of the human body. By consulting as astrological almanac the physician might determine the proper treatment for disease in a particular part of the body at a particular time of the year. The bull Taurus, according to some authorities, governed sides and heart; according to others, neck and throat. But Sir Toby's speech should not be taken seriously.

I.iv.15. doors. The plural is perhaps derived from the doors, commonly divided, of the Elizabethan house.

I.iv.36. thy constellation. According to astrological theory the character of a person was determined at the moment of his birth by the 'constellation' or arrangement of stars at that time.

I.iv.43, 44. woo . . . woo . . . would. The quibble depends on the fact that 'would' was sometimes pronounced like 'wooed' in Modern English.

I.v.5. to fear no colors. Maria's interpretation of the proverbial phrase suggests that no colors may have meant originally 'no flags,' and thus came from army usage. The clown is punning on 'collar,' the hangman's rope.

I.v.13, 14. Well, God . . . talents. May God let those who are intelligent use their intelligence, and may fools (both professional fools and foolish people) use their abilities. Talents means 'native abilities' and, by a pun on 'talons,' 'claws' or 'guile.' In addition, if Feste is using the northern pronunciation of fools, there is a pun on 'fools' and 'fowls' to match 'talents' and 'talons.'

I.v.18 away. There is the remote possibility of a quibble on 'a whey,' that is, 'a turning sour' from the summer.

I.v.25, 26. If Sir Toby . . . Illyria. If Sir Toby would stop drinking, you would make as clever a wife (for him) as any in Illyria.

I.v.42–45. Anything . . . virtue. Anything that is cured (and patched) is but patched; virtue that sins is mixed with sin, and evil that reforms is mixed with good. That is, all men are a mixture of good and bad. The clown is parodying formal logic.

I.v.45, 46. As there . . . flower. Every man is married to luck; when his luck is bad, he is betrayed, he is a cuckold. And beauty (Olivia's beauty) is transitory. The clown is saying that all men and women must resign themselves to fate.

I.v.50. motley. The clown's motley was of pieces of cloth of different colors, or of a cloth woven of threads of mixed colors.

I.v.82. zanies. The understudies, imitators and butts of professional fools. The term is also a snynonym for 'clown' or 'fool.'

I.v.86. no slander in an allow'd fool. A fool who is allowed or privileged to practice his foolery (part of which is to insult people) cannot be guilty of slander.

I.v.111. A plague. Sir Toby traditionally belches before these words.

I.v.137. sheriff's post . . . supporter to a bench. Carved and painted posts were put by the doors of town officials. Supporter is used in the sense of 'prop' or 'post.'

I.v.SD. Enter Viola. The First Folio reading of Enter Violenta is a possible reflection of Italian background for the narrative but more probably a misreading by the compositor of 'Viola enter.'

I.v.158. if this be. A typical example of the present subjunctive, now more restricted in use.

I.v.169. my profound heart. My deeply penetrating lady. 'Heart' is a common form of address to a lady.

I.v.183–185. 'Tis not that time . . . dialogue. The moon has not now influenced me enough to make me a party to skipping over and confusing a conversation. The moon was believed to produce lunacy, or moon-madness. The common addition of so after in is unnecessary.

I.v.188. giant. The traditional guard of the lady in medieval romances. The word is applied ironically to Maria who is small. Other references to her size are Penthesilea (II.3.159); little villian (II.5.11); and youngest wren of mine (III.2.58).

I.v.219. in grain. The grain was red dyestuff consisting of the dried bodies of the insect coccus cacti.

I.v.227. item. The term, adverbial in origin, meant 'also,' 'likewise'; it was used for introducing a new article, fact, or statement in a formal list.

I.v.276. thou art. Olivia in her soliloquy shifts from the formal 'you' to the intimate 'thou' as she thinks of Cesario and her love for him.

I.v.287. County's. Words ending in t tended to keep the old plural and possessive in es. This fact resulted in the back formation, 'county.'

I.v.295. Mine eye . . . mind. My eye has taken too favorable an impression (of Cesario) for my intellect to approve.

II.i.1. Nor . . . not. The double negative is an emphatic negative in Shakespearean English, as in Old English and in modern dialectal English.

II.i.3, 4. My stars . . . distemper yours. The arrangement of the stars at the moment of one's birth was thought to determine one's future destiny. During one's life an examination of those stars would tell whether the time was propitious. Thus Sebastian is saying: 'The astrological interpretation of my stars is bad; my bad fate might perhaps infect your fate.'

II.ii.SD. Enter . . . at several doors. The scene is near Olivia's house. The stage direction means that Viola and Malvolio enter each by one of the different doors at the rear of the Shakespearean stage. The usual stage had two doors, right and left, with a third possible entrance through the curtain under the balcony at the center of the back or inner stage.

II.ii.25. pregnant enemy. 'Pregnant' to mean 'strong' is common before and during Shakespeare's time. In ll. 26 and 27 there is the possible suggestion of Satan disguised as a serpent to seduce Eve.

II.ii.28, 29. Alas . . . such we be. The First Folio is commonly emended as follows: 'Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we, For such as we are made of, such we be.' The alterations are attractive but unnecessary to a satisfactory meaning of the passage: 'Alas, O, frailty is the cause, not woman; on account of the way that we women are made, since we are of that sort.' The two final clauses are close to repetitious, and the repetition of such is a rhetorical trick which obscures the syntax.

II.iii.2. diluculo surgere. Diluculo surgere saluberrimum est, 'To get up at dawn is most healthful.' The maxim is from the Latin grammar of William Lily and John Colet, first printed in 1549. The book came to be known as the Eton Latin Grammar, and in its numerous editions and revisions has been a standard text for English schoolboys into the 20th century.

II.iii.7, 8. Does not . . . elements. It was believed that life depended on the correct mixture of the four elements of the universe, air, fire, earth, and water. Note the plural subject and singular verg.

II.iii.14, 15. the picture of We Three. A picture or signboard at an inn with the heads of two fools displayed, and the inscription: 'We three loggerheads be.' The onlooker is the third.

I.iii.23–25. I did impeticos thy gratillity . . . bottle-ale houses. The meaning is obscure. By impeticos, the Clown means 'put into the pocket of my long gown or petticoat.' Clowns frequently wore long coats. Gratillity is simply an improvised diminutive for 'gratuity.' The following is a possible paraphrase of the passage: 'I did pocket your small gratuity, for Malvolio's nose can soon smell out money; my lady-love has elegant tastes, and the Myrmidons (where we drink) are no cheap drinking houses.' That is, the Clown is saying that he can use the money. Whipstock is 'whip handle.'

II.iii.34. O mistress mine. The Clown's song, either by Shakespeare or by an unknown author, was first printed in Thomas Morley's Consort Lessons (1599).

II.iii.52. To hear . . . contagion. If we can hear with our noses, the fool's voice and breath are pleasant to listen to but bad to smell.

II.iii.54, 55. draw three souls out of one weaver. Weavers were famous for their singing and their love of song.

II.iii.58. 'Thou knave.' The words of the catch are: 'Hold thy peace, thou knave; and I prithee hold thy peace.' H. H. Furness in A New Variorum, p. 118, gives the words and music. The earliest printing which he reports is in Deuteromelia (1609).

II.iii.68. Catayan. Chinese, a person from Cathay. They were believed to be dishonest and shiftless.

II.iii.69. a Peg-a-Ramsey. The reference appears to be to the coarse and immoral heroine of an old ballad 'Bonny Peggy Ramsey,' the words and music of which are reprinted in Thomas D'Urfey's Wit and Mirth (6 vols. 1719–20), 5, 139. For a discussion of the music see William Chappell's Old English Popular Music (2 vols. 1893), 1, 248. The ballad begins:

Bonny Peggy Ramsey that any Man may se,
And bonny was her Face, with a fair freckel'd Eye . . .

Sir Toby is thus saying ironically of Malvolio, who is about to enter, that he is handsome, coarse, and immoral.

II.iii.69. 'Three merry men be we'. The words of the song perhaps appear in George Peele's The Old Wives' Tale (1595), Act II:

Three merry men, and three merry men,
And three merry men be we;
I in the wood, and thou on the ground,
And Jack sleeps in the tree.

Furness in A New Variorum, p. 120, prints words and music.

II.iii.71. 'There dwelt a man.' 'The Constancy of Susanna' is a ballad on the story of Susanna and the Elders:

There dwelt a man in Babylon,
of reputation great by fame;
He tooke to wife a faire woman,
Susanna she was call'd by name;
A woman faire and vertuous:
Lady, lady,
Why should wee not to her learne thus to live godly?

It is reprinted in the Roxburghe Ballads, ed. W. Chappell (9 vols. 1871–99) 1, 190–3.

II.iii.76. 'O the twelfe day of December.' The phrase is probably from a lost ballad. It is unlikely that Sir Toby is misquoting either 'Musselburgh Field' (the suggestion of G. L. Kittredge) or 'The Twelve Days of Christmas' (the suggestion of I. B. Cauthen, Jr.) 'Musselburgh Field' begins: 'On the tenth day of December . . .'; it is reprinted in F. J. Child's The English and Scottish Popular Ballads (5 vols. 1882–94), 3, 378–9. 'The Twelve Days of Christmas' begins: 'On the twelfth day of Christmas . . .'; it is reprinted in Cecil J. Sharp's and Charles L. Marson's Folk Songs from Somerset (5 vols. 1908–09, 2, 52–5, 74–5.

II.iii.91. 'Fairwell, dear heart.' From 'Corydon's Farewell to Phyllis,' a song in Robert Jones' First Booke of Songes and Ayres (1600), ed. E. H. Fellowes (1925), pp. 25–5. Sir Toby and the Clown sing snatches from the first two stanzas only:

Farewell, dear love, since thou wilt needs be gon,
Mine eyes do show my life is almost done.
Nay, I will never die, so long as I can spy.
There be many moe though that she do go.
There be many moe, I fear not.
Why, then, let her go, I care not!

Farewell, farewell, since this I find is true,
I will not spend more time in wooing you.
But I will seeke elsewhere if I may find her there.
Shall I bid her go? What and if I do?
Shall I bid her go, and spare not?
O no, no, no, no, no, I dare not.

II.iii.106. cakes and ale. The traditional refreshment for holidays and saints' days.

II.iii.107. St. Anne. The mother of the Virgin Mary. The oath is colorless. Unconvincing efforts have been made to connect the Clown's use of the oath with St. Anne as the giver of 'wealth and living great' on the basis of an unidentified quotation in Robert Chambers' Book of Days (2 vols. 1863–64), 2, 389.

II.iii.107. ginger. Used to spice ale, ginger was believed to reduce drunkenness. Ginger was also esteemed as an aphrodisiac.

II.iii.109, 110. rub your chain with crumbs. As steward of the house, Malvolio wears a chain with keys. The chain survives on the wine steward in the modern restaurant. Toby tells Malvolio: 'Polish your chain with bread crumbs,' i.e. 'Get back into your proper place,' 'Mind your own business.'

II.iii.115. as good a deed as to drink. A traditional comparison.

II.iii.127. a kind of Puritan. Maria means that Malvolio is oversolemn and overpunctilious, two characteristics associated with the modern use of the word 'Puritan.' Sir Andrew misunderstands her and thinks that she has said that Malvolio is of the reforming or dissenting party in the Church, that is, that he is not a good Church of England man. Sir Toby then protests the harshness of Sir Andrew's judgment and Maria (ll. 133ff.) explains that Malvolio is not a Puritan but simply a conceited fool. Malvolio has already (II.3.78–82) done something which no stage Puritan would have done: he has spoken slightingly of tinkers and coziers (cobblers), traditional mainstays of the dissenting sects. In point of fact, Malvolio does not conform to the type of the stage Puritan common in the drama of the period. Malvolio has the sobriety and the conceit of the stage Puritan, but in the further complexities of his character he goes as far beyond the stock figure as Falstaff goes beyond the miles gloriosus, the conventional braggart soldier of Roman comedy.

II.iii.135. swarths. A 'swarth' or 'swath' is the space covered by the sweep of the mower's scythe in cutting one side of a field.

II.iii.156, 157. let the fool make a third. In the plot Fabian and not Feste makes the third. The change may be an oversight on Shakespeare's part, or an indication of revision.

II.iv.37. worn. Hanmer's emendation, won, is commonly accepted.

II.iv.58. Fie, away. Rowe's emendation, Fly away, is commonly accepted.

II.iv.62, 63. My part . . . share it. My portion of death, no lover so true did share (with me).

II.iv.75. pleasure will be paid. The line is proverbial. See The Oxford Dictionary of English Proverbs (1948), p. 507.

II.iv.78. the melancholy god. Possibly Saturn, but more probably the Clown is only saying that the Duke enjoys his melancholy.

II.iv.80–82. I would have . . . voyage of nothing. I would have men of such fickleness make a voyage, that they might have business everywhere and intend to go everywhere; for that's what always brings back a good cargo of nothing. I.e. if you aim at everything, you achieve nothing.

II.iv.94. I cannot. The next line, 'Sooth, but you must [be so answer'd],' justifies the emendation.

II.iv.100, 101. woman's sides Can bide. Note the omission of the relative, common in early Modern English.

II.iv.105, 106. No motion . . . and revolt. No genuine movement of the liver, the seat of true love, but a mere physical sensation in the palate which is subject to excess, satiety, and disgust. The singular subject with a plural verb is not uncommon in Shakespearean English.

II.iv.122–124. And with . . . smiling at grief. Green and yellow are colors commonly associated with sadness and decay. The sense of the passage is that Viola's sister sat calmly, like a statue of Patience, and smiled in the midst of her grief. It is possible that the figure of Patience was suggested by Chaucer's Parliament of Fowls, ll. 242–3:

> Dame Pacience syttynge there I fond,
> With face pale, upon an hil of sond . . .

Both Viola's sister and Chaucer's Patience are pale and are seated. In addition, Griselda of Chaucer's 'Clerk's Tale' is a monumental figure of patience in the face of suffering similar to that of Viola's sister.

II.iv.126. Our shows . . . will. Our display of love is more than our actual will to love.

II.v.2. a scruple. Literally, one twenty-fourth of an ounce, apothecaries' weight.

II.v.3. let me . . . melancholy. The sense of the passage hinges on a pun. 'Boil' and 'bile' were pronounced alike, and black bile produced melancholy. The point may be that poisoners were boiled to death, but that melancholy was a cold and not a hot humor.

II.v.6, 7. You know . . . a bear-baiting here. Malvolio's dislike of bear-baiting connects him with the satirical portrayals of Puritans. But the trait does not make him a dissenter; it only emphasizes his puritanical or 'precise' mien.

II.v.11, 12. my metal of India. The East Indies were the fabled source for gold in the period. The First Folio reads Mettle, a common variant of 'metal.' There is probably a pun on 'metal' and 'mettle.'

II.v.19. trout . . . tickling. It was believed that trout could be caught by tickling them about the gills.

II.v.22. complexion. The mixture of the four humors, blood, bile, black bile, and phlegm, in the body. The predominance of one humor produced a personality of that humor. Thus the Duke Orsino might be said to be melancholic because of a predominance of black bile.

II.v.29. Toby. This line and Sir Toby's 'Peace, peace' (l. 33) are commonly assigned to Fabian.

II.v.34. The Lady of the Strachy. Her identity is unknown, and no satisfactory emendation of Strachy has been suggested. The meaning of the passage is obvious: Malvolio has in mind some story of a lady of high position who married one of the servants. The following are the more important of the emendations which have been proposed: Trachy or Thrace (Warburton); starchy or linen (Stevens); Tragedy (Bulloch); county (Kinnear); Malfi, or the Duchess of Malfi (Dunlap and Luce). However, Charles J. Sisson has discovered evidence suggesting that the reference is satirical and to the King's Revels company, and that it was interpolated after 1616.

II.v.36. Fie on him, Jezebel. 'Fie' is an exclamation of disgust. Sir Andrew says: 'Fie on Malvolio, who is a Jezebel.' Jezebel was the haunghty wife of Ahab. See 1 Kings 16 and 19 and 2 Kings 9.

II.v.48. a demure travel of regard. Here and elsewhere Malvolio's English is pedantically heavy.

II.v.55. my—some rich jewel. The dash is a necessary addition to the unpunctuated phrase in the First Folio. Malvolio is about to say 'my chain.'

II.v.58. with cars. The reference appears to be to a method of torture or execution in which the victim was bound to cars or carts which then went in opposite directions. Compare '. . . but a team of horse shall not pluck that from me,' in Two Gentlemen of Verona, III.1.264, or the phrase, current to the present, 'Wild horses cannot get that out of me.'

II.v.75. woodcock . . . gin. The woodcock was proverbially a stupid bird which walked easily into the gin or snare. Gin is a shortened form of 'engine.'

II.v.76, 77. the spirit . . . to him. May the spirit of whims suggest to him that he read it aloud. Humors here does not seem to have the usual medical meaning, nor does it mean 'wit' or 'merriment.'

II.v.79, 80. her very C's . . . P's. Malvolio happens to spell out two Elizabethan obscenities. There are no C's or P's in the address of the letter as he reads it.

II.v.83. By your leave, wax. The letter would be folded upon itself and sealed, and would have no envelope. Malvolio apologetically asks the seal for permission to break it. The request is conventional.

II.v.84. Lucrece. The beautiful and chaste wife of Tarquinius Collatinus was raped by Sextus, son of Tarquin, king of Rome. Lucrece told her father and her husband of what had happened and then committed suicide. The story is the subject of Shakespeare's poem, The Rape of Lucrece (1594).

II.v.91. The numbers alter'd. Numbers may be a contraction of 'number is.'

II.v.93. brock. The more common phrase is 'stinking brock.' There is also a tradition that the badger is conceited and noisy.

II.v.98. fustian. Originally a coarse cloth made of cotton and flax.

II.v.106. And with . . . at it. The falcon—here a staniel or inferior kind of hawk—checks when it leaves the pursuit of the game it has been sent after and follows other prey. Sir Toby is saying: 'How quickly the fool leaves the truth and goes off on a false trail.'

II.v.111, 112. Sowter . . . fox. The dog will bark on the trail, however, though the deception is as plain as the smell of a fox. 'Souter' or 'sowter' means 'maker or mender of shoes' and is used of any bungler, botcher, or ignorant workman. Sowter is here the name of the bungling dog.

II.v.115. faults. Fabian is punning. He means not only 'breaks in the scent' but also that Malvolio is excellent at getting himself into faults or difficulties.

II.v.116, 117. But then . . . probation. But there is no consistency in what follows. It becomes strained under testing.

II.v.119. And O shall end. And the trick will end with Malvolio's exclaiming 'O' in disgust. Obscure verbal quibbles of an indecent sort occur from l.116 through 120.

II.v.122. any eye behind you. It is unlikely that there is here any reference, as some editors have supposed, to Chaucer's figure of Prudence with three eyes (Troilus and Cressida, bk. V. ll. 744–5):

> Prudence, allas, oon of thyne eyen thre
> Me lakked alwey, ere that I come here!

II.v.125. and yet . . . bow to me. And yet, if I were to force the meaning of this 'M. O. A. I' a little, it would indicate me.

II.v.128, 129. born . . . achieve. The emendations make the passage consistent with III.4.39 and 43, and with V.1.376.

II.v.132. cast . . . fresh. Cast off your humble manner as a snake casts off his old skin, and appear new.

II.v.133. tang . . . state. Sound out with theories of statecraft. Tang also means 'to taste,' 'to smack.'

II.v.136. cross-garter'd. The garters held up the stockings or attached the breeches to the stockings. Cross-gartering was an eccentric fashion in which the garters were crossed both above and below the knee.

II.v.140. alter services. In addition to the 'services' of the steward, it may be that Maria has cleverly suggested the 'services' of the courtly lover to his lady.

II.v.140–142. Fortunate-Unhappy. Compare 'Fortunatus Infelix,' a common posy or short motto used as an inscription for a ring, picture, poem, or emblem.

II.v.143. politic authors. The polliticke of the Folio possibly indicates the pronunciation.

II.v.152. Jove. The use of the word here and elsewhere suggests alteration in the text after 1606 and that, consequently, the text of the First Folio is later than 1606. A statute of 1606 forbade the profane use of God's name on the stage. The Clown Feste speaks of Jove in I.5.104 and III.1.43, but the reference is appropriate to his intelligence and character. Malvolio's use of Jove and its use in several other places in the play (II.5.157; III.4.71,78; and particularly IV.2.10) sound strange or unnatural. It is probable that the original text read God.

II.v.160. the Sophy. The brothers Sir Robert and Sir Anthony Shirley had gone in 1599 on an expedition to Persia. Sir Anthony had left Persia after five months; Sir Robert had stayed. An account of the trip appeared in Sir A. Shierlies Journey Overland to Venice (1600). The 'pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy' may refer to reports of fabulous wealth to be had from the shah.

II.v.167. Wilt . . . neck. Sir Toby offers to submit utterly to Maria's wit in the fashion of victims of military conquest.

II.v.175. Like aqua-vite with a midwife. There is no certain explanation of the phrase. Either midwives used distilled liquor to induce labor, or midwives by tradition drank excessively.

III.i.20. wanton. There is the remote possibility of a quibble on 'want one,' i.e. 'want a name.'

III.i.21. since bonds disgrac'd them. I.e. since a man's word is no longer as good as his bond, mankind has been disgraced or put to shame by the formal and necessary pledges (bonds) imposed by law.

III.i.38. I would. Shakespearean English, like modern American English, is not strict in the use of 'would' and 'should.'

III.i.40. your wisdom. An ironic variation on the conventional title of address, 'Your worship.'

III.i.50, 51. Pandarus . . . Cressida . . . Troilus. Troilus, a son of Priam, a king of Troy, loved Cressida of Troy. Cressida's uncle, Pandarus, acted as a go-between and Cressida returned Troilus' love. In an exchange of prisoners between the Greeks and the Trojans, Cressida was sent to the Greek camp to join her father Calchas who had fled to the Greeks. In the Greek camp Diomede courted Cressida and supplanted Troilus in her affections. Troilus and Diomede fought inconclusively, and finally Troilus was killed in battle by Achilles. Shakespeare's Troilus and Cressida was produced about 1602; he was familiar with a number of versions of the story, most notably Chaucer's.

III.i.54. Cressida was a beggar. Robert Henryson (d. 1506) continued the story of Cressida in The Testament of Cressid. Diomede deserted Cressida who became a harlot in the Greek camp. The gods afflicted her with leprosy and she had to beg by the roadside. The victorious Troilus rode by, but he did not recognize her. She learned who he was and, after having sent him a ring he had given her, died.

III.i.72. encounter. Here and with taste (l. 76) Sir Toby is playing pedantically with his words.

III.i.80. gait. The gate of the Folio suggests that a pun was possibly intended.

III.i.96, 97. 'Twas never . . . compliment. The world has never been a happy one since the pretense of humility (with the word servant) came to be a convention of polite behavior. The phrase 'merry world' has the force of 'good old days.'.

III.i.109. music from the spheres. It was believed that the universe consisted of a series of spheres, one inside the other, and all centered on the earth. The spheres revolved, carrying within them the various heavenly bodies, and giving off a divine harmony inaudible to man.

III.i.116, 117. To force . . . none of yours. That I forced on you by a shameful trick a ring which you knew was not yours at all.

III.i.118, 119. at the stake . . . unmuzzled thoughts. The figure is another reference to the popular sport of bear-baiting. The verb 'to bait' means 'to cause to bite.'

III.i.120. The line is irregular: it consists of an alexandrine (twelve syllables of six iambics) with an extra unaccented syllable at the end. J. Dover Wilson in his edition (1930) rearranges the lines:

To one of your receiving enough is shown,
A cypress, not a bosom, hides my heart:
So let me bear you speak.
Viola. I pity you.
Olivia. That's a degree to love.
Viola. No, not a grise;
For 'tis a vulgar proof,
That very oft we pity enemies.

III.i.122. Hides . . . speak. The first syllable is accented and is followed by four iambics, a total of nine syllables. This type of headless line is common in the earlier drama and there is no compelling reason for regularizing it by emending Hides to 'Hideth.'

III.i.127. 'tis time to smile 'agen. I.e. it is time for me to smile once more and to forget you, if you are my enemy or if you can only pity me.

III.i.130. the lion . . . the wolf. The lion is the noble Duke Orsino; the wolf is the cruel Cesario.

III.i.135, 136. due west. Then westward ho. Olivia's implication in the phrase 'due west' is that she is dismissing Cesario forever from her favor; she sends Cesario toward the setting sun. Cesario (Viola) answers with a more cheerful phrase, 'Westward ho!' The Thames boatman cried 'Westward ho!' and 'Eastword ho!' to prospective passengers to indicate the direction of the next trip on the river.

III.i.141, 142. That you do think . . . the same of you. Viola says that Olivia thinks she is in love with a man, and that she is not. Olivia, not understanding the statement, and thinking that Viola has meant either that Olivia is not really in love, or that she is mad, answers that she (Olivia) believes the same thing of Viola ('you do think you are not what you are'), that is, that Viola really does love Olivia, or that Viola is mad to reject Olivia's love.

III.i.155–158. Do not extort . . . better. Do not extract by force your arguments from the fact that, because I woo you, you have no reason to accept. But rather make your logic firm with this reasonable proposition: love which is sought is good, but love which is given unsought is better.

III.ii.2. venom. Here and elsewhere Sir Toby plays with words by using them out of their ordinary context.

III.ii.6. orchard. From Old English ortyeard. The first element ort- is probably from the Latin [h]ortus, 'garden'; -yeard is the modern 'yard.'

III.ii.7. see. The Folio is commonly emended to see thee.

III.ii.17. dormouse. The dormouse was traditionally a sleepy animal.

III.ii.22. double gilt. The double gilt or gilding (a double dipping or plating of an object by a goldsmith) was the opportunity, doubly golden, to prove superiority both as a lover and as a fighter.

III.ii.24. an icicle on a Dutchman's beard. The phrase may be connected with the voyages, famous around 1600, of the Dutchman Barentz to the Arctic regions in 1596. An account by Gerritt de Veer had appeared in Amsterdam in 1598 and was entered in English in the Stationers' Register in 1598 (ed. E. Arber, 3, 118): '. . . A true description of Three voyages by sea . . . and of the feirce Beares and other Sea monsters, and marveylous could, and howe in the last voyage, the shippe is besett in Iyce . . . by Jerrett De Veer . . .'

III.ii.27. Brownist. A member of the religious sect founded by Robert Browne (1550?–1633?). Browne opposed both the Episcopal and the Presbyterian forms of church government and advocated the Independent or Congregationalist form. He preached separation around 1578–80, but he later submitted to the Church of England and for forty years was a rector in Northamptonshire.

III.ii.38, 39. If thou thou'st him. 'Thou' corresponded to the French tu and German du, proper for addressing children, close relatives, friends, and inferiors, but an insult when used with strangers.

III.ii.41. the bed of Ware. The great bed of Ware is a 16th-century carved oak bed, ten feet nine inches square. It was one of the sights of Shakespeare's time and is referred to in a number of contemporary plays. The bed is now in the Victoria and Albert Museum, London.

III.ii.42. gall. An excrescence produced on the oak by the action of insects. Oak galls were used in the manufacture of ink. The pun is on gall 'bitterness.'

III.ii.43. goose-pen. The implication is that Sir Andrew's style will be silly.

III.ii.46. dear manikin. In the phrase there is the suggestion of 'puppet' or artist's lay figure to be twisted and manipulated at will.

III.ii.54. blood in his liver. It was believed that the liver was the seat of courage; blood in the liver produced courage. Compare 'lily-livered,' meaning 'cowardly.'

III.ii.58. youngest wren of mine. Sir Toby means that Maria is young and small in stature; the wren is a particularly small bird. 'My youngest little bird' is an adequate rendering of the phrase. The common emendation of mine of the Folio to nine involves the explanation that wrens lay from nine to ten eggs and that the last of the brood is supposed to be the smallest.

III.ii.59. If you desire the spleen. The spleen was believed to be the source of, among other things, laughter.

III.ii.61. renegatho. The spelling possibly represents an attempt to produce in the pronunciation the Spanish voiced spirant d.

III.ii.69. new map . . . Indies. The new map of the East Indies and North America was done in 1600 by Edward Wright with the assistance of Richard Hakluyt, author of the various Voyages, and John Davis, navigator. It is described and reproduced in Shakespeare's England (Oxford Press ed., 2 vols. 1916), 1, 173–4. The lines which Maria speaks of are those of Mercator's projection, a system new to English maps of the period.

III.iii.16. And thanks . . . turns. The short line is commonly emended for scansion. The compositor or the copyist may have dropped part of the speech.

III.iii.42. the Elephant. A. C. Southern in the Times Literary Supplement, June 12, 1953, has shown that in 1598 'there was an inn known as The Elephant on the Bankside' and that an inn with that name probably was there at least until 1605. The common London inn sign, The Elephant and Castle, survives notably in the underground station south of Waterloo.

III.iv.21. this cross-gartering. Malvolio now has his garters crossed both above and below the knee.

III.iv.23. 'Please one and please all.' The phrase is common. However, Malvolio may be quoting specifically from a ballad entered in the Stationers' Register in 1592 (ed. E. Arger, 2, 602): '. . . the Crowe shee sittes uppon the wall: please One and please all.' The ballad was signed 'R.T.,' possibly for Richard Tarlton, actor and clown. It is reprinted in A Collection of Seventy-nine Black-letter Ballads, ed. Joseph Lilly (1867), pp. 255–9. The first stanza follows:

Please one and please all,
Be they great be they small,
Be they little be they lowe,
So pypeth the Crowe,
sitting upon a wall:
please one and please all,
please one and please all.

III.iv.28. Roman hand. There were two styles of handwriting in use around 1600. The old secretary hand, almost illegible to modern readers, was common. The Italian style (Roman hand), fairly close to modern script, was being used increasingly and was particularly popular with women.

III.iv.34. At your request . . . daws. The speech is ironic. Malvolio says: 'Should I answer the request of my inferior, Maria? Of course. Nightingales answer the calls of jackdaws or crows.'

III.iv.50. made. Here and in the following lines there is possibly a verbal quibble on 'made' and 'maid,' (servant). In addition, madness (l. 53) may have been pronounced almost like 'maidness.'

III.iv.53. midsummer madness. It was believed that midsummer produced insanity. Compare 'dog-days.' June 23, Midsummer Eve, was a time of magic.

III.iv.67. tang with. The langer of the First Folio is not recorded as a verb in the NED; and tang is in the letter which Malvolio is quoting from II.5.133.

III.iv.68–70. And consequently . . . and so forth. Malvolio stops quoting from the letter and seemingly explores its implications as to his future conduct for winning Olivia. There is the slight possibility that the sentence is a later interpolation.

III.iv.71. lim'd. Birds were caught by spreading birdlime, a sticky substance, on twigs or on trees.

III.iv.80. drawn in little. It is unlikely that the figure has the force of 'portrayed in miniature.' Devils were notorious for their ability to contract into a small space. The phrase would thus mean 'contracted.'

III.iv.80. Legion. Mark 5:8–9: 'For he [Jesus] said unto him, Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit. And he asked him, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, My name is Legion: for we are many.'

III.iv.82, 83. How is't with you, man?. Wright assigned the line to Sir Toby.

III.iv.96. bewitch'd. Possession by a witch's spell and possession by the devil are two different things; in popular usage the two are interchangeable. Maria combines the two.

III.iv.97. Carry . . . woman. 'Take his urine to the wise woman for diagnosis.' A 'wise woman' pretended to cure disease, bewitchment, and possession by devils. In addition, she usually told fortunes.

III.iv.110. cherry-pit. A child's game in which the players throw cherry stones into a small hole. Sir Toby means that it is below Malvolio's dignity to be intimate with Satan.

III.iv.110. collier. The devil is associated with coal because of his blackness and possibly because of the traditional flames of hell.

III.iv.126. in a dark room and bound. The standard treatment for insanity. Whipping was also believed to be beneficial. Insanity was commonly regarded as amusing.

III.iv.142, 143. A good note . . . law. A clever remark (since scurvy is vague) which keeps you from being legally liable.

III.iv.179. cockatrices. Fabulous reptiles hatched by serpents from cocks' eggs. Both the breath and glance of a cockatrice were fatal.

III.iv.190. Goes . . . griefs. Note the disagreement of subject and verb in the inverted sentence.

III.iv.217. with unhatch'd rapier . . . carpet consideration. With an unhacked rapier and for affairs of peace rather than of war. That is, when Sir Andrew was dubbed a knight his sword had never been used in battle, and he got his honor perhaps through influence, favor, or service at court (carpet consideration) rather than for fighting. The term 'carpet knight' is common in this derogatory sense. Unhatch'd is 'unhacked,' 'undented.'

III.iv.229, 230. unless you undertake . . . answer him. Unless you undertake a duel with me, which with as much safety you might undertake with him in answering his challenge.

III.iv.253. firago. The substitution of initial f for v indicates a hypercorrect pronunciation, particularly common among speakers of southern English, some of whom tended to use, incorrectly, initial v in place of f.

III.iv.256. hits. Feet is perhaps regarded collectively; but 16th- and 17th-century grammar is frequently loose.

III.iv.258. Pox on't. The curse is a common one and refers to the great pox, or syphilis, rather than to the smallpox.

III.iv.264. Capilet. Diminutive form of caple or capul and derived probably from Latin, cabullus, 'horse.' The word is common to Middle English and Icelandic.

III.iv.282. the duello. A standard work on the subject was Vincento Saviolo His Practice (1595).

III.iv.342. image. Image here means 'ideal representation' or 'ideal appearance' to be worshiped within the friendship code of courtly love.

III.iv.345. vild. There is commonly an excrescent d in words ending in l and n. Compare French son, English 'sound'; or the substandard 'drownded.'

III.iv.350. empty trunks, o'erflourish'd. The sense of the passage is that the devil deceitfully 'overflourishes' or decorates the empty bodies to give them a beautiful appearance. It is unlikely that trunks refers to ornamented chests for clothing. Trunks as 'bodies' continues the figure of the mind and the body from the lines immediately preceding.

III.iv.367. hare. The hare was traditionally a cowardly animal.

IV.i.13. a cockney. The terms seems to come from Middle English cocken-ey, 'cock's egg,' or a small and malformed egg. The various attached meanings are 'milksop,' 'a townsman,' and 'a Londoner.'

IV.i.21. after fourteen years' purchase. A normal purchase price for land was the amount of rent which would be collected from it in twelve years. Thus, fourteen years' purchase would be a high price.

IV.i.37. You are well flesh'd. 'To flesh' is to give a taste of the game killed to a hawk or hound in order to incite it further to the chase.

IV.i.58. started . . . heart. 'To start' is the hunting term for forcing an animal to leave its lair.

IV.ii.2. Topas. The topaz stone was believed to cure insanity; Shakespeare may have had in mind Chaucer's comic knight of 'The Tale of Sir Thopas.'

IV.ii.12,13. King Gorboduc. A legendary king of Britain, Gorboduc's story is told by Geoffrey of Monmouth. The king is a leading figure in an early blank-verse tragedy by Thomas Sackville and Thomas Norton, Gorboduc, or Ferrex and Porrex (1562). The 'niece of King Gorboduc' is an invention of the clown.

IV.ii.SD. Malvolio within. The stage direction indicates that Malvolio is either inside the inner stage, a small enclosed area at the center and rear of the Elizabethan stage, or at the wicket of one of the doors at either side of the inner stage. The latter is improbable since he is the focal point of the scene. In a court performance he would probably be in a small house or 'mansion' made of canvas on a frame and set out on the stage.

IV.ii.40, 41. the Egyptians in their fog. Exodus 10:22 'And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days.'

IV.ii.46. Pythagoras. The Greek philosopher of the 6th century B.C. was believed to have been the originator of the doctrine of the transmigration of souls. The doctrine was common knowledge, but Shakespeare might have had it from Ovid, specifically from the Metamorphoses.

IV.ii.66. this sport to the upshot. The upshot is the final shot in a match at archery. To, Rowe's emendation, was either dropped from the copy or merged with the preceding t of sport.

IV.ii.68. Hey Robin. The song has been attributed doubtfully to Sir Thomas Wyatt. It is reprinted in Percy's Reliques (ed. 1847), 1, 196–9. The song begins:

A Robyn,
Jolly Robyn,
Tell me how they leman [lady-love] doeth,
And thou shalt knowe of myn.

'My Lady is unkynd, perde,'
Alack! why is she so?
'She loveth an other better than me;
And yet she will say no.'

IV.ii.81. five wits. The wits or powers of the mind were numbered five, by analogy with the five senses, and were common wit, imagination, fantasy, estimation, and memory.

IV.ii.94. God buy you. The modern 'goodbye' is from 'God be with you.' Some variants are the following: 'God bu'y you,' 'God buy ye,' 'God buy to ye,' and 'God bu'y.'

IV.ii.94. Marry. It is unlikely that the exclamation retains any of its original meaning of 'the Virgin Mary,' even it its use here with amen.

IV.ii.112–114. I am gone, sir . . . again. The lines are possibly a fragment from a lost song. E. W. Naylor in Shakespeare and Music (1896), p. 190, assigns music to them.

IV.ii.116–122. Like to the old Vice . . . 'Pare thy nails, dad'. The Vice was the comic character in the morality plays and stood either for a particular vice or for sin in general. He would sometimes sustain the need of the hero by helping him in his contest with the devil. The Vice traditionally carried a dagger of lath with which he would offer to pare Satan's nails. Shakespeare's fools are in a number of respects the decendants of the Vice.

IV.ii.123. Adieu, goodman divel. An insulting and even dangerous way to take leave of the devil, since goodman was the form of address for a person below the rank of gentleman.

IV.iii.24. the chantry by. A chantry is properly a chapel devoted to the celebration of masses for the dead and supported by an endowment for that purpose. The term is used here in the more general sense of 'small church.'

IV.iii.26. Plight me . . . your faith. 'Pledge me full promise of your fidelity [in the betrothal ceremony at church].' The actual marriage ceremony was frequently preceded by a separate betrothal ceremony which was regarded very seriously both by the betrothed and by the church. The marriage ceremony of the Anglican Church consists of a betrothal followed by a marriage.

V.i.5. This is to give a dog. The following entry, for March 26, 1603, is in John Manningham's Diary, ed. John Bruce (Camden Society, 1868), pp. 148–9: 'Mr. Francis Curle told me howe one Dr. Bullein, the Queenes kinsman, had a dog which he doted one, soe much that the Queene understanding of it requested he would graunt hir one desyre, and he should have what soever he would aske. Shee demaunded his dogge; he gave it, and "Nowe, Madame," quoth he, "you promised to give me my desyre." "I will," quothe she. "Then I pray you give me my dog againe." '

V.i.9. doest. The form is correct, but unusual in the First Folio which generally prints dost.

V.i.18–20. So that conclusions . . . for my foes. The best of many explications of the passage is by J. Dover Wilson and Hardin Craig. The mock logic hinges on the fact that a kiss is made of four lips which are negatives. The lips are joined by two mouths which are the two affirmatives. The clown says that if conclusions are like this, then the conclusion that he is not an ass has only half the value of the conclusion that he is one. In addition to the obvious juggling of the words negatives and affirmatives in the parody of logic, there is a play on ass in the sense of 'professional clown' and ass in the ordinary sense of 'fool.'

V.i.32. Primo, secundo, tertio. The term appears to come either from a game of dice (see l. 37) or from an undefined child's game, the philosophers' table.

V.i.33. The third pays for all. Proverbial. See The Oxford Dictionary of English Proverbs (1948), p. 651. The meaning is probably: 'The third time wins all.' Compare 'The third time never fails,' 'The third time is a charm,' and 'The third time's lucky.'

V.i.34. St. Bennet. Any church dedicated to St. Benedict (480–543). There was a St. Bennet Hithe, Paul's Wharf, near the Globe theater. The church was burned in the fire of London in 1666.

V.i.65. dear. In Shakespearean English the word is frequently no more than an intensifying adjective with the meaning of 'extreme,' 'serious,' or 'grievous.'

V.i.84, 85. And grew . . . would wink. And became as strange as someone who had not seen me for twenty years in the time it would take one to wink.

V.i.90. three months. The fact that this is impossible by any time scheme that can be devised for the play is unimportant.

V.i.111. My soul . . . have breath'd. Irregular grammar is common in Shakespearean English when the object precedes the verb.

V.i.115. th' Egyptian thief. In the story of 'Theagenes and Cariclia' from the Ethiopica of the Greek Hellodorus, possibly of the 3d century A.D. There was an English version by Thomas Underdowne, An Æthiopian Historie, published in 1569 (ed. C. Whibley, The Tudor Translations, 1895). Thyamis, an Egyptian robber-chief in danger of capture, intends to kill his beautiful prisoner, Cariclia, with whom he is in love. In the darkness of the cave he slays another woman by mistake. 'And if the barbarous people be once in despaire of their owne safetie, they have a custome to kill all those by whome they set much, and whose companie they desire after death, or els would keepe them from the violence and wrong of their enemies.' (Whibley, p. 38.)

V.i.142. husband. The word is used here and below in the sense that the betrothal ceremony in the chantry was the legal equivalent of marriage. There were two sorts of betrothal ceremonies, sponsalia per verba de futuro, and sponsalia per verba de praesenti. Under the betrothal de praesenti, the more binding of the two, the couple pledged themselves as man and wife from the moment of the betrothal—the agreement is of the present. That a betrothal de praesenti has taken place is indicated by the use of the word husband. The couple are husband and wife although they will not actually be married in the chruch until the marriage ceremony takes place at a later date. Edward R. Hardy, Jr., has observed to the editor that the priest in his speech, ll. 158–163, seems to echo the proclamation of the marriage from the Book of Common Prayer with the phrases 'joinder of your hands' and 'interchangement of your rings.' Finally, Sebastian says betroth'd in l. 266; and Olivia in ll. 317–18 clearly speaks of the double marriage ceremony to be performed at her house in the future. For an account of the two kinds of betrothals and the canon law on each, see George E. Howard's A History of Matrimonial Institutions (3 vols. Chicago and London, 1904), 1, 313–20, 337–63.

V.i.169. trip. The sense is 'you will trip yourself up.' The term is perhaps from wrestling.

V.i.183. incardinate. It seems unlikely that the word is a pointless verbal blunder from Sir Andrew. If there is a quibble on incardinate, 'to institute to a cardinalship' and 'devil incarnate,' the line is an example of the anti-Roman Catholic jest, common in the English drama of the period.

V.i.199. passy measures pavin. The panyn of the Folio appears to be a misprint for pavin. The clown has just said that the surgeon is drunk and has been since 'eight i' th' morning.' Sir Toby's phrase 'a passy measures pavin' is a reference to dancing, perhaps suggested by the word eight from the clown. 'Passy measures' is Sir Toby's variant on 'passemeasure' from the Italian passemezzo, a slow dance. The tune consists of 'strains' which contain an even number of bars, most commonly eight. The same structure holds for the 'pavin' or, as it is more commonly spelled, 'pavan.' The pavan is a slow dance of Italian or Spanish origin. The name is perhaps from the Spanish pavo, 'peacock.' Thus, when the clown tells Sir Toby that the surgeon was drunk at 'eight i' th' morning,' Sir Toby answers: 'Then he's a rogue, and he's an eight-bar double-slow dance.' I.e. he's a laggard and should hurry up.

V.i.201. havoc. Originally the signal to an army for the seizure of spoil and for pillage.

V.i.217. A natural perspective, that is and is not. A perspective or 'prospective' was a glass made so as to produce an optical illusion or distortion from nature. By 'a natural perspective' the Duke means that here nature has produced the illusion and not art. The phrase 'that is and is not' means that although the two people are real, they are not really one and the same person as the various characters in the play have supposed.

V.i.241. as the rest goes even. As the other facts (which you have just told me) make you my sister. Compare the phrase 'comes out even,' i.e. is consistent, logical, right.

V.i.251. lets. 'Let,' 'to allow,' is from Old English lætan; 'let,' 'to hinder,' is from Old English lettan. The second survives in the phrase 'without let or hindrance.'

V.i.263. But nature to her bias drew in that. But nature drew into natural course or line of inclination (bias), and corrected, that mistake which you made of falling in love with a woman. The figure, a common one in Shakespeare, is from bowling; the balls were loaded so that they rolled in a curved line or 'bias.'

V.i.274. orbed continent. Probably 'the sun.' 'As the sun keeps the fire that severs day from night.' But 'orbed continent' may also mean the curved path or sphere which, under the Ptolomaic system, is the course of the sun around the earth, the center of the universe. The meaning would then be: 'As the sphere of the sun keeps in place the fire of the sun that severs day from night.'

V.i.288. he holds Belzebub at the stave's end. Belzebub or Beelzebub is loosely a synonym for Satan. The figure is from the game of dueling with staves or heavy sticks.

V.i.309, 310. I leave . . . my injury. I leave my duty of respect to you somewhat out of mind and instead speak from the consciousness of my injury.

V.i.394–413. When that I was . . . To please you every day. Critical opinion of the Clown's song has varied from Warburton's 'This wretched stuff . . .' to Knight's 'We hold this song to be the most philosophical Clown's song upon record . . . It is the history of a life . . .' For a survey of the pronouncements, see Furness, A New Variorum, pp. 313–14. No earlier version of the song is known.

V.i.394. and a. Furness states that the redundant and is common in ballads; J. Dover Wilson, that it is an insertion by the playhouse musician; Kittredge, that and carried a note of music.

V.i.392–402. But when I came to man's estate . . . With tosspots still had drunken heads. It is impossible, as well as unnecessary, to extract precise meaning from these lines. However, it can be argued that the following is the general meaning. The second stanza, beginning 'But when I came to man's estate,' says that his foolishness, which was of no account while he was 'a little tiny boy,' caused men to shut their gates against him, because they shut their gates against fools and knaves. The third stanza, beginning 'But when I came, alas, to wive,' says that after he got married he did not prosper because he was still a swaggerer. The fourth stanza, beginning 'But when I came unto my beds,' might mean: 'When I went to bed, like other tosspots, I kept having drunken heads.' But this interpretation necessitates the insertion of 'I' before 'had drunken heads,' and a strain on the use of the plural 'heads.' It is necessary to accept the song for what it is; like much popular poetry, it lacks precise meaning, but it is roughly intelligible and a perfectly appropriate ending for the comedy.

V.i.414. And we'll strive to please you every day. A conventional promise from the acting company to the audience, which might consist largely of regular patrons.

The Tragedy of Troilus and Cressida

Edited by
JACKSON J. CAMPBELL

Dramatis Personae

PRIAM, King of Troy
HECTOR
TROILUS
PARIS
DEIPHOBUS
HELENUS
his Sons
AENEAS
ANTENOR
Trojan Commanders
CALCHAS, a Trojan Priest, taking part with the Greeks
PANDARUS, Uncle to Cressida
AGAMEMNON, the Grecian General
MENELAUS, his Brother
ACHILLES
AJAX
ULYSSES
NESTOR
DIOMEDES
PATROCLUS
Grecian Commanders

THERSITES, a deformed and scurrilous Grecian
ALEXANDER, Servant to Cressida
SERVANT TO TROILUS, SERVANT TO PARIS, SERVANT TO DIOMEDES

HELEN, Wife to Menelaus
ANDROMACHE, Wife to Hector
CASSANDRA, Daughter to Priam; a Prophetess
CRESSIDA, Daughter to Calchas

TROJAN AND GREEK SOLDIERS, AND ATTENDANTS

The Tragedy of Troilus and Cressida

Introduction

Text and Date

There are two good texts of Troilus and Cressida, a Quarto and the Folio, either of which could justifiably be used as the basis for a modern edition. Unusual circumstances attended the publication of each text, but, after certain shufflings on the part of the printers, in each case a text was issued which has a certain degree of authority.

The history of the Quarto starts with an entry in the Stationers' Register for February 7, 1603: 'Master Roberts, Entered for his copie in full Court holden this day to print when he hath gotten sufficient aucthority for yt, The booke of Troilus and Cresseda, as yt is acted by my lord Chamberlens Men.' This license probably refers to Shakespeare's play, but it was evidently not acted upon, for no Troilus and Cressida came out at this time. Six years later, however, another entry was made in the Stationers' Register licensing the publishers Bonian and Walley to print a play called The History of Troylus and Cressida, which had been acted by Shakespeare's company. Soon after this entry of January 1609, possibly in the spring, the Quarto appeared.

There are two variant states of this 1609 Quarto. The first has a title page which reads: 'THE / Historie of Troylus / and Cresseida./ As it was acted by the Kings Maiesties / servants at the Globe. / Written by William Shakespeare. / [Design] / LONDON / Imprinted by G. Eld for R. Bonian and H. Walley, and / are to be sold at the spred Eagle in Paules / Church-yeard, over against the / great North doore. / 1609.' While the printing of this issue was going forward, for some unknown reason the printer stopped printing, canceled the title page, reset the type of the upper half of it, and added a prefatory epistle before the text.[1] Some of the extant copies of Q have the earlier title page, and some the later,[2] but it is clear that for the body of the text all the copies are from one single edition and were printed from the same forms. The new title page and the Epistle raise several problems which have never been completely solved, in that they imply that the play had not been acted, despite the statements of the first title page and the Stationers' Register that it had. This claim that the play had never been 'clapper-claw'd with the palms of the vulgar' may or may not be true, since the Epistle is patently an advertising blurb designed to increase sales among the would-be wits. In any case, it can safely be said that the play was not particularly popular; no performance of it is recorded elsewhere, and it was not printed again until the publication of the Folio in 1623.

In the First Folio Troilus and Cressida was originally scheduled to follow Romeo and Juliet in the section of the book containing the tragedies. Three pages of type had already been set up when the printer stopped work, probably because of difficulties with the copyright, and the play was eventually printed between the histories and the tragedies, after Henry VIII and before Coriolanus. In this new position there was added a prologue which does not appear in Q.

Several theories have been put forward to explain these curious changes in F, as there have been to explain the changes in Q, but in both cases the explanations offered often do not get far out of the realm of theory and into the area of fact. A recent series of articles,[3] however, has established with clear proof the relationship between the text of the Folio and the text of the Quarto. The first three pages in F were set up in type directly from a copy of Q. After the resumption of printing, with Troilus in its new location, the 'copy' used was a copy of Q which had been collated with an independently authoritative manuscript, whether a promptbook or foul papers. A good many changes were made in the Q text during the collation, including some which correct printer's errors and some which introduce completely new readings. F prefaces the play with a prologue which does not exist in Q, and in addition augments the text with some forty-odd new lines scattered throughout the play, most of which are unmistakably genuine. Even the prologue, poor as it is as poetry, cannot be proved to be by another hand. Thus, in a sense, F is a derivative text, but at the same time it is often more authoritative than the text it was derived from. For this reason, the present edition follows the Folio text as closely as possible. If Q had been used, it would have been necessary to make a conflate text by adding lines from F; and certainly if F's changes have any authority at all, either from the author or the playhouse, it cannot be said that Q is the sole substantive text. When it has been advisable to use the Q reading for individual words, F's reading is given in the glosses: for example, I.1.21 leavening F leau'ing. When neither the F nor Q reading is satisfactory, the text has been emended. This has occurred only when it was absolutely necessary, and the emendations are printed in square brackets and explained in the notes. Any added stage directions which do not appear in F are also printed in square brackets. Punctuation has been kept as close as practicable to that of F and Q, but in many cases it has been changed to conform with modern practice. In accordance with the general policy of this series, spellings which indicate Renaissance pronunciation have been retained, although the Folio's inconsistencies in spelling of words like nere, ne're, ene, e'ne, when they indicate nothing about pronunciation, have been reduced to consistency.

1 This Epistle is printed on page 325 of this edition.

2 By some sort of slip on the part of the binder, the Yale Elizabethan Club copy contains both title pages and the Epistle.

3 Peter Alexander, "Troilus and Cressida, 1609," The Library, 4th ser., 9 (1928), 265-86; Philip Williams, "Shakespeare's Troilus and Cressida: The Relationship of the Quarto and the Folio," Studies in Bibliography, 3 (University of Virginia, 1950), 131-43; Alice Walker, "The Textual Problem of Troilus and Cressida," Modern Language Review, 45 (1950), 459-64; W. W. Greg, "The Printing of Shakespeare's Troilus and Cressida in the First Folio," Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America, 45 (1951), 273-82; Alice Walker, Textual Problems of the First Folio (Cambridge, England, 1953).

Dating the composition of the play with any exactitude is virtually impossible. If we take the 1603 entry in the Stationers' Register to refer to Shakespeare's play, as most scholars are willing to do, we at least have a terminus ad quem for its composition. It is not included in Francis Meres' list of Shakespeare's plays in Palladis Tamia in 1598,[4] so we can take that date as the earlier limit. To narrow the date down further, a great many ingenious arguments have been offered of varying credibility, most of them depending on alleged topical allusions in the play. This play has long been associated with the so-called War of the Theaters, and although many scholars do not accept the identification of certain characters in this play with certain of Shakespeare's contemporaries, there remains the suspicion that this play has some connection with Ben Johnson's Poetaster, which was produced in 1601. The amount of connection is in dispute, and many of the topical allusions are doubtful. Even though such vagueness is unsatisfactory, it is probably unwise to date the play more precisely than 'shortly before 1603.'

Sources of the Play

Troilus and Cressida is one of the most difficult of Shakespeare's plays to deal with in regard to its sources. We know in general where he could have gotten his Troy material, but we lack conclusive proofs to demonstrate the immediate origin of the play.

This play is, of course, a composite work, combining two threads of action, the Troilus-Cressida love story and the military plot involving the larger struggle between the Greeks and the Trojans. The Troilus portion is easier to deal with, since its main source lies in Chaucer's great poem, Troilus and Criseyde. The story had had a complicated earlier history, and in spite of claims that it was originally a classical story, it was really the invention of medieval writers. Although several of the personages in the story appear in Homer's Iliad, they are there little more than names, and the love narrative did not appear in any recognizable form until it was written in the Roman de Troie by Benoit de Sainte-Maure, a French poet of the 12th century. It was copied with few changes into the Historia Trojana, a 13th-century Latin prose work by Guido delle Colonne. The story was extracted from the mass of Trojan history in which it was embedded by Boccaccio, whose Filostrato expands the story and treats it as a center of focus for an artistic unity. Chaucer, in writing his version, followed Boccaccio's poem, but expanded it and developed the characterizations until it became what is probably the only unquestioned masterpiece dealing with this story.

A comparison of Shakespeare's play with Chaucer's poem reveals many points in which Shakespeare was following the plot outline of Chaucer, but it at the same time makes us conscious of a wide difference in tone and attitude toward the various characters. Shakespeare has sometimes been accused of debasing Chaucer's characters, as he has been accused of debasing the Homeric characters in the military plot. The characters had been considerably degraded, however, before they came to Shakespeare. The edition of Chaucer's works printed by Thynne in 1532 included a poem by the 15th-century Scots poet, Robert Henryson, entitled The Testament of Cressid. This poem continues the Cressida story and reduces her to a beggar and a leper before her death. Throughout the 16th century Henryson's poem was thought to be part of Chaucer's work, in spite of the fact that it is written in the lowland dialect of Scotland, and the just punishment of the heroine evidently appealed to many readers. There are a very great number of treatments of the story during the 16th century, ranging from a Latin play by Nicholas Grimald, through lyrics, songs, and broadside ballads, to mere chance references in similes and metaphors. By Shakespeare's time the story had become common property of the people, known undoubtedly to many who had never read Chaucer or Henryson. Pandarus was taken as the type for the pimp or go-between, and such was his fame that before the middle of the century pander had become a common noun. Cressida was so well established in the popular mind as a loose, unfaithful woman that the phrase 'a woman of Cressid's kind,' meaning a whore, had become a cliché.[5] Thus Shakespeare's characterizations of these people represent not so much his reinterpretation of the story as his acceptance of the tradition as it came down to him.

The same thing is true of his treatment of the personages in the military plot. Throughout the Middle Ages and on into the Renaissance, the Troy story was almost always told with sympathy for the Trojans, and several Western nations fancifully traced their origins to some colonizing Trojan hero who wandered as a displaced person after the war. Homer in the original was little known in England until the 16th century, and the derogatory medieval conception of Greek characters like Achilles, Ajax, and Agamemnon continued even after some Englishmen had begun reading Homer. The two earlier authorities whom Shakespeare seems to have used were Lydgate's Troy Book and Caxton's Recuyell of the Historyes of Troye. Lydgate's poem is a compendium of virtually all the stories connected with Troy, drawn principally from Guido delle Colonne's Historia Trojana. Caxton's Recuyell is a translation of Le Recueil de Troyennes Ystoires by a French prose writer, Raoul le Fevre. Details of plot incident from Shakespeare's play have been traced to each of these sources,[6] but it must be admitted that few really convincing verbal parallels have been cited. Any material Shakespeare got from them had been pretty thoroughly assimilated by the time it reissued from his pen, for his dependence on them is not nearly so obvious as was his use of his sources for the English history plays or the Gloucester plot of Lear.

Shakespeare probably made use also of George Chapman's famous translation of Homer, although at the time this play appears to have been written only eight books of the translation had been printed. Books I, II, VII through XI, and XVIII, which were issued in 1598, do include a brief characterization of Thersites, who is completely missing in Caxton and Lydgate.[7] Again in this case, however, it must be stated that no truly inescapable cases of verbal parallelism have been discovered, and we can by no means ignore the possibility that Shakespeare might have read his Homer, or parts of it, in a Latin translation or even in the Greek.

4 Leslie Hotson's contention in his Shakespeare's Sonnets Dated (London, 1949) that this play is the puzzling Loves Labours Wonne of Meres' list is not at all convincing.

5 The change in conception of the Troilus story during the 16th century is treated in full by Hyder Rollins, 'The Troilus-Cressida Story from Chaucer to Shakespeare,' PMLA, 32 (1917), 383-429. Some few facts are added to this body of information by W. B. D. Henderson, 'Shakespeare's Troilus and Cressida Yet Deeper in its Tradition,' The Parrott Presentation Volume (Princeton, 1935), pp. 127-56.

6 One or two minor items have been traced to Robert Greene's Euphues His Censure to Philautus, published in 1587.

7 Recently Robert Presson has argued that Shakespeare followed Chapman in many basic details, and followed Lydgate very little.

As always in considering Shakespeare's sources, we have the picture of his using diverse materials, in this case Chaucer, Lydgate, Caxton, Homer, and probably a certain amount of popular, bookless tradition; but his combination of those materials into a unified, two-plot play, written at least in part in language which compares favorably with his greatest, is a unique achievement. There have been serious critical doubts about his complete success in the over-all structure and tone of the play, but few critics have denied that it contains many magnificently conceived scenes and speeches.

Before leaving the subject, some mention should be made of the theory that there was an earlier Troilus play which Shakespeare used as his source. As is the case with Hamlet, there is not now in existence any play which Shakespeare might have revised to become the play we have, but many scholars have long suspected that there was once such a play. We have record of several 16th-century plays on the Troy theme, two of which are mentioned in Henslowe's diary at the end of the century. Troy was performed in 1596, and a play was being written by Dekker and Chettle on the subject in 1599. Since these have not survived,[8] we can never be sure just how much influence they had on Shakespeare's play. He probably drew little from them directly, since they belonged to a rival company, but considering the obvious popularity of this material there is the bare possibility that still other Troy plays were available to him. A play by Thomas Heywood called The Iron Age treats most of the events covered by Shakespeare and shows some striking similarities to Troilus; but it was very probably written after Shakespeare's play, unless, as has been conjectured, the Troy mentioned by Henslowe is an earlier version of Iron Age.[9] Many readers have criticized the treatment Shakespeare gives to the conclusion of his play, and some have surmised that in his revision of some earlier play, he lost interest for some reason toward the end and gave the battle scenes in the last act very few of his master touches. Although this may be true, it is a mistake to argue that the scenes are not Shakespeare's simply because no great poetry appears. A large-scale battle scene such as that which runs from V.4 to V.9 was a rapid paced spectacle of movement and action, and the sketchy verbal scenario supplied for it is quite adequate to allow stirring production effects. The theory of Shakespeare's revision of any earlier play, which in turn, presumably, drew from Chaucer, Lydgate, and Caxton, must remain merely a plausible possibility until such a play is discovered.

A Never Writer, to an Ever Reader. News.

Eternal reader, you have here a new play, never stal'd with the Stage, never clapped-claw'd with the palms of the vulgar, and yet passing full of the palm comical, for it is a birth of your brain that never undertook anything comical vainly. And were but the vain names of comedies changed for the titles of commodities, or of plays for pleas, you should see all those grand censors, that now style them such vanities, flock to them for the main grace of their gravities, especially this author's comedies, that are so fram'd to the life that they serve for the most common commentaries of all the actions of our lives, showing such a dexterity and power of wit that the most displeased with plays are pleas'd with his comedies. And all such dull and heavy-witted worldlings as were never capable of the wit of a comedy, coming by report of them to his representations, have found that wit there that they never found in themselves and have parted better witted than they came, feeling an edge of wit set upon them more than ever they dreamed they had brain to grind it on. So much and such savored salt of wit is in his comedies that they seem, for their height of pleasure, to be born in that sea that brought forth Venus. Amongst all there is none more witty than this; and had I time I would comment upon it, though I know it needs not, for so much as will make you think your testern well bestowed, but for so much worth even poor I know to be stuff'd in it. It deserves such a labour as well as the best comedy in Terence or Plautus. And believe this, that when he is gone and his comedies out of sale, you will scramble for them and set up a new English Inquisition. Take this for a warning, and at the peril of your pleasure's loss and judgment's, refuse not nor like this the less for not being sullied with the smoky breath of the multitude, but thank fortune for the scape it hath made amongst you, since by the grand possessors' wills I believe you should have pray'd for them rather than been pray'd. And so I leave all such to be pray'd for, for the state of their wits' healths, that will not praise it. Vale.[10]

8 A 'plot' or sketch of entrances and exits for some Troilus play has survived. It is generally thought that it belongs to the lost play of Dekker and Chettle.

9 This play and the other Elizabethan works dealing with the Troy story are studied by J. S. P. Tatlock, 'The Siege of Troy in Elizabethan Literature, Especially in Shakespeare and Heywood,' PMLA, 30 (1915), 673-770.

10 This epistle appeared in the second issue of the Quarto of Troilus and Cressida.

The Prologue

In Troy there lies the scene. From isles of Greece
The princes orgillous, their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel war. Sixty-and-nine that wore
Their crownets regal, from th' Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia and their vow is made
To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps, and that's the quarrel.
To Tenedos they come,
And the deep-drawing [barks] do there disgorge
Their warlike fraughtage. Now on Dardan plains
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions. Priam's six-gated city,
Dardan and Timbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien,
And Antenonidus, with massy staples
And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts
[Sperr] up the sons of Troy.
Now expectations, tickling skittish spirits,
On one and other side, Troyan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard. And hither am I come,
A prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
Of author's pen, or actor's voice, but suited
In like conditions as our argument,
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play
Leaps ore the vaunt and firstlings of those broils,
Beginning in the middle, starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play.
Like, or find fault; do as your pleasures are:
Now good or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

Act First ❧ Scene First

Enter Pandarus and Troilus.

Troilus. Call here my varlet; I'll unarm again.
Why should I war without the walls of Troy
That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Troyan that is master of his heart,
Let him to field; Troilus, alas, hath none.

Pandarus. Will this gear nere be mended?

Troilus. The Greeks are strong, and skillful to their strength,
Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant;
But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance,
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skilless as unpractic'd infancy.

Pandarus. Well, I have told you enough of this.
For my part, I'll not meddle nor make no farther.
He that will have a cake out of the wheat must needs tarry the grinding.

Troilus. Have I not tarried?

Pandarus. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Troilus. Have I not tarried?

Pandarus. Ay, the bolting; but you must tarry the [leavening].

Troilus. Still have I tarried.

Pandarus. Ay, to the leavening; but here's yet in the word hereafter: the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking. Nay, you must stay the cooling, too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

Troilus. Patience herself, what goddess ere she be,
Doth lesser blench at sufferance than I do.
At Priam's royal table do I sit,
And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts—
So, traitor, then she comes, when she is thence.

Pandarus. Well, she look'd yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Troilus. I was about to tell thee: when my heart,
As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain
Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,
I have (as when the sun doth light ascorn)
Buried this sign in wrinkle of a smile;
But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness,
Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pandarus. And her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's —well, go to—there were no more comparison between the women. But for my part, she is my kinswoman; I would not, as they term it, praise her, but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday as I did. I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but—

Troilus. O Pandarus! I tell thee Pandarus—
When I do tell thee, 'There my hopes lie drown'd,'
Reply not in how many fadoms deep
They lie indrench'd. I tell thee, 'I am mad
In Cressid's love.' Thou answer'st, 'She is fair,'
Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice;
Handlest in thy discourse, O, that her hand,
In whose comparison all whites are ink,
Writing their own reproach, to whose soft seizure
The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense
Hard as the palm of ploughman. This thou tell'st me,
As true thou tell'st me, when I say I love her.
But saying thus, instead of oil and balm
Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me
The knife that made it.

Pandarus. I speak no more than truth.

Troilus. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pandarus. Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is. If she be fair, 'tis the better for her; and she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Troilus. Good Pandarus! How now, Pandarus?

Pandarus. I have had my labor for my travel, ill thought on of her and ill thought on of you; gone between and between, but small thanks for my labor.

2 orgillous: orgulous, proud 8 immures: walls 12 barks: F barke (F refers throughout to the First Folio of 1623.) 13 Dardan: the plains around Troy 15 brave: splendid 17 Antenonidus; Cf. n. 18 fulfilling: which fill their sockets completely 19 Sperr up: pen up, enclose; F Stirre; Cf. n. 22 hazard: chance 23-5 prologue arm'd . . . argument; Cf. n. 25 argument: plot, story 27 ore: o'er, over vaunt: van, beginning 1 varlet: servant 6 gear: matter, affair nere: ne'er, never 7 to: in addition to 10 fonder: more foolish

20 bolting: sifting 21 leavening: F leau'ing 23, 24 here's . . . hereafter; Cf. n. 28 blench: flinch 31 So . . . thence; Cf. n. 37 ascorn: in mockery. 41 And: and if Cf. n. 42 go to: never mind were: would be 44 her: F it 48 fadoms: fathoms 55 seizure: grasp 56 spirit of sense; Cf. n. 66 mends: remedy 68 travel: travail, pains 69 thought on of: thought of by

Troilus. What, art thou angry, Pandarus? What, with me?

Pandarus. Because she's kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen. And she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not and she were a black-a-moor; 'tis all one to me.

Troilus. Say I she is not fair?

Pandarus. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool to stay behind her father. Let her to the Greeks, and so I'll tell her the next time I see her. For my part, I'll meddle nor make no more i' th' matter.

Troilus. Pandarus?

Pandarus. Not I.

Troilus. Sweet Pandarus.

Pandarus. Pray you, speak no more to me. I will leave all as I found it, and there an end. Exit Pandarus.

Sound alarum.

Troilus. Peace, you ungracious clamors! Peace, rude sounds!
Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair,
When with your blood you daily paint her thus.
I cannot fight upon this argument;
It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.
But Pandarus—O gods! how do you plague me!
I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar,
And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo
As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.
Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we.
Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl;
Between our Ilium and where she resides
Let it be call'd the wild and wand'ring flood,
Ourself the merchant, and this sailing Pandar
Our doubtful hope, our convoy and our bark.

Alarum. Enter Aeneas.

Aeneas. How now, Prince Troilus? Wherefore not afield?

Troilus. Because not there. This woman's answer sorts,
For womanish it is to be from thence.
What news, Aeneas, from the field today?

Aeneas. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Troilus. By whom, Aeneas?

Aeneas. Troilus, by menelaus.

Troilus. Let Paris bleed! 'Tis but a scar to scorn.
Paris is gor'd with Menelaus' horn. Alarum.

Aeneas. Hark, what good sport is out of town today!

Troilus. Better at home, if 'would I might' were 'may.'
But to the sport abroad, are you bound thither?

Aeneas. In all swift haste.

Troilus. Come, go we then togither.

Exeunt.

73, 74 fair . . .Sunday; Cf. n. 78 father; Cf. n. 93 tetchy: peevish 98 Ilium; Cf. n. 103 sorts: is fitting 109 to scorn: to be scorned 110 horn; Cf. n. 115 togither; Cf. n.

Scene Second

Enter Cressida and her Man.

Cressida. Who were those went by?

Man. Queen Hecuba and Helen.

Cressida. And whether go they?

Man. Up to the eastern tower,
Whose height commands as subject all the vale,
To see the battle. Hector, whose patience
Is as a virtue fix'd, today was mov'd.
He chides Andromache and strooke his armorer,
And, like as there were husbandry in war,
Before the sun rose he was harness'd light
And to the field goes he, where every flower
Did as a prophet weep what it foresaw
In Hector's wrath.

Cressida. What was his cause of anger?

Man. The noise goes; this: there is among the Greeks
A lord of Troyan blood, nephew to Hector;
They call him Ajax.

Cressida. Good, and what of him?

Man. They say he is a very man per se
And stands alone.

Cressida. So do all men, unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Man. This man, lady, hath robb'd many beasts of their particular additions. He is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant; a man into whom nature hath so crowded humors that his valor is crush'd into folly, his folly sauced with discretion. There is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attaint but he carries some stain of it. He is melancholy without cause and merry against the hair. He hath the joints of everything, but every-thing so out of joint that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use; or pur-blinded Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cressida. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Man. They say he yesterday cop'd Hector in the battle and stroke him down, the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Enter Pandarus.

Cressida. Who comes here?

Man. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cressida. Hector's a gallant man.

Man. As may be in the world, lady.

Pandarus. What's that? What's that?

Cressida. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pandarus. Good morrow, cousin Cressid. What do you talk of? Good morrow, Alexander. How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cressida. This morning, uncle.

Pandarus. What were you talking of when I came? Was Hector arm'd and gone ere you came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?

1 those went: those who went 3 whether: whither 8 strooke: struck 9 like as: as if husbandry: thrift, good management 10 harness'd: girded with armor noise: rumor 16 nephew; Cf. n. 19 per se: par excellence, superlative, unique 24 additions: qualities, characteristics 26 humors; Cf. n. 26, 27 valor . . . discretion; Cf. n. 28 attaint: stain on honor 30 against the hair: against the grain, out of due season 31 Briareus: a monster in Greek mythology who had a hundred hands and fifty heads 32 Argus: a giant in Greek mythology who had a hundred eyes 33 should: could 35 cop'd: fought 36 stroke: struck 45 cousin; Cf. n.

Cressida. Hector was gone but Helen was not up.
Pandarus. E'en so. Hector was stirring early.
Cressida. That were we talking of, and of his anger.
Pandarus. Was he angry?
Cressida. So he says here.
Pandarus. True, he was so. I know the cause too. He'll lay about him today, I can tell them that. And there's Troilus will not come far behind him; let them take heed of Troilus. I can tell them that too.
Cressida. What, is he angry too?
Pandarus. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.
Cressida. O Jupiter! There's no comparison.
Pandarus. What, not between Troilus and Hector? Do you know a man if you see him?
Cressida. Ay, if I ever saw him before and knew him.
Pandarus. Well, I say Troilus is Troilus.
Cressida. Then you say as I say, for I am sure he is not Hector.
Pandarus. No, [nor] Hector is not Troilus in some degrees.
Cressida. 'Tis just to each of them. He is himself.
Pandarus. Himself? Alas, poor Troilus, I would he were.
Cressida. So he is.
Pandarus. Condition I had gone barefoot to India.
Cressida. He is not Hector.
Pandarus. Himself? No, he's not himself; would a were himself. Well, the gods are above; time must friend or end. Well, Troilus, well. I would my heart were in her body! No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.
Cressida. Excuse me.
Pandarus. He is elder.
Cressida. Pardon me, pardon me.
Pandarus. Th' other's not come to't. You shall tell me another tale when th' other's come to't. Hector shall not have his will this year.
Cressida. He shall not need it, if he have his own.
Pandarus. Nor his qualities.
Cressida. No matter.
Pandarus. Nor his beauty.
Cressida. 'Twould not become him; his own's better.
Pandarus. You have no judgment, niece. Helen herself swore th' other day that Troilus for a brown favor, for so 'tis, I must confess—not brown neither—Cressida. No, but brown.
Pandarus. Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.
Cressida. To say the truth, true and not true.
Pandarus. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.
Cressida. Why, Paris hath color enough.
Pandarus. So he has.
Cressida. Then Troilus should have too much, if she prais'd him above; his complexion is higher than his. He having color enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lieve Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.
Pandarus. I swear to you I think Helen loves him better than Paris.
Cressida. Then she's a merry Greek indeed!
Pandarus. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him th' other day into the compass'd window—and you know he has not past three or four hairs on his chin—
Cressida. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.
Pandarus. Why, he is very young, and yet will he within three pound lift as much as his brother Hector.
Cressida. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter?
Pandarus. But to prove to you that Helen loves him: she came and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin—
Cressida. Juno have mercy! How came it cloven?
Pandarus. Why, you know 'tis dimpled. I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.
Cressida. O, he smiles valiantly.
Pandarus. Does he not?
Cressida. O yes, and 'twere a cloud in autumn.
Pandarus. Why, go to then. But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus—
Cressida. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so.
Pandarus. Troilus? Why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.
Cressida. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' th' shell.
Pandarus. I cannot choose but laugh to think how she tickled his chin. Indeed she has a marvel's white hand, I must needs confess.
Cressida. Without the rack.
Pandarus. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.
Cressida. Alas, poor chin! Many a wart is richer.
Pandarus. But there was such laughing. Queen Hecuba laugh'd that her eyes ran ore.
Cressida. With millstones.
Pandarus. And Cassandra laugh'd.
Cressida. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes. Did her eyes run ore too?
Pandarus. And Hector laugh'd.
Cressida. At what was all this laughing?
Pandarus. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.
Cressida. And't had been a green hair, I should have laugh'd too.
Pandarus. They laugh'd not so much at the hair, as at his pretty answer.
Cressida. What was his answer?
Pandarus. Quoth she, 'Here's but two and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white.'
Cressida. This is her question.
Pandarus. That's true; make no question of that. 'Two and fifty hairs,' quoth he, 'and one white. That white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons.' 'Jupiter!' quoth she, 'which of these hairs is Paris, my husband?' 'The forked one,' quoth he. 'Pluck't out and give it him.' But there was such laughing, and Helen so blush'd, and Paris so chaf'd, and all the rest so laugh'd, that it pass'd!

70 nor: F not 74 Condition: on condition that; Cf. n. 76 a: he; Cf. n. 77 time . . . end; Cf. n. 78 heart: feelings 85 will; Cf. n. 92 brown favor: dark complexion 100 should: would 101 higher: more vivid, colorful 103 lieve: lief 107 merry Greek: a gay, lively person (slang)

109 compass'd window: bay window 111 tapster's arithmetic: Cf. n. 115 lifter: with a pun on 'shoplifter' 117 puts me: puts (me, so-called ethical dative, superfluous in modern usage) 129 addle egg: rotten egg 132 marvel's: marvelous 134 Without the rack: without being tortured 140 With millstones: a proverbial expression, indicating no tears at all 146 Marry: a mild oath, having reference to the Virgin Mary 148 And't: if it; I.1.41.; Cf. n. 151 pretty: clever, apt 159 forked: 'horned,' perhaps with the usual reference to cuckold's horns 162 pass'd: exceeded all bounds

Cressida. So let it now, for it has been a great while going by.

Pandarus. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday. Think on't.

Cressida. So I do.

Pandarus. I'll be sworn 'tis true. He will weep you an 'twere a man born in April. Sound a retreat.

Cressida. And I'll spring up in his tears an 'twere a nettle against May.

Pandarus. Hark! They are coming from the field. Shall we stand up here and see them as they pass toward Ilium? Good niece, do, sweet niece Cressida.

Cressida. At your pleasure.

Pandarus. Here, here, here's an excellent place. Here we may see most bravely. I'll tell you them all by their names as they pass by, but mark Troilus above the rest.

Enter Aeneas [and passes over the stage].

Cressida. Speak not so loud.

Pandarus. That's Aeneas. Is not that a brave man? He's one of the flowers of Troy, I can [tell] you. But mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

Cressida. Who's that?

Enter Antenor [and passes over the stage].

Pandarus. That's Antenor. He has a shrowd wit, I can tell you, and he's a man good enough. He's one o' th' soundest judgment in Troy whosoever, and a proper man of person. When comes Troilus? I'll show you Troilus anon. If he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cressida. Will he give you the nod?

Pandarus. You shall see.

Cressida. If he do, the rich shall have more.

Enter Hector [and passes over the stage].

Pandarus. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that! There's a fellow! Go thy way, Hector. There's a brave man, niece. O brave Hector! Look how he looks. There's a countenance! Is't not a brave man?

Cressida. O brave man!

Pandarus. Is a not? It does a man's heart good. Look you what hacks are on his helmet; look you yonder. Do you see? Look you there. There's no jesting; [there's] laying on, tak't off who will, as they say. There be hacks!

Cressida. Be those with swords?

Enter Paris [and passes over the stage].

Pandarus. Swords, anything, he cares not. And the divel come to him, it's all one. By God's lid, it does one's heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris! Look ye yonder, niece. Is't not a gallant man too, is't not? Why, this is brave now. Who said he came hurt home today? He's not hurt. Why, this will do Helen's heart good now, ha? Would I could see Troilus now. You shall [see] Troilus anon.

Cressida. Who's that?

Enter Hellenus [and passes over the stage.]

Pandarus. That's Hellenus. I marvel where Troilus is. That's Hellenus. I think he went not forth today. That's Hellenus.

Cressida. Can Hellenus fight, uncle?

Pandarus. Hellenus? No. Yes, he'll fight indifferent well. I marvel where Troilus is. Hark, do you not hear the people cry 'Troilus'? Hellenus is a priest.

Cressida. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

Enter Troilus [and passes over the stage].

Pandarus. Where? Yonder? That's Deiphobus. 'Tis Troilus! There's a man, niece! Hem? Brave Troilus, the prince of chivalry!

Cressida. Peace, for shame, peace!

Pandarus. Mark him, [note] him. O brave Troilus! Look well upon him, niece. Look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helm more hack'd than Hector's. And how he looks, and how he goes. O admirable youth! He nere saw three-and-twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way. Had I a sister were a Grace or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is dirt to him, and I warrant, Helen, to change, would give money to boot.

Enter common soldiers [and pass over the stage].

Cressida. Here come more.

Pandarus. Asses, fools, dolts! Chaff and bran, chaff and bran. Porredge after meat. I could live and die i' th' eyes of Troilus. Nere look, nere look; the eagles are gone! Crows and daws, crows and daws. I had rather be such a man as Troilus than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cressida. There is among the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus.

Pandarus. Achilles? A drayman, a porter, a very camel.

Cressida. Well, well.

Pandarus. Well, well? Why, have you any discretion? Have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and so forth, the spice and salt that seasons a man?

Cressida. Ay, a minc'd man. And then to be bak'd with no date in the pie, for then the man's date's out.

Pandarus. You are such another woman, one knows not at what ward you lie.

Cressida. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you to defend all these; and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pandarus. Say one of your watches.

Cressida. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too. If I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow, unless it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching.

Enter Boy.

Pandarus. You are such another!

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pandarus. Where?

Boy. At your own house.

171 against: in expectation of 177 bravely: excellently 181 tell: F omits 184 shrowd: shrewd 186 whosoever: no matter who proper man of person: man of attractive appearance 189 nod; Cf. n. 193 brave; Cf. n. 197 Is a not?: Is he not? 199 there's laying on: real fighting; F laying on tak't off: depreciate it 200 be: are 202 divel: 'devil,' so spelled consistently throughout this play 203 God's lid: 'by God's eyelid,' a mild oath 208 shall see: F shall

210 marvel: wonder 213 indifferent: middlingly 220 note: F not 223 nere: never 230 Porredge: porridge i' th' eyes of Troilus: in Troilus' company 243 date's out; Cf. n. 244 such another woman: such a perverse woman 245 ward: a defensive posture in fencing 248 mask; Cf. n. 249 lie: F has a superfluous at after lie 251 watch; Cf. n. 254 swell past hiding: a reference to pregnancy

Pandarus. Good, boy, tell him I come. I doubt he be hurt.
Fare ye well, good niece. [Exit Boy.]
Cressida. Adieu, uncle.
Pandarus. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.
Cressida. To bring, uncle.
Pandarus. Ay, a token from Troilus.
Cressida. By the same token, you are a bawd. Exit Pandarus.
Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice
He offers in another's enterprise.
But more in Troilus thousandfold I see
Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be;
Yet hold I off. Women are angels wooing;
Things won are done; joy's soul lies in the doing.
That she belov'd knows nought that knows not this:
Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is.
That she was never yet that ever knew
Love got so sweet as when desire did sue.
Therefore this maxim out of love I teach:
'Achievement is command; ungain'd beseech.'
[Then] though my heart's contents firm love doth bear,
Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear. Exit.

Scene Third

Sennet. Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Ulysses, Diomedes, Menelaus, with others.

Agamemnon. Princess,
What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks?
The ample proposition that hope makes
In all designs begun on earth below
Fails in the promised largeness. Checks and disasters
Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd;
As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap,
Infect the sound pine and diverts his grain,
Tortive and errant, from his course of growth.
Nor, princes, is it matter new to us
That we come short of our suppose so far
That after seven years' siege yet Troy walls stand.
Sith every action that hath gone before
Whereof we have record, trial did draw
Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,
And that unbodied figure of the thought
That gave't surmised shape. Why then, you princes,
Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works
And think them shame, which are indeed nought else
But the protractive trials of great love
To find persistive constancy in men?
The fineness of which metal is not found
In Fortune's love; for then the bold and coward,
The wise and fool, the artist and unread,
The hard and soft, seem all affin'd and kin.
But in the wind and tempest of her frown
Distinction with a loud and powerful fan,
Puffing at all, winnows the light away,
And what hath mass or matter by itself
Lies rich in virtue and unmingled.
Nestor. With due observance of thy godly seat,
Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance
Lies the true proof of men. The sea being smooth,
How many shallow bauble boats dare sail
Upon her patient breast, making their way
With those of nobler bulk!
But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage
The gentle Thetis, and anon behold
The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut,
Bounding between the two moist elements
Like Perseus' horse. Where's then the saucy boat
Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
Corrival'd greatness? Either to harbor fled
Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so,
Doth valor's show and valor's worth divide
In storms of Fortune. For in her ray and brightness
The herd hath more annoyance why the brize
Than by the tiger; but when the splitting wind
Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,
And flies fled under shade, why then the thing of courage,
As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
And with an accent tun'd in selfsame key
Retorts to chiding Fortune.
Ulysses. Agamemnon,
Thou great commander, nerve, and bone of Greece,
Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit
In whom the tempers and the minds of all
Should be shut up, hear what Ulysses speaks.
Besides th' applause and approbation
The which, [To Agamemnon.] most mighty for thy place and sway,
And thou [To Nestor.] most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life,
I give to both your speeches; which were such
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold up high in brass; and such again
As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver,
Should with a bond of air, strong as the axletree
In which the heavens ride, knit all Greeks' ears
To his experienc'd tongue; yet let it please both,
Tho great, and wise, to hear Ulysses speak.
Agamemnon. Speak, Prince of Ithaca, and be't of less expect
That matter needless, of importless burthen,
Divide thy lips than we are confident,
When rank Thersites opes [masty] jaws,
We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.
Ulysses. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down,

259 doubt: respect, fear 263 To bring: Cf. n. 269 glass: mirror 270 wooing: when being wooed 272 she: woman 275 Love got: love already achieved 277 Achievement . . . beseech; Cf. n. beseech: entreaty 278 Then: F That 3 proposition: offer 7 conflux: stressed — ⏑ — 8 diverts; Cf. n. 9 Tortive: distorted, twisted 11 suppose: expectation 13 Sith: since 14 trial: the testing by experience, the actual events 15 Bias: lopsided, not quite perfect; Cf. n. 20 protractive: protracted, drawn out 21 persistive: persistent 23 Fortune's; Cf. n. 24 artist: scholar 25 affin'd: related

30 unmingled: pure, not mixed (read here as four syllables) 32 apply: moralize 33 reproof: resistance, refusing to accept 35 bauble: weak, toylike 38 Boreas: the north wind 39 Thetis: originally a sea goddess, here used to mean the sea in general 42 Perseus' horse: Pegasus 46 valor's . . . worth: apparent bravery and actual bravery 48 brize: gadfly 51 flies fled: flies have fled shade: shelter 54 Retorts; Cf. n. 56 nerve: sinew 60 th' applause; F the applause: Q is better metrically since approbation has five syllables here 61 To Agamemnon; Cf. n. 66 in brass: engraved on a brass tablet 67 hatch'd: etched; Cf. n. 68 air: breath 69 knit: tie, join 72 expect: expectation, build-up 73 importless: meaningless burthen: substance, purport 75 rank: vile, offensive opes: opens masty: massive, powerful; F Masticke; Cf. n. 77 his: its basis: base, foundation had been: would have been

And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master
But for these instances.
The specialty of rule hath been neglected,
And look how many Grecian tents do stand
Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.
When that the general is not like the hive,
To whom the foragers shall all repair,
What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded,
Th' unworthiest shews as fairly in the mask.
The heavens themselves, the planets, and this center
Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture, course, proportion, season, form.
Office, and custom, in all line of order;
And therefore is the glorious planet Sol
In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd
Amidst the other, whose med'cinable eye
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
And posts, like the commandment of a king,
Sans check, to good and bad. But when the planets
In evil mixture to disorder wander,
What plagues and what portents, what mutiny,
What raging of the sea, shaking of earth,
Commotion in the winds! Frights, changes, horrors
Divert and crack, rend and deracinate
The unity and married calm of states
Quite from their fixure. O, when degree is shak'd,
Which is the ladder to all high designs,
The enterprise is sick. How could communities,
Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,
The primogenitive and due of birth,
Prerogative of age, crowns, scepters, laurels,
But by degree, stand in authentic place?
Take but degree away, untune that string,
And hark, what discord follows! Each thing meets
In mere oppugnancy. The bounded waters
Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores
And make a sop of all this solid globe.
Strength should be lord of imbecility,
And the rude son should strike his father dead.
Force should be right; or rather, right and wrong,
Between whose endless jar justice resides,
Should lose her names, and so should justice too.
Then everything includes itself in power,
Power into will, will into appetite,
And appetite, an universal wolf,
So doubly seconded with will and power,
Must make perforce an universal prey
And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
This chaos, when degree is suffocate,
Follows the choking;
And this neglection of degrees is it
That by a pace goes backward in a purpose

79 instances: specific causes 80 specialty of rule: prerogatives of ruling or commanding 85 Degree: subordination in rank vizarded: masked 86 shews: shows 87 center: the earth; Cf. n. 89 Insisture: regularity, constancy 91 Sol; Cf. n. 93 the other: the other planets med'cinable: curative, having the effect of medicine 94 aspects; Cf. n. 95 posts: speeds. 96 Sans: check without hindrance or hesitation 101 deracinate: uproot 103 fixure: fixed stability 104 designs: plans, purposes 107 dividable: separate 108 primogenitive: primogeniture 110 authentic: true, legal 113 oppugnancy: opposition 114 Should: would 115 sop: a thing soaked or soggy 116 should: would imbecility: physical weakness 120 her: their; Cf. n. 121 includes itself in: is embraced in 127 suffocate: suffocated 130, 131 purpose . . . climb; Cf. n.

It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd
By him one step below, he by the next,
That next by him beneath; so every step,
Exampled by the first pace that is sick
Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
Of pale and bloodless emulation.
And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
Troy in our weakness lives, not in her strength.
Nestor. Most wisely hath Ulysses here discover'd
The fever whereof all our power is sick.
Agamemnon. The nature of the sickness found, Ulysses,
What is the remedy?
Ulysses. The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns,
The sinew and the forehand of our host,
Having his ear full of his airy fame,
Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent
Lies mocking our designs. With him Patroclus
Upon a lazy bed the livelong day
Breaks scurril jests,
And with ridiculous and awkward action
(Which, slanderer, he imitation calls)
He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamemnon,
Thy topless deputation he puts on,
And like a strutting player whose conceit
Lies in his hamstring and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffolage—
Such to-be-pitied and orewrested seeming
He acts thy greatness in. And when he speaks,
'Tis like a chime a-mending, with terms unsquar'd,
Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropp'd,
Would [seem] hyperboles. At this fusty stuff
The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause,
Cries 'Excellent! 'Tis Agamemnon just!
Now play me Nestor; hum, and stroke thy beard
As he, being dress'd to some oration.'
That's done, as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels, as like as Vulcan and his wife;
Yet god Achilles still cries 'Excellent!
'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me, Patroclus,
Arming to answer in a night alarm.'
And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age
Must be the scene of mirth: to cough and spit,
And with a palsy fumbling on his gorget,
Shake in and out the rivet. And at this sport
Sir Valor dies; cries 'O, enough, Patroclus!
Or give me ribs of steel; I shall split all
In pleasure of my spleen.' And in this fashion
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,

134 sick: envious 136 emulation: envy, imitation (five syllables here) 140 discover'd: pointed out, revealed 144 opinion: fame, public approval 145 forehand: mainstay 147 dainty: fastidious, conceited 150 scurril: scurrilous 153 pageants: acts out, mimics 154 topless deputation: supreme dignity deputed to the commander 155 conceit: faculty of mind 156 hamstring: tendons behind the knee, governing leg movement 158 stretch'd footing: exaggerated paces scaffolage: wooden stage 159 orewrested: too tight, strained; Cf. n. 161 a-mending: being mended 162 Typhon: mythical Greek giant associated with hurricanes 163 seem; F seemes 167 hum: hem and haw 168 being dress'd to: preparing for oration: four syllables 170 Vulcan and his wife; Cf. n. 172 me: an ethical dative, without special meaning 173 answer: i.e. answer a summons to battle 176 gorget: a piece of armor for the throat 180 spleen: merriment

Severals and generals of grace exact,
Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
Success or loss, what is or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.
Nestor. And in the imitation of these twain,
Who, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
With an imperial voice, many are infect.
Ajax is grown self-will'd and bears his head
In such a rein, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles, and keeps his tent like him,
Make factious feasts, rails on our state of war,
Bold as an oracle, and sets Thersites—
A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint—
To match us in comparisons with dirt,
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank soever rounded in with danger.
Ulysses. They tax our policy and call it cowardice,
Count wisdom as no member of the war,
Forestall prescience, and esteem no act
But that of hand. The still and mental parts
That do contrive how many hands shall strike
When fitness call them on, and know by measure
Of their observant toil the enemies' weight—
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity.
They call this bedwork, mapp'ry, closet war;
So that the ram that batters down the wall,
For the great swing and rudeness of his poise,
They place before his hand that made the engine,
Or those that with the fineness of their souls
By reason guide his execution.
Nestor. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse
Makes many Thetis' sons. Tucket.
Agamemnon. What trumpet? Look, Menelaus.
Menelaus. From Troy.

Enter Aeneas.

Agamemnon. What would you 'fore our tent?
Aeneas. Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you?
Agamemnon. Even this.
Aeneas. May one that is a herald, and a prince,
Do a fair message to his kingly ears?
Agamemnon. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm
'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voice
Call Agamemnon head and general.
Aeneas. Fair leave and large security. How may
A stranger to those most imperial looks
Know them from eyes of other mortals?
Agamemnon. How?
Aeneas. Ay.
I ask that I might waken reverence,
And on the cheek be ready with a blush
Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phoebus.
Which is that god in office, guiding men?
Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?
Agamemnon. This Troyan scorns us, or the men of Troy
Are ceremonious courtiers.
Aeneas. Courtiers as free, as debonair, unarm'd,
As bending angels; that's their fame in peace.
But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls,
Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and, Jove's accord,
Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Aeneas!
Peace, Troyan. Lay thy finger on thy lips.
The worthiness of praise distains his worth
If that [the] prais'd himself brings the praise forth.
But what the repining enemy commends,
That breath fame blows; that praise sole pure transcends.
Agamemnon. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself Aeneas?
Aeneas. Ay, Greek, that is my name.
Agamemnon. What's your affair, I pray you?
Aeneas. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's ears.
Agamemnon. He hears nought privately that comes from Troy.
Aeneas. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper him.
I bring a trumpet to awake his ear,
To set his sense on the attentive bent
And then to speak.
Agamemnon. Speak frankly as the wind.
It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour.
That thou shalt know, Troyan, he is awake,
He tells thee so himself.
Aeneas. Trumpet, blow loud.
Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents,
And every Greek of mettle, let him know
What Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud.

The trumpets sound.

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy,
A prince call'd Hector—Priam is his father—
Who in this dull and long-continu'd truce
Is rusty grown. He bade me take a trumpet
And to this purpose speak: Kings, princes, lords,
If there be one amongst the fair'st of Greece
That holds his honor higher than his ease,
That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril,
That knows his valor and knows not his fear,
That loves his mistress more than in confession,
With truant vows to her own lips he loves,
And dare avow her beauty and her worth
In other arms than hers—to him this challenge.
Hector, in view of Troyans and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it.
He hath a lady wiser, fairer, truer
Than ever Greek did compass in his arms,
And will tomorrow with his trumpet call,
Midway between your tents and walls of Troy,
To rouse a Grecian that is true in love.
If any come, Hector shall honor him;
If none, he'll say in Troy when he retires,
The Grecian dames are sunburnt and not worth
The splinter of a lance. Even so much.
Agamemnon. This shall be told our lovers, Lord Aeneas.
If none of them have soul in such a kind,
We left them all at home. But we are soldiers,

182 Severals ... exact: particular and general qualities of excellence 183 preventions: defensive measures 186 paradoxes: absurdities 189 imperial voice: commanding influence infect: infected 191 In such a rein: high, as a horse tight reined 192 broad: arrogant keeps: stays in 197 exposure: i.e. to danger 199 tax: criticize 201 Forestall: obstruct 204, 205 by measure ... toil: by means of their laborious observation and reconnoitering 207 mapp'ry: map making 209 his: its 210 his hand that: the hand of him who 214 Thetis' sons; Cf. n. Tucket: a trumpet call 230 waken reverence: summon up deferential feelings

239 bending: courteous, bowing 240 galls: tempers 241, 242 Jove's ... heart; Cf. n. 244 distains: soils, detracts from 245 the prais'd: F he prais'd 247 sole pure: alone and pure 255 on the attentive bent: at attention 275 truant: idle, vain

And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love.
If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector; if none else, I'll be he.
Nestor. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man
When Hector's grandsire suck'd. He is old now,
But if there be not in our Grecian mold
One noble man that hath one spark of fire
To answer for his love, tell him from me,
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver
And in my vantbrace put this wither'd brawn,
And meeting him, will tell him that my lady
Was fairer than his grandam, and as chaste
As may be in the world. His youth in flood,
I'll [prove] this truth with my three drops of blood.
Aeneas. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth.
Ulysses. Amen.
Agamemnon. Fair Lord Aeneas, let me touch your hand;
To our pavilion shall I lead you first.
Achilles shall have word of this intent,
So shall each lord of Greece from tent to tent.
Yourself shall feast with us before you go
And find the welcome of a noble foe.
Exeunt. [Manent] Ulysses and Nestor.
Ulysses. Nestor.
Nestor. What says Ulysses?
Ulysses. I have a young conception in my brain;
Be you my time to bring it to some shape.
Nestor. What is't?
Ulysses. This 'tis:
Blunt wedges rive hard knots. The seeded pride
That hath to this maturity blown up
In rank Achilles must or now be cropp'd
Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil
To overbulk us all.
Nestor. Well, and how?
Ulysses. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,
However it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.
Nestor. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,
Whose grossness little characters sum up;
And, in the publication, make no strain
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Lybia (though Apollo knows
'Tis dry enough), will with great speed of judgment,
Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose
Pointing on him.
Ulysses. And wake him to the answer, think you?
Nestor. Yes, 'tis most meet. Who may you else oppose
That can from Hector bring his honor off,
If not Achilles? Though't be a sportful combat,
Yet in this trial much opinion dwells;
For here the Troyans taste our dear'st repute
With their fin'st palate; and trust to me, Ulysses,
Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd
In this wild action. For the success,
Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general,
And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd
He that meets Hector issues from our choice;
And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes merit her election and doth boil,
As 'twere, from forth us all, a man distill'd
Out of our virtues; who miscarrying,
What heart from hence receives the conqu'ring part
To steel a strong opinion to themselves!
Which entertain'd, limbs are in his instruments,
In no less working, than are swords and bows
Directive by the limbs.
Ulysses. Give pardon to my speech:
Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares
And think perchance they'll sell; if not,
The lustre of the better yet to show
Shall show the better. Do not consent
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honor and our shame in this
Are dogg'd with two strange followers.
Nestor. I see them not with my old eyes. What are they?
Ulysses. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,
Were he not proud, we all should wear with him.
But he already is too insolent,
And we were better parch in Afric sun
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes
Should he 'scape Hector fair. If he were foil'd,
Why then we did our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No, make a lott'ry,
And by device let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector. Among ourselves
Give him allowance as the worthier man,
For that will physic the great Myrmidon
Who broils in loud applause, and make him fall
His crest that prouder than blue iris bends.
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices; if he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still,
That we have better men. But hit or miss,
Our project's life this shape of sense assumes,
Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes.
Nestor. Now, Ulysses, I begin to relish thy advice,
And I will give a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon. Go we to him straight.
Two curs shall tame each other. Pride alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone.

301 beaver: helmet with face guard 302 vantbrace: armor for the arms 305 His youth in flood: though he be in his prime 306 prove: F pawn SD Manent F Manet: Q omits 317 young conception: germ of an idea 321 rive: split, sever seeded: mature, gone to seed 323 or: either 324 nursery: read 'nurs'ry' 330 perspicuous: clear, evident even: read 'e'en' substance: material riches 331 characters: figures 332 publication: the proclamation of Hector's challenge make no strain: never fear, have no difficulty in believing 334 Lybia: North African desert country 339 meet: fitting 340 bring . . . off: come out with honor unscathed 342 opinion: reputation

345 imputation: good name oddly pois'd: in delicate balance 346-348 For . . . general; Cf. n. 346 success: outcome 347 scantling: portion, amount 349-352 And in . . . large; Cf. n. 350 subsequent: stressed — ⏑ — 355 Makes . . . election: elects the one with greatest merit 358 conqu'ring part: the winning side, i.e. the Trojan 359 steel: bolster up 360-362 Which . . . the limbs; Cf. n. 362 Directive: subject to direction, directable 367 to show: to be shown 377 salt: bitter 379 main opinion: chief reason for our glorious reputation 380 taint: the staining of honor 381 device: stratagem blockish: stupid 382 sort: lot 383 allowance: acknowledgment 384 physic: cure great Myrmidon: Achilles 385 broils in: seethes in, revels in fall: lower, let fall 388 voices: loud praises 397 tarre: urge, incite

Act Second ❧ Scene First

Enter Ajax and Thersites.

Ajax. Thersites?

Thersites. Agamemnon—how if he had biles, full, all over, generally?

Ajax. Thersites?

Thersites. And those biles did run? Say so. Did not the general run? Were not that a botchy core?

Ajax. Dog!

Thersites. Then there would come some matter from him. I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst [thou] not hear? Feel, then! Strikes him.

Thersites. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel, beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, you whinid'st leaven, speak! I will beat thee into handsomeness.

Thersites. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness; but I think thy horse will sooner con an oration than you learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? A red murrain [o'] thy jade's tricks.

Ajax. Toadstool, learn me the proclamation.

Thersites. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strik'st me thus?

Ajax. The proclamation!

Thersites. Thou art proclaim'd a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porpentine, do not! My fingers itch.

Thersites. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee. I would make thee the loathsom'st scab in Greece.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation!

Thersites. Thou grumblest and railest every hour on Achilles, and thou art as full of envy at his greatness as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty; ay, that thou bark'st at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites!

Thersites. Thou shouldst strike him.

Ajax. Cobloaf!

Thersites. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a bisquit.

Ajax. You whoreson cur!

Thersites. Do, do!

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Thersites. Ay, do, do, thou sodden-witted lord! Thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows. An asinico may tutor thee. Thou scurvy valiant ass, thou art but to thrash Troyans, and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit like a barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog!

Thersites. You scurvy lord!

Ajax. You cur!

Thersites. Mars his idiot! Do, rudeness; do, camel, do do!

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achilles. Why, how now, Ajax? Wherefore do you this? How now, Thersites? What's the matter, man?

Thersites. You see him there, do you?

Achilles. Ay. What's the matter?

Thersites. Nay, look upon him.

Achilles. So I do. What's the matter?

Thersites. Nay, but regard him well.

Achilles. Well? Why, I do so.

Thersites. But yet you look not well upon him; for whomsoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.

Achilles. I know that, fool.

Thersites. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.

Thersites. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters. His evasions have ears thus long. I have bobb'd his brain more than he has beat my bones. I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his piamater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax—who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head—I'll tell you what I say of him.

Achilles. What?

Thersites. I say this Ajax—

Achilles. Nay, good Ajax.

Thersites. Has not so much wit—

Achilles. Nay, I must hold you.

Thersites. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achilles. Peace, fool.

Thersites. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not—he, there! That he! Look you there!

Ajax. O thou damn'd cur, I shall—

Achilles. Will you set your wit to a fool's?

Thersites. No, I warrant you, for a fool's will shame it.

Patroclus. Good words, Thersites.

Achilles. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I bade [the] vile owl go learn me the tenor of the proclamation, and he rails upon me.

Thersites. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Thersites. I serve here voluntary.

Achilles. Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary; no man is beaten voluntary. Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.

Thersites. Ene so, a great deal of your wit, too, lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch if he knock out either of your brains. He were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel.

Achilles. What, with me too, Thersites?

Thersites. There's Ulysses and old Nestor, whose wit was moldy ere their grandsires had nails on their toes, yoke you like draft oxen and make you plough up the war.

Achilles. What? What?

Thersites. Yes, good sooth. To Achilles! to Ajax! to—

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Thersites. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as much as thou afterwards.

Patroclus. No more words, Thersites.

2 biles: boils 6 botchy: ulcerous 8 matter: pun on 'sense' and 'pus' 10 canst thou: F canst *y*e 14 whinid'st finewed'st, most mouldy; Cf. n. 15 handsomeness: politeness 17 con: learn 18 without book: by heart 19 murrain: plague o': F o'th jade's tricks: tricks of a mean horse 20 learn me: inform me of 21 sense: sensibility, feeling 25 porpentine: porcupine 31, 32 Cerberus . . . Proserpina's; Cf. n. 35 Cobloaf: small, rounded loaf 36 pun: pound 42 asinico: young ass 44 bought and sold: manipulated and deceived as of no account 51 Mars his idiot: Mars' idiot; Cf. n.

66 evasions . . . long: they are asslike, stupid bobb'd: beaten, pummeled 68 piamater: brain 82 set: oppose 86 vile: F thee vile 93 impress: forced service 94 Ene: even 95 be: are 96 He were as good: he might as well 97 fusty: stale 103 good sooth: in truth, surely To Achilles! to Ajax!; Cf. n.

Thersites. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brooch bids me, shall I?

Achilles. There's for you, Patroclus.

Thersites. I will see you hang'd like clotpolls ere I come any more to your tents. I will keep where there is wit stirring and leave the faction of fools. Exit.

Patroclus. A good riddance.

Achilles. Marry, this, sir, is proclaim'd through all our host:
That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun,
Will with a trumpet 'twixt our tents and Troy
Tomorrow morning call some knight to arms
That hath a stomach, and such a one that dare
Maintain—I know not what. 'Tis trash. Farewell.

Ajax. Farewell? Who shall answer him?

Achilles. I know not. 'Tis put to lottery; otherwise he knew his man.

Ajax. O, meaning you? I will go learn more of it. [Exeunt.]

Scene Second

Enter Priam, Hector, Troilus, Paris, and Helenus.

Priam. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent,
Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks:
'Deliver Helen, and all damage else
(As honor, loss of time, travail, expense,
Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd
In hot digestion of this cormorant war)
Shall be stroke off.' Hector, what say you to't?

Hector. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I,
As far as touches my particular,
Yet dread Priam,
There is no lady of more softer bowels,
More spongy to suck in the sense of fear,
More ready to cry out, 'Who knows what follows?'
Than Hector is. The wound of peace is surety,
Surety secure. But modest doubt is call'd
The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches
To th' bottom of the worst. Let Helen go.
Since the first sword was drawn about this question,
Every tithe soul 'mongst many thousand dismes
Hath been as dear as Helen. I mean, of ours.
If we have lost so many tenths of ours
To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to us,
Had it our name, the value of one ten,
What merit's in that reason which denies
The yielding of her up.

Troilus. Fie, fie, my brother!
Weigh you the worth and honor of a king
So great as our dread father in a scale
Of common ounces? Will you with counters sum
The past proportion of his infinite,
And buckle in a waist most fathomless
With spans and inches so diminutive
As fears and reason? Fie, for godly shame!

Helenus. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons,
You are so empty of them. Should not our father
Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons,
Because your speech hath none that tells him so.

Troilus. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest;
You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:
You know an enemy intends you harm;
You know a sword employ'd is perilous
And reason flies the object of all harm.
Who marvels, then, when Helenus beholds
A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
The very wings of reason to his heels,
And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove
Or like a star disorb'd? Nay, if we talk of reason,
Let's shut our gates and sleep. Manhood and honor
Should have hard hearts, would they but fat their thoughts
With this cramm'd reason. Reason and respect
Make livers pale and lustihood deject.

Hector. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost
The holding.

Troilus. What's aught, but as 'tis valu'd?

Hector. But value dwells not in particular will.
It holds his estimate and dignity
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself
As in the prizer. 'Tis [mad] idolatry
To make the service greater than the god,
And the will dotes that is inclinable
To what infectiously itself affects,
Without some image of th' affected merit.

Troilus. I take today a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will;
My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of will and judgment. How may I avoid,
Although my will distaste what it elected,
The wife I chose? There can be no evasion
To blench from this, and to stand firm by honor.
We turn not back the silks upon the merchant
When we have spoil'd them; nor the remainder viands
We do not throw in unrespective [sieve]
Because we now are full. It was thought meet
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks.
Your breath of full consent bellied his sails.
The seas and winds, old wranglers, took a truce
And did him service. He touch'd the ports, desir'd,
And for an old aunt whom the Greeks held captive,
He brought a Grecian queen whose youth and freshness
Wrinkles Apollo's and makes stale the morning.
Why keep we her? The Grecians keep our aunt.
Is she worth keeping? Why, she is a pearl
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,
And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
If you'll avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went,

108 brooch; Cf. n. 111 clotpolls: blockheads 119 stomach: appetite for fighting 122 knew: would know SD Exeunt F Exit; Q omits 6 cormorant: a predatory bird 9 touches my particular: concerns me in particular 11 softer bowels: sensitivity, compassion 14 surety: overconfident security 16 tent: swab for probing wounds 19 tithe: tenth; Cf. n. dismes: (pronounced 'dimes') tens (of men lost) 23 Had it our name: even if she were one of us 29 counters: beads on an abacus 30 past: exceeding infinite: infinite greatness 31 fathomless: measureless

34 reasons: homophonous pun on 'reasons' and 'raisins' 39 fur . . . reason: use reason for everything 46 And fly . . . Jove; Cf. n. 47 disorb'd: displaced from its orbit 49 fat: make fat, feed 50 respect: circumspection 51 livers: the reputed source of courage and 'gall' deject: dejected 55 particular will: the volition of an individual 56 his: its dignity: worthiness 58 prizer: person who prizes mad; F made 60-62 And the . . . merit; Cf. n. 60 dotes: is foolish 66 traded: experienced 67 avoid: cast off 68 distaste: not like 70 blench: flinch 73 sieve: F same 78 touch'd: reached 79 old aunt: cf. I.2.16 Cf. n. 81 Wrinkles: makes appear wrinkled and ugly

As you must needs, for you all cried, 'Go, go';
If you'll confess he brought home noble prize,
As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands
And cried, 'Inestimable'; why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate
And do a deed that fortune never did,
Beggar the estimation which you priz'd
Richer than sea and land? O theft most base
That we have stolne what we do fear to keep!
But thieves unworthy of a thing so stolne,
That in their country did them that disgrace,
We fear to warrant in our native place.

Enter Cassandra with her hair about her ears.

Cassandra. Cry, Troyans, cry!
Priam. What noise? What shriek is this?
Troilus. 'Tis our mad sister. I do know her voice.
Cassandra. Cry, Troyans!
Hector. It is Cassandra.
Cassandra. Cry, Troyans, cry! Lend me ten thousand eyes
And I will fill them with prophetic tears.
Hector. Peace, sister, peace.
Cassandra. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled old,
Soft infancy, that nothing can but cry,
Add to my clamor! Let us pay betimes
A moity of that mass of moan to come.
Cry, Troyans, cry! Practice your eyes with tears.
Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand.
Our firebrand brother Paris burns us all.
Cry, Troyans, cry; a Helen and a woe.
Cry, cry, Troy burns, or else let Helen go. Exit.
Hector. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains
Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse? Or is your blood
So madly hot that no discourse of reason
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause
Can qualify the same?
Troilus. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it,
Nor once deject the courage of our minds
Because Cassandra's mad. Her brainsick raptures
Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel
Which hath our several honors all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons,
And Jove forbid there should be done amongst us
Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for and maintain.
Paris. Else might the world convince of levity
As well my undertakings as your counsels;
But I attest the gods, your full consent
Gave wings to my propension and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project.
For what, alas, can these my single arms?
What propugnation is in one man's valor
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should nere retract what he hath done
Nor faint in the pursuit.
Priam. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights.
You have the honey still, but these the gall;
So to be valiant is no praise at all.
Paris. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasure such a beauty brings with it;
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wip'd off in honorable keeping her.
What treason were it to the ransack'd queen,
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up
On terms of base compulsion! Can it be
That so degenerate a strain as this
Should once set footing in your generous bosoms?
There's not the meanest spirit on our party
Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
When Helen is defended; nor none so noble
Whose life were ill bestow'd or death unfam'd
Where Helen is the subject. Then, I say,
Well may we fight for her whom we know well
The world's large spaces cannot parallel.
Hector. Paris and Troilus, you have both said well;
And on the cause and question now in hand
Have gloz'd, but superficially; not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy.
The reasons you allege do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemp'red blood
Than to make up a free determination
'Twixt right and wrong; for pleasure and revenge
Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves
All dues be rend'red to their owners. Now
What nearer debt in all humanity
Than wife is to the husband? If this law
Of nature be corrupted through affection,
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same,
There is a law in each well ord'red nation
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory.
If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,
As it is known she is, these moral laws
Of nature and of nation speak aloud
To have her back return'd. Thus to persist
In doing wrong extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
Is this in way of truth. Yet neretheless,
My spritely brethren, I propend to you

91 issue: result rate: berate, chide 93 Beggar: make poor, belittle 95 That: in that. stolne: stol'n 98 warrant: make good, defend 110 moity: moiety, part 119 discourse of reason: process of reasoning 120 success: result, final issue 126 raptures: ecstatic visions 127 distaste: destroy the savor of 129 gracious: righteous 132 spleen: heart, courage 134 convince: convict 136 attest: call to witness 137 propension: inclination, desire 139 can: can do single: unaided

140 propugnation: defense 143 pass: experience, bear the brunt of 145 nere: never retract: draw back from 153 soil: stain rape: abduction 155 ransack'd: abducted 160 generous: high-born 161 on our party: on our side 170 gloz'd: commented 171 Aristotle: Cf. n. 177 adders: Cf. n. 182 affection: appetite, inclination 183 partial: excessive (three syllables here) 194 neretheless: nevertheless 195 propend: bow to, give in to

In resolution to keep Helen still;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence
Upon our joint and several dignities.

Troilus. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design.
Were it not glory that we more affected
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Troyan blood
Spent more in her defense. But worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honor and renown,
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds,
Whose present courage may beat down our foes,
And fame in time to come canonize us.
For I presume brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory
As smiles upon the forehead of this action
For the wide world's revenue.

Hector. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus.
I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks
Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits.
I was advertis'd their great general slept,
Whilst emulation in the army crept.
This I presume will wake him. Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter Thersites solus.

Thersites. How now, Thersites? What, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? He beats me, and I rail at him. O worthy satisfaction! Would it were otherwise; that I could beat him whilst he rail'd at me. 'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise divels, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then there's Achilles, a rare enginer! If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove, the king of gods; and Mercury, loose all the serpentine craft of thy caduceus, if thou take not that little little less than little wit from them that they have, which short-arm'd ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider without drawing the massy irons and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! Or rather the bone ache, for that, methinks, is the curse dependent on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers and divel, Envy, say 'Amen.' What ho? My Lord Achilles?

Enter Patroclus.

Patroclus. Who's there? Thersites? Good Thersites, come in and rail.

Thersites. If I could have rememb'red a gilt counterfeit, thou wouldst not have slipp'd out of my contemplation. But it is no matter. Thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! Heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee. Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death, then if she that lays thee out says thou art a fair corse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen. Where's Achilles?

Patroclus. What, art thou devout? Wast thou in a prayer?

Thersites. Ay. The heavens hear me!

Enter Achilles.

Achilles. Who's there?

Patroclus. Thersites, my lord.

Achilles. Where, where? Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not serv'd thyself into my table so many meals? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Thersites. Thy commander, Achilles. Then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patroclus. Thy lord, Thersites. Then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Thersites. Thy knower, Patroclus. Then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patroclus. Thou mayst tell that know'st.

Achilles. O, tell, tell!

Thersites. I'll decline the whole question. Agamemnon commands Achilles, Achilles is my lord, I am Patroclus' knower, and Patroclus is a fool.

Patroclus. You rascal!

Thersites. Peace, fool, I have not done.

Achilles. He is a privileg'd man. Proceed, Thersites.

Thersites. Agamemnon is a fool, Achilles is a fool, Thersites is a fool, and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achilles. Derive this. Come.

Thersites. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patroclus. Why am I a fool?

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Diomedes, Ajax, and Calchas.

Thersites. Make that demand to the Creator; it suffices me thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Achilles. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody. Come in with me, Thersites. Exit.

Thersites. Here is such patchery, such juggling and such knavery! All the argument is a cuckold and a whore—a good quarrel to draw emulations, factions, and bleed to death upon. Now the dry suppeago on the subject, and war and lechery confound all! [Exit.]

Agamemnon. Where is Achilles?

Patroclus. Within his tent but ill dispos'd, my lord.

Agamemnon. Let it be known to him that we are here.
He [shent] our messengers and we lay by
Our appertainments, visiting of him.
Let him be told [so, lest] perchance he think
We dare not move the question of our place
Or know not what we are.

201 heaving spleens: unruly feelings of resentment 207 canonize: stressed — ˊ — — 211 revenue: stressed — ˊ — 214 roisting: roistering, bullying 216 Will: which will amazement: wonder, bewilderment 217 advertis'd: informed stressed — ˊ ˏ— 218 emulation: ambitious rivalry 2 carry it: behave himself 4 'Sfoot: 'God's foot,' a mild oath 5 but: unless 6 enginer: a contriver of military engines 10 caduceus: Mercury's wand 12 short-arm'd: incapable of reaching far 14 massy irons: great swords 15, 16 bone ache: syphilis 17 placket: petticoat, woman 21, 22 gilt counterfeit . . . slipp'd; Cf. n.

24 bless: preserve 26 blood: passion 27 corse: corpse 28 lazars: lepers 33 cheese; Cf. n. 44 decline: run through (as in grammatical declining) 52 Derive: explain, show reasons 54 of: by 58 demand: question 62 patchery: roguery 65 suppeago: serpigo (a skin disease) SD Exit: not in F or Q 70 shent: reviled, scolded; F sent; Q sate; Cf. n. 71 appertainments: rights, prerogatives 72 so, lest: F of, so 73 move: assert place: position of authority

Patroclus. I shall so say to him. [Exit.]
Ulysses. We saw him at the opening of his tent. He is not sick.
Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart. You may call it melancholy if [you] will favor the man; but, by my head, it is pride. But why? Why? Let him show us the cause? A word, my lord.
Nestor. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?
Ulysses. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him.
Nestor. Who, Thersites?
Ulysses. He.
Nestor. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.
Ulysses. No. You see he is his argument that has his argument, Achilles.
Nestor. All the better; their fraction is more our wish than their faction. But it was a strong counsel that a fool could disunite.
Ulysses. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie.

Enter Patroclus.

Here comes Patroclus.
Nestor. No Achilles with him?
Ulysses. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy. His legs are legs for necessity, not for [flexure].
Patroclus. Achilles bids me say he is much sorry
If anything more than your sport and pleasure
Did move your greatness and this noble state
To call upon him. He hopes it is no other
But for your health and your digestion sake,
And after-dinner's breath.
Agamemnon. Hear you, Patroclus.
We are too well acquainted with these answers.
But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn,
Cannot outfly our apprehensions.
Much attribute he hath, and much the reason
Why we ascribe it to him; yet all his virtues,
Not virtuously if his own part beheld,
Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss;
[Yea, like] fair fruit in an unwholesome dish,
Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him
We came to speak with him; and you shall not sin
If you do say we think him overproud
And underhonest, in self-assumption greater
Than in the note of judgment. And worthier than himself
Here tends the savage strangeness he puts on,
Disguise the holy strength of their command,
And underwrite in an observing kind
His humorous predominance, yea, watch
His pettish lines, his ebbs, his flows, as if
The passage and whole carriage of this action
Rode on his tide. Go tell him this, and add
That if he overhold his price so much,
We'll none of him. But let him, like an engine
Not portable, lie under this report:
Bring action hither; this cannot go to war.
A stirring dwarf we do allowance give
Before a sleeping giant. Tell him so.
Patroclus. I shall, and bring his answer presently. [Exit.]
Agamemnon. In second voice we'll not be satisfied;
We come to speak with him. Ulysses, enter you. Exit Ulysses.
Ajax. What is he more than another?
Agamemnon. No more than what he thinks he is.
Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think he thinks himself a better man than I am?
Agamemnon. No question.
Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought and say he is?
Agamemnon. No, noble Ajax. You are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.
Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what it is.
Agamemnon. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud eats up himself. Pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.

Enter Ulysses.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man as I hate the engend'ring of toads.
Nestor. Yet he loves himself. Is't not strange?
Ulysses. Achilles will not to the field tomorrow.
Agamemnon. What's his excuse?
Ulysses. He doth relie on none,
But carries on the stream of his dispose
Without observance or respect of any,
In will peculiar and in self-admission.
Agamemnon. Why, will he not upon our fair request.
Untent his person and share the air with us?
Ulysses. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only,
He makes important. Possess'd he is with greatness,
And speaks not to himself, but with a pride
That quarrels at self-breath. Imagin'd [worth]
Holds in his blood such swolne and hot discourse
That 'twixt his mental and his active parts
Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages
And batters gainst itself. What should I say?
He is so plaguy proud that the death tokens of it
Cry, 'No recovery.'
Agamemnon. Let Ajax to go him.
Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent.
'Tis said he holds you well and will be led
At your request a little from himself.
Ulysses. O Agamemnon, let it not be so!
We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles. Shall the proud lord
That bastes his arrogance with his own seam

Exit: not in F or Q 79 you: F omits 86–89 matter. . . Achilles; Cf. n. 90 fraction: division, separation 91 faction: uniting together as friends counsel; Cf. n. 93 knits not; Cf. n. 98 flexure: bending; F flight; Cf. n. 103 digestion: digestion's 104 breath: exercise 108 apprehensions: here five syllables 109 attribute: reputation, praise 111 Not . . . beheld: not looked at or considered on his part in the proper way 113 Yea, like: F Yea, and like 118 note of judgment: mark of good judgment 118–122 And worthier . . . predominance; Cf. n. 119 tends: awaits savage strangeness: rude aloofness 121 underwrite: submit to 122 humorous: capricious 123 lines: lunes, fits of temper

126 overhold: overestimate 130 allowance: praise, approbation 132 presently: at once SD Exit: not in F or Q 133 second voice: his words repeated by another person, words at second hand 147 his: its 148 glass: mirror chronicle: history 156 dispose: predisposition 158 peculiar: unique, a law unto himself self-admission: self-approbation 161 for request's sake: merely because they are requested 164 self-breath: his own words worth: F wroth 165 swolne: swollen discourse: quarrel, controversy 167 Kingdom'd; Cf. n. 178 seam: grease, drippings

And never suffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts—save such as do revolve
And ruminate himself—shall he be worshipp'd
Of what we hold an idol more than he?
No, this thrice worthy and right valiant lord
Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd,
Nor by my will assubjugate his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is,
By going to Achilles.
That were to enlard his fat-already pride
And add more coals to Cancer, when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion.
This lord go to him? Jupiter forbid,
And say in thunder, 'Achilles go to him!'

Nestor. [Aside.] O, this is well! He rubs the vein of him.

Diomedes. [Aside.] And how his silence drinks up this applause!

Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed fist I'll pash him ore the face.

Agamemnon. O no, you shall not go.

Ajax. And a be proud with me, I'll feeze his pride. Let me go to him.

Ulysses. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.

Ajax. A paltry insolent fellow.

Nestor. [Aside.] How he describes himself!

Ajax. Can he not be sociable?

Ulysses. [Aside.] The raven chides blackness.

Ajax. I'll let his humor's blood.

Agamemnon. [Aside.] He will be the physician that should be the patient.

Ajax. And all men were o' my mind—

Ulysses. [Aside.] Wit would be out of fashion.

Ajax. A should not bear it so; a should eat swords first. Shall pride carry it?

Nestor. [Aside.] And 'twould, you'ld carry half.

Ulysses. [Aside.] A would have ten shares.

Ajax. I will knead him. I'll make him supple.

Nestor. [Aside.] He's not yet through warm. Force him with praises. Pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry.

Ulysses. [To Agamemnon.] My lord, you feed too much on this dislike.

Nestor. Our noble general, do not do so.

Diomedes. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulysses. Why, 'tis this naming of him doth him harm. Here is a man—but 'tis before his face;
I will be silent.

Nestor. Wherefore should you so? He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Ulysses. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us. Would he were a Troyan!

Nestor. What a vice were it in Ajax now—

Ulysses. If he were proud.

Diomedes. Or covetous of praise.

Ulysses. Ay, or surly borne.

Diomedes. Or strange, or self-affected.

Ulysses. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure.
Praise him that got thee, she that gave thee suck;
[Fam'd] be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature
Thrice fam'd beyond, beyond all erudition.
But he that disciplin'd thy arms to fight,
Let Mars divide eternity in twain
And give him half; and for thy vigor,
Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield
To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom,
Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines
Thy spacious and dilated parts. Here's Nestor
Instructed by the antiquary times;
He must, he is, he cannot but be wise.
But pardon, father Nestor, were your days
As green as Ajax' and your brains so temper'd,
You should not have the eminence of him
But be as Ajax.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?

Ulysses. Ay, my good son.

Diomedes. Be rul'd by him, Lord Ajax.

Ulysses. There is no tarrying here; the hart Achilles
Keeps thicket. Please it our general,
To call together all his state of war.
Fresh kings are come to Troy; tomorrow
We must with all our main of power stand fast.
And here's a lord—come knights from East to West
And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.

Agamemnon. Go we to counsel. Let Achilles sleep.
Light boats may sail swift, though greater bulks draw deep.

Exeunt.

Act Third ❧ Scene First

Music sounds within. Enter Pandarus and a Servant.

Pandarus. Friend, you! Pray you, a word. Do not you follow the young Lord Paris?

Servant. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

Pandarus. You depend upon him, I mean.

Servant. Sir, I do depend upon the Lord.

Pandarus. You depend upon a noble gentleman; I must needs praise him.

Servant. The Lord be praised.

Pandarus. You know me, do you not?

Servant. Faith, sir, superficially.

Pandarus. Friend, know me better; I am the Lord Pandarus.

Servant. I hope I shall know your honor better.

Pandarus. I do desire it.

Servant. You are in the state of grace?

Pandarus. Grace? Not so, friend. Honor and lordship are my title. What music is this?

Servant. I do but partly know, sir; it is music in parts.

Pandarus. Know you the musicians?

Servant. Wholly, sir.

182 Of what we hold: by him whom we regard 184 stale: cheapen palm: honors 185 assubjugate: debase 187 to enlard: to fatten; read 't'enlard' 189 coals to Cancer; Cf. n. 196 pash: bash, strike 199 a: he; so also in l.211 feeze: settle, chastise 206 let his humor's blood: relieve him of humorous blood by bleeding; Cf. n. 211 eat swords; Cf. n. 214 shares: i.e. as of stock; Cf. n. 216 He's . . . warm; Cf. n. through: thoroughly Force: farce, stuff 218 My lord; Cf. n. 226 emulous: envious 228 palter: shuffle, dodge 233 surly borne: *of surly bearing

234 strange: aloof self-affected: egotistical 237 got: begot 238 Fam'd: F Fame 243 Milo; Cf. n. addition: particular quality (i.e. of strength) 245 bourn: boundary pale: fence 246 dilated parts: expansive qualities of excellence 247 antiquary: ancient 250 green: young, few 251 should . . . eminence of: would not be superior to 260 main: strength 262 cope: meet 2 follow: i.e. as a servant, follower 12 honor; Cf. n. 17 in parts: in harmony

Pandarus. Who play they to?
Servant. To the hearers, sir.
Pandarus. At whose pleasure, friend?
Servant. At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.
Pandarus. Command, I mean, friend.
Servant. Who shall I command, sir?
Pandarus. Friend, we understand not one another. I am too courtly and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play?
Servant. That's to't indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who's there in person; with him the mortal Venus, the heartblood of beauty, love's invisible soul.
Pandarus. Who? My cousin Cressida?
Servant. No, sir; Helen. Could you not find out that by her attributes?
Pandarus. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus. I will make a complimental assault upon him, for my business seethes.
Servant. Sodden business! There's a stewed phrase indeed!

Enter Paris and Helena.

Pandarus. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company. Fair desires in all fair measure fairly guide them, especially to you, fair queen! Fair thoughts be your fair pillow.
Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.
Pandarus. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen. Fair prince, here is good broken music.
Paris. You have broke it, cousin, and by my life you shall make it whole again. You shall piece it out with a piece of your performance. Nell, he is full of harmony.
Pandarus. Truly, lady, no.
Helen. O, sir—
Pandarus. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude.
Paris. Well said, my lord, well. You say so in fits.
Pandarus. I have business to my lord, dear queen. My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?
Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out. We'll hear you sing, certainly.
Pandarus. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. But, marry, thus, my lord: my dear lord and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus—
Helen. My Lord Pandarus, honey sweet lord—
Pandarus. Go to, sweet queen, go to.—Commends himself most affectionately to you—
Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody; if you do, our melancholy upon your head.
Pandarus. Sweet queen, sweet queen! That's a sweet queen, i' faith—
Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offense.
Pandarus. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la! Nay, I care not for such words; no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you that if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.
Helen. My Lord Pandarus!
Pandarus. What says my sweet queen, my very, very sweet queen?
Paris. What exploit's in hand? Where sups he tonight?
Helen. Nay, but my lord—
Pandarus. What says my sweet queen? My cousin will fall out with you.
Helen. You must not know where he sups.
Paris. With my disposer, Cressida.
Pandarus. No, no; no such matter. You are wide. Come, your disposer is sick.
Paris. Well, I'll make excuse.
Pandarus. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida? No, your poor disposer's sick.
Paris. I spy!
Pandarus. You spy? What do you spy? Come, give me an instrument now, sweet queen.
Helen. Why, this is kindly done.
Pandarus. My niece is horrible in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.
Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my Lord Paris.
Pandarus. He? No, she'll none of him; they two are twain.
Helen. Falling in after falling out may make them three.
Pandarus. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this. I'll sing you a song now.
Helen. Ay, ay, prithee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.
Pandarus. Ay, you may, you may.
Helen. Let the song be love; this love will undo us all. O, Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!
Pandarus. Love? Ay, that it shall, i' faith.
Paris. Ay, good now; love, love, nothing but love.
Pandarus. In good troth, it begins so.

Love, love, nothing but love, still more!
For O, love's bow
Shoots buck and doe.
The shaft confounds
Not that it wounds
But tickles still the sore.
These lovers cry;
O ho, they die!
Yet that which seems the wound to kill,
Doth turn 'O ho!' to 'Ha, ha, he!'
So dying love lives still.
O ho! awhile, but ha, ha, ha!
O ho! groans out for ha, ha, ha!—Hey ho!

Helen. In love, i' faith, to the very tip of the nose!
Paris. He eats nothing but doves, love, and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.
Pandarus. Is this the generation of love? Hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why, they are vipers! Is love a generation of vipers? Sweet lord, who's afield today?
Paris. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy. I would fain have arm'd today but my Nell would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not?
Helen. He hangs the lip at something. You know all, Lord Pandarus?

31 love's invisible soul; Cf. n. 37 complimental assault; Cf. n. 39 Sodden; Cf. n. SD Helena; Cf. n. 40 Fair; Cf. n. 45 broken music: music in parts, harmony 51 sooth: truth 52 fits; Cf. n. 55 hedge us out: put us off 63 bob: cheat

79 Helen; Cf. n. 80 disposer: mistress, lady 81 wide: wide of the truth, have missed the mark 94 twain: separated by disagreements, at variance 103 Love; Cf. n. 109 confounds: destroys 110 that: that which 114 wound to kill: killing wound 120 doves; Cf. n. 124 vipers; Cf. n.

Pandarus. Not I, honey sweet queen. I long to hear how they sped today. You'll remember your brother's excuse?

Paris. To a hair.

Pandarus. Farewell, sweet queen.

Helen. Commend me to your niece.

Pandarus. I will, sweet queen. [Exit.]

Sound a retreat.

Paris. They're come from field. Let us to Priam's hall
To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo you
To help unarm our Hector. His stubborn buckles,
With these your white enchanting fingers touch'd,
Shall more obey than to the edge of steel
Or force of Greekish sinews. You shall do more
Than all the island kings—disarm great Hector.

Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant, Paris.
Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty
Gives us more palm in beauty than we have,
Yea, overshines ourself.

Paris. Sweet, above thought I love thee! Exeunt.

Scene Second

Enter Pandarus and Troilus' Man.

Pandarus. How now? Where's thy master? At my cousin Cressida's?

Man. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter Troilus.

Pandarus. O, here he comes. How now, how now?

Troilus. Sirrah, walk off.

Pandarus. Have you seen my cousin?

Troilus. No, Pandarus. I stalk about her door
Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks
Staying for waftage. O, be thou my Charon
And give me swift transportance to those fields
Where I may wallow in the lily beds
Propos'd for the deserver. O gentle Pandarus,
From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings
And fly with me to Cressid.

Pandarus. Walk here i' th' orchard. I'll bring her straight.
Exit Pandarus.

Troilus. I am giddy; expectation whirls me round.
Th' imaginary relish is so sweet
That it enchants my sense. What will it be
When that the wat'ry palates taste indeed
Love's thrice repured nectar? Death, I fear me,
Sounding destruction, or some joy too fine,
Too subtle, potent, and too sharp in sweetness
For the capacity of my ruder powers.
I fear it much, and I do fear besides
That I shall lose distinction in my joys,
As doth a battle when they charge on heaps
The enemy flying.

Enter Pandarus.

Pandarus. She's making her ready; she'll come straight. You must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were fray'd with a sprite. I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain; she fetches her breath so short as a new-tane sparrow. Exit Pandarus.

Troilus. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom.
My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse,
And all my powers do their bestowing lose,
Like vassalage at unawares encount'ring
The eye of majesty.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pandarus. Come, come, what need you blush? Shame's a baby. Here she is now; swear the oaths now to her that you have sworn to me. What, are you gone again? You must be watch'd ere you be made tame, must you? Come your ways, come your ways. And you draw backward, we'll put you i' th' fills. Why do you not speak to her? Come, draw this curtain and let's see your picture. Alas, the day! How loath you are to offend daylight! And 'twere dark you'ld close sooner. So, so, rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now? A kiss in fee-farm? Build there, carpenter; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks i' th' river. Go to, go to!

Troilus. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pandarus. Words pay no debts. Give her deeds. But she'll bereave you o' th' deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing again? Here's 'In witness whereof the parties interchangeably—' Come in, come in! I'll go get a fire. [Exit.]

Cressida. Will you walk in, my lord?

Troilus. O Cressida, how often have I wish'd me thus!

Cressida. Wish'd, my lord? The gods grant—O my lord!

Troilus. What should they grant? What makes this pretty abruption? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?

Cressida. More dregs than water, if my tears have eyes.

Troilus. Fears make divels of cherubins; they never see truly.

Cressida. Blind fear that seeing reason leads finds [safer] footing than blind reason stumbling without fear. To fear the worst oft cures the worse.

Troilus. O, let my lady apprehend no fear. In all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.

Cressida. [Nor] nothing monstrous neither?

Troilus. Nothing but our undertakings, when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstruosity in love, lady; that the will is infinite and the execution confin'd; that the desire is boundless and the act a slave to limit.

Cressida. They say all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform, vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions and the acts of hares, are they not monsters?

Exit: not in F or Q 143 island: i.e. the Greek islands 146 palm: renown 148 Sweet . . . thee; Cf. n. 3 stays: waits 5 Sirrah: a term of address used to inferiors 8, 9 Stygian . . . Charon; Cf. n. waftage: passage 12 Propos'd: promised 15 straight: immediately 20 repured: refined; F reputed 21 Sounding: swooning 26 battle: army on heaps: in great numbers

29 fetches her wind: breathes 30 fray'd: frightened It: she (baby talk) 32 new-tane: newly taken or captured 33 Even: read 'e'en' 34 thicker: faster 35 bestowing: use, employment 41 watch'd: kept from sleeping; Cf. n. 43 fills: shafts, as of a horse-drawn wagon curtain: veil 45 close: come together 46 rub on: press on (a term from bowling) in fee-farm: indefinitely; Cf. n. 48 falcon . . . tercel; Cf. n. 53, 54 'In . . . interchangeably': a legal phrase used in mutual contracts SD Exit: not in F or Q 59 abruption: breaking off curious: minute 63 safer: F safe 67 pageant: masque, pantomime 68 Nor: F Not 72 monstruosity: monstrosity 73 will: desire, appetite

Troilus. Are there such? Such are not we! Praise us as we are tasted; allow us as we prove. Our head shall go bare till merit crown it. No perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present. We will not name desert before his birth, and being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith. Troilus shall be such to Cressid. As what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truest, not truer than Troilus.

Cressida. Will you walk in, my lord?

Enter Pandarus.

Pandarus. What, blushing still? Have you not done talking yet?

Cressida. Well, uncle, what folly I commit I dedicate to you.

Pandarus. I thank you for that. If my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord. If he flinch, chide me for it.

Troilus. You know now your hostages—your uncle's word and my firm faith.

Pandarus. Nay, I'll give my word for her too. Our kindred though they be long ere they are woo'd, they are constant being won. They are burrs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cressida. Boldness comes to me now and brings me heart.
Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day
For many weary months.

Troilus. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?

Cressida. Hard to seem won. But I was won, my lord,
With the first glance that ever—pardon me!
If I confess much you will play the tyrant.
I love you now, but not till now so much
But I might master it. In faith, I lie.
My thoughts were like unbridled children [grown]
Too headstrong for their mother. See, we fools!
Why have I blabb'd? Who shall be true to us
When we are so unsecret to ourselves?
But though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not;
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man,
Or that we women had men's privilege
Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue,
For in this rapture I shall surely speak
The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence,
Coming in dumbness, from my weakness draws
My soul of counsel from me. Stop my mouth.

Troilus. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

Pandarus. Pretty, i' faith.

Cressida. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me;
'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kiss.
I am asham'd. O heavens, what have I done!
For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Troilus. Your leave, sweet Cressid?

Pandarus. Leave! And you take leave till tomorrow morning—

Cressida. Pray you, content you.

Troilus. What offends you, lady?

Cressida. Sir, mine own company.

Troilus. You cannot shun yourself.

Cressida. Let me go and try.
I have a kind of self resides with you;
But an unkind self, that itself will leave
To be another's fool. Where is my wit?
I would be gone. I speak I know not what.

Troilus. Well know they what they speak that [speak] so wisely.

Cressida. Perchance, my lord, I shew more craft than love,
And fell so roundly to a large confession
To angle for your thoughts. But you are wise,
Or else you love not; for to be wise and love
Exceeds man's might. That dwells with gods above.

Troilus. Oh, that I thought it could be in a woman
(As if it can, I will presume in you)
To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love;
To keep her constancy in plight and youth,
Outliving beauties outward, with a mind
That doth renew swifter than blood decays;
Or that persuasion could but thus convince me
That my integrity and truth to you
Might be affronted with the match and weight
Of such a winnowed [purity] in love.
How were I then uplifted! But, alas,
I am as true as truth's simplicity,
And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cressida. In that I'll war with you.

Troilus. O virtuous fight,
When right with right wars who shall be most right.
True swains in love shall in the world to come
Approve their truths by Troilus. When their rhymes,
Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,
Wants similies, truth tir'd with iteration—
As true as steel, as plantage to the moon,
As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,
As iron to adamant, as earth to th' center—
Yet after all comparisons of truth,
As truth's authentic author to be cited,
'As true as Troilus' shall crown up the verse,
And sanctify the numbers.

Cressida. Prophet may you be!
If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot itself,
When water drops have worn the stones of Troy
And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,
And mighty states characterless are grated
To dusty nothing; yet let memory
From false to false among false maids in love
Upbraid my falsehood. When they've said 'As false
As air, as water, as wind, as sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son,'
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,
'As false as Cressid.'

Pandarus. Go to, a bargain made! Seal it, seal it. I'll be the witness. Here I hold your hand, here my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be call'd to the world's end after my name. Call them all Pandars. Let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! Say 'Amen.'

81 tasted: tested allow: estimate 82 in reversion: in the future 83 his: its 85, 86 envy . . . his truth; Cf. n. 92 get: beget 110 grown: F grow 120 Coming: forward, apt; Cf. n. 121 soul of counsel: innermost thoughts

140 speak so: F speaks so 143 roundly: frankly, straight-forwardly 150 in plight and youth: in health and youth, ever young 151 beauties outward: external beauties 155 affronted: met with, matched with 156 purity: F puriritie 164 Approve: attest, confirm 165 protest: stressed — ⏑́ compare: comparisons 166 Wants: want 167 plantage: plants, vegetation; Cf. n. 168 turtle: turtle dove 169 adamant: loadstone 179 characterless: stressed — ⏑́ — — 185 Pard: leopard 186 stick: stab

Troilus. Amen.

Cressida. Amen.

Pandarus. Amen. Whereupon I will shew you a chamber, which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death. Away! And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here Bed, chamber, and Pandar to provide this gear.

Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter Ulysses, Diomedes, Nestor, Agamemnon, Menelaus, and Calchas. Flourish.

Calchas. Now, princes, for the service I have done you,
Th' advantage of the time prompts me aloud
To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind
That through the sight I bear in things to love,
I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession,
Incurr'd a traitor's name, expos'd myself
From certain and possess'd conveniences
To doubtful fortunes, sequest'ring from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition
Made tame and most familiar to my nature;
And here, to do you service, am become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted.
I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit
Out of those many regist'red in promise
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

Agamemnon. What wouldst thou of us, Troyan?
Make demand.

Calchas. You have a Troyan prisoner call'd Antenor,
Yesterday took. Troy holds him very dear.
Oft have you (often have you thanks therefore)
Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange,
Whom Troy hath still denied. But this Antenor
I know is such a wrest in their affairs
That their negotiations all must slack,
Wanting his manage; and they will almost
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him. Let him be sent, great princes,
And he shall buy my daughter, and her presence
Shall quite strike off all service I have done
In most accepted pain.

Agamemnon. Let Diomedes bear him
And bring us Cressid hither. Calchas shall have
What he requests of us. Good Diomed,
Furnish you fairly for this interchange.
Withal bring word if Hector will tomorrow
Be answer'd in his challenge. Ajax is ready.

Diomedes. This shall I undertake, and 'tis a burthen
Which I am proud to bear.

Exit.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus in their tent.

Ulysses. Achilles stand i' th' entrance of his tent.
Please it our general to pass strangely by him
As if he were forgot; and princes all,
Lay negligent and loose regard upon him.
I will come last. 'Tis like he'll question me
Why such unplausive eyes are bent, why turn'd on him.
If so, I have derision medicinable
To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink.
It may do good. Pride hath no other glass
To show itself but pride; for supple knees
Feed arrogance and are the proud man's fees.

Agamemnon. We'll execute your purpose and put on
A form of strangeness as we pass along.
So do each lord, and either greet him not
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more
Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achilles. What, comes the general to speak with me?
You know my mind. I'll fight no more 'gainst Troy.

Agamemnon. What says Achilles? Would he ought with us?

Nestor. Would you, my lord, ought with the general?

Achilles. No.

Nestor. Nothing, my lord.

Agamemnon. The better. [Exeunt Agamemnon and Nestor.]

Achilles. Good day, good day.

Menelaus. How do you? How do you? [Exit.]

Achilles. What, does the cuckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus?

Achilles. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha.

Achilles. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit.]

Achilles. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

Patroclus. They pass by strangely. They were us'd to bend
To send their smiles before them to Achilles,
To come as humbly as they us'd to creep
To holy altars.

Achilles. What, am I poor of late?
'Tis certain, greatness, once falne out with fortune,
Must fall out with men too. What the declin'd is
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others
As feel in his own fall; for men, like butterflies,
Shew not their mealy wings but to the summer;
And not a man for being simply man
Hath any honor, but honor'd for those honors
That are without him, as place, riches, and favor,
Prizes of accident as oft as merit;
Which when they fall, as being slippery standers,
The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,
Doth one pluck down another, and together
Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me;
Fortune and I are friends. I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess,
Save these men's looks, who do, methinks, find out

SD Exeunt; Cf. n. SD Flourish: fanfare 4 sight . . . love; Cf. n. 5 possession: property 8 sequest'ring: setting aside 10 tame: usual, familiar 13 taste: sample 16 live to come: exist to be used in the future 24 wrest: vital instrument; cf. I.3.159; Cf. n. 26 Wanting his manage: lacking his management 31 pain: hardships; Cf. n. 32 bear: take 35 Furnish you: equip yourself

41 strangely: aloofly 43 loose: disrespectful, negligent 44 like: likely 45 unplausive: not applauding, disapproving 46 medicinable: pronounced 'med'cinable' 49 glass: mirror Exit: F Exeunt; this blanket SD is the F substitute for the several exits supplied by modern editors at ll. 63 and 65 78 falne: fall'n 85 without him: outside of him 92 At ample point: fully

Something not worth in me such rich beholding
As they have often given. Here is Ulysses.
I'll interrupt his reading. How now, Ulysses?
Ulysses. Now, great Thetis' son.
Achilles. What are you reading?
Ulysses. A strange fellow here
Writes me that man, how dearly ever parted,
How much in having, or without or in,
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,
Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;
As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver.
Achilles. This is not strange, Ulysses.
The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but commends itself
[To others' eyes; not doth the eye itself,
That most pure spirit of sense, behold itself,]
Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd
Salutes each other with each other's form.
For speculation turns not to itself
Till it hath travel'd and is married there
Where it may see itself. This is not strange at all.
Ulysses. I do not strain at the position—
It is familiar—but at the author's drift;
Who in his circumstance expressly proves
That no [man] is the lord of anything.
Though in and of him there is much consisting,
Till he communicate his parts to others,
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
Till he behold them formed in th' applause
Where [th' are] extended; who, like an arch, reverb'rate
The voice again, or like a gate of steel,
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back
His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in this,
And apprehended here immediately
The unknown Ajax.
Heavens, what a man is there! A very horse,
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are
Most abject in regard and dear in use!
What things again most dear in the esteem
And poor in worth! Now shall we see tomorrow
An act that very chance doth throw upon him—
Ajax renown'd. O heavens, what some men do,
While some men leave to do!
How some men creep in skittish Fortune's hall
Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes!
How one man eats into another's pride,
While pride is feasting in his wantonness!
To see these Grecian lords! Why, even already
They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast
And great Troy shrinking.
Achilles. I do believe it,

100 how . . . parted: howsoever well supplied with parts, or talents 101 or . . . or: either . . . or 103 owes: owns 105 retort: return 110, 111 To . . . itself: not in F 114 speculation: seeing, sight 115 married: joined 117 strain: F straine it 118 drift: general direction of the author's argument 119 circumstance: detailed proof 120 man: F may 121 consisting: residing, inhering 125 th' are: F they are extended: magnified, spread arch: vaulted roof 132 Nature: a mild oath or expletive 133 abject: poor, mean dear in use: precious in the using 139, 140 How . . . eyes: Cf. n. 142 feasting: Cf. n. 144 lubber: lout, blockhead

For they pass'd by me as misers do by beggars,
Neither gave to me good word nor look.
What, are my deeds forgot?
Ulysses. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back
Wherein he puts alms for Oblivion,
A great-siz'd monster of ingratitudes.
Those scraps are good deeds past,
Which are devour'd as fast as they are made,
Forgot as soon as done. Perseverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honor bright. To have done is to hang
Quite out of fashion like a rusty mail,
In monumental mock'ry. Take the instant way,
For honor travels in a strait so narrow
Where one but goes abreast. Keep then the path;
For emulation hath a thousand sons
That one by one pursue. If you give way
Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an ent'red tide, they all rush by
And leave you hindmost;
Or like a gallant horse falne in the first rank
Lie there for pavement to the abject [rear],
Orerun and trampled on. Then what they do in present,
Though less than yours in past, must oertop yours.
For Time is like a fashionable host
That slightly shakes his parting guest by th' hand,
And with his arms outstretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasps in the comer. The welcome ever smiles,
And [farewell] goes out sighing. O, let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was;
For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigor of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin:
That all with one consent praise new-born gauds
Though they are made and molded of things past,
And [give] to dust that is a little gilt
More laud than gilt oredusted.
The present eye praises the present object.
Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax,
Since things in motion [sooner] catch the eye
Than what not stirs. The cry went out on thee,
And still it might, and yet it may again,
If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive
And case thy reputation in thy tent,
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods themselves
And drave great Mars to faction.
Achilles. Of this my privacy
I have strong reasons.
Ulysses. But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heroical.
'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters.
Achilles. Ha? Known?

151 wallet: large bag 152 alms: gifts (i.e. the scraps of l. 154) Oblivion: secondary accent on last syllable 158 mail: coat of mail 159 instant: present 161 one but: only one goes: walks 162 emulation: rivalry 164 forthright: straightaway 168 rear: rear ranks; Cf. n. 175 farewell: F farewels 181 touch: quality, trait 184 give; Cf. n. 187 complete: whole, perfect (stressed ⏑ —) 189 sooner; F begin to; Cf. n. 190 out on: Q once on 195 emulous: envious 196 drave: drove

Ulysses. Is that a wonder?
The providence that's in a watchful state
Knows almost every grain of Pluto's gold,
Finds bottom in th' uncomprehensive deeps,
Keeps place with thought, and almost like the gods
[Does] thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles.
There is a mystery, with whom relation
Durst never meddle, in the soul of state,
Which hath an operation more divine
Than breath or pen can give expressure to.
All the commerce that you have had with Troy
As perfectly is ours as yours, my lord.
And better would it fit Achilles much
To throw down Hector than Polixena.
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home,
When fame shall in [our islands] sound her trump
And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing,
'Great Hector's sister did Achilles win,
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him.'
Farewell, my lord. I as your lover speak;
The fool slides ore the ice that you should break. [Exit.]

Patroclus. To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd you.
A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this;
They think my little stomach to the war
And your great love to me restrains you thus.
Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton Cupid
Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And like a dew drop from the lion's mane
Be shook to airy air.

Achilles. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patroclus. Ay, and perhaps receive much honor by him.

Achilles. I see my reputation is at stake;
My fame is shrowdly gor'd.

Patroclus. O then, beware.
Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves.
Omission to do what is necessary
Seals a commission to a blank of danger,
And danger like an ague subtly taints
Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achilles. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patroclus.
I'll send the fool to Ajax and desire him
T' invite the Troyan lords after the combat
To see us here unarm'd. I have a woman's longing,
An appetite that I am sick withal,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace,

Enter Thersites.

To talk with him and to behold his visage,
Even to my full of view. A labor sav'd.

Thersites. A wonder.

Achilles. What?

Thersites. Ajax goes up and down the field asking for himself.

Achilles. How so?

Thersites. He must fight singly tomorrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an heroical cudgeling that he raves in saying nothing.

Achilles. How can that be?

Thersites. Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock—a stride and a stand; ruminates like an hostess that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning; bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say, 'There were wit in this head and 'twould out'; and so there is, but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone forever; for if Hector break not his neck i' th' combat, he'll break't himself in vainglory. He knows not me. I said, 'Good morrow, Ajax'; and he replies, 'Thanks, Agamemnon.' What think you of this man that takes me for the general? He's grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! A man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

Achilles. Thou must be my ambassador to him, Thersites.

Thersites. Who, I? Why, he'll answer nobody. He professes not answering. Speaking is for beggars; he wears his tongue in's arms. I will put on his presence; let Patroclus make his demands to me; you shall see the pageant of Ajax.

Achilles. To him, Patroclus. Tell him I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarm'd to my tent, and to procure safe-conduct for his person of the magnanimous and most illustrious, six-or-seven-times-honor'd captain, general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon, et cetera. Do this.

Patroclus. Jove bless great Ajax!

Thersites. Hum.

Patroclus. I come from the worthy Achilles.

Thersites. Ha?

Patroclus. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent.

Thersites. Hum.

Patroclus. And to procure safe-conduct from Agamemnon.

Thersites. Agamemnon?

Patroclus. Ay, my lord.

Thersites. Ha!

Patroclus. What say you to't?

Thersites. God buy you, with all my heart.

Patroclus. Your answer, sir.

Thersites. If tomorrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other. Howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patroclus. Your answer, sir.

Thersites. Fare you well, with all my heart.

Achilles. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Thersites. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knock'd out his brains, I know not, but I am sure, none, unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on.

Achilles. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him straight.

Thersites. Let me carry another to his horse, for that's the more capable creature.

Achilles. My mind is troubled like a fountain stirr'd,

206 Knows . . . gold; Cf. n. 207 uncomprehensive: incomprehensible 208 Keeps place with: consorts with 209 Does: Q Do; F Doe 210 relation: act of relating, telling 211 state: the State 213 expressure: expression 214 commerce: stressed — — 217 Polixena; Cf. n. 218 Pyrrhus: Neoptolemus, son of Achilles 219 our islands: F her island trump: trumpet 224 fool . . . break; Cf. n. 229 stomach: liking 232 fold: embrace 238 shrowdly gor'd: sharply (shrewdly) wounded 242 commission . . . blank; Cf. n. 244, 252 Even: read 'e'en' 250 weeds: clothes

264 reckoning: bill, computation 265 political regard: serious look were: is 266 and: if 'twould: it would come; F twoo'd 272 land-fish: a fish living on land, an unnatural creature 273 of: on opinion: reputation, fame 278 put on: act out 298 buy: be with 309 catlings: catgut strings for musical instruments 312 capable: intelligent

And I myself see not the bottom of it.
Thersites. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it. I had rather be a tick in a sheep than such a valiant ignorance. [Exeunt.]

ACT FOURTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

Enter at one door Aeneas with a torch; at another Paris, Deiphobus, Antenor, Diomed the Grecian, with torches.

Paris. See, ho! Who is that there?
Deiphobus. It is the Lord Aeneas.
Aeneas. Is the prince there in person?
Had I so good occasion to lie long
As you, Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business
Should rob my bedmate of my company.
Diomedes. That's my mind too. Good morrow, Lord Aeneas.
Paris. A valiant Greek, Aeneas; take his hand.
Witness the process of your speech, [wherein]
You told how Diomed in a whole week by days
Did haunt you in the field.
Aeneas. Health to you, valiant sir,
During all question of the gentle truce;
But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance
As heart can think or courage execute!
Diomedes. The one and other Diomed embraces.
Our bloods are now in calm, and so long, health.
But when contention and occasion meets,
By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life
With all my force, pursuit, and policy.
Aeneas. And thou shalt hunt a lion that will fly
With his face backward. In humane gentleness,
Welcome to Troy; now, by Anchises' life,
Welcome indeed. By Venus' hand I swear,
No man alive can love in such a sort
The thing he means to kill more excellently.
Diomedes. We sympathize. Jove let Aeneas live,
If to my sword his fate be not the glory,
A thousand complete courses of the sun,
But in mine emulous honor let him die,
With every joint a wound, and that tomorrow.
Aeneas. We know each other well.
Diomedes. We do, and long to know each other worse.
Paris. This is the most despiteful'st gentle greeting,
The noblest hateful love that ere I heard of.
What business, lord, so early?
Aeneas. I was sent for to the king, but why, I know not.
Paris. His purpose meets you. It was to bring this Greek
To Calchas' house, and there to render him,
For the enfree'd Antenor, the fair Cressid.
Let's have your company; or if you please
Haste there before us. I constantly do think,
Or rather call my thought a certain knowledge,
My brother Troilus lodges there tonight.
Rouse him and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality whereof. I fear
We shall be much unwelcome.
Aeneas. That I assure you.
Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece
Then Cressid borne from Troy.
Paris. There is no help.
The bitter disposition of the time
Will have it so. On, lord, we'll follow you.
Aeneas. Good morrow, all. Exit Aeneas.
Paris. And tell me, noble Diomed; faith, tell me true,
Even in the soul of sound good fellowship,
Who in your thoughts merits fair Helen most,
Myself or Menelaus?
Diomedes. Both alike.
He merits well to have her that doth seek her,
Not making any scruple of her soilure,
With such a hell of pain and world of charge.
And you as well to keep her that defend her,
Not palating the taste of her dishonor,
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends.
He, like a puling cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece.
You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors.
Both merits pois'd, each weighs nor less nor more,
But he as he; which heavier for a whore?
Paris. You are too bitter to your countrywoman.
Diomedes. She's bitter to her country. Hear me, Paris.
For every false drop in her bawdy veins
A Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight
A Troyan hath been slain. Since she could speak,
She hath not given so many good words breath
As for her Greeks and Troyans suff'red death.
Paris. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy;
But we in silence hold this virtue well;
We'll not commend what we intend to sell.
Here lies our way. Exeunt.

❧ SCENE SECOND ❧

Enter Troilus and Cressida.

Troilus. Dear, trouble not yourself. The morn is cold.
Cressida. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down.
He shall unbolt the gates.
Troilus. Trouble him not.
To bed, to bed. Sleep kill those pretty eyes,
And give as soft attachment to thy senses
As infants empty of all thought.
Cressida. Good morrow, then.
Troilus. I prithee now, to bed.
Cressida. Are you aweary of me?

9 process: course, gist wherein: F within 10 by days: day by day 13 question: discussion 23 Anchises': Anchises was Aeneas' father 24 Venus': Venus was Aeneas' mother 27 sympathize: agree, are of the same mind 29 complete: stressed —'— 30 emulous: envious 38 His purpose meets you: his reason is right here before you 42 constantly: confidently

46 quality: substance, occasion of the visit 61 soilure: soiled state, dishonor 62 charge: trouble expense 67 tamed: opened, with seal broken (with senses pointing both ways in the pun on piece) piece: cask of wine; also a slang term for a woman 70 pois'd: weighed nor less: F no lesse 71 which . . . whore?: Cf. n. 75 scruple: a very small unit of weight 80 chapmen: petty merchants 83 We'll . . . sell: Cf. n. 5 kill: overpower, subdue

Troilus. O Cressida! But that the busy day,
Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald crows,
And dreaming night will hide our eyes no longer,
I would not from thee.
Cressida. Night hath been too brief.
Troilus. Beshrew the witch! With venomous wights she stays
As [tediously] as hell, but flies the grasps of love
With wings more momentary swift than thought.
You will catch cold, and curse me.
Cressida. Prithee, tarry. You men will never tarry.
O foolish Cressid, I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarried. Hark, there's one up?
Pandarus. Within. What's all the doors open here?
Troilus. It is your uncle. Enter Pandarus.
Cressida. A pestilence on him. Now will he be mocking.
I shall have such a life!
Pandarus. How now, how now? How go maidenheads? Hear you, maid, where's my cousin Cressid?
Cressida. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle!
You bring me to do—and then you flout me too.
Pandarus. To do what? To do what? Let her say what!
What have I brought you to do?
Cressida. Come, come, beshrew your heart. You'll nere be good, nor suffer others.
Pandarus. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch. A poor chipochia, hast not slept tonight? Would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? A bugbear take him! One knocks.
Cressida. Did not I tell you? Would he were knock'd i' th' head!
Who's that at door? Good uncle, go and see.
My lord, come you again into my chamber.
You smile and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.
Troilus. Ha, ha.
Cressida. Come, you are deceiv'd; I think of no such thing.
How earnestly they knock! Pray you, come in. Knock.
I would not for half Troy have you seen here. Exeunt.
Pandarus. Who's there? What's the matter? Will you beat down the door? How now, what's the matter?

[Enter Aeneas.]

Aeneas. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.
Pandarus. Who's there? My Lord Aeneas? By my troth, I knew you not. What news with you so early?
Aeneas. Is not Prince Troilus here?
Pandarus. Here? What should he do here?
Aeneas. Come, he is here, my lord; do not deny him.
It doth import him much to speak with me.
Pandarus. Is he here, say you? 'Tis more than I know, I'll be sworn. For my own part, I came in late. What should he do here?
Aeneas. Who! Nay then. Come, come, you'll do him wrong ere y' are ware. You'll be so true to him to be false to him.
Do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither; go.
[Exit Pandarus.]

Enter Troilus.

Troilus. How now! What's the matter?
Aeneas. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,
My matter is so rash. There is at hand
Paris, your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor
Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith,
Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,
We must give up to Diomedes' hand
The Lady Cressida.
Troilus. Is it concluded so?
Aeneas. By Priam and the general state of Troy.
They are at hand and ready to effect it.
Troilus. How my achievements mock me!
I will go meet them. And my Lord Aeneas,
We met by chance; you did not find me here.
Aeneas. Good, good, my lord. The secrets of nature
Have not more gift in taciturnity. Exeunt.

Enter Pandarus and Cressid.

Pandarus. Is't possible? No sooner got but lost! The divel take Antenor! The young prince will go mad. A plague upon Antenor! I would they had broke's neck!
Cressida. How now? What's the matter? Who was here?
Pandarus. Ah, ha!
Cressida. Why sigh you so profoundly? Where's my lord? Gone?
Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?
Pandarus. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above!
Cressida. O, the gods! What's the matter?
Pandarus. Prithee, get thee in. Would thou hadst nere been born; I knew thou wouldst be his death.
O poor gentleman! A plague upon Antenor!
Cressida. Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, what's the matter?
Pandarus. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone. Thou art chang'd for Antenor. Thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus. 'Twill be his death; 'twill be his bane. He cannot bear it.
Cressida. O, you immortal gods! I will not go.
Pandarus. Thou must.
Cressida. I will not, uncle! I have forgot my father;
I know no touch of consanguinity;
No kin, no love, no blood, no soul, so near me
As the sweet Troilus. O, you gods divine!
Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood
If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death
Do to this body what extremity you can.
But the strong base and building of my love
Is as the very center of the earth,
Drawing all things to it. I will go in and weep.
Pandarus. Do, do.
Cressida. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks.
Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my heart
With sounding Troilus, I will not go from Troy. Exeunt.

11 But that: except that 16 venomous wights: evil creatures 17 tediously: F hidiously 35 chipochia; Cf. n. 55 doth import him much: is very important to him 64 rash: urgent 69 Diomedes': F Diomed 77 secrets: possibly three syllables here 96 chang'd: exchanged 98 bane: destruction, death

Scene Third

Enter Paris, Troilus, Aeneas, Deiphobus, Antenor, and Diomedes.

Paris. It is great morning, and the hour prefix'd
Of her delivery to this valiant Greek
Comes fast upon. Good my brother Troilus,
Tell you the lady what she is to do,
And haste her to the purpose.
Troilus. Walk into her house.
I'll bring her to the Grecian presently;
And to his hand when I deliver her,
Think it an altar and thy brother Troilus
A priest, there off'ring to it his [own] heart.
Paris. I know what 'tis to love,
And would, as I shall pity, I could help.
Please you walk in, my lords. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Enter Pandarus and Cressid.

Pandarus. Be moderate, be moderate.
Cressida. Why tell you me of moderation?
The grief is fine, full perfect that I taste,
And [violenteth] in a sense as strong
As that which causeth it. How can I moderate it?
If I could temporize with my affection
Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
The like allayment could I give my grief.
My love admits no qualifying [dross];

Enter Troilus.

No more my grief, in such a precious loss.
Pandarus. Here, here, here he comes, a sweet duck.
Cressida. O Troilus! Troilus!
Pandarus. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too. 'O heart,' as the goodly saying is,

O heart, heavy heart
Why sighest thou without breaking?

Where he answers again,

Because thou canst not ease thy smart
By friendship nor by speaking.

There was never a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse. We see it, we see it. How now, lambs?
Troilus. Cressid, I love thee in so strange a purity
That the þless'd gods, as angry with my fancy,
More bright in zeal than the devotion which
Cold lips blow to their deities, take thee from me.
Cressida. Have the gods envy?
Pandarus. Ay, ay, ay, ay. 'Tis too plain a case.
Cressida. And is it true that I must go from Troy?
Troilus. A hateful truth!
Cressida. What, and from Troilus too?
Troilus. From Troy, and Troilus.
Cressida. Is't possible?
Troilus. And suddenly, where injury of chance
Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by
All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents
Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows,
Even in the birth of our own laboring breath.
We two, that with so many thousand sighs
Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves
With the rude brevity and discharge of [one].
Injurious time now with a robber's haste
Crams his rich thiev'ry up, he knows not how.
As many farewells as be stars in heaven,
With distinct breath, and consign'd kisses to them,
He fumbles up into a loose adieu,
And scants us with a single famish'd kiss,
Distasting with the salt of broken tears.
Aeneas. Within. My lord, is the lady ready?
Troilus. Hark, you are call'd. Some say the genius so
Cries 'Come!' to him that instantly must die.
Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.
Pandarus. Where are my tears? Rain, to lay this wind,
Or my heart will be blown up by the root. [Exit.]
Cressida. I must then to the Grecians?
Troilus. No remedy.
Cressida. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks.
When shall we see again?
Troilus. Hear me, my love;
Be thou but true of heart—
Cressida. I, true! How now? What wicked deem is this?
Troilus. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,
For it is parting from us.
I speak not 'Be thou true' as fearing thee,
For I will throw my glove to death himself
That there's no maculation in thy heart;
But 'Be thou true' say I to fashion in
My sequent protestation. Be thou true,
And I will see thee.
Cressida. O, you shall be expos'd,
My lord, to dangers as infinite as imminent.
But I'll be true.
Troilus. And I'll grow friend with danger.
Wear this sleeve.
Cressida. And you this glove.
When shall I see you?
Troilus. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels,
To give thee nightly visitation.
But yet be true.
Cressida. O heavens! 'Be true' again?
Troilus. Hear why I speak it, love.
The Grecian youths are full of quality;
Their loving well compos'd with gift of nature,
[Flowing] and swelling ore with arts and exercise.
How novelties may move, and parts with person,
Alas, a kind of godly jealousy,
Which I beseech you call a virtuous sin,

1 great morning: full daylight 2 delivery: read 'deliv'ry' 10 his own heart: F his heart 4 violenteth: rages violently; F no lesse 9 dross: impurity; F cross 24 fancy: love 34 injury of chance: fortuitous ill treatment 37 rejoindure: reunion; Cf. n. 38 embrasures: embraces 42 one: F our 44 thiev'ry: F theiverie 46 distinct . . . consign'd: both stressed ⏑ — 49 Distasting: destroying the taste tears; Cf. n. 51 genius; Cf. n. 54 wind: i.e. of sighs 59 When . . . again; Cf. n. 62 deem: surmise, supposition 67 maculation: stain 83 quality: natural gifts 85 Flowing: F flawing; Cf. n. 86 parts with person: accomplishments with personal charm

Makes me afraid.
Cressida. O heavens! You love me not!
Troilus. Die I a villain then!
In this I do not call your faith in question
So mainly as my merit. I cannot sing,
Nor heel the high lavolt, nor sweeten talk,
Nor play at subtle games—fair virtues all,
To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant.
But I can tell that in each grace of these
There lurks a still and dumb-discoursive divel
That tempts most cunningly. But be not tempted!
Cressida. Do you think I will?
Troilus. No,
But something may be done that we will not,
And sometimes we are divels to ourselves,
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,
Presuming on their changeful potency.
Aeneas. Within. Nay, good my lord?
Troilus. Come, kiss and let us part.
Paris. Within. Brother Troilus?
Troilus. Good brother, come you hither
And bring Aeneas and the Grecian with you.
Cressida. My lord, will you be true?
Troilus. Who, I? Alas, it is my vice, my fault.
Whiles others fish with craft for great opinion,
I with great truth catch mere simplicity;
Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns,
With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.

Enter [Paris, Aeneas, Deiphobus, Antenor, and Diomed.]

Fear not my truth. The moral of my wit
Is plain and true; there's all the reach of it.
Welcome, Sir Diomed; here is the lady,
Which for Antenor we deliver you.
At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand,
And by the way possess thee what she is.
Entreat her fair; and by my soul, fair Greek,
If ere thou stand at mercy of my sword,
Name Cressid and thy life shall be as safe
As Priam is in Ilion.
Diomedes. Fair Lady Cressid,
So please you, save the thanks this prince expects.
The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,
Pleads your fair [usage], and to Diomed
You shall be mistress and command him wholly.
Troilus. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously,
To shame the zeal of my petition to thee
In praising her. I tell thee, lord of Greece,
She is as far high soaring ore thy praises
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.
I charge thee use her well, even for my charge,
For by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat.
Diomedes. O, be not mov'd, Prince Troilus.
Let me be privileg'd by my place and message

93 mainly: much 94 lavolt: a lively Italian dance 96 pregnant: ready 98 dumb-discoursive: silent-speaking 111 true: F has a superfluous Exit after this word 113 craft: craftiness, cunning SD Paris, Aeneas . . . Cf. n. 121 port: gate 122 possess: inform 123 Entreat: treat 130 usage: F visage 133 zeal . . . thee; Cf. n. 137 for my charge: at my command or exhortation

To be a speaker free. When I am hence,
I'll answer to my lust. And know, my lord,
I'll nothing do on charge. To her own worth
She shall be priz'd; but that you say, 'Be't so,'
I'll speak it in my spirit and honor, 'No.'
Troilus. Come, to the port. I'll tell thee, Diomed,
This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy head.
Lady, give me your hand; and as we walk
To our own selves bend we our needful talk. Sound trumpet.
Paris. Hark, Hector's trumpet!
Aeneas. How have we spent this morning!
The prince must think me tardy and remiss
That swore to ride before him in the field.
Paris. 'Tis Troilus' fault. Come, come, to field with him.
Exeunt [Troilus, Cressida, Diomed, and Paris].
Deiphobus. Let us make ready straight.
Aeneas. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity
Let us address to tend on Hector's heels.
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth and single chivalry. [Exeunt.]

Scene Fifth

Enter Ajax, armed, Achilles, Patroclus, Agamemnon, Menelaus, Ulysses, Nestor, Calchas, etc.

Agamemnon. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,
Anticipating time. With starting courage,
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
Thou dreadful Ajax, that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great combatant
And hale him hither.
Ajax. Thou trumpet, there's my purse;
Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe!
Blow, villain, till thy sphered bias cheek
Outswell the colic of puff'd Aquilon.
Come, stretch thy chest and let thy eyes spout blood;
Thou blowest for Hector.
Ulysses. No trumpet answers.
Achilles. 'Tis but early days.
Agamemnon. Is not [yond] Diomed with Calchas' daughter?

[Enter Diomed and Cressida.]

Ulysses. 'Tis he. I ken the manner of his gait;
He rises on the toe. That spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth.
Agamemnon. Is this the Lady Cressid?
Diomedes. Even she.
Agamemnon. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.
Nestor. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.
Ulysses. Yet is the kindness but particular;
'Twere better she were kiss'd in general.
Nestor. And very courtly counsel. I'll begin.
So much for Nestor.
Achilles. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady.
Achilles bids you welcome.

144 lust: inclinations 145 charge: compulsion 146 but that: but simply because 149 brave: defiance, dare 157 Let . . . straight; Cf. n. 159 address: make ready. SD Calchas; Cf. n. 1 appointment: equipment 2 starting: bounding, energetic 7 purse: i.e. of the lips 9 bias: puffed out 10 Aquilon: the north wind 14 days: in the day 15 yond: F yong

Menelaus. I had good argument for kissing once.
Patroclus. But that's no argument for kissing now.
For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment
And parted thus you and your argument.
Ulysses. O deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns,
For which we lose our heads, to gild his horns.
Patroclus. The first was Menelaus' kiss, this mine;
Patroclus kisses you.
Menelaus. O, this is trim!
Patroclus. Paris and I kiss evermore for him.
Menelaus. I'll have my kiss, sir. Lady, by your leave.
Cressida. In kissing do you render or receive?
Patroclus. Both take and give.
Cressida. I'll make my match to live,
The kiss you take is better than you give.
Therefore no kiss.
Menelaus. I'll give you boot. I'll give you three for one.
Cressida. You are an odd man. Give even or give none.
Menelaus. An odd man, lady? Every man is odd.
Cressida. No. Paris is not; for you know 'tis true
That you are odd, and he is even with you.
Menelaus. You fillip me o' th' head.
Cressida. No, I'll be sworn.
Ulysses. It were no match, your nail against his horn.
May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?
Cressida. You may.
Ulysses. I do desire it.
Cressida. Why beg then?
Ulysses. Why then, for Venus' sake, give me a kiss
When Helen is a maid again, and his.
Cressida. I am your debtor. Claim it when 'tis due.
Ulysses. Never's my day, and then a kiss of you.
Diomedes. Lady, a word. I'll bring you to your father.
[Exeunt Diomed and Cressida.]
Nestor. A woman of quick sense.
Ulysses. Fie, fie upon her!
There's a language in her eye, her cheek, her lip;
Nay, her foot speaks. Her wanton spirits look out
At every joint and motive of her body.
O, these encounterers so glib of tongue,
That give a coasting welcome [ere] it comes,
And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts
To every tickling reader! Set them down
For sluttish spoils of opportunity,
And daughters of the game.

Enter all of Troy: Hector, Paris, Aeneas, Helenus, and attendants. Flourish.

All. The Troyans' trumpet.
Agamemnon. Yonder comes the troop.
Aeneas. Hail, all you state of Greece. What shall be done
To him that victory commands? Or do you purpose
A victor shall be known? Will you the knights
Shall to the edge of all extremity
Pursue each other, or shall be divided
By any voice or order of the field?
Hector bade ask.
Agamemnon. Which way would Hector have it?
Aeneas. He cares not. He'll obey conditions.
Agamemnon. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely done,
A little proudly, and great deal disprizing
The knight oppos'd.
Aeneas. If not Achilles, sir,
What is your name?
Achilles. If not Achilles, nothing.
Aeneas. Therefore, Achilles. But what ere, know this:
In the extremity of great and little,
Valor and pride excel themselves in Hector;
The one almost as infinite as all,
The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,
And that which looks like pride is courtesy.
This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood,
In love whereof, half Hector stays at home;
Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek
This blended knight, half Troyan and half Greek.
Achilles. A maiden battle then? O, I perceive you.

[Enter Diomedes.]

Agamemnon. Here is Sir Diomed. Go, gentle knight;
Stand by our Ajax. As you and Lord Aeneas
Consent upon the order of their fight,
So be it, either to the uttermost
Or else a [breath]. The combatants being kin
Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.
Ulysses. They are oppos'd already.
Agamemnon. What Troyan is that same that looks so heavy?
Ulysses. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight,
Not yet mature yet matchless, firm of word,
Speaking in deeds and deedless in his tongue;
Not soon provok'd, nor being provok'd, soon calm'd.
His heart and hand both open and both free;
For what he has, he gives; what thinks, he shews;
Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty,
Nor dignifies an impair thought with breath;
Manly as Hector, but more dangerous,
For Hector in his blaze of wrath subscribes
To tender objects, but he, in heat of action,
Is more vindicative than jealous love.
They call him Troilus, and on him erect
A second hope as fairly built as Hector.
Thus says Aeneas, one that knows the youth,
Even to his inches, and with private soul
Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me. Alarum.
Agamemnon. They are in action.
Nestor. Now, Ajax, hold thine own.
Troilus. Hector, thou sleep'st. Awake thee!
Agamemnon. His blows are well dispos'd there,
Ajax. Trumpets cease.
Diomedes. You must no more.
Aeneas. Princes, enough, so please you.
Ajax. I am not warm yet. Let us fight again.

31 hardiment: audacity 32 And ... argument; Cf. n. 34 horns: i.e. cuckold's horns 42 make ... live: bet my life 45 boot: to boot, extra advantages 50 fillip: hit (a reference to his cuckold's horns) 58 his: i.e. Menelaus' 62 sense: pun on two meanings: 'intelligence' and 'sensuality' 66 motive: unit, part that produces motion 67 encounterers: flirts, 'forward' women 68 a coasting; Cf. n. ere: F ete 69 tables: tablets 70 tickling: avid, curious 72 game; Cf. n. 77 Will you: do you wish

83 conditions: four syllables here 85 disprizing: depreciating; Q misprising 96 Ajax ... blood; Cf. n. 100 maiden battle: a draw, an issueless combat 105 breath: breathing space; F breach 109 knight; Cf. n. 113 free: generous, noble 116 impair: unsuitable, unconsidered (stressed -́ –) 120 vindicative: vindictive 124 to his inches: his exact height, i.e. very intimately with private soul: in confidence 125 translate: reveal, interpret

Diomedes. As Hector pleases.
Hector. Why then will I no more.
Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,
A cousin german to great Priam's seed.
The obligation of our blood forbids
A gory emulation 'twixt us twain.
Were thy commixion Greek and Troyan so
That thou couldst say, 'This hand is Grecian all
And this is Troyan, the sinews of this leg
All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's blood
Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister
Bounds in my father's,' by Jove multipotent,
Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member
Wherein my sword had not impressure made
Of our rank feud. But the just gods gainsay
That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother,
My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword
Be drained. Let me embrace thee, Ajax.
By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms!
Hector would have them fall upon him thus.
Cousin, all honor to thee.
Ajax. I thank thee, Hector.
Thou art too gentle and too free a man.
I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence
A great addition earned in thy death.
Hector. Not Neoptolymus so mirable,
On whose bright crest fame with her loud'st oyes
Cries, 'This is he,' [could] promise to himself
A thought of added honor torn from Hector.
Aeneas. There is expectance here from both the sides
What further you will do.
Hector. We'll answer it;
The issue is embracement. Ajax, farewell.
Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success,
As seld I have the chance, I would desire
My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.
Diomedes. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish, and great Achilles
Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.
Hector. Aeneas, call my brother Troilus to me,
And signify this loving interview
To the expecters of our Troyan part.
Desire them home. Give me thy hand, my cousin;
I will go eat with thee and see your knights.

Enter Agamemnon and the rest.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.
Hector. The worthiest of them tell me name by name;
But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes
Shall find him by his large and portly size.
Agamemnon. Worthy of arms, as welcome as to one
That would be rid of such an enemy.
But that's no welcome. Understand more clear;
What's past and what's to come is strew'd with husks
And formless ruin of oblivion;
But in this extant moment, faith and troth,
Strain'd purely, from all hollow bias drawing,
Bids thee with most divine integrity
From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.
Hector. I thank thee, most imperious Agamemnon.
Agamemnon. My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less to you.
Menelaus. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting.
You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.
Hector. Who must we answer?
Aeneas. The noble Menelaus.
Hector. O, you, my lord! By Mars his gauntlet, thanks.
Mock not that I affect th' untraded oath;
Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove.
She's well, but bade me not commend her to you.
Menelaus. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme.
Hector. O pardon! I offend.
Nestor. I have, thou gallant Troyan, seen thee oft,
Laboring for destiny, make cruel way
Through ranks of Greekish youth, and I have seen thee
As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed,
And seen thee scorning forfeits and subduements
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i' th' air,
Not letting it decline on the declin'd;
That I have said unto my standers-by,
'Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life.'
And I have seen thee pause and take thy breath
When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrestling. This have I seen,
But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel,
I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire
And once fought with him. He was a soldier good,
But by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee,
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.
Aeneas. 'Tis the old Nestor.
Hector. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time.
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.
Nestor. I would my arms could match thee in contention
As they contend with thee in courtesy.
Hector. I would they could.
Nestor. Ha? By this white beard, I'ld fight with thee tomorrow.
Well, welcome, welcome. I have seen the time.
Ulysses. I wonder now how yonder city stands,
When we have here her base and pillar by us.
Hector. I know your favor, Lord Ulysses, well.
Ah sir, there's many a Greek and Troyan dead
Since first I saw yourself and Diomed
In Ilion on your Greekish embassy.
Ulysses. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue.
My prophecy is but half his journey yet,
For yonder walls that pertly front your town,
Yond towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.
Hector. I must not believe you.
There they stand yet. And modestly I think,

139 emulation: rivalry 140 commixion: mixture 144 dexter: right. sinister: left (stressed — ⏑ —) 145 multipotent: very powerful 148 gainsay: forbid 156 free: generous, noble 159 Neoptolymus; Cf. n. mirable: admirable, marvelous 160 oyes; Cf. n. 161 could: F could'st 163 expectance: expectation, wondering 166 issue: result 168 seld: seldom desire: invite 174 expecters . . . part: Trojans who are waiting 175 Desire them: request them to go SD Enter . . . rest; Cf. n. 180 portly: majestic, imposing 185 oblivion: four distinct syllables here

187 from . . . drawing: withdrawing from bias; cf. I.3.15; Cf. n. 191 My . . . you: you probably addressed to Troilus 196 Mars his gauntlet: Mars' gauntlet 197 untraded: unusual, not customary 198 quondam: former 205 Perseus; cf. I.3.42 gloss 206 subduements: situations in which opponent is subdued 214 still: continually 215 grandsire; Cf. n. 221 chronicle: history book (here used figuratively) 232 favor: face, aspect 238 pertly: boldly 239 buss: kiss 242 modestly: without exaggeration

The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood. The end crowns all,
And that old common arbitrator, Time,
Will one day end it.
Ulysses. So to him we leave it.
Most gentle and most valiant Hector, welcome.
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me and see me at my tent.
Achilles. I shall forestall thee, Lord Ulysses, thou.
Now Hector I have fed mine eyes on thee;
I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,
And quoted joint by joint.
Hector. Is this Achilles?
Achilles. I am Achilles.
Hector. Stand fair, I prithee; let me look on thee.
Achilles. Behold thy fill.
Hector. Nay, I have done already.
Achilles. Thou art too brief. I will the second time,
As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.
Hector. O, like a book of sport thou'lt read me ore;
But there's more in me than thou understandst.
Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?
Achilles. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body
Shall I destroy him? Whether there, or there, or there,
That I may give the local wound a name,
And make distinct the very breach whereout
Hector's great spirit flew. Answer me, heavens.
Hector. It would discredit the bless'd gods, proud man,
To answer such a question. Stand again.
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly
As to prenominate in nice conjecture
Where thou wilt hit me dead?
Achilles. I tell thee, yea.
Hector. Wert thou the oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well,
For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there,
But by the forge that stithied Mars his helm,
I'll kill thee everywhere, yea, ore and ore!
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag.
His insolence draws folly from my lips.
But I'll endeavor deeds to match these words,
Or may I never—
Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin.
And you, Achilles, let these threats alone,
Till accident or purpose bring you to't.
You may [have] every day enough of Hector
If you have stomach. The general state, I fear,
Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him.
Hector. I pray you, let us see you in the field.
We have had pelting wars since you refus'd
The Grecians' cause.
Achilles. Dost thou entreat me, Hector?
Tomorrow do I meet thee fell as death;
Tonight, all friends.
Hector. Thy hand upon that match!
Agamemnon. First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent;
There in the full convive you. Afterwards,
As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall
Concur together, severally entreat him.
Beat loud the taborins, let the trumpets blow,
That this great soldier may his welcome know.
Exeunt [all but Troilus and Ulysses].
Troilus. My Lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you,
In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?
Ulysses. At Menelaus' tent, most princely Troilus.
There Diomed doth feast with him tonight,
Who neither looks on heaven nor on earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the fair Cressid.
Troilus. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to thee so much,
After we part from Agamemnon's tent,
To bring me thither?
Ulysses. You shall command me, sir.
As gentle tell me, of what honor was
This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there
That wails her absence?
Troilus. O sir, to such as boasting shew their scars
A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord?
She was belov'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth;
But still sweet love is food for Fortune's tooth. Exeunt.

Act Fifth ❧ Scene First

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achilles. I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine tonight,
Which with my scimitar I'll cool tomorrow.
Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.
Patroclus. Here comes Thersites.

Enter Thersites.

Achilles. How now, thou core of envy?
Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?
Thersites. Why, thou picture of what thou seem'st, and idol of idiot-worshipers, here's a letter for thee.
Achilles. From whence, fragment?
Thersites. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.
Patroclus. Who keeps the tent now?
Thersites. The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound.
Patroclus. Well said, adversity, and what need these tricks?
Thersites. Prithee be silent, boy. I profit not by thy talk. Thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlot.
Patroclus. Male varlot, you rogue? What's that?
Thersites. Why, his masculine whore. Now the rotten diseases of the South, guts-griping ruptures, catarrhs, loads of gravel i' th' back, lethargies, cold palsies, and the like take and take again such prepostrous discoveries!
Patroclus. Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanst thou to curse thus?
Thersites. Do I curse thee?
Patroclus. Why no, you ruinous butt! You whoreson indistinguishable cur!

253 exact: here stressed — — 254 quoted: scrutinized 273 prenominate: specify or name beforehand nice: precise 279 stithied: forged 285 chafe thee: arouse yourself 288 may have: F may 290 odd: at odds 292 pelting: petty, insignificant 295 fell: fierce, cruel 299 convive you: be convivial, feast

301 severally entreat him: individually invite (treat) him 302 taborins: drums 320 doth; Cf. n. 12 surgeon's box; Cf. n. 15 varlot; Cf. n. 18, 19 loads . . . back: kidney stones lethargies: apoplexies palsies; Cf. n. 20 discoveries: revelations 24 butt: cask of wine, hogshead

Thersites. No? Why art thou then exasperate, thou idle, immaterial skein of sleyd silk? Thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou! Ah, how the poor world is pest'red with such water-flies, diminutives of nature!

Patroclus. Out, gall!

Thersites. Finch egg!

Achilles. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite
From my great purpose in tomorrow's battle.
Here is a letter from Queen Hecuba,
A token from her daughter, my fair love,
Both taxing me and gaging me to keep
An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it.
Fall Greeks, fail fame, honor or go or stay,
My major vow lies here; this I'll obey.
Come, come Thersites, help to trim my tent;
This night in banqueting must all be spent.
Away, Patroclus. [Exeunt Achilles and Patroclus.]

Thersites. With too much blood and too little brain, these two may run mad; but if with too much brain and too little blood they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails, but he has not so much brain as ear wax; and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull, the primitive statue and oblique memorial of cuckolds, a thrifty shoeing horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg—to what form but that he is, should wit larded with malice and malice forced with wit turn him to? To an ass were nothing; he is both ass and ox. To an ox were nothing; he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care; but to be Menelaus, I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites. For I care not to be the louse of a lazar, so I were not Menelaus. Hoy-day, spirits and fires!

Enter Hector, Ajax, Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Diomed, with lights.

Agamemnon. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis.
There where we see the light.

Hector. I trouble you.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Enter Achilles.

Ulysses. Here comes himself to guide you.

Achilles. Welcome, brave Hector. Welcome, princes all.

Agamemnon. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid good night. Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hector. Thanks and good night to the Greeks' general.

Menelaus. Good night, my lord.

Hector. Good night, sweet Lord Menelaus.

Thersites. Sweet draught! 'Sweet,' quoth a? Sweet sink, sweet sewer!

Achilles. Good night and welcome, both at once, to those That go or tarry.

Agamemnon. Good night.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Menelaus.]

26, 27 immaterial: insignificant, flimsy sleyd: raw, untwisted sarcenet: fine silk 36 gaging: binding, engaging 38 or . . . or: either . . . or. SD Exeunt . . . Patroclus: F has merely Exit. Q has no SD 46 quails: women, prostitutes 47-49 transformation . . . cuckolds; Cf. n. shoeing horn: shoe horn, tool; Cf. n. 50 that: that which 51 forced: stuffed, farced 54 fitchew: polecat puttock: small hawk 71 draught: privy sink: cesspool. SD F has no SD here.

Achilles. Old Nestor tarries, and you too Diomed;
Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Diomedes. I cannot, lord. I have important business,
The tide whereof is now. Good night, great Hector.

Hector. Give me your hand.

Ulysses. Follow his torch. He goes
To Calchas' tent. I'll keep you company.

Troilus. Sweet sir, you honor me.

Hector. And so good night.

[Exeunt Diomed, Troilus, and Ulysses.]

Achilles. Come, come, enter my tent.

Exeunt [Achilles, Hector, Ajax, and Nestor].

Thersites. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave. I will no more trust him when he leers than I will a serpent when he hisses. He will spend his mouth and promise, like Brabbler the hound, but when he performs, astronomers foretell it, that it is prodigious—there will come some change. The sun borrows of the moon when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector than not to dog him. They say he keeps a Troyan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas his tent. I'll after. Nothing but lechery! All incontinent varlots! [Exit.]

Scene Second

Enter Diomed.

Diomedes. What, are you up here, ho? Speak.

Calchas. [Within.] Who calls?

Diomedes. Diomed. Calchas, I think, where's your daughter?

Calchas. [Within.] She comes to you.

Enter Troilus and Ulysses.

Ulysses. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter Cressid.

Troilus. Cressid comes forth to him.

Diomedes. How now, my charge?

Cressida. Now, my sweet guardian, hark; a word with you.

Troilus. Yea, so familiar?

Ulysses. She will sing any man at first sight.

Thersites. And any man may [sing] her, if he can take her [cliff]; she's noted.

Diomedes. Will you remember?

Cressida. Remember? Yes.

Diomedes. Nay, but do then; and let your mind be coupled with your words.

Troilus. What should she remember?

Ulysses. List!

Cressida. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Thersites. Roguery!

Diomedes. Nay, then—

Cressida. I'll tell you what.

Diomedes. Foh, foh! Come, tell a pin! You are a forsworn—

Cressida. In faith, I cannot. What would you have me do?

Thersites. A juggling trick, to be secretly open.

79 tide: time SD Exeunt . . . Ulysses Cf. n. 89 Brabbler; Cf. n. 92 leave to see: leave off seeing 94 Calchas his: Calchas'; see II.1.54 Cf. n. after: follow after SD Exit: F Exeunt 5 discover: reveal 11 sing: F find 12 cliff: clef, key; F life 14 Cressida.: Mistakenly labeled Cal. in both F and Q 23 tell a pin: tell, nothing!

Diomedes. What did you swear you would bestow on me?
Cressida. I prithee, do not hold me to mine oath.
Bid me do anything but that, sweet Greek.
Diomedes. Good night.
Troilus. Hold, patience.
Ulysses. How now, Troyan?
Cressida. Diomed.
Diomedes. No, no. Good night. I'll be your fool no more.
Troilus. Thy better must.
Cressida. Hark, one word in your ear,
Troilus. O plague and madness!
Ulysses. You are moved, prince. Let us depart, I pray you,
Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself
To wrathful terms. This place is dangerous;
The time right deadly. I beseech you go.
Troilus. Behold, I pray you.
Ulysses. Nay, good my lord, go off.
You flow to great distraction. Come, my lord.
Troilus. I pray thee, stay.
Ulysses. You have not patience; come.
Troilus. I pray you, stay. By hell and hell torments,
I will not speak a word.
Diomedes. And so good night.
Cressida. Nay, but you part in anger.
Troilus. Doth that grieve thee?
O wither'd truth!
Ulysses. Why, how now, lord?
Troilus. By Jove,
I will be patient.
Cressida. Guardian? Why, Greek!
Diomedes. Foh, foh! Adieu. You palter.
Cressida. In faith, I do not. Come hither once again.
Ulysses. You shake, my lord, at something. Will you go?
You will break out.
Troilus. She strokes his cheek!
Ulysses. Come, come.
Troilus. Nay, stay. By Jove, I will not speak a word!
There is between my will and all offenses
A guard of patience. Stay a little while.
Thersites. How the divel Luxury with his fat rump and potato finger tickles these together. Fry, lechery, fry!
Diomedes. But will you, then?
Cressida. In faith, I will. Lo, never trust me else.
Diomedes. Give me some token for the surety of it.
Cressida. I'll fetch you one. Exit.
Ulysses. You have sworn patience.
Troilus. Fear me not, sweet lord.
I will not be myself, nor have cognition
Of what I feel. I am all patience.

Enter Cressid.

Thersites. Now, the pledge! Now, now, now!
Cressida. Here, Diomed; keep this sleeve.
Troilus. O beauty! Where is thy faith?
Ulysses. My lord.
Troilus. I will be patient; outwardly I will.
Cressida. You look upon that sleeve? Behold it well.
He lov'd me, O false wench! Give't me again.

28 do anything: F do not anything 43 flow: go toward 56 palter: equivocate, deal crookedly 65 Luxury: lechery 66 potato: Cf. n. 72 Fear me not: you can depend on me

Diomedes. Whose was't?
Cressida. It is no matter now I have't again.
I will not meet with you tomorrow night.
I prithee, Diomed, visit me no more.
Thersites. Now she sharpens. Well said, whetstone.
Diomedes. I shall have it.
Cressida. What, this?
Diomedes. Ay, that.
Cressida. O all you gods! O pretty, pretty pledge!
Thy master now lies thinking in his bed
Of thee and me, and sighs, and takes my glove,
And gives memorial dainty kisses to it,
As I kiss thee. Nay, do not snatch it from me.
He that takes that [doth take] my heart withal.
Diomedes. I had your heart before; this follows it.
Troilus. I did swear patience.
Cressida. You shall not have it, Diomed; faith, you shall not.
I'll give you something else.
Diomedes. I will have this. Whose was it?
Cressida. It is no matter.
Diomedes. Come, tell me whose it was!
Cressida. 'Twas one that lov'd me better than you will.
But now you have it, take it.
Diomedes. Whose was it?
Cressida. By all Diana's waiting women yond,
And by herself, I will not tell you whose.
Diomedes. Tomorrow will I wear it on my helm,
And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge it.
Troilus. Wert thou the divel and wor'st it on thy horn,
It should be challeng'd.
Cressida. Well, well, 'tis done. 'Tis past;
And yet it is not. I will not keep my word.
Diomedes. Why then, farewell.
Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.
Cressida. You shall not go. One cannot speak a word
But it straight starts you.
Diomedes. I do not like this fooling.
Thersites. Nor I, by Pluto! But that that likes not me, pleases me best.
Diomedes. What, shall I come? The hour?
Cressida. Ay, come. O Jove!
Do come. I shall be plagu'd.
Diomedes. Farewell till then. Exit.
Cressida. Good night. I prithee, come.
Troilus, farewell. One eye yet looks on thee,
But with my heart the other eye doth see.
Ah, poor our sex! This fault in us I find:
The error of our eye directs our mind.
What error leads must err. O then, conclude Minds sway'd by eyes are full of turpitude. Exit.
Thersites. A proof of strength she could not publish more;
Unless she say, 'My mind is now turn'd whore.'
Ulysses. All's done, my lord.
Troilus. It is.
Ulysses. Why stay we then?
Troilus. To make a recordation to my soul
Of every syllable that here was spoke.

94 Nay . . . me; Cf. n. 95 doth take: F rakes; F2 takes 106 Diana's waiting women: the moon's attendants, the stars 119 likes not me: does not please me; Cf. n. 123 plagu'd: harassed (perhaps in the sense of punishment) 137 make a recordation: to make a record on, engrave on

But if I tell how these two did coact,
Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?
Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,
An esperance so obstinately strong
That doth invert that test of eyes and ears,
As if those organs had deceptious functions,
Created only to calumniate.
Was Cressid here?
Ulysses. I cannot conjure, Troyan.
Troilus. She was not, sure.
Ulysses. Most sure she was.
Troilus. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.
Ulysses. Nor mine, my lord. Cressid was here but now.
Troilus. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood!
Think we had mothers. Do not give advantage
To stubborn critics, apt without a theme
For depravation to square the general sex
By Cressid's rule. Rather think this not Cressid.
Ulysses. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers?
Troilus. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.
Thersites. Will he swagger himself out on's own eyes?
Troilus. This she? No, this is Diomed's Cressida.
If beauty have a soul, this is not she;
If souls guide vows, if vows are sanctimony,
If sanctimony be the gods' delight,
If there be rule in unity itself,
This is not she. O madness of discourse!
That cause sets up with and against thyself
[Bifold] authority, where reason can revolt
Without perdition, and loss assume all reason
Without revolt. This is and is not Cressid.
Within my soul there doth conduce a fight
Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparate
Divides more wider than the sky and earth,
And yet the spacious breadth of this division
Admits no orifexfor a point as subtle
As Ariachne's broken woof to enter.
Instance, O instance, strong as Pluto's gates!
Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven.
Instance, O instance, strong as heaven itself!
The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd,
And with another knot, five finger tied,
The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy relics
Of her ore-eaten faith are bound to Diomed.
Ulysses. May worthy Troilus be half attached
With that which here his passion doth express?
Troilus. Ay, Greek, and that shall be divulged well
In characters as red as Mars his heart,
Inflam'd with Venus. Never did young man fancy
With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.

139 coact: act together 141 Sith: since 142 esperance: hope 143 that test; Cf. n. 144 deceptious: deceptive 154 critics: cynical cavillers 155 depravation: defamation, disparagement square: measure general sex: female sex in general 156 rule: ruler, yardstick 160 on's: on his, of his 163 sanctimony: a holy thing 166 discourse: reasoning 167, 168 That cause . . . Without revolt; Cf. n. cause: reasoning Bifold: F By foule 171 doth conduce: goes on 172 inseparate: single, whole, unified 175 orifex: orifice, opening 176 Ariachne's broken woof: a spider web; Cf. n. 177 Instance: example, evidence, proof 181 five finger tied: tied by mere human hands 182 orts: leavings, scraps 184 ore-eaten: eaten over, picked over already 185 May: can attached: seriously involved in 188 characters: letters 189 fancy: love

Hark, Greek. As much [as] I do Cressid love,
So much by weight hate I her Diomed.
That sleeve is mine that he'll bear in his helm.
Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill,
My sword should bite it. Not the dreadful spout
Which shipmen do the hurricano call,
Constring'd in mass by the almighty [sun],
Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear
In his descent than shall my prompted sword,
Falling on Diomed.
Thersites. He'll tickle it for his concupy.
Troilus. O Cressid! O false Cressid! False, false, false!
Let all untruths stand by thy stained name
And they'll seem glorious.
Ulysses. O, contain yourself.
Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter Aeneas.

Aeneas. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord.
Hector by this is arming him in Troy.
Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.
Troilus. Have with you, prince. My courteous lord, adieu.
Farewell, revolted fair. And Diomed,
Stand fast and wear a castle on thy head.
Ulysses. I'll bring you to the gates.
Troilus. Accept distracted thanks.
Exeunt Troilus, Aeneas, and Ulysses.

Thersites. Would I could meet that rogue, Diomed. I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus will give me anything for the intelligence of this whore. The parrot will not do more for an almond than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery, still wars and lechery! Nothing else holds fashion. A burning divel take them! [Exit.]

Scene Third

Enter Hector and Andromache.

Andromache. When was my lord so much urgently temper'd
To stop his ears against admonishment?
Unarm, unarm, and do not fight today.
Hector. You train me to offend you. Get you gone.
By the everlasting gods, I'll go!
Andromache. My dreams will sure prove ominous to the day.
Hector. No more, I say.

Enter Cassandra.

Cassandra. Where is my brother Hector?
Andromache. Here, sister, arm'd and bloody in intent.
Consort with me in loud and dear petition,
Pursue me him on knees; for I have dreamt
Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night
Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.
Cassandra. O, 'tis true!
Hector. Ho! Bid my trumpet sound.
Cassandra. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother.

191 As much as: from F2; Q and F as much Cressid: F Cressida 195 spout: waterspout 197 Constring'd: brought together sun: F Fenne 199 descent: depths prompted: ready 201 concupy: concubine 209 stays: waits 217, 218 parrot . . . almond; Cf. n. commodious: accommodating 219 still: always SD Exit: Not in F 1 temper'd: disposed 4 train: invite, lure 10 dear: honorable

Hector. Be gone, I say! The gods have heard me swear.
Cassandra. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows;
They are polluted off'rings, more abhorr'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.
Andromache. O, be persuaded. Do not count it holy
To hurt by being just. It is as lawful,
For we would give much, to use violent thefts
And rob in behalf of charity.
Cassandra. It is the purpose that makes strong the vow,
But vows to every purpose must not hold.
Unarm, sweet Hector.
Hector. Hold you still, I say!
Mine honor keeps the weather of my fate.
Life every man holds dear, but the dear man
Holds honor far more precious-dear than life.

Enter Troilus.

How now, young man? Meanst thou to fight today?
Andromache. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.
Exit Cassandra.
Hector. No, faith, young Troilus. Doff thy harness, youth.
I am today i' th' vein of chivalry.
Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.
Unarm thee, go. And doubt thou not, brave boy,
I'll stand today for thee and me and Troy.
Troilus. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you
Which better fits a lion than a man.
Hector. What vice is that? Good Troilus, chide me for it.
Troilus. When many times the captive Grecian falls,
Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise and live.
Hector. O, 'tis fair play.
Troilus. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector!
Hector. How now, how now?
Troilus. For th' love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit Pity with our mothers;
And when we have our armors buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords,
Spur them to ruthful work, rein them from ruth.
Hector. Fie, savage, fie!
Troilus. Hector, then 'tis wars.
Hector. Troilus, I would not have you fight today.
Troilus. Who should withhold me?
Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars
Beck'ning with fiery truncheon my retire;
Nor Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes oregalled with recourse of tears,
Nor you my brother with your true sword drawn
Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way
But by my ruin.

Enter Priam and Cassandra.

Cassandra. Lay hold upon him, Priam; hold him fast.
He is thy crutch. Now if thou lose thy stay,
Thou on him leaning and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.

18 peevish: silly, foolish 23 For . . . much: because we would like to give much; Cf. n. 29 keeps the weather of: has superiority over, has the wind of 30 dear man: honorable or noble man; Cf. n. 34 harness: armor 37 brushes: attacks, clashes 41 lion; Cf. n. 44 fan: air current 53 ruthful: pitiful, i.e. violent and tragic 59 truncheon: staff or baton, sometimes used as signal to stop fighting

Priam. Come, Hector come. Go back.
Thy wife hath dreamt, thy mother hath had visions,
Cassandra doth foresee, and I myself
Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt
To tell thee that this day is ominous.
Therefore, come back.
Hector. Aeneas is afield,
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valor, to appear
This morning to them.
Priam. Ay, but thou shalt not go.
Hector. I must not break my faith.
You know me dutiful; therefore dear sir,
Let me not shame respect, but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.
Cassandra. O Priam, yield not to him.
Andromache. Do not, dear father.
Hector. Andromache, I am offended with you.
Upon the love you bear me, get you in. Exit Andromache.
Troilus. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl
Makes all these bodements.
Cassandra. O farewell, dear Hector.
Look how thou diest! Look how thy eye turns pale!
Look how thy wounds [do] bleed at many vents!
Hark how Troy roars, how Hecuba cries out,
How poor Andromache shrills her dolor forth!
Behold distraction, frenzy, and amazement,
Like witless antics one another meet,
And all cry, 'Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!'
Troilus. Away, away.
Cassandra. Farewell. Yes, soft! Hector, I take my leave.
Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive. Exit.
Hector. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaim.
Go in and cheer the town; we'll forth and fight,
Do deeds of praise and tell you them at night.
Priam. Farewell. The gods with safety stand about thee.
[Exeunt Priam and Hector severally.] Alarum.
Troilus. They are at it, hark! Proud Diomed, believe
I come to lose my arm or win my sleeve.

Enter Pandar.

Pandarus. Do you hear, my lord? Do you hear?
Troilus. What now?
Pandarus. Here's a letter come from yond poor girl.
Troilus. Let me read.
Pandarus. A whoreson tisick, a whoreson rascally tisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl, and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' th's days. And I have a rheum in mine eyes too, and such an ache in my bones, that unless a man were curst, I cannot tell what to think on't. What says she there?
Troilus. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart;
Th' effect doth operate another way. [He tears the letter.]
Go, wind, to wind! There turn and change together.
My love with words and errors still she feeds,
But edifies another with her deeds.

77 faith of valor: promises involving a soldier's honor 82 shame respect: disgrace the respect I owe you 90 bodements: forebodings 93 do: F doth 97 antics: madmen 102 exclaim: exclamations 112 tisick: lung congestion, cough 120 effect: real meaning

Pandarus. Why, but hear you?
Troilus. Hence, brother lacky! Ignomy and shame
Pursue thy life and live aye with thy name! Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Alarum. Enter Thersites in excursion.

Thersites. Now they are clapper-clawing one another, I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy, doting, foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there in his helm. I would fain see them meet, that that same young Troyan ass that loves the whore there might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain with the sleeve back to the dissembling, luxurious drab of a sleeveless errant. O' th' tother side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals—that [stale] old-mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox Ulysses—is not prov'd worth a blackberry. They set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur Ajax against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles. And now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles and will not arm today. Whereupon, the Grecians began to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion.

Enter Diomed and Troilus.

Soft! Here comes sleeve and th' other.
Troilus: Fly not; for shouldst thou take the River Styx
I would swim after.
Diomedes. Thou dost miscall retire.
I do not fly, but advantageous care
Withdrew me from the odds of multitude.
Have at thee!
Thersites. Hold thy whore, Grecian! Now, for thy whore, Troyan! Now the sleeve, now the sleeve!
[Exeunt Diomed and Troilus.]

Enter Hector.

Hector. What are thou, Greek? Art thou for Hector's match
Art thou of blood and honor?
Thersites. No, no! I am a rascal, a scurvy railing knave, a very filthy rogue.
Hector. I do believe thee. Live. [Exit.]
Thersites. God a mercy that thou wilt believe me; but a plague break thy neck for frighting me. What's become of the wenching rogues? I think they have swallowed one another. I would laugh at that miracle; yet in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. Exit.

Scene Fifth

Enter Diomed and Servants.

Diomedes. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse.
Present the fair steed to my Lady Cressid.
Fellow, commend my service to her beauty;
Tell her I have chastis'd the amorous Troyan
And am her knight by proof.
Servant. I go, my lord. [Exit.]

Enter Agamemnon.

Agamemnon. Renew, renew! The fierce Polidamus
Hath beat down Menon; bastard Margarelon
Hath Doreus prisoner
And stands colossus-wise waving his beam
Upon the pashed corses of the kings
Epistropus and Cedus. Polixenes is slain;
Amphimacus and Thous deadly hurt;
Patroclus tane or slain, and Palamedes
Sore hurt and bruis'd. The dreadful Sagittary
Appalls our numbers. Haste we, Diomed,
To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nestor.

Nestor. Go bear Patroclus' body to Achilles,
And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame.
There is a thousand Hectors in the field.
Now here he fights on Galathe, his horse,
And there lacks works; anon he's there afoot,
And there they fly or die, like scaled sculls
Before the belching whale; then is he yonder,
And there the straying Greeks, ripe for his edge,
Fall down before him like the mower's swath.
Here, there, and everywhere he leaves and takes,
Dexterity so obeying appetite
That what he will he does, and does so much
That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulysses. O courage, courage, princes! Great Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance.
Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood,
Together with his mangled Myrmidons
That noseless, handless, hack'd, and chipp'd come to him,
Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend
And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd and at it,
Roaring for Troilus, who hath done today
Mad and fantastic execution,
Engaging and redeeming of himself
With such a careless force and forceless care
As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,
Bade him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus! Thou coward, Troilus! Exit.
Diomedes. Ay, there, there!
Nestor. So, so, we draw together. Exit.

Enter Achilles.

Achilles. Where is this Hector?
Come, come, though boy-queller, shew thy face!
Know what it is to meet Achilles angry.
Hector, where's Hector? I will none but Hector. [Exeunt.

124-126 Why ... name; Cf. n. 125 Ignomy: ignominy SD in excursion: running onstage 7 luxurious: lecherous of a sleeveless errant: on a useless errand 8 stale: F stole 10 set me up: set up 11 in policy: craftily 14 proclaim barbarism: follow anarchic barbarity rather than ordered policy 20 advantageous care: care for my own advantage 25 Hector's match; Cf. n.

7-14 Polidamus ... Palamedes; Cf. n. 10 beam: lance 11 pashed: smashed, mangled corses: corpses 14 tane: taken 15 Sagittary; Cf. n. 23 scaled sculls: schools of fish 26 swath: grain cut by scythe 30 proof: accomplished fact 36 Crying on: exclaiming about 39 execution: five syllables here 48 queller: killer SD Exeunt; Cf. n.

Scene Sixth

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, shew thy head!

Enter Diomed.

Diomedes. Troilus, I say! Where's Troilus?
Ajax. What wouldst thou?
Diomedes. I would correct him.
Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office
Ere that correction. Troilus, I say! What, Troilus!

Enter Troilus.

Troilus. O traitor Diomed!
Turn thy false face, thou traitor,
And pay thy life thou ow'st me for my horse!
Diomedes. Ha, art thou there?
Ajax. I'll fight with him alone. Stand, Diomed.
Diomedes. He is my prize. I will not look upon.
Troilus. Come, both you cogging Greeks. Have at you both!
Exeunt Troilus [, Ajax, and Diomed].

Enter Hector.

Hector. Yea, Troilus? O well fought, my youngest brother!

Enter Achilles.

Achilles. Now do I see thee. Have at thee Hector!
Hector. Pause, if thou wilt.
Achilles. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Troyan.
Be happy that my arms are out of use;
My rest and negligence befriends thee now,
But thou anon shalt hear of me again;
Till when, go seek thy fortune. Exit.
Hector. Fare thee well.
I would have been much more a fresher man
Had I expected thee. How now, my brother?

Enter Troilus.

Troilus. Ajax hath tane Aeneas! Shall it be?
No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,
He shall not carry him. I'll be tane too,
Or bring him off. Fate hear me what I say;
I reck not though thou end my life today. Exit.

Enter One in armor.

Hector. Stand, stand, thou Greek! Thou art a goodly mark.
No? Wilt thou not? I like thy armor well;
I'll frush it and unlock the rivets all,
But I'll be master of it. Wilt thou not, beast, abide?
Why then, fly on. I'll hunt thee for thy hide. [Exeunt.]

Scene Seventh

Enter Achilles with Myrmidons.

Achilles. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons.
Mark what I say: Attend me where I wheel,
Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath;
And when I have the bloody Hector found,
Empale him with your weapons round about.
In fellest manner execute your arms.
Follow me, sirs, and my proceeding eye.
It is decreed Hector the great must die. Exit [with followers].

Enter Thersites, Menelaus, and Paris.

Thersites. The cuckold and the cuckold maker are at it. Now bull! Now dog! Low, Paris, low! Now my double hen'd sparrow! Low, Paris, low! The bull has the game. 'Ware horns, ho!
Exit Paris and Menelaus.

Enter Bastard.

Bastard. Turn, slave, and fight!
Thersites. What art thou?
Bastard. A bastard son of Priam's.
Thersites. I am a bastard too. I love bastards. I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valor, in everything illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed; the quarrel's most ominous to us; if the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgment. Farewell, bastard.
Bastard. The divel take thee, coward. Exeunt.

Scene Eighth

Enter Hector.

Hector. Most putrified core, so fair without,
Thy goodly armor thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my day's work done. I'll take good breath.
Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and death.

Enter Achilles and his Myrmidons.

Achilles. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set;
How ugly night comes breathing at his heels,
Even with the vail and darking of the sun.
To close the day up, Hector's life is done.
Hector. I am unarm'd. Forgo this vantage, Greek.
Achilles. Strike, fellows, strike! This is the man I seek.
So Ilion, fall thou; now Troy sink down!
Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.
On Myrmidons! Cry you all amain:
'Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain.' Retreat.
Hark, a retreat upon our Grecian part.
Greek. The Troyan trumpets sound the like, my lord.
Achilles. The dragon wing of night orespreads the earth
And, sticklerlike, the armies separates.
My half-supp'd sword that frankly would have fed,
Pleas'd with this dainty bait, thus goes to bed.
Come, tie his body to my horse's tail;
Along the field I will the Troyan trail. Exeunt.

6 Ere that correction; Cf. n. 12 look upon: to be a spectator 13 cogging: defrauding SD Exeunt . . . Diomed: F has merely Exit Troilus 19 rest and negligence: i.e. his long inactivity has made him rusty 27 carry: prevail, have victory over 32 frush: smash SD Exeunt: F Exit 2 wheel: turn, go

5 Empale: 'surround,' as with a fence 6 execute: employ, make use of arms: F arme 10 Low: sound of a bull (a horned beast) double hen'd sparrow; Cf. n. 1 putrified: four syllables here 3 breath: breathing space, rest 7 vail: setting 16 Greek: one of the Myrmidons sound: F sounds 18 stickler-: an arbiter at a duel 19 frankly: abundantly, freely

Scene Ninth

Sound retreat. Shout.
Enter Agamemnon, Ajax, Menelaus, Nestor, Diomed, and the rest, marching.

Agamemnon. Hark, hark! What shout is that?
Nestor. Peace, drums.
Soldier [Within.] Achilles! Achilles! Hector's slain! Achilles!
Diomedes. The bruit is, Hector's slain and by Achilles.
Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be.
Great Hector was a man as good as he.
Agamemnon. March patiently along. Let one be sent
To pray Achilles see us at our tent.
If in his death the gods have us befriended,
Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended. Exeunt.

Scene Tenth

Enter Aeneas, Paris, Antenor, and Deiphobus.

Aeneas. Stand, ho! Yet are we masters of the field.
Never go home. Here starve we out the night.

Enter Troilus.

Troilus. Hector is slain.
All. Hector? The gods forbid!
Troilus. He's dead; and at the murtherer's horse's tail,
In beastly sort dragg'd through the shameful field.
Frown on, you heavens; effect your rage with speed!
Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy!
I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy,
And linger not our sure destructions on.
Aeneas. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.
Troilus. You understand me not that tell me so.
I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death,
But dare all imminence that gods and men
Address their dangers in. Hector is gone.
Who shall tell Priam so? Or Hecuba?
Let him that will a screechowl aye be call'd
Go in to Troy, and say there, 'Hector's dead.'
There is a word will Priam turn to stone,
Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,
Cool statues of the youth, and in a word,
Scare Troy out of itself. But march away;
Hector is dead. There is no more to say.
Stay yet. You vile abominable tents,
Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,
Let Titan rise as early as he dare,
I'll through and through you! And thou great-siz'd coward,
No space of earth shall sunder our two hates.
I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,
That moldeth goblins swift as frenzy's thoughts.
Strike a free march to Troy. With comfort go.
Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

Enter Pandarus.

Pandarus. But hear you? Hear you?
Troilus. Hence, broker-lacky! Ignomy and shame
Pursue thy life and live aye with thy name.
Exeunt [all but Pandarus].

Pandarus. A goodly med'cine for mine aching bones. O world, world, world! Thus is the poor agent despis'd. O traitors and bawds! How earnestly you are set awork, and how ill requited! Why should our endeavor be so desir'd, and the performance so loath'd? What verse for it? What instance for it? Let me see.

Full merrily the humble bee doth sing
Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;
And being once subdu'd in armed tail,
Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail.

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.
As many as be here of Pandar's hall,
Your eyes half out, weep out at Pandar's fall;
Or if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,
Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.
Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade,
Some two months hence my will shall here be made.
It should be now, but that my fear is this:
Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss.
Till then, I'll sweat and seek about for eases,
And at that time bequeath you my diseases. [Exit.]

Finis

3 Within: Q only 4 bruit: clamor, rumor 8 smile; Cf. n. 14 imminence: impending evil 15 Address: prepare

25 pight: pitched 26 Titan: the sun SD all but Pandarus: Q only 46 painted cloths: wall hangings; Cf. n. 51 hold-door: pimp, pander (those who hold the door to ensure privacy) 54 galled goose of Winchester; Cf. n. 55 sweat; Cf. n. SD Exit: F Exeunt

Notes

Prologue.17. Antenonidus. The spelling of this name differs from the form we find in earlier writers who name the gates; but since there is no real agreement even among these earlier authorities, the F reading has been allowed to stand.

Prologue.19. Sperr up. This is an emendation introduced in Theobald's edition for the unsatisfactory reading in F.

Prologue.23–5. prologue arm'd . . . argument. The prologue comes not to boast of the excellence of the author or the actors, and he is dressed in armor simply because it is appropriate to the warlike argument of the play. Some scholars have interpreted this passage as a reference to Jonson's satirical play, The Poetaster, and have further interpreted the whole play of Troilus and Cressida as Shakespeare's rejoinder to Jonson.

I.i.23, 24. here's . . . hereafter. There's yet more hereafter in the word tarry, i.e. the kneading, etc.

I.i.31. So . . . thence. Troilus calls himself a traitor for admitting that Cressida is ever out of his thoughts. Then he goes on to say that whenever she goes from them, she immediately comes back.

I.i.41. And. And in this meaning appears frequently throughout any Renaissance play, and in modern editions it is usually spelled an. In this play and in F it is almost always spelled and.

I.i.56. spirit of sense. This phrase has been much discussed, and there is no explanation which is generally agreed upon. Perhaps Shakespeare means the essential, invisible spirit of sensation. In a series of soft things being compared with the softness of Cressida's hand, this intangible, immaterial item is certainly not out of place.

I.i.73, 74. fair . . . Sunday. Cressida would be as beautiful in her poorest clothes as Helen in her finest.

I.i.78. father. Cressida's father was Calchas, a priest, who had deserted the Trojan cause to go over to the Greeks. Shakespeare, in treating Calchas later on in Act III, makes no reference to the legend that he had been told to do so by Apollo.

I.i.98. Ilium. In this play, as in the medieval authorities for the Troilus story, Ilium always means specifically the palace of Priam rather than the entire city of Troy.

I.i.110. horn. The horn joke was ominpresent in the Elizabethan period. A man whose wife was unfaithful to him was pictured as having invisible cuckold's horns on his head. The joke appears throughout this play, almost as often as Menelaus is mentioned.

I.i.113. togither. This spelling of 'together' is not infrequent in Shakespeare's plays; for the rhyme thither : togither see Helge Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation (New Haven, Yale University Press, 1953), p. 187.

I.ii.16. nephew. Actually Ajax was Hector's cousin. Much earlier Priam's sister, Hesione, had been carried off to Greece and there, according to one legend, was married to Telamon and bore Ajax. Thus Ajax was Priam's nephew and Hector's cousin. This relationship is mentioned again in II.2 and IV.5.

I.ii.26. humors. In Renaissance medicine the four humors (blood, yellow bile, black bile, and phlegm) were fluids secreted by various organs of the body. These fluids were thought to determine not only physical health but temperament, personality, and behavior. When the secretions were functioning properly and the right proportions of each were maintained, health resulted; but if one humor became excessive, certain aberrations were likely to appear. The word also had an extended, less technical usage, meaning 'caprice' or 'mood.'

I.ii.26, 27. valor . . . discretion. His valor is crushed into or mixed thoroughly with folly, and his folly is further mixed or sauced with discretion.

I.ii.45. cousin. This word was very loosely applied in Elizabethan English to virtually any collateral relationship. Actually, Cressida was Pandarus' niece.

I.ii.74. Condition. By the impossible nature of the condition, we gather that Pandarus is contradicting Cressida.

I.ii.76. a. This unaccented form of 'he' was probably a neutral [ə] sound, though the spelling is uniformly a in the Renaissance texts. It will be hereafter printed without gloss or comment.

I.ii.77. time . . . end. This was a proverbial phrase, meaning something like 'Time will tell.'

I.ii.85. will. Some modern editors emend this word to wit. Both F and Q have will, however, and if we take it to refer to Troilus' will power or strength of will no emendation is necessary.

I.ii.111. tapster's arithmetic. The tapsters or drawers of beer in the alehouses were proverbially poor at adding.

I.ii.189. nod. The related word, 'noddy,' a simpleton, forms the punning basis for Cressida's next speech. 'He who is already rich in foolishness (a noddy) shall receive more if Troilus give him a nod.'

I.ii.193. brave. Here and elsewhere in the play this word probably has double or triple connotations, since the meaning could be 'courageous,' or simply 'splendid,' 'fine,' or sometimes 'showy,' 'gaudy.'

I.ii.243. date's out. The pun here depends on the meaning of date with reference to time: 'the man's time is up' or 'he's out of date.'

I.ii.248. mask. Renaissance women often wore masks to protect their complexions from the elements.

I.ii.251. watch. Puns on the various meanings of watch and ward run throughout this passage. Cressida means here that she will prevent his telling by keeping watch on him.

I.ii.263. To bring. This is a rare Elizabethan slang idiom, possibly meaning 'with a vengeance.'

I.ii.277. Achievement . . . beseech. This cryptic epigram is evidently not proverbial but rather original with Cressida. It probably means that men use entreaty when the lady is ungained, but change to peremptory language when the object is achieved.

I.iii.8. diverts. Both F and Q read thus, although modern usage demands divert. Such plurals formed with -s by analogy with the singular were common in Shakespeare's day and constituted an acceptable variant to the form without -s.

I.iii.15. Bias. The bowling balls of the time were not true spheres but had a bias or added weight on one side. Often in Shakespeare this word is extended metaphorically to other matters, as it is here.

I.iii.23. Fortune's. The concept of the goddess Fortune was a favorite idea which the Elizabethans inherited from the Middle Ages. She might befriend a person without reason and bring him success, or just as capriciously plunge him into misery.

I.iii.54. Retorts. F reads Retyres. Various emendations have been suggested for this meaningless reading. The word Retorts was first proposed by Dyce (ed. 1857) and has been accepted by most modern editors, although there is no way of knowing exactly what Shakespeare wrote.

I.iii.61. To Agamemnon. There is no indication of the person addressed in the early texts, but this and the following line make sense only if addressed to Agamemnon and Nestor respectively.

I.iii.67. hatch'd. The phrase hatch'd in silver probably refers to Nestor's white hair.

I.iii.75. masty. The rare word Masticke in the Folio (this passage does not occur in Q) has occasioned many ingenious explanations. Professor Kökeritz suggests very plausibly that the printer misread mastie (mastif) as mastic, which he set up in type with a conventional ck and a mute e.

I.iii.87. center. Shakespeare is here using the Ptolemaic concept of the cosmos.

I.iii.91. Sol. The sun was considered a planet in Ptolemaic astronomy.

I.iii.94. aspects. According to the lore of astrology, certain relative positions or aspects of planets are supposed to have harmful effects on earthly activities.

I.iii.120. her. This her may be a mere mistake in F for their, which is the Q reading. It is perfectly possible, however, that this is the old form for the third person genitive plural (Chaucer's here), common in southern texts up to the beginning of the 16th century, although archaic by Shakespeare's time.

I.iii.130, 131. purpose . . . climb. The purpose of those who neglect degree is to climb the social ladder to the next step above. This process goes downward, or backward, pace by pace through the ranks as specified in the succeeding lines.

I.iii.159. orewrested. Shakespeare is drawing a metaphor from stringed musical instruments. The wrest was the pin used for tightening the string.

I.iii.170. Vulcan and his wife. The god Vulcan was always pictured as particularly ugly, while Venus was, of course, extremely beautiful.

I.iii.214. Thetis' sons. Achilles was Thetis' son. Nestor means that if it be granted that physical force is superior to mental powers, then anyone mounted on Achilles' horse would be as great as Achilles.

I.iii.241, 242. Jove's . . . heart. When Jove approves, nothing is so full of courage (as a Trojan).

I.iii.346–348. For . . . general. The outcome of the combat, although it actually applies to only two particular persons, shall decide the amount of praise or shame attributed to the Greeks and Trojans in general.

I.iii.349–352. And in . . . large. The figure here refers to the table of contents of a book. From the brief indication of the 'index' one sees in reduced form the contents of the whole volume.

I.iii.360–362. Which . . . . the limbs. Deighton (ed. 1906) paraphrases this passage thus: 'And if this belief (i.e. of the Trojans, that they will be victorious) is entertained it will energise the limbs of those who hold it, just as those limbs energise the swords and bows they wield.'

II.i.14. whinid'st. Since this word appears nowhere else, it has produced many ingenious emendations. Many editors have avoided it by substituting the Q reading, unsalted, but this is also unsatisfactory because salt is not normally required for leavening. The most plausible suggestion has been that of Upton (Critical Observations, 1746), who noted that whinid'st could be a dialectal pronunciation of 'vinewedest' or 'vinidest' (finewedest), meaning 'most mouldy.' This view is supported by Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation, p. 323.

II.i.31, 32. Cerberus . . . Proserpina's. Cerberus was the three-headed dog who guarded the Greek Hades. Proserpina was the beautiful wife of Pluto, the god of the underworld.

II.i.51. Mars his idiot. This construction, called the his-genitive, was originally due to a grammatical misconception. The genitive ending -es in a word like 'Marses' was sometimes thought to be a separate element, i.e. 'Mars is,' and this 'is' was thought to be equivalent to his. It was used very commonly throughout the Renaissance and even later. It appears frequently later on in this play.

II.i.103. To Achilles! to Ajax! This is uttered as if a call urging on a team of oxen.

II.i.108. brooch. Many modern editors emend this word to brach. Since it appears as brooch, however, in Q, and all the Folios, it is likely that the word is correct as it stands. It would not be surprising if Thersites were making a highly obscene accusation, for brooch or 'broach' in the 16th century meant, among other things, a 'pointed rod, spit or pricker.' (cf. OED).

II.ii.19. tithe. This word also meant anything paid by way of offering or sacrifice. The ambiguity adds meaning to this passage.

II.ii.46. And fly . . . Jove. F has this line misplaced two lines further along. The Q placement is obviously preferable.

II.ii.60–62. And the . . . merit. This passage might be paraphrased: 'That will is foolish which inclines to something which it unwholesomely likes without taking into account some idea of the absolute merit of the thing liked.'

II.ii.171. Aristotle. In the Nicomachean Ethics, Aristotle indicated that political philosophy was unsuitable for young men. The term moral in the 16th century embraced the realm of political ethics as well as other things.

II.ii.177. adders. It was a popular belief in Shakespeare's time that adders were deaf, or could stop up their ears at will.

II.iii.21, 22. gilt counterfeit . . . slipp'd. Thersites is punning on the meaning of 'slip' as a counterfeit coin.

II.iii.33. cheese. The practice of eating cheese after a meal was supposed to aid digestion. Also a noble lord often called in his fool to entertain him after a meal. Achilles thus combines the two in a facetious metaphor.

II.iii.70. shent. Neither the Q nor F reading makes sense in this passage, and most modern editors accept the emendation shent of Theobald.

II.iii.86–89. matter . . . Achilles. Nestor and Ulysses are playing with the word argument. Nestor says that Ajax will lack subject matter for this railing if he has lost Thersites. Ulysses replies that he has a new argument for railing, namely Achilles, who took away Thersites.

II.iii.91. counsel. Q has composure, which makes sense in this passage, but not very different sense from the F reading.

II.iii.93. knits not. The punctuation here is from the Q. F has knits, not folly etc., which contains the obverse of the same idea.

II.iii.98. flexure. Although the F reading makes sense of a sort, the Q word is preferable, since this whole passage controverts an old notion, still current in Shakespeare's day, that elephants have no joints. It adds an idea from a proverb that elephants, like great men, are too proud to bow, or 'make a leg.'

II.iii.118–122. And worthier . . . predominance. A worthier man than he here attends his rule aloofness, foregoes the deference due to the holy strength of his position (commander-in-chief), and submits in a passive way to his capricious superiority.

II.iii.167. Kingdom'd. Achilles is metaphorically considered a kingdom containing warring factions.

II.iii.189. coals to Cancer. Cancer is the sign of the zodiac which the sun enters at the summer solstice. Thus this line means 'and add more heat to summer.'

II.iii.206. let his humor's blood. In the word humor's the apostrophe undoubtedly means that it is a contracted form of humorous, which is the reading of Q. Humorous means here both 'full of humors' and 'capricious.'

II.iii.211. eat swords. This may be a printer's error for eat's words, i.e. eat his words. However, there are other scornful references in Shakespeare to eating swords (Much Ado about Nothing, IV.1.281, 282; Anthony and Cleopatra, III.13.234).

II.iii.214. shares. This line is sometimes taken as a topical allusion to the financial arrangements of Shakespeare's company. When the Globe theater was built in 1599, its ownership was divided into ten shares. Thus Ulysses would seem to mean that Ajax would have all (pride), not just half.

II.iii.216. He's . . . warm. Both F and Q give this sentence to Ajax' preceding speech. It makes more sense, however, as part of Nestor's speech, and most modern editors print it so. None of the asides in this scene are so marked in F, but it is clear there are several speeches Ajax is not meant to hear.

II.iii.218. My lord. Although the F does not indicate it with a scene direction, Ulysses quite obviously shifts his address to Agamemnon at this point.

II.iii.243. Milo. Milo was a semilegendary athlete of Greece who bore a four-year-old bull forty yards, killed it with one blow, and ate it.

III.i.12. honor. The servant is punning on the word honor, as he does in the next speech on the word grace. Pandarus does not catch the joke.

III.i.31. love's invisible soul. Helen, as a very symbol of love and beauty, a mortal Venus, is here hyperbolically considered the very essence or spirit of love.

III.i.37. complimental assault. Pandarus in this speech and in his next is using rather affectedly courtly language. Complimental refers to paying his compliments or respects in a formal way.

III.i.39 Sodden. This is the old past participle of 'seethe.' The servant twists Pandarus' word by applying another meaning common at the time. Hot steaming baths were used as a remedy for veneral disease, and a person in them was in a sense sodden. This naturally suggests the 'stews' or brothels of his next pun.

III.i.SD. Helena. This older form of the name Helen is used nowhere else in the play.

III.i.40. Fair. Throughout this speech Pandarus is employing a rather exaggerated rhetorical trick with his frequent repetition of the word fair as an adjective, adverb, and noun, sometimes meaning 'good,' 'fine,' sometimes 'beautiful.'

III.i.52. fits. Paris' remark is not entirely clear; perhaps he means Pandarus deprecates his singing only now and then, by fits. A pun is possible, for fits also meant the stanzas or sections of a song.

III.i.79. Helen. Helen's speech here is sometimes made part of Pandarus' preceding speech, and it perhaps fits better there; but since neither F nor Q give any authority for such a shift, and since it is understandable, with a slightly different sense, in Helen's mouth, the F reading has been retained.

III.i.103. Love. The tenor of this song is highly bawdy, since the pun on die, 'experience orgasm' and 'expire,' runs throughout. Hey ho, at the end, may be not part of the song but a sigh of Pandarus after finishing.

III.i.120. doves. Doves were, of course, sacred to Venus, and Paris indicates that eating them has an aphrodisiac effect.

III.i.124. vipers. Pandarus is jokingly bringing the idea around to the familiar phrase 'generation of vipers' from the Bible (Matt. 3:7), where, of course, it is used in a completely different context.

III.i.148. Sweet . . . thee. This sentence is part of Helen's preceding speech in F, but is given to the uxorious Paris in Q.

III.ii.8, 9. Stygian . . . Charon. Charon was the boatman who ferried souls across the river Styx to the Greek underworld. The field of lilies in the next line are the Elysian fields.

III.ii.41. watch'd. Hawks were often tamed by wearing them down through lack of sleep.

III.ii.46. in fee-farm. A fee-farm was a grant of land in fee for an indefinite period of time.

III.ii.48. falcon . . . tercel. The falcon is the female bird and the tercel the male. Pandarus is also using a phrase from betting jargon, saying that he would back Cressida against Troilus for any amount.

III.ii.85, 86. envy . . . his truth. The worst thing malice can say of him will be to mock him for his fidelity and truth.

III.ii.120. Coming. Many editors emend this word to Cunning, but this F and Q reading Coming makes excellent sense.

III.ii.167. plantage. In some quarters the belief persists to the present that the growth of vegetation is influenced by the moon.

III.ii.SD. Exeunt. Troilus and Cressida start off stage after l. 200, and Pandarus stays behind a moment to deliver his leering couplet to the audience.

III.iii.4. sight . . . love. This passage has been often discussed and emended, and certainly things to come would be a more intelligible reading. Both F and Q have things to love, however. Possibly Shakespeare meant 'through the insight I have into things which should be loved,' namely life, security, and the winning side. The soothsayer Calchas had previously been informed by the Delphic oracle that Troy would lose the war.

III.iii.31. pain. The phrase most accepted may refer to Calchas' acceptance of the hardships, or it may imply that the Greeks have readily accepted his painful services.

III.iii.139, 140. How . . . eyes. How some men sneak unnoticed into capricious Fortune's hall, while others, from her point of view, play the fool.

III.iii.142. feasting. Many editors prefer the Q reading, fasting, here, but the F makes perfectly good sense and is more directly applicable to Achilles.

III.iii.168. rear. This word is an emendation suggested by Hanmer (ed. 1745). The F has abject, neere. Lines 167, 168 are missing in Q.

III.iii.184 give. F and Q have go. Theobald first used this emendation in his edition of 1733, and it has been accepted by most subsequent editors.

III.iii.189. sooner. The words begin to in F were probably drawn down mistakenly from the line above by a copyist or a typesetter.

III.iii.206. Knows . . . gold. 'Knows minutely of the most unsearchable things.' Shakespeare, along with many others in his time, seems to amalgamate the persons of Pluto, god of the lower world, and Plutus, the god of riches.

III.iii.217. Polixena. Daughter of Priam and Hecuba, with whom Achilles had fallen in love. Though not in Homer, this twist in the Troy story was added in later Greek times, and the medieval writers on Troy emphasized it as one of the motives for Achilles' withdrawal from the battle.

III.iii.224. fool . . . break. This line has been variously interpreted. Possibly it means that Achilles should break the thin ice Ajax is sliding over, and thus keep him in his place. Some scholars have taken this as a reference to an actual event which Shakespeare knew about, and have used it as an argument for dating the play.

III.iii.242. commission . . . blank. 'Puts you at the complete mercy of danger.' The metaphor here is drawn from the practice of issuing blank commissions to the collectors of imposts, to be filled in at their discretion.

IV.i.71. which . . . whore? This line has been much discussed. The Q reads the heavier for a whore, and neither F nor Q has a question mark. Using the common concept of a whore as a 'light' woman, however, the F reading becomes quite intelligible as a question, and the line supports the idea of equal balance which Diomedes has stated in the previous line.

IV.i.83. We'll . . . sell. This line has caused trouble, mainly because Paris obviously has no intention of selling Helen, except at the very dear price of defeat. It is clear, however, that he is reversing the practice of the chapmen and of Diomedes in favor of silence concerning his commodity.

IV.ii.35. chipochia. This word is probably best explained as an anglicized form of the Italian cappocchia, 'simpleton.' Pandarus is here speaking mock baby talk, however, and this may be a mere invented nonce word of endearment.

IV.iv.37. rejoindure. This is merely an elaborated spelling of rejoinder from re- and joinder (union) as in Twelfth Night, V.1.159.

IV.iv.49. tears. After this word in F, but not in Q, there occurs the SD Enter Aeneas. This is probably a mistake, for further along at l. 106 Aeneas still speaks Within.

IV.iv.51. genius. In Roman mythology each person was thought to have an attendant spirit or genius which presided over his destiny during life.

IV.iv.59. When . . . again. Through a typesetter's error this line is given to Troilus in F. Q has it as part of Cressida's speech.

IV.iv.85. Flowing. This emendation was suggested by Stanton. There is some reason to suspect that there was post-Shakespearean tampering with the text in this passage, either in the theater or the printing shop, for the Q leaves out this word and the entire preceding line. The Q line And swelling . . . exercise is a normal pentameter line, and the addition of this word in the F turns it into a hexameter. The F reading has been retained, however, since not only this word but the whole of l. 84 is involved, and it would be hard to prove that that line is not Shakespeare's.

IV.iv.SD. Paris, Aeneas . . . The F SD reads Enter the Greeks, but of course Diomedes is the only Greek who takes part in the ensuing scene.

IV.iv.133. zeal . . . thee. This is the Q reading, except that the word seal of both Q and F was emended to zeal by Warburton (ed. 1747). The somewhat garbled F reading for this passage runs: To shame the seale of my petition towards/ I praising her.

IV.iv.157. Let . . . straight. This line is marked Dio. in F, and it does not occur in Q. Since it is entirely inappropriate for Diomedes, most editors assume that the Dio. was a mistake for Dei. and assign the speech to Deiphobus.

IV.v.SD. Calchas. Calchas' name stands thus in the SD of both F and Q, although he does not speak in this scene, and from Diomedes' speech at l. 61 it would seem that he is not present.

IV.v.32. And . . . argument. This line was evidently dropped inadvertently by the compositor of F, for the line is needed to explain the action at this point. At the word thus Patroclus evidently steps between Menelaus and Cressida and kisses her in his stead.

IV.v.68. a coasting. So spelled in both F and Q. It may be that this should be read accosting, but it may also be from the verb 'to coast,' to move alongside, as of a ship. In either case the whole sentence is clearer if welcome be taken as the direct object and a coasting as the indirect object of give.

IV.v.72. game. After this word F, but not Q, has Exeunt, but judging from the ensuing scene no one leaves the stage.

IV.v.96. Ajax . . . blood. Ajax, as son of Hesione, Hector's aunt, was closely related to Hector by blood. Cf. I.2.16.N.

IV.v.109. knight. After this word in F, but not in Q, there follow the words, they call him Troilus. They evidently are out of place, for they anticipate and duplicate part of l. 121. The later position is preferable, since the identification appears as the culmination of the description.

IV.v.159. Neoptolymus. It is not clear just whom Hector is talking about. Neoptolemus (or Pyrrhus, mentioned above at III.3.218) was Achilles' son, and according to some versions of the Troy legend was eventually responsible for the conclusion of the war, but at this time he had no reputation which could be termed mirable. Samuel Johnson suggested that Shakespeare might have taken Neoptolemus to be the family name, and therefore he is here speaking of Achilles.

IV.v.160. Oyes. Both F and Q read (O yes), but this was a frequent spelling for the cry 'Oyez,' 'here ye,' an expression still used in the law courts.

IV.v.SD. Enter . . . rest. This stage direction occurs in F but not in Q. It is puzzling since they have probably not left the stage. Perhaps they watched the fight from a distance (possibly from the inner stage) and at this point come forward to the group around the fighters.

IV.v.215. grandsire. Laomedon, father of Priam, years before had been active in some of the incidents leading up to the Trojan War. Nestor's great age at present led the medieval authorities to assume that he also had been an actor in the events of two generations before, although the Greek stories record no fight between Laomedon and Nestor. At I.3.297 Shakespeare has Nestor refer to Laomedon in a slightly different way.

IV.v.320. doth. The F spells this word dooth, and it is possible that it did make a perfect rhyme with tooth, whatever their common vowel sound.

V.i.12. surgeon's box. Thersites punningly takes tent to mean 'a probe for a wound.'

V.i.15. varlot. This is the reading of both F and Q and thus it has been retained. There is a temptation to emend the word to harlot, as many editors have done, particularly because of Thersites' explanation in l. 17. Perhaps an amalgamation of the word harlot and varlet was intentional with Thersites. However, varlots appears in Q at V.1.95, where no such ambiguity is intended.

V.i.19. palsies. After this word the Q adds: raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of impostume (pus), sciaticas, lime-kilns (burnings) i' th' palm, incurable bone-ache, and the riveled fee-simple of the tetter (absolute ownership of the skin disease). The words and the like in F are thought to be a substitution at some later time when the long quarto list of diseases was shortened.

V.i.47–49. transformation . . . cuckolds. In the Europa story Jupiter transformed himself into a bull. Thus the bull, a horned creature, may be considered, as Thersites puts it, to be the primitive statue and oblique memorial of cuckolds, such as Menelaus.

V.i.49. shoeing horn. There is probably here another reference to cuckoldry, plus the idea of Menelaus' ineffectual dependence on Agamemnon (hanging on a chain at his leg).

V.i.SD. Exeunt . . . Ulysses A simple Exeunt after l. 85 in Q and F was probably meant as a blanket affair to get the two parties off the stage severally.

V.i.89. Brabbler. A hound which bayed a great deal but hunted poorly was often called a brabbler or a 'babbler.'

V.ii.66. potato. Potatoes were commonly thought to be aphrodisiac.

V.ii.94. Nay . . . me. This sentence is given to Diomedes in both Q and F. The apparent action of the scene, however, makes it likely that it is part of Cressida's speech.

V.ii.119. likes not me. Q has likes not you, which also makes sense. Whereas the Q reading indicates spite toward Diomedes, the paradox of the line as it stands in F underlines the general perverseness of Thersites and the malignant and cynical pleasure he takes in unpleasant and sometimes disgusting things.

V.ii.143. that test. Q has th' attest, which is perhaps the better reading, but F makes good enough sense to stand.

V.ii.167, 168. That cause . . . Without revolt. These knotty lines are clearer if we realize that Troilus has by this time reasoned himself into a palpable contradiction and is acutely conscious of the fact. He is saying that it is madly irrational for reason to point two ways; that would be the same as saying that reason can revolt or stop operating without being lost (perdition), or that lost reason or unreason can pass an unrevolted reason. He is virtually charging himself with sophistry in his argument that this is not Cressida.

V.ii.176. Ariachne's broken woof. The name Ariachne seems to be an amalgamation of Arachne and Ariadne, but in this context Shakespeare is clearly referring to the Arachne story. In a weaving contest with Athene, Arachne produced a magnificent piece of cloth, which Athene destroyed. Arachne thereupon hung herself, but Athene saved her by changing the rope into a spider web and Arachne into a spider.

V.ii.217, 218. parrot . . . almond. Elizabethan parrots asked for almonds rather than crackers.

V.iii.23. For . . . much. This line appears in F as: For we would count give much to as violent thefts. Tyrwhitt first suggested deleting count and changing as to use. This is no more than a guess, but since it is impossible to as certain exactly what Shakespeare wrote at this point, many later editors have accepted the emendation.

V.iii.30. dear man. Many editors have replaced this dear with some other word, such as brave, clear, true. This, however, spoils Shakespeare's intentional word play on the two meanings of dear.

V.iii.41. lion. Lions were thought to be merciful to those that humbled themselves.

V.iii.124, 126. Why . . . name. These two speeches are duplicated at the end of the play (V.10.33–35). In the Q they appear only at the end of the play. This duplication in F probably means that some sort of revision had taken place; perhaps they were written originally for this position, then shifted to the end.

V.iv.25. Hector's match. Custom allowed a high-born person to fight only with his peers.

V.v.7–14. Polidamus . . . Palamedes. All the names in this speech are names of warriors whom Shakespeare chose at random from the earlier accounts of the Troy story in order to give an impression of feverish battle at this point. Patroclus is the only one who is a character of any importance in this play. Margarelon was a bastard son of Priam, and it may be he whom Thersites talks to at V.7.13 ff.

V.v.15. Sagittary. A supernatural creature reputed to have fought for the Trojans. It was part horse, part man, and an uncommonly accurate archer.

V.v.SD. Exeunt. The stage direction is Exit in F and Q, but no previous exits have been indicated for Agamemnon or Ulysses. It is very probable that each of them left the stage after his speech, in spite of the fact that there is no indication of it in the text.

V.vi.6. Ere that correction. Ajax disputes Diomedes' right to fight Troilus since he wants to do so himself. He says if he were general he would rather give up his command than let Diomedes have the privilege of 'correcting' Troilus.

V.vii.10. double hen'd sparrow. This, the reading of F, may be wrong, but it has been allowed to stand since all the many suggested emendations are uncertain. The Q has double hen'd Spartan, and a most plausible suggestion has recently been made that Shakespeare originally wrote double horn'd Spartan.

V.x.8. smile. Several editors have considered this a contradiction of the idea in the preceding line and have emended to smite. This phrase is smile at, not smile on, however, and this imputation of callous derision to the gods is in keeping with Troilus' general bitterness and cynicism at the end of the play.

V.x.46. painted cloths. Elizabethan rooms often had mottoes and quotations worked into the tapestries or painted hangings. Pandarus is suggesting that his obscene little poem be set on the cloths of a brothel.

V.x.54. galled goose of Winchester. The licensed brothels were under the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Winchester; thus a galled goose was probably a prostitute with venereal disease.

V.x.55. sweat. Induced sweating was used as a cure for venereal disease.

All's Well That Ends Well

Edited by
ARTHUR E. CASE

Dramatis Personae

KING OF FRANCE
DUKE OF FLORENCE
BERTRAM, Count of Rousillon
LAFEU, an old Lord
PAROLLES, a parasitical Follower of Bertram
SEVERAL YOUNG FRENCH LORDS, THAT SERVE WITH BERTRAM IN THE FLORENTINE WARS
RINALDO, a Steward } Servants to the Countess
LAVACHE, a Clown } of Rousillon
COUNTESS OF ROUSILLON, Mother to Bertram
HELENA, Daughter to Gerard de Narbon, a famous physician, some time since dead
AN OLD WIDOW OF FLORENCE
VIOLENTA } Neighbors and friends to the Widow
MARIANA }
LORDS ATTENDING ON THE KING, OFFICERS, SOLDIERS, ETC.
SCENE—Partly in France and partly in Tuscany.

All's Well That Ends Well

Introduction

Sources of the Play

The source of the main plot of All's Well that Ends Well is the ninth novel of the third day of Boccaccio's Decameron, as translated by William Painter in The Palace of Pleasure (1566). Painter's synopsis of the story is as follows:

'Giletta a phisician's doughter of Narbon, healed the Frenche Kyng of a fistula, for reward whereof she demaunded Beltramo Counte of Rossiglione to husbande. The Counte beyng maried againste his will, for despite fled to Florence and loved an other. Giletta his wife, by pollicie founde meanes to lye with her husbande, in place of his lover, and was begotten with child of two soonnes: which knowen to her husbande, he received her againe, and afterwardes he lived in greate honor and felicitie.'

The most significant features of Boccaccio's story which Shakespeare altered are these: Giletta is rich; she is not the foster-sister of Bertram, though brought up with him; and the King of France is not present to act as deus ex machina in the final reconciliation. Boccaccio's tale is related chiefly for the sake of the plot, and so far as the character-portraits of Helena, Bertram and the King are concerned Shakespeare's debt to his original is negligible. There are no counterparts in the novel for the Countess, Lafeu, Lavache or any of the persons of the sub-plot which recounts the adventures and downfall of Parolles. For this subplot and for the character of Parolles no sources have been found, although various books have been suggested from which Shakespeare might have drawn a few minor incidents or expressions.

The History of the Play

The early history of All's Well that Ends Well has long been the subject of controversy. In 1598 Francis Meres, in his Palladis Tamia, referred to Shakespeare as the author of a play called Love's Labour's Won. It has been almost universally assumed that this play has not been lost, but that it was re-named before publication. Five or six of Shakespeare's comedies have been identified with Love's Labour's Won by various editors, but the theory of Dr. Farmer, put forth in 1767, that the play is the one known to us as All's Well that Ends Well, has been concurred in by the majority of critics. The internal evidence, on which alone this theory rests, is fairly convincing. The older title certainly fits the plot of the play admirably. Moreover, two speeches in the fifth act seem to refer directly to that title, and in the second of these speeches there is also an unmistakable allusion to the present name of the play:

Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

V.iii.350

All is well ended if this suit be won. . . .

Epilogue

If Dr. Farmer's conjecture is correct, All's Well must have been written by 1598, but many critics place its composition much earlier than this, and a few place it as late as 1606. The evidence (which is again entirely internal) is extremely confusing. The frequent rhymed passages and the letters in verse are characteristic of Shakespeare's earlier work: on the other hand, there are many speeches (e.g. that of the King, I. ii. 30-54) in the involved elliptical style of the author's later period. Perhaps the most satisfactory, and certainly the most commonly received, solution of the problem is to assume that All's Well as we have it is the revised form of an early play. This view is strengthened by the existence of some awkward breaks in the text (notably that at I. i.153) which may be due to the imperfect joining of the older and the newer versions.

All's Well that Ends Well was first printed in the Folio of 1623, and it did not achieve a separate publication until 1734.[1] There is no record of its having been performed in Shakespeare's lifetime or, indeed, for more than a century after his death. The play was included in a seventeenth century 'Catalogue of part of His Ma^tes^ Servants Players as they were formerly acted at the Blackfryers & now allowed of to his Ma^tes^ Servants at y^e^ New Theatre,'[2] but there is nothing to show that Killigrew ever took advantage of this license. At length, on February 24, 1740–1, the following advertisement appeared in The London Daily Post, and General Advertiser: 'For the Benefit of Mrs. Giffard. At the Late Theatre in Goodman's-Fields, Saturday, March 7, will be performed A Concert . . . N.B. Between the Two Parts of the Concert, will be reviv'd a Play, call'd All's Well That Ends Well. Written by Shakespear, and never performed since his Time. . . . the part of Helena by Mrs. Giffard, with an Epilogue adapted to that Character. . . .'

This performance seems to have been sufficiently successful to incite emulation. The play was put on ten times at Drury Lane during the season of 1741-2 with T. Cibber as Parolles and Mrs. Woffington as Helena. Covent Garden followed suit in 1746, when a performance for Cibber's benefit was arranged for April 1, but as Cibber returned to Drury Lane before that date Woodward took over his part with great success. In the next seventeen years the play was revived several times, chiefly at the instance of Woodward, who was, according to Davies, fond of the rôle of Parolles. Between 1763 and 1900 All's Well was acted only about once a decade. Among those who produced it in the nineteenth century were Samuel Phelps and Charles Fry. Most of the nineteenth century revivals made use of a bowdlerized version of the play arranged by Kemble.

The most recent English productions of All's Well were those of the Old Vic in London and of the Memorial Theater in Stratford-on-Avon, both in 1922. The same year saw a German production at the Schauspielhaus in Graz. Dr. E. Mühlbach lists, in the Shakespeare-Jahrbuch for 1921, eight German performances in the years 1911-1920. There seems to be no record of any American performance.

1 The 'edition' of 1714 noted by Lowndes is merely a copy of the play removed from the eight-volume edition of Rowe.

2 This catalogue is reproduced on pp. 316-317 of A History of Restoration Drama by Allardyce Nicoll, who gives its date as c. Jan 12, 1668-9.

Act First ❧ Scene First

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]
Enter young Bertram, Count of Rousillon, his Mother [the Countess], and Helena, [and] Lord Lafeu, all in black.

Count. In delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Ber. And I, in going, madam, weep o'er my father's death anew; but I must attend his majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the king a husband, madam; you, sir, a father. He that so generally is at all times good must of necessity hold his virtue to you, whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted rather than lack it where there is such abundance.

Count. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

Laf. He hath abandoned his physicians, madam, under whose practices he hath persecuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. This young gentlewoman had a father,—O, that 'had!' how sad a passage 'tis!—whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretched so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. Would, for the king's sake, he were living! I think it would be the death of the king's disease.

Laf. How called you the man you speak of, madam?

Count. He was famous, sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so: Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent indeed, madam: the king very lately spoke of him admiringly and mourningly. He was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.

Ber. What is it, my good lord, the king languishes of?

Laf. A fistula, my lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious. Was this gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Count. His sole child, my lord; and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those hopes of her good that her education promises: her dispositions she inherits, which makes fair gifts fairer; for where an unclean mind carries virtuous qualities, there commendations go with pity; they are virtues and traitors too: in her they are the better for their simpleness; she derives her honesty and achieves her goodness.

Laf. Your commendations, madam, get from her tears.

Count. 'Tis the best brine a maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her father never approaches her heart but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all livelihood from her cheek. No more of this, Helena; go to, no more, lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, than to have—

Hel. I do affect a sorrow indeed, but I have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Count. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal.

Ber. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

Laf. How understand we that?

Count. Be thou blest, Bertram; and succeed thy father
In manners, as in shape! thy blood and virtue
Contend for empire in thee, and thy goodness
Share with thy birthright! Love all, trust a few,
Do wrong to none: be able for thine enemy
Rather in power than use, and keep thy friend
Under thy own life's key: be check'd for silence,
But never tax'd for speech. What heaven more will
That thee may furnish, and my prayers pluck down,
Fall on thy head! [To Lafeu.] Farewell, my lord;
'Tis an unseason'd courtier; good my lord,
Advise him.

Laf. He cannot want the best
That shall attend his love.

Count. Heaven bless him! Farewell, Bertram. [Exit.]

Ber. [To Helena] The best wishes that can be forged in your thoughts be servants to you! Be comfortable to my mother, your mistress, and make much of her.

Laf. Farewell, pretty lady: you must hold the credit of your father. [Exeunt Bertram and Lafeu.]

Hel. O, were that all! I think not on my father,
And these great tears grace his remembrance more
Than those I shed for him. What was he like?
I have forgot him: my imagination
Carries no favour in 't but Bertram's.
I am undone: there is no living, none,
If Bertram be away. 'Twere all one
That I should love a bright particular star
And think to wed it, he is so above me:
In his bright radiance and collateral light
Must I be comforted, not in his sphere.
Th' ambition in my love thus plagues itself:
The hind that would be mated by the lion
Must die for love. 'Twas pretty, though a plague,
To see him every hour; to sit and draw
His arched brows, his hawking eye, his curls,
In our heart's table; heart too capable
Of every line and trick of his sweet favour:
But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancy
Must sanctify his relics. Who comes here?

Enter Parolles.

One that goes with him: I love him for his sake;
And yet I know him a notorious liar,
Think him a great way fool, solely a coward;
Yet these fix'd evils sit so fit in him,
That they take place, when virtue's steely bones
Looks bleak i' th' cold wind: withal, full oft we see

4 attend: pay heed to 4, 5 to . . . ward: under whose guardianship I now am 7 generally: universally 8 hold: continue to display 11 amendment: improvement in health 13 persecuted . . . hope: spent much time in hoping 17 passage: expression 23, 24 his great right: clearly his due 27, 28 set up against: opposed to 30 fistula: a sinuous ulcer 34, 35 overlooking: supervision 36 dispositions: natural inclinations 37 virtuous qualities: admirable intellectual qualities 38 go with pity: are given with regret 39 simpleness: lack of complexity 44 livelihood: liveliness 47 Cf. n.

50, 51 Cf. n. 53 Cf. n. 55 thy: may thy 57 Share . . . birthright: equal your inherited nobility 58, 59 be . . . use: be able to conquer your enemy, but spare him 59, 60 keep . . . key: protect your friend with your life check'd: reproached 61 tax'd: rebuked will: may desire 62 That . . . furnish: that may adorn your character 66, 67 He . . . love; cf. n. 69, 70 Cf. n. Be comfortable to: console 72 hold the credit: uphold the good name 75, 76: And . . . him; cf. n. 78 favour: face 80, 81 'Twere . . . should: I might as well particular: individual 83, 84 Cf. n. 89 hawking: hawk-like 90 table: tablet capable: ready to receive the impress 91 trick: peculiarity 93 sanctify his relics: worship his memory 96 a great way: largely solely: altogether 97 sit . . . him: become him so well 98 take place: find acceptance steely: unbending 99 Looks; Cf. n. withal: therewith

Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Par. Save you, fair queen!

Hel. And you, monarch!

Par. No.

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginity?

Hel. Ay. You have some stain of soldier in you; let me ask you a question. Man is enemy to virginity; how may we barricado it against him?

Par. Keep him out.

Hel. But he assails; and our virginity, though valiant in the defence, yet is weak. Unfold to us some warlike resistance.

Par. There is none: man, setting down before you, will undermine you and blow you up.

Hel. Bless our poor virginity from underminers and blowers up! Is there no military policy, how virgins might blow up men?

Par. Virginity being blown down, man will quicklier be blown up: marry, in blowing him down again, with the breach yourselves made, you lose your city. It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature to preserve virginity. Loss of virginity is rational increase, and there was never virgin got till virginity was first lost. That you were made of is metal to make virgins. Virginity, by being once lost, may be ten times found: by being ever kept, it is ever lost. 'Tis too cold a companion: away with 't!

Hel. I will stand for 't a little, though therefore I die a virgin.

Par. There's little can be said in 't; 'tis against the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity is to accuse your mothers, which is most infallible disobedience. He that hangs himself is a virgin: virginity murders itself, and should be buried in highways, out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offendress against nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a cheese, consumes itself to the very paring, and so dies with feeding his own stomach. Besides, virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon. Keep it not; you cannot choose but lose by 't! Out with 't! within the year it will make itself two, which is a goodly increase, and the principal itself not much the worse. Away with 't!

Hel. How might one do, sir, to lose it to her own liking?

Par. Let me see: marry, ill, to like him that ne'er it likes. 'Tis a commodity will lose the gloss with lying; the longer kept, the less worth: off with 't, while 'tis vendible; answer the time of request. Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion; richly suited, but unsuitable: just like the brooch and the toothpick, which wear not now. Your date is better in your pie and your porridge than in your cheek: and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French withered pears; it looks ill, it eats drily; marry, 'tis a withered pear; it was formerly better; marry, yet 'tis a withered pear. Will you anything with it?

Hel. Not my virginity yet.

There shall your master have a thousand loves,
A mother, and a mistress, and a friend,
A phœnix, captain, and an enemy,
A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign,
A counsellor, a traitress, and a dear,
His humble ambition, proud humility,
His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet,
His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world
Of pretty, fond, adoptious christendoms,
That blinking Cupid gossips. Now shall he—
I know not what he shall. God send him well!
The court's a learning-place, and he is one—

Par. What one, i' faith?

Hel. That I wish well. 'Tis pity—

Par. What's pity?

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in 't,
Which might be felt; that we, the poorer born,
Whose baser stars do shut us up in wishes,
Might with effects of them follow our friends,
And show what we alone must think, which never
Returns us thanks.

Enter [a] Page.

Page. Monsieur Parolles, my lord calls for you. [Exit]

Par. Little Helen, farewell: if I can remember thee, I will think of thee at court.

Hel. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star.

Par. Under Mars, I.

Hel. I especially think, under Mars.

Par. Why under Mars?

Hel. The wars hath so kept you under that you must needs be born under Mars.

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrograde, I think rather.

Par. Why think you so?

Hel. You go so much backward when you fight.

Par. That's for advantage.

Hel. So is running away, when fear proposes the safety: but the composition that your valour and fear makes in you is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear well.

Par. I am so full of businesses I cannot answer thee acutely. I will return perfect courtier; in the which, my instruction shall serve to naturalize thee, so thou wilt be capable of a courtier's counsel, and understand what advice shall thrust upon thee; else thou diest in thine unthankfulness, and thine ignorance makes thee away: farewell. When thou hast leisure, say thy prayers; when thou hast none, remember thy friends. Get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee: so, farewell. [Exit.]

Hel. Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated sky
Gives us free scope; only doth backward pull
Our slow designs when we ourselves are dull.

100 superfluous: luxurious 103, 104 Cf. n. 106 stain: trace 112 setting down: setting down his batteries 118 marry: by the Virgin Mary 121 rational: reasonable 122 metal: material 126 stand: fight 128 in 't: for it 130 infallible: unquestionable 132 sanctified limit; cf. n. 135 his; cf. n. 136 inhibited: forbidden 137, 138 Out with 't: put it to use 142 that . . . likes: whom it does not please 143 lying: lying unused 144, 145 answer . . . request: meet the demand 146 suited: dressed 147 wear not: are not in fashion date: used punningly 153 Not: not with

154–165 Cf. n. 160 dulcet: sweet 162 adoptious christendoms: nicknames 163 blinking: blind gossips: is sponsor for 171 Whose less exalted destinies confine us to wishing merely 172 effects: execution 173 alone must: can only 185, 186 Cf. n. 189 for advantage: for strategic purposes 191 composition: compromise 192 virtue . . . wing: cf. n. wear: fashion 194 in the which: in which (court etiquette). 195 naturalize: familiarize capable of: able to comprehend 198 makes thee away: will destroy you 198, 199 When . . . friends; cf. n. 202 fated sky: destiny

What power is it which mounts my love so high,
That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eye?
The mightiest space in fortune nature brings
To join like likes, and kiss like native things.
Impossible be strange attempts to those
That weigh their pains in sense, and do suppose
What hath been cannot be: who ever strove
To show her merit, that did miss her love?
The king's disease—my project may deceive me,
But my intents are fix'd and will not leave me.

Scene Second

[Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.]

Flourish [of] Cornets. Enter the King of France, with letters, and divers Attendants.

King. The Florentines and Senoys are by th' ears;
Have fought with equal fortune, and continue
A braving war.
1. Lord. So 'tis reported, sir.
King. Nay, 'tis most credible: we here receive it
A certainty, vouch'd from our cousin Austria,
With caution that the Florentine will move us
For speedy aid; wherein our dearest friend
Prejudicates the business, and would seem
To have us make denial.
1. Lord. His love and wisdom,
Approv'd so to your majesty, may plead
For amplest credence.
King. He hath arm'd our answer,
And Florence is denied before he comes:
Yet, for our gentlemen that mean to see
The Tuscan service, freely have they leave
To stand on either part.
2. Lord. It well may serve
A nursery to our gentry, who are sick
For breathing and exploit.
King. What's he comes here?

Enter Bertram, Lafeu and Parolles.

1. Lord. It is the Count Rousillon, my good lord, Young Bertram.
King. Youth, thou bear'st thy father's face.
Frank nature, rather curious than in haste,
Hath well compos'd thee. Thy father's moral parts
Mayst thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.
Ber. My thanks and duty are your majesty's.
King. I would I had that corporal soundness now,
As when thy father and myself in friendship
First tried our soldiership! He did look far
Into the service of the time, and was
Discipled of the bravest: he lasted long;
But on us both did haggish age steal on,
And wore us out of act. It much repairs me
To talk of your good father. In his youth
He had the wit which I can well observe
To-day in our young lords; but they may jest
Till their own scorn return to them unnoted
Ere they can hide their levity in honour.
So like a courtier, contempt nor bitterness
Were in his pride or sharpness; if they were,
His equal had awak'd them; and his honour,
Clock to itself, knew the true minute when
Exception bid him speak, and at this time
His tongue obey'd his hand: who were below him
He us'd as creatures of another place,
And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility
In their poor praise he humbled. Such a man
Might be a copy to these younger times,
Which, follow'd well, would demonstrate them now
But goers backward.
Ber. His good remembrance, sir,
Lies richer in your thoughts than on his tomb;
So in approof lives not his epitaph
As in your royal speech.
King. Would I were with him! He would always say,—
Methinks I hear him now: his plausive words
He scatter'd not in ears, but grafted them,
To grow there and to bear,—'Let me not live,'—
This his good melancholy oft began,
On the catastrophe and heel of pastime,
When it was out,—'Let me not live,' quoth he,
'After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses
All but new things disdain; whose judgments are Mere fathers of their garments; whose constancies
Expire before their fashions.' This he wish'd:
I, after him, do after him wish too,
Since I nor wax nor honey can bring home,
I quickly were dissolved from my hive,
To give some labourers room.
2. Lord. You're loved, sir;
They that least lend it you shall lack you first.
King. I fill a place, I know 't. How long is 't, count,
Since the physician at your father's died?
He was much fam'd.
Ber. Some six months since, my lord.
King. If he were living, I would try him yet:
Lend me an arm: the rest have worn me out
With several applications: nature and sickness
Debate it at their leisure. Welcome, count;
My son's no dearer.

205 mounts . . . high: fixes my love on so high an object 207, 208 Cf. n. 209 strange attempts: unusual undertakings 210 weigh . . . sense: estimate their labor by reason 212 miss: fail to attain 213 deceive: disappoint 1 Senoys: Siennese, dwellers in Sienna by th' ears: in combat 3 braving: defiant 1. Lord; cf. n. 5, 6 receive . . . certainty: are made certain of it 6 cousin Austria: fellow ruler of Austria 7 move: petition 9 Prejudicates the business: gives his opinion of the matter in advance 9, 10 would . . . us: seems to wish us to 12 Approv'd so: so often proved 14 arm'd: strengthened 15 Florence: the Duke of Florence 18 stand . . . part: fight on either side 19 serve: serve as 21 breathing: exercise 26 Frank: liberal curious: painstaking 32, 33 did . . . service: saw much of the wars

34 Discipled of: taught by 36 wore . . . act: wore out our ability repairs: refreshes 39–41 but . . . honour; cf. n. 42–44 So . . . them; cf. n. 45 Clock to itself: its own counselor true: proper 46 Exception: disapproval bid: bade 47 obey'd his hand: obeyed its (the clock's) hand, spoke fittingly who: those who 50, 51 Making . . . humbled; cf. n. 57, 58 Cf. n. 60 plausive: winning 62 bear: bear fruit 64 On . . . heel: at the conclusion of 65 out: finished 66 snuff: object of distaste 67 apprehensive: fastidious 69 Mere . . . garments: capable merely of devising new fashions 73 dissolved: removed 76 least lend it you: give you least (love) 83 several applications: various remedies 84 Debate it: contend

Ber. Thank your majesty.
Exit [King, attended by all the others]. Flourish.

Scene Third

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]
Enter Countess, Steward, and Clown.

Count. I will now hear: what say you of this gentlewoman?

Stew. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the calendar of my past endeavours; for then we wound our modesty and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we publish them.

Count. What does this knave here? Get you gone, sirrah: the complaints I have heard of you I do not all believe: 'tis my slowness that I do not; for I know you lack not folly to commit them, and have ability enough to make such knaveries yours.

Clo. 'Tis not unknown to you, madam, I am a poor fellow.

Count. Well, sir.

Clo. No, madam, 'tis not so well that I am poor, though many of the rich are damned. But, if I may have your ladyship's good will to go to the world, Isbel the woman and I will do as we may.

Count. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?

Clo. I do beg your good will in this case.

Count. In what case?

Clo. In Isbel's case and mine own. Service is no heritage; and I think I shall never have the blessing of God till I have issue o' my body, for they say barnes are blessings.

Count. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marry.

Clo. My poor body, madam, requires it: I am driven on by the flesh; and he must needs go that the devil drives.

Count. Is this all your worship's reason?

Clo. Faith, madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

Count. May the world know them?

Clo. I have been, madam, a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are; and, indeed, I do marry that I may repent.

Count. Thy marriage, sooner than thy wickedness.

Clo. I am out o' friends, madam; and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake.

Count. Such friends are thine enemies, knave.

Clo. Y'are shallow, madam, in great friends; for the knaves come to do that for me which I am aweary of. He that ears my land spares my team, and gives me leave to in the crop: if I be his cuckold, he's my drudge. He that comforts my wife is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; he that cherishes my flesh and blood loves my flesh and blood; he that loves my flesh and blood is my friend: ergo, he that kisses my wife is my friend. If men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage; for young Charbon the puritan, and old Poysam the papist, howsome'er their hearts are severed in religion, their heads are both one; they may joul horns together like any deer i' the herd.

Count. Wilt thou ever be a foul-mouthed and calumnious knave?

Clo. A prophet I, madam; and I speak the truth the next way:

'For I the ballad will repeat,
Which men full true shall find:
Your marriage comes by destiny,
Your cuckoo sings by kind.'

Count. Get you gone, sir: I'll talk with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you, madam, that he bid Helen come to you: of her I am to speak.

Count. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman I would speak with her; Helen, I mean.

Clo. 'Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,
Why the Grecians sacked Troy?
Fond done, done fond,
Was this King Priam's joy?
With that she sighed as she stood,
With that she sighed as she stood,
And gave this sentence then;
Among nine bad if one be good,
Among nine bad if one be good,
There's yet one good in ten.'

Count. What! one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.

Clo. One good woman in ten, madam; which is a purifying o' the song. Would God would serve the world so all the year! we'd find no fault with the tithe-woman if I were the parson. One in ten, quoth a'! An we might have a good woman born but o'er every blazing star, or at an earthquake, 'twould mend the lottery well: a man may draw his heart out ere a' pluck one.

Count. You'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you!

Clo. That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done! Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a big heart. I am going, forsooth: the business is for Helen to come hither. Exit.

Count. Well, now.

Stew. I know, madam, you love your gentlewoman entirely.

Count. Faith, I do: her father bequeathed her to me; and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she finds: there is more owing her than is paid, and more shall be paid her than she'll demand.

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her than I think she wished me: alone she was, and did communicate to herself her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for her, they touched not any stranger sense. Her matter was, she loved your son: Fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates; Love no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level; [Dian no] queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight surprised, without rescue in the first assault or ransom afterward. This she delivered in the most bitter touch of sorrow that e'er I heard virgin exclaim in; which I held my duty

2 even your content: act in accord with your desires 3 calendar: catalogue 15 go ... world: marry 16 do ... may: do our best 22 barnes: children 27 holy: religious 37 shallow ... friends: ignorant of the ways of friendship 38 ears: plows 39 in the crop: gather the harvest 45, 46 young ... papist; cf. n. 47, 48 joul ... together; cf. n.

52 next: nearest 56 cuckoo; cf. n. by kind: by nature 64 Fond: foolishly 77 o'er: during the appearance of blazing star: comet 82–84 Though ... heart; cf. n. 84 big: proud business: thing to be done 89 make title: prove her right 92 late: recently 95 touched ... sense: were not overheard Her matter: the substance of her speech 99 knight: votaress 100 surprised: to be surprised 101 delivered: spoke speedily to acquaint you withal, sithence in the loss that may happen it concerns you something to know it.

Count. You have discharged this honestly: keep it to yourself. Many likelihoods informed me of this before, which hung so tottering in the balance that I could neither believe nor misdoubt. Pray you, leave me: stall this is in your bosom;and I thank you for your honest care. I will speak with you further anon. Exit Steward.

Enter Helen.

Even so it was with me when I was young:
If ever we are nature's, these are ours; this thorn
Doth to our rose of youth rightly belong;
Our blood to us, this to our blood is born:
It is the show and seal of nature's truth,
Where love's strong passion is impress'd in youth:
By our remembrances of days foregone,
Such were our faults, or then we thought them none.
Her eye is sick on 't: I observe her now.

Hel. What is your pleasure, madam?

Count. You know, Helen,
I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honourable mistress.

Count. Nay, a mother:
Why not a mother? When I said, 'a mother,'
Methought you saw a serpent: what's in 'mother'
That you start at it? I say, I am your mother;
And put you in the catalogue of those
That were enwombed mine: 'tis often seen
Adoption strives with nature, and choice breeds
A native slip to us from foreign seeds;
You ne'er oppress'd me with a mother's groan,
Yet I express to you a mother's care.
God's mercy, maiden! does it curd thy blood
To say I am thy mother? What's the matter,
That this distemper'd messenger of wet,
The many-colour'd Iris, rounds thine eye?
Why? that you are my daughter?

Hel. That I am not.

Count. I say, I am your mother.

Hel. Pardon, madam;
The Count Rousillon cannot be my brother:
I am from humble, he from honour'd name;
No note upon my parents, his all noble:
My master, my dear lord he is; and I
His servant live, and will his vassal die.
He must not be my brother.

Count. Nor I your mother?

Hel. You are my mother, madam: would you were,—
So that my lord your son were not my brother,—
Indeed my mother! or were you both our mothers,
I care no more for than I do for heaven,
So I were not his sister. Can't no other,
But, I your daughter, he must be my brother?

Count. Yes, Helen, you might be my daughter-in-law:
God shield you mean it not! daughter and mother
So strive upon your pulse. What, pale again?
My fear hath catch'd your fondness: now I see
The mystery of your loveliness, and find
Your salt tears' head: now to all sense 'tis gross:
You love my son: invention is asham'd,
Against the proclamation of thy passion,
To say thou dost not: therefore tell me true;
But tell me then, 'tis so: for, look, thy cheeks
Confess it, th' one to th' other; and thine eyes
See it so grossly shown in thy behaviours
That in their kind they speak it: only sin
And hellish obstinacy tie thy tongue,
That truth should be suspected. Speak, is't so?
If it be so, you have wound a goodly clew;
If it be not, forswear 't: howe'er, I charge thee,
As heaven shall work in me for thine avail,
To tell me truly.

Hel. Good madam, pardon me!

Count. Do you love my son?

Hel. Your pardon, noble mistress!

Count. Love you my son?

Hel. Do not you love him, madam?

Count. Go not about; my love hath in 't a bond
Whereof the world takes note: come, come, disclose
The state of your affection, for your passions
Have to the full appeach'd.

Hel. Then, I confess,
Here on my knee, before high heaven and you
That before you, and next unto high heaven,
I love your son.
My friends were poor, but honest; so's my love:
Be not offended, for it hurts not him
That he is lov'd of me: I follow him not
By any token of presumptuous suit;
Nor would I have him till I do deserve him;
Yet never know how that desert should be.
I know I love in vain, strive against hope;
Yet, in this captious and intenible sieve
I still pour in the waters of my love,
And lack not to lose still. Thus, Indian-like,
Religious in mine error, I adore
The sun, that looks upon his worshipper,
But knows of him no more. My dearest madam,
Let not your hate encounter with my love
For loving where you do: but, if yourself,
Whose aged honour cites a virtuous youth,
Did ever in so true a flame of liking
Wish chastely and love dearly, that your Dian
Was both herself and Love, O! then, give pity
To her, whose state is such that cannot choose
But lend and give where she is sure to lose,
That seeks not to find that her search implies,
But, riddle-like, lives sweetly where she dies.

103 sithence: since loss: misfortune 108 misdoubt: disbelieve stall this: keep this (knowledge) 112 these: these (feelings) 114 blood: disposition 115 show: evidence 119 on 't: because of it 131 native slip: grafted branch 136, 137 Cf. n. 144 note: mark of distinction 153 Can't no other: can it not be otherwise

157 strive ... pulse: affect your pulse in turn 158 catch'd: discovered 160 head: source gross: palpable 161 invention: dissimulation 162 Against: in the face of 166 grossly: openly 167 in their kind: after thier own manner 169 That ... suspected: in order to cast doubt upon the truth 170 wound ... clew: made a fine snarl 171 howe'er: in any event 172 If you wish Heaven to move me to help you 179 Go not about: do not quibble 182 appeach'd: accused you 194 captious: deceptive intenible: incapable of retaining 196 lack ... still: have an inexhaustible supply to pour forth 200 encounter with: oppose 202 cites: is proof of 206 that: that which 209 riddle-like: paradoxically

Count. Had you not lately an intent—speak truly—
To go to Paris?
Hel. Madam, I had.
Count. Wherefore? tell true.
Hel. I will tell truth; by grace itself I swear.
You know my father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his reading
And manifest experience had collected
For general sovereignty; and that he will'd me
In heedfull'st reservation to bestow them,
As notes whose faculties inclusive were
More than they were in note. Amongst the rest,
There is a remedy, approv'd, set down
To cure the desperate languishings whereof
The king is render'd lost.
Count. This was your motive
For Paris, was it? speak.
Hel. My lord your son made me to think of this;
Else Paris and the medicine and the king
Had from the conversation of my thoughts
Haply been absent then.
Count. But think you, Helen,
If you should tender your supposed aid,
He would receive it? He and his physicians
Are of a mind; he, that they cannot help him,
They, that they cannot help. How shall they credit
A poor unlearned virgin, when the schools,
Embowell'd of their doctrine, have left off
The danger to itself?
Hel. There's something in 't,
More than my father's skill, which was the great'st
Of his profession, that his good receipt
Shall for my legacy be sanctified
By the luckiest stars in heaven: and, would your honour
But give me leave to try success, I'd venture
The well-lost life of mine on his Grace's cure,
By such a day, an hour.
Count. Dost thou believe 't?
Hel. Ay, madam, knowingly.
Count. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave and love,
Means, and attendants, and my loving greetings
To those of mine in court. I'll stay at home
And pray God's blessing into thy attempt.
Be gone to-morrow; and be sure of this,
What I can help thee to thou shalt not miss.

ACT SECOND ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Paris. A Room in the King's Palace]

Enter the King, [attended,] with divers young Lords taking leave for the Florentine war; Count Rousillon and Parolles. Flourish [of] cornets.

King. Farewell, young lords: these warlike principles
Do not throw from you: and you, my lords, farewell:
Share the advice betwixt you; if both gain all,
The gift doth stretch itself as 'tis receiv'd,
And is enough for both.
1. Lord. 'Tis our hope, sir,
After well enter'd soldiers, to return
And find your Grace in health.
King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confess he owes the malady
That doth my life besiege. Farewell, young lords;
Whether I live or die, be you the sons
Of worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy—
Those bated that inherit but the fall
Of the last monarchy—see that you come
Not to woo honour, but to wed it; when
The bravest questant shrinks, find what you seek
That fame may cry you loud: I say, farewell.
2. Lord. Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty!
King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them:
They say our French lack language to deny
If they demand: beware of being captives,
Before you serve.
Both Lords. Our hearts receive your warnings.
King. Farewell. [To another Lord] Come hither to me.
[They converse.]
1. Lord. [To Bertram.] O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us!
Par. 'Tis not his fault, the spark.
2. Lord. O, 'tis brave wars!
Par. Most admirable: I have seen those wars.
Ber. I am commanded here, and kept a coil with 'Too young,' and 'the next year,' and ' 'tis too early.'
Par. An thy mind stand to 't, boy, steal away bravely.
Ber. I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock,
Creaking my shoes on the plain masonry,
Till honour be bought up and no sword worn
But one to dance with! By heaven! I'll steal away.
1. Lord. There's honour in the theft.
Par. Commit it, count.
2. Lord. I am your accessary; and so farewell.
Ber. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortured body.
1. Lord. Farewell, captain.
2. Lord. Sweet Monsieur Parolles!
Par. Noble heroes, my sword and yours are kin. Good sparks and lustrous, a word, good metals: you shall find in the regiment of the Spinii one Captain Spurio, with his cicatrice, an emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek: it was this very sword entrenched it: say to him, I live, and observe his reports for me.
2. Lord. We shall, noble captain.
Par. Mars dote on you for his novices! [Exeunt Lords.] What will ye do?
Ber. Stay the king.
Par. Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords; you have restrained yourself within the list of too cold an adieu: be more expressive to them; for they wear themselves in

218 general sovereignty: universal efficacy 219 reservation: safe-keeping 220 notes: prescriptions faculties: powers inclusive: all-embracing 221 in note: stated in writing 224 render'd lost: reported to be sick unto death 229 conversation: intercourse 230 Haply: perhaps 237 Embowell'd ... doctrine: exhausted of their learning left off: abandoned 251 those of mine: my kinsmen 252 into: upon

7 After ... soldiers: after we are well embarked on our military careers 10 owes: owns 13–15 let ... monarchy; cf. n. 17 questant: seeker 18 cry you loud: proclaim you loudly 32 kept a coil: pestered 35 forehorse ... smock: usher to a lady 37 bought up: entirely appropriated by others 38 But ... with; cf. n. 41 accessary: accessory 42 our ... body; cf. n. 52 novices: devotees 53 ye: i.e. Bertram 54 Stay the king: await the king's pleasure 55 spacious ceremony: elaborate courtesy 56 list: boundary 57, 58 wear ... in time: are an ornament to the time the cap of the time, there do muster true gait, eat, speak, and move under the influence of the most received star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed. After them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Ber. And I will do so.

Par. Worthy fellows; and like to prove most sinewy swordmen. Exeunt [Bertram and Parolles].

Enter Lafeu.

Laf. [Kneeling.] Pardon, my lord, for me and for my tidings.

King. I'll see thee to stand up.

Laf. Then here's a man stands that has brought his pardon. I would you had kneel'd, my lord, to ask me mercy, And that at my bidding you could so stand up.

King. I would I had, so I had broke thy pate, And ask'd thee mercy for 't.

Laf. Good faith, across: but, my good lord, 'tis thus; Will you be cur'd of your infirmity?

King. No.

Laf. O! will you eat no grapes, my royal fox? Yes, but you will my noble grapes an if My royal fox could reach them. I have seen a medicine That's able to breathe life into a stone, Quicken a rock, and make you dance canary With spritely fire and motion; whose simple touch Is powerful to araise King Pepin, nay, To give great Charlemain a pen in's hand And write to her a love-line.

King. What 'her' is this?

Laf. Why, Doctor She. My lord, there's one arriv'd, If you will see her: now, by my faith and honour, If seriously I may convey my thoughts In this my light deliverance, I have spoke With one, that in her sex, her years, profession, Wisdom, and constancy, hath amaz'd me more Than I dare blame my weakness. Will you see her (For that is her demand) and know her business? That done, laugh well at me.

King. Now, good Lafeu, Bring in the admiration, that we with thee May spend our wonder too, or take off thine By wondering how thou took'st it.

Laf. Nay, I'll fit you, And not be all day neither. [He retires to the door.]

King. Thus he his special nothing ever prologues.

Laf. [to Helena, without.] Nay, come your ways.

Enter Helen.

King. This haste hath wings indeed.

Laf. Nay, come your ways; This is his majesty, say your mind to him: A traitor you do look like, but such traitors His majesty seldom fears: I am Cressid's uncle, That dare leave two together. Fare you well. Exit

King. Now, fair one, does your business follow us?

Hel. Ay, my good lord.

Gerard de Narbon was my father; In what he did profess well found.

King. I knew him.

Hel. The rather will I spare my praises towards him; Knowing him is enough. On's bed of death Many receipts he gave me; chiefly one, Which, as the dearest issue of his practice, And of his old experience the only darling, He bade me store up as a triple eye, Safer than mine own two, more dear. I have so; And, hearing your high majesty is touch'd With that malignant cause wherein the honour Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power, I come to tender it and my appliance, With all bound humbleness.

King. We thank you, maiden, But may not be so credulous of cure, When our most learned doctors leave us, and The congregated college have concluded That labouring art can never ransom nature From her inaidible estate; I say we must not So stain our judgment or corrupt our hope, To prostitute our past-cure malady To empirics, or to dissever so Our great self and our credit, to esteem A senseless help when help past sense we deem.

Hel. My duty then, shall pay me for my pains: I will no more enforce mine office on you; Humbly entreating from your royal thoughts A modest one to bear me back again.

King. I cannot give thee less, to be call'd grateful. Thou thought'st to help me, and such thanks I give As one near death to those that wish him live; But what at full I know, thou know'st no part, I knowing all my peril, thou no art.

